The cause of the farmer's difficulties is not to be found in the meager wages of labor but in the increasing tribute in the form of rent, mortgage interest, distribution charges and taxes to support capitalism and its governing bureaucracy.

PREACHER MAY SUE REDS FOR BUM BUSINESS

Says They Put Jesus Back 19,000 Bucks

By A. L. CARPENTER.

LYNN, Mass., May 19.—Radicals in the shoe unions of Lynn have done $19,000 damage to the business of Chester J. Underhill in the past four years. Underhill's business is running a church in this shoe center and he is urging a business revival on all other ministers, priests and rabbis in the city by "a roundup and driving out of the radicals, bolsheviks, members of the I. W. W. and thugs" from the unions and the town.

In announcing his $19,000 loss to his church he blamed the radicals for bringing unemployment to the shoe business. Government figures about the situation shows that the onward sweep of the machine process has something to do with the unemployment in Lynn. In 1909, the value of the products was $34,620,874, and the number of workers employed 14,595; in year 1923, the value of the products was $20,000,000, while the number of persons employed was 5,500. In other words, in 1909, each man produced to the value of $2,372, while in the past year, 1923, each produced $3,636. This is a net gain per man of 65 per cent.

Wages have not followed the paces set by the manufacturers in their struggle for profits, which is the answer to a large part of the unemployment, according to union officials in this district.

Underhill said, "There is a deliberate attempt being made to destroy the shoe industry in Lynn. Not only the shoe industry, but to destroy all industry in Lynn. The General Electric Co. has been wise enough to shut its gates against all attempts to disorganize its plant."

By "disorganize" Underhill means "unionize" the General Electric plant.

Japan Works Against Russia in China.

TOKIO, May 19.—Japan is trying to bring under her influence all of Northern Manchuria, China, and is especially trying to gain control of the Chinese Eastern Railway, which belongs to the Soviet Union of Russia. Japan consistently scores Peking government officials and supports the Chinese reactionaries who broke up the diplomatic negotiations between China and Russia.

Japan hopes to force greater concessions for herself from Soviet Russia by her policy. Her own position is not strong and requires the hands of France and the United States to direct its short-sighted ambition.

Exile Resolution Upsets Authors.

NEW YORK, May 19.—A resolution condemning the exiling of Miguel Unamuno, former professor of Salamana university, Spain, was introduced by Hendrik Van Loon at the annual gathering of the P. E. N. society, and nearly upset the non-political equilibrium of the international authors' organization. Unamuno is exiled to the Canary islands and is not permitted to leave, altho several South American countries have invited his residence. He was sent to the islands because of his criticisms of Spanish government and the church.

Half Million in Oil.

BAKERSFIELD, Cal., May 19.—The refinery plant of the Richfield Oil company here was burned today with a loss estimated at $500,000.

HUGHES STAND ON CHINA R. R. BACKS BUTCHERS

Opposes Returning It To Soviet Russia

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, May 19.—Secretary of State Hughes says that his intervention at Peking, in the form of a warning against handing back the Chinese Eastern Railroad to Soviet Russia except under conditions to be first approved by the Powers, is in strict accordance with the resolutions adopted by the Washington Conference of two years ago.

The official records of that conference, which assumed to "settle" the problems of the Far East without the participation and against the protest of Russia, show that the Chinese spoke vigorously, but helplessly, against these resolutions. The conference, acting for the American, Japanese, French and British bankers and militarists, were compelling China to leave this railroad in the hands of Russian reactionaries of the butcher type. Wellington Koo, now foreign minister at Peking, declared that Gen. Horvath, as director of the railroad under Allied auspices, had declared himself dictator of the whole territory thru which the railroad ran, and had violated Chinese sovereignty at will.

Yet the powers, unanimously, adopted on Feb. 4, 1922, resolutions declaring for better policing of the road, and added this "reservation."

"The powers, other than China, in agreeing to the resolution regarding the Chinese Eastern Railway, reserve the right to insist hereafter upon the responsibility of China for the performance of the obligations toward the foreign stockholders, bondholders and creditors of the Chinese Eastern Railway Company which the powers deem to result from the contracts under which the rialroad was built and the action of China thereunder and the obligation which they deem to be in the nature of a trust resulting from the exercise of power by the Chinese government over the possession and administration of the railroad."

The Chinese Eastern, built by a company which was in fact the imperial Russian government, is a direct line southeastward across Manchuria, thru Harbin, to Vladivostok. China wants to improve commerce by letting the Trans-Siberian road use it again. Hughes says the foreign stockholders and bondholders' interests—especially those of Russian—must be first guaranteed, on terms which may please him.

Mexican Oil Revolt Was Purpose of Fall; Shown in Doheny Loan

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, May 19.—An attempt was made in the Daugherty investigation to show that the $100,000 loaned to Albert B. Fall by E. L. Doheny, lessee of naval oil reserve No. 1 was used to finance an oil revolution in Mexico.

Examining Warren H. Grimes, department of justice attorney, Senator Wheeler demanded to know if the department's files did not show that "the alleged oil bribe of a cabinet officer went to buy arms for a revolution in Mexico."

"They may; I am not sure about that," Grimes replied.

PERSHING WILL TALK BLOOD ON SEPT. TWELVE

Trying To Pep Robots For Next War

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 19.—Regimentation of the American robots for the war which will be the next step in the development of American imperialism is the purpose of the preparedness demonstration arranged for Sept. 12 by the military aristocracy of the United States, headed by General Pershing. The date was selected as being the anniversary of the slaughter of St. Mihiel; it is hoped that this memory will revive the war hysteria so painstakingly created six years ago by the capitalist press and the schools.

That military strategists of the army have worked on the plan for the new national defense system since the moment the last war ended is admitted by Pershing. The far-reaching nature of imperialist hopes was revealed by the black-jacker when he said: "The demonstration will certainly have a most beneficial effect on national sentiment, thru which we hope to establish this system as a permanent policy."

Hushingly Pershing admits his efficiency as a servant of capitalist interests. "Nobody sat on the lid longer or harder than I did during the war under very adverse circumstances," he says. "Only those near me could really appreciate it."

British Columbia Workers In United Front For Elections

By SYDNEY WARREN
(Staff Correspondent of the Fed. Press)

VANCOUVER, B. C.—British Columbia workers will close their ranks for a united political front in the coming elections thruout this province. Delegates from 35 organizations, including the carpenters, street railwaymen, switchmen and engineers, as well as delegates from the Federated Labor Party and the Communist Party of Canada, decided to form a British Columbia section of the Canadian Labor party.

The meeting April 29 called a formal convention for May 29 and adopted provisionally the constitution of the Ontario section of the Canadian Labor party. The organization will be formed as a loose federation of the labor groups of this province along the lines of the British Labor party.

W. H. Cottrell, chairman British Columbia provincial committee of the Trades Congress of Canada is president and Frank Hunt, buisness agent Steam and Operating Engineers is secretary-treasurer of the new party.

Farmers Get Corns Chasing Vanishing $; Now Pretty Sick

(By The Federated Press)

A farmer's dollar is today worth only 74c when compared with the dollar big business gets for its products. Of course this does not mean that the farmer actually gets a different kind of greenback when he sells his bushel of grain or fattened porker. It's just the department of agriculture's way of showing how much more the farmer has been deflated than the industrial world. The average price of farm products has fallen so much nearer the pre-war level than has the average price of the goods and services furnished the farm by organized business that the farmer can get only three-quarters as much in exchange for his product as he did before the war.

And at that there has been a small gain compared with last year when the department reported the farm dollar worth only 70c. At the lowest point in the farmer's deflation his dollar was worth only 67c when compared with the dollar of organized industry. The fact that during the 3 years since that time the farmer's dollar has gained only 10 per cent contradicts the propaganda which emphasizes the farmer's alleged recovery.

Russia Does Well With Persia.

MOSCOW, May 19.—The Russo-Persian commerce has lately increased by 50 per cent, according to Mr. Shumiatzky, Plenipotentiary Representative of the Union of S. S. R. at Teheran. A number of mixed Russo-Persian companies have been established in Persia, the share of soviet capital therein aggregating some 7 million gold rubles. The Russo-Persian Bank has been rapidly developing its activities and has opened branches in a number of Persian towns during the last few months. The chervonetz (10 gold-ruble bank note) is quoted higher in Persia than the pound sterling and even the American dollar.

McNary-Haugen Bill.

WASHINGTON, May 19.—The McNary-Haugen farm relief bill will be taken up by the house on May 20, under a special rule reported by the house rules committee. Fifteen hours of general debate will be allowed and night sessions held until the measure is disposed of.

Duncan McDonald Is Named For Governor

labor parties now already formed in working for a unified political expression of the workers and farmers on a national scale, thru the June 17th convention if possible.

Recognize Russia—8-Hour Day.

Resolutions were passed demanding unqualified recognition of Soviet Russia, declaring for nationalization of the mines, declaring for a universal eight-hour day, for a revision of the state compensation laws, for the release of all class war prisoners, for the granting of absolute equality to the negroes, advocating organization of the unorganized workers by the launching of an organization drive, relief of the unemployed, elimination of landlordism among the farmers and other farm relief.

Delegates represented the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' unions, the food workers, carpenters, electrical workers, boilermakers, office workers, retail clerks, farmers' organizations, and United Mine Workers of America. There were three delegates representing the workers' party, one delegate from the negro tenants' league, delegates from the Workmen's Circle, and three from Lithuanian fraternal organizations. Many of the miners who are in Peoria attending the miners' convention, visited the Labor Party convention. The miners had the largest representation at the convention.

Illinois Labor Ticket.

The state ticket will be completed with the co-operation of organizations which are expected to affiliate later.

State Executive Committee.

The state executive committee of the Illinois Labor Party elected today is E. M. Hewlett, from West Frankfort, mine workers; Ed. Johnson, mine worker from Christopher; Henry Corbishley, mine worker from Ziegler; Martin L. Johnson, Chicago, Illinois; Joe Grant, carpenter from Peoria, Ill.; Arne Swabeck, painter, Chicago; Duncan McDonald, mine worker of Springfield, M. P. Morrissey railroad railway clerk, of Joliet; J. F. Burman, carpenter, Waukegan.

The platform and rules, as finally adopted by the convention is given below. The platform committee reported that there was a thoro discussion of some points in the program but in the final form here given the approval was unanimous.

Text of Labor Platform.

This is the purpose of the Labor Party of Illinois. It calls upon all workers and farmers and their organizations in the state to unite together to put the following platform into effect, the realization of which our candidates are pledged to fight for:

1. Public ownership of public utilities, natural resources, industries and all social means of communication and transportation, with steadily increasing control of the management by the workers and farmers thru their economic, political and co-operative organizations.
2. Government Banking.
3. Enactment of a law providing for a maximum workday of eight hours of labor in all industries, with further provision of adjusting the hours of work so as to afford employment to all workers.
4. Enactment of a law prohibiting the employment in industry of children under the age of 16.
5. Enactment of a law providing for adequate insurance for all industrial and rural workers in case of sickness, accident and deaths, and for the compensation during unemployment at regular union wages for all city and rural workers. Funds for same to be secured thru the taxation of all excess profits, inherited wealth and unearned income.
6. Unqualified and complete abolition of the power to issue injunctions in labor disputes and other judicial abuses.
7. Restoration of civil rights as guaranteed by the Constitution.
8. Compulsory education for all up to the age of 16, with better school facilities and prohibition of the platoon system of education.
9. Equal wages for equal work for all workers, regardless of race, color, creed, nationality or sex.
10. Abolition of the contract system on Road Building and all Public Works. Construction to be undertaken directly by the state, (only union labor to be employed), at union rate of wages and under union conditions of labor.
11. A moratorium for all working farmers on their farm debts for a period of five years.
12. Immediate steps to curb the gambling in grain, (by doing away with the right to trade in "Futures" on the Chicago Board of Trade and other Grain Exchanges.)
13. Elimination of landlordism and tenantry and securing of the land to the users of the land.

Howat Addresses Convention.

Alexander Howat addressed the Illinois Labor Party convention as follows: "I want you to understand that I am with you in this fight," said Howat. "The workers must understand that the time is gone by when they can be satisfied with a few crumbs dropped from the rich man's table. They must all get together in a solid labor party of their own. Then, instead of accepting a few crumbs that the old party politicians care to throw them, they can demand their rights as the producers of all wealth."

"I want it understood here and now," Howat emphasized, "that it is time the workers cleaned house in many places, and got rid of those elements which are catering to the rich men and the employers. This applies particularly to the American Federation of Labor conventions."

Over $300 cash was pledged by the various delegates in attendance, including a donation of $100 from District 8, of the Workers' Party.

Shirt Ironers Win Cold Victory From New York Bosses

NEW YORK, May 19.—The Shirt Ironers' Union, Local No. 280, held a conference last week with the bosses' association of the Columbia Heights section, to renew their agreement. The outlook is that the association of the bosses of this section will peacefully accept the new agreement of the workers.

The Shirt Ironers' Union had section meetings all over the city. The workers turned out in great numbers and with enthusiasm greeted the new agreement and pledged to do everything possible to put same into effect. Especially was the East Side section meeting well attended, the result of which will undoubtedly be 100 per cent organization in this section.

A general meeting held last Saturday, the report of the Strike Committee was received and the membership voted to stand solidly by their demands.

Methodists Fight On Pacifism; Bible Institute Anti-War

Only the sister of an American Legion leader opposed the resolution passed by the students and faculty of Garrett Biblical Institute of Northwestern University, approving the extreme anti-war attitude taken by a committee of the Methodist general conference at Springfield, Mass. The girl saw a yellow cloud of Japanese hovering on the horizon and challenged the 124 other voters to "pray them away."

Rev. W. R. Wedderspoon of Chicago, is leading an attack on the anti-war group in the Springfield conference and will try to have the church support wars of self-defense or "in the cause of humanity" (like the last one?).

Emigrants To Russia Must Communicate With Canada Office

WASHINGTON, May 19.—All questions regarding the rights of Soviet citizenship and entry within the boundaries of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics from persons in the United States and Canada must be addressed to the official agent of the U. S. S. R. at 212 Drummond street, Montreal, Canada, according to a statement issued by Agent Yasikoff at Montreal and forwarded to the Russian Information Bureau here.

It appears that bogus representatives of Russia and Ukraine have been issuing false visas and other documents of entry, in this country and Canada, to persons wishing to enter the territories under the Union government.

BAPTISTS ASKED TO SWALLOW A BIG MOUTHFUL

Virgin Birth Theory On Spiritual Menu

ATLANTA, Ga., May 19.—A resolution, which will bring into the open the fundamentalist-modernist dispute, was introduced in the southern Baptist convention today, by Dr. C. P. Stealey, editor of the Baptist Messenger, Oklahoma City.

The resolution proposed that "trustees, officers and members of faculties of institutions owned, fostered or supported by the southern Baptist convention be required to sign a statement of belief," confirming to eight points of the fundamentalist doctrines. The resolution would require an absolute acceptance of the basic and literal meaning of the script.

These eight points include the bible, the unity and equality of the three persons of the godhead, the literal acceptance of the creation story as accounted in the book of Genesis, the Virgin birth of Christ, the atonement of sin only thru belief in Christ, the new creation or rebirth in Christ, the actual bodily resurrection and return of Christ from the grave and the spiritual conception of the word church.

Strained Relations Between Poland And Ukraine Grow Worse

MOSCOW, May 19.—The arbitrary and oppressive action of the Polish authorities in the frontier regions near Ukraine are creating an ever more serious situation there. Refugees from Eastern Galicia report that hatred is growing among Ukrainian circles there against everything Polish. All the Ukrainian papers and printing offices have been closed, and Polish prisons are filled with Ukrainian editors, journalists, teachers and students, workers and peasants. The Ukrainian parties have been dissolved.

Recently police made a number of searches, trying to uncover the Ukrainian delegation, due to leave for London, where they wish to consult with Mr. MacDonald's Government and explain the real conditions prevailing in the Polish border areas.

Polish opposition papers are publishing appeals for the relief of former Petlura men and officers, who are in a terrible plight in Poland. Part of this "army" have been enlisted by the French Enlisting Bureau and sent to work in Africa, where they are perishing from the bad climate and fever.

Brickworkers In Chicago District Sign New Scale

Average earnings of $60 a week for three years more are guaranteed to skilled piece workers and a minimum wage of 80c an hour to the lowest paid brick and clayworkers in the Chicago district by the new agreement signed by the union and employers effective since May 1.

The United Brick and Clay workers is an industrial union covering every man from the clay digger to the trucker who unloads the bricks and clay products from the railroad freight car onto the motortruck for delivery to the scene of building operations. "The Chicago district council which signed the agreement is 100 per cent organized," says Secretary William Roulo. "Our district goes north as far as Deerfield, east to Hammond, south to Mankeno and west to the city limits, with 2600 members."

The three year contract stabilizes the higher paid unionists and gives the lowest paid an increase of 2c to 4c an hour. The 48-hour week is recognized thruout by the employers, who will pay time and a half for overtime. A few points about working conditions will go to arbitration.

TRACHTENBERG IS POLITICAL MAGNET—CARNEY

Warring Radicals Unite To Hear Him

By JACK CARNEY.

SAN FRANCISCO.—No lecturer within recent times has created such a widespread interest in Soviet Russia and Germany as Alexander Trachtenberg, in his recent visit to this district. His lectures were attended by every section of the radical movement. Socialists, Anarchists, Wobblies and Communists packed his meeting, bombarding him with questions and displaying an interest rarely witnessed in this land of orange groves and criminal syndicalist laws.

His masterly analysis of the situation in Germany, together with his graphic description of the situation in Russia, left a deep impression on his auditors. At his last lecture he was over one hour answering questions. His answer to the question, “Why do the Russian workers submit to the dictatorship of the Communist party?” created a wonderful sentiment. He pointed out the transitory nature of the dictatorship. He showed how the Russians had died for the revolution and those who remained did not view the dictatorship in the light of an autocratic institution, rather a means with which to achieve their ultimate freedom.

The Rotary club of Palo Alto called a special meeting and invited Trachtenberg to address them on the possibilities of trade with Soviet Russia. Due to the lack of time, Trachtenberg was unable to accept their invitation.

Trachtenberg visited San Quentin and delivered greetings from the Moscow Soviet to Tom Mooney. He also spoke with Matt Schmidt. “It is gratifying to note how these men are so familiar with what is going on outside,” said Trachtenberg. “They showed an intimate knowledge with what was going on and were highly pleased with the contact established by the Workers party with the labor movement.”

Local comrades are highly enthused with the work of Comrade Trachtenberg and feel that many such speakers should be routed along the Pacific coast, so that the comrades will not feel that they are living in a world of their own.

The local press was sympathetic. Frequent requests for interviews with Trachtenberg were made.

Trachtenberg Tour

List of Western Dates.

The list of Trachtenberg's western dates follows. Addresses of halls and hours of meetings will be published later where they are not given here:

Tuesday, May 20, Butte, Mont.
Saturday, May 24, Superior, Wis.
Sunday, May 25, St. Paul, Minn.
Monday, May 26, Minneapolis, Minn.

Baptists to Swallow Hell.

ATLANTA, Ga., May 19—The Southern Baptist convention in session here is expected to go on record as unalterably opposed to the modernist trend of the church in the world. The convention plans to state clearly its position as that of the “Fundamentalists,” believing in the literal truth of the bible.

THE VIEWS OF OUR READERS ON LIFE, LABOR, INDUSTRY, POLITICS

To the Editor of the DAILY WORKER: It's no more a secret that the social democratic misleader Anthony Nomec of Czecho-Slovakia will tour this country the coming fall, also Dr. Edward Benes, the minister of foreign affairs in Czecho-Slovakia, will tour this country. Both birds are bitter enemies of Soviet Russia, but enthusiastic supporters of Russian counter-revolution and of the Eastern Democracies, or world imperialism.

After the split in the Social Democratic party of Czecho-Slovakia the overwhelming majority joined the Communists. With the bourgeois Social Democracy remained small business men, lawyers, policemen, and a handful of lackeys of the capitalist system. These lackeys claimed to be the rightful owners of the Workers' Home (Lidovy Dum) and of the leading official Party Organ, People's Right (Pravo Lidvu) in Prague.

The Communists tried to capture said Home and Organ by force and this movement led to the attempt to establish a Soviet System in Czecho-Slovakia. Of course, the Social Democratic Fascist fought desperately side by side with the police, gendarmerie, and troops against the Working Class of Czecho-Slovakia. Anthony Nemec's capitalism triumphed. Thousands of Communists were persecuted and thrown in prison and the Social Democratic bourgeois became ministers and statesmen of capitalist Czecho-Slovakia.

Trouble Breeding Alliance.

The brother of Dr. Edward Benes, a former grammar school teacher, Vojta Benes, now General School Inspector in Czecho-Slovakia, was the chief organizer and ruler of the Bohemian National Alliance in U. S., which exploited the poorest Bohemian workers without mercy, ruled them with an iron fist. Officials of the alliance drew senseless high salaries, toured around the whole world for a good time, aroused bitter war spirit and national hate among Bohemian workers to add more millions to the war profiteers. Because Vojta Benes, once loved, now hated in this country, does fear to come over here, his brother Edward, will visit us, altho he has done the same destructive work in France as Vojta has done over here.

During the Russian revolution the Bohemian National Alliance has done all possible dirty work to help to overthrow the Soviet system and to reestablish the old tyrannical czarist Sickly Socialist Warrior.

Josef Martinek, the editor of the Delnicke Listy, (Workers' News), the Menshevik and White Guardist counter-revolutionary Cleveland weekly in Bohemia, went several times for the National Alliance to Russia to incite the Bohemian Legionaires against the Bolsheviki and to save them for counter-revolution. But the legionaires revolted against the Kolchak-Martinek crew and openly joined the Russian revolution.

The above mentioned editor was expelled from the Socialist party for his bloody war spirit. Today the party membership is glad to have him in its line.

Czech Communists Strong.

The Communist party is the strongest party of Czecho-Slovakia, despite Emma Goldman, grandmamma Breskovskaja, Kerensky and thousands of Russian White Guardists and counter-revolutionary Russian so-called “students,” who live in Prague, draw big pensions for doing nothing else but praise the capitalist order of society and denouncing the working class. Martinek makes his adherents believe that the Communists in Czecho-Slovakia are wiped out and that the social democratic party is the strongest party.

Now the elections in Russian Carpathia (a province of Czecho-Slovakia) proved again that the working class, despite persecution, breaking up Communist meetings, etc., is not willing to vote for capitalism any more. Two-thirds of all votes were given for Communism. The Communists elected six representatives into the senate, the social democrats only one. All the millions of Czecho-Slovak crowns donated by the government for social democratic propaganda are thrown away. The social democracy has lost the last inch of ground at home, therefore, the government must send its saviors to the United States to save the last social democratic stronghold, the “White Island” around the Delnicke Listy in Cleveland, Ohio.

The social democracy is business. Otto Bergler was a good business man in the Bohemian National Alliance and at the same time a social democrat, therefore, he became the ambassador of Czecho-Slovakia in Japan. But in the embassy was such corruption that Dr. Benes was forced to discharge his former National Brother from the Bohemian National Alliance and from the embassy.

Spravedinost Sued for Truth.

The Communist daily Spravedinost in Chicago, published Dr. Benes information, why Otto Pergler was discharged from the embassy, and this social democrat has sued said Bohemian daily for $100,000 indemnity for his lost honor and reputation.

The leaders of the Delnicke Listy (Workers' News) in Cleveland, own stores, businesses, houses and automobiles. The social democratic ministers and statesmen in Czecho-Slovakia own palaces, factories, automobiles. Their watchword is: “Get rich quick; to hell with the working class.”

Mr. Pergler's dirtiest part is, that he wants the hundred thousand dollars for nothing, not from a rich paper at home, (all papers brought Dr. Benes information about Pergler's discharge) but from the sweat and blood of uncounted Bohemian American workers, who have built up and keep up the Communist daily, Spravedinost in Chicago, Illinois. He did not yet collect the money and it's a question if he will return a social democratic capitalist as his friend, Voska and others did.

Dr. Vojtauer is active at said daily since last December. He took part at the conference of the Third International in Moscow, later he was active at the Communist daily (Rude Pravo) “Red Right.” He is spreading a Communist propaganda and therefore he is dangerous to the social democratic capitalist system.

Gompers' watchword: “Reward your friends—punish your enemies” must work. Deport honest Communists—reward the famous ring leaders of the oil scandal. I don't know if the last news is not only a bluff—but we are free to starve, to go to jail—to be deported and to lose our citizenship any time if we are not satisfied with capitalist exploitation. Yours for freedom,

ANTHONY HALAMEK.
Cleveland, Ohio.

The DAILY WORKER:

Please send it to this same address until June 1, and then to Lisbon, New Hampshire.

The paper has become indispensable to me. I think it is a wonderful achievement to have created such a paper in so short a time. I hope the day is not far distant when it will be published in Boston, New York and other cities, as well as in Chicago.

The magazine supplement I consider an especially excellent feature, and it is convenient to have the articles of that character on a separate sheet, so that one can put them aside for reference.

With all good wishes to the paper,

Katherine Rand Stevens.

JAVA WORKERS, PEASANTS WITH COMMUNISTS

Proletarian Leaders Win Strong Support

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ROTTERDAM, Holland, April 22.—(By mail.)—An unusual tribute to Communist organization ability is paid in a recent issue of the capitalist daily, “Nieuwe Rotterdamsche Courant.” Writing from Java, the special correspondent of that paper speaks as follows of the Communist movement in the Dutch East Indies:

Communists Lead Java's Workers.

“The real people's movement in Java is to be found since the beginning of last year more and more in the Communist party of Indonesia (P. K. I.). More than any other group, the P. K. I. his secured the real interest and support of thousands of the people, where other groups have failed. Many causes can be given, among others, those of a personal character. Sarakat Islam (nationalist) lost the greatest part of its following to the P. K. I.; Buddhi Utome continues to be a class union, and the new Javanese union is still further removed from the real masses. But the P. K. I. is mostly composed of workers. There are thousands of workers on the railways, the workers of the machine factories, the people who are connected with the process of industrialisation, who are led mostly by non-intellectuals and very rarely by leaders of high social standing, into a movement which, owing to the simple and uninvolved character of its slogans, can be easily understood by the uneducated masses.

Peasants Join Workers.

“In the Preanger province, more and more frequent meetings are held in small villages, and the peasant, whose burden has become heavier by the imposing of new forms of taxation, who sees the opportunities for work decreasing, who is suffering also from recent bad seasons, comes to these meetings and listens attentively to speakers from the town. So in a remote village in the heart of the province, hundreds of peasants could be seen at a meeting where above the tribune floated the emblem of the Hammer and the Sickle. This meeting was only one of many.

“Tho openly anti-Dutch and demanding absolute independence as its aim, nevertheless, the P. K. I. puts forward demands which are directed towards immediate improvements, and the 'Communist' character of its doctrine is put far enough into the background to win the sympathy of the crowd.”

Sec. Davis Ignores Debate Acceptance On Immigration

ALLENTOWN, Pa., May 19.—Secretary of Labor Davis has not seen fit to answer the acceptance of his challenge to debate that was sent him by Fred Merrick, delegate to the State Federation of Labor convention, which has just ended here. Merrick is also a member of the executive committee of the Western Pennsylvania Council for the Protection of the Foreign Born, and wished particularly to debate the immigration question with Davis.

Davis defended the administration's immigration policy and offered to debate any one on President Coolidge's friendship to labor. Merrick took up the defy and suggested debating here while the state labor conventio. was in session, or any other meeting to which the secretary of labor would agree.

250 Greek May Day Prisoners Released When “Reds” Demand

ATHENS, May 5.—(By mail)—The 250 Communists who were imprisoned on May Day for their participation in the labor celebrations contrary to government orders, were unconditionally freed yesterday upon the protestation of the Communist Party. A general strike had been threatened if the workers were not released at once. The Communists have been developing their power here until the ruling class of Greece is forced to accede to their demands when they have the backing of the mass of labor.

PIRATES ARE AS NUMEROUS IN CHINESE WATERS AS OIL THIEVES IN U. S.; NO LONGER INTRIGUE CHINKS

By JACK ARMITAGE

HONGKONG, April 15.—(By Mail.)—Piracy in China waters, particularly in the immediate vicinity of the British colony of Hongkong, has reached a pitch unparalleled since the days of the Caribbean buccaneers.

For months past Hongkong newspapers have retailed stories of pirates, until the public, except when the exploit has been more than usually daring have almost lost interest.

The latest attack on the S. S. Tai Lee—the second within three months—is more in the nature of a challenge to the government of the British Colony than an ordinary piracy.

On each occasion the raid on the “Tai Lee” has been particularly audacious. In the first attack—which was minently successful—the pirates shot, and mortally wounded the British captain, besides placing a number of Indian guards hors de combat.

The last attack on the “Tai Lee” was even more daring than the first, as on this occasion the Tai Lee was acting as armed “mother ship” to a convoy of large river steamers.

There has been much dissatisfaction, and many suspicions expressed regarding the Hongkong Government's action—or rather, lack of action—in piracy suppression. The latest outrage but serves to show how utterly puerile the piracy prevention regulations are.

Everyone—outside of the official clique and the shipowners—has been in agreement that the regulations are ineffective, for vessels carrying six and seven hundred passengers are not even provided with wireless. The Officers' and Engineers' Guilds—on whose members the brunt of the fray has fallen—have been persistent in their demand that a Naval escort be provided on pirate infested runs, and that the system of locked grilles, which merely act as death traps in case of accident, should be replaced by wireless.

The latest piratical exploit has spurred the Guilds to direct action and, as the result of a lightning strike the somnolent authorities have “been pleased” to provide an armer Naval escort.

Considering that many lives have been lost, dozens of people wounded, and some hundreds kidnapped and held to ransom, this modicum of protection was long overdue.

Fierce Battle on Armed “Mother Ship”

Leaving Kongomoon for Hongkong at her usual time on Friday, April 11, all went well with the “Tai Lee” till she had proceeded down river to within some nine miles of Kongmoon.

Without warning, the vessel was greeted with a fusillade of bullets from the river bank on the port side, and a few seconds later firing commenced on the lower decks. Some thirty pirates who had boarded the vessel as passengers first gave their attention to the engine-room staff, and the second engineer (Mr. Lewis) who was on duty at the time, found the muzzle of an automatic pressed against his chest.

The Ship Disabled.

The engineer was ordered to remove certain parts of the machinery, but instead of obeying he jumped to one side. The pirate fired at point blank range, but, fortunately he missed. Two other pirates who had entered the engine room opened fire and the second engineer dived for the shafting tunnel. One of the freebooters took up a position at the tunnel door and emptied the contents of his revolver in Mr. Lewis' direction. Miraculously, he was not struck, but he kept quiet until his would-be murderer, evidently satisfied that he could not have escaped, moved off.

The next thing the hunted man heard was the voice of a European police sergeant shouting, “Mr. Lewis, Mr. Lewis!” He came out of the tunnel and more shots were fired in his direction. Presently the shooting in the engine room died down and he made his way to the stokehold, where he found that all the fires had been drawn.

On the Upper Deck.

Realizing that the lower decks had been attacked, the officers on the top deck at once prepared to resist. After the second vessel in the convoy had been signalled in Morse code and Verey lights discharged, the guards were placed behind the iron grilles with guns trained on the sides of the vessel; the police on the port side and the ship's Indian guards on the starboard. The Captain, Chief Officer and the Pilot remained at the helm, doing their utmost to prevent the vessel drifting ashore, from which hundreds of pirates maintained a steady rifle fire.

A Streak of Luck.

By sheer good luck the vessel drifted past the point where the pirates had intended to beach her. In this the robbers made their only miscalculation, for the tide, which is very tricky, was still on the ebb; not on the flood as the pirates had calculated.

Those aboard firmly contend that this was the only thing which prevented the vessel falling into the hands of the attackers. By this time the San Ning (the second vessel in the convoy) had managed to turn back, and the bandits realized that the game was up, for both vessels had negotiated the most dangerous part of the river.

Those pirates who were aboard plunged headlong into the river, where they were a mark for rifles and the machine gun on the ship. At least nine were killed outright, their bodies floating down the river, while it is asserted that many more were wounded.

The desperados from the ship having reached the shore, a terrific fire was opened by their companions on the bank. One lady passenger on the San Ning, who had taken refuge in her cabin, was shot thru the head and killed instantly, while, in spite of the fact that everyone on the vessels had sought covor, seven others were wounded.

Steam was again raised on the “Tai Lee,” and both vessels made their way to Hongkong, where a rigorous search was conducted without anything incriminating being discovered on any of the “Tai Lee's” 600 passengers.

Where the Blame Lies.

Many individual stories are related of hair's breadth escapes, but the foregoing is, in brief, the story of the latest piracy near Hongkong. Even tho the pirates were on this occasion repulsed they robbed a number of passengers before plunging overboard.

For such outrages as this, which is only one among dozens, those engaged in the arms traffic must be held to blame.

That much of this nefarious trade is conducted from America is certain, for the seizures of arms on American ships in Hongkong have been numerous and large.

Get into conversation with any Chinese Seamen's Union official, and he will tell you that Chinese seafarers pay huge sums in cumshaw for the privilege of working on the China-America run. That the venture proves profitable is shown by the number who retire after a few years.

But what of those who supply the arms in America, and of those others who, in cases bearing general merchandise marks, export huge consignments of arms and munitions to China? There is an arms embargo agreement, but in spite of that official statistics indicate that there are over 1,000,000 armed men in China. In this huge number no account is taken of the tens of thousands of pirates and bandits who make a comfortable living by preying on the populace. Who, then, supplies them? Certainly not Chinese arsenals!

The fact of the matter is that huge fortunes are being made out of this illicit traffic, and there is a decided suspicion that “reputable” firms, thru their Chinese compradores, are making immense profits by supplying anyone who has the ready cash to pay.

When we have a repetition of the Boxer outrages—of which there seems a distinct possibility—the blame must rest on those who supply the arms.

Pelf For Blood.

The debt of blood will no doubt again be collected in pelf, affording but another opportunity for the exploitation of the people who, as a nation, are entirely innocent.

Were the foreign governments but honest in their protestations a stop would be soon put to the whole business; and, did they so desire, the Powers, without much trouble, could lay by the heels those in the game. But the capitalist is playing a hand which is centuries old—he gets his cut both ways.

Baltic Steamship Service Revived.

MOSCOW, May 18.—After an interval of 10 years, the Volunteer fleet is inaugurating a service again between Odessa and Hamburg. The ships plying between these points will call at all important Mediterranean ports.

FRENCH TO MEET TO COMMEMORATE “BLOODY WEEK”

Remember Martyrs Of Paris Commune

NEW YORK, May 19.—Commemorating the “bloody week” of May 2 to 28, 1871, “in which 36,000 French workers were shot by the reactionary government of Thiers,” the French branch of the Workers party, Local New York, will hold a concert and mass meeting in Bryant hall, Sixth avenue, between 41st and 42nd streets, at 8 p. m., Saturday, May 24.

M. J. LeGoff will be chairman, and the speakers will be J. S. Poyntz (in English), Leon Mabille (in French), Ettore Frisina (in Italian), and Harry Winitzky. An excellent musical program will complete the evening's celebration.

“The working class must commemorate their martyrs,” reads the circular sent out by the French branch to advertise their demonstration, and lists to be remembered: the Paris Commune, March 18 to May 28, 1871; the May, 1886, tragedy of Chicago; the October, 1917, Russian revolution; the 1918-1919 Spartacus movement in Germany; the autumn, 1920, occupation of the factories by the workers of Italy.”

Tickets for the Saturday meeting are 25 cents and may be procured at 208 East 12th street, or at 127 University place, or at 133 West 51st street, New York.

Legion Would Stop Fight.

NEW YORK.—The New York state board of the American Legion wil try to stop the Gibbons-Carpentier fight in Michigan City on May 31, Billy Gibson announced. The Legion officials want to put on the Tunney-Carpentier match, which Gibson ha made, he said.

MEMBERSHIP, ATTENTION!

Continuing the work of familiarizing the party membership with the united front policy of the party in relation to the Farmer-Labor party, the central executive committee has arranged a series of meetings at which Comrade James P. Cannon will speak on the question of the party labor party policy. The meetings arranged will be held in the following cities:

May 21—Philadelphia, Pa.
May 23—Buffalo, N. Y.
May 24—Pittsburg, Pa.
May 25—Cleveland, Ohio; mass meeting, Labor temple, 2536 Euclid avenue, at 3 p. m.
May 26—Detroit, Mich.; House of the Masses, 2646 St. Aubin, corner Gratiot, at 8 p. m.

Every party member is urged to attend these meetings and branches to see to it that at least some members of the branch attend so that a further report can be made at the branches.

CLEVELAND FAILS TO CONSIDER NEW LABOR PARTY

Federation Machine Wrecks Conference

By J. A. HAMILTON.

CLEVELAND, O., May 19.—A conference of delegates from Cleveland Local Union and other workers' organizations held May 14, on the call of the Cleveland Federation of Labor, to consider the advancement of labor's interests in politics, was steam-rolled to death by the federation machine when it became evident that the sentiment was 2 to 1 for independent political action.

The conference was packed with reactionaries not elected as delegates, but who, with the help of President McLaughlin of the Cleveland Federation, who presided, carried their point that as standing delegates to the Federation or the Building Trades Council, they were entitled to seats. Smith, Business Agent of the Building Trades Council, finally moved a recess which, altho overwhelmingly voted down, was declared carried by McLaughlin, who then adjourned the meeting.

Nothing definite had been accomplished, not even arrangements for a future meeting.

Confusion as to procedure and points at issue prevailed thruout. This was partly due to the centrist attitude of "Progressives," such as Max Hayes and Albert F. Coyle, editor of the Locomotive Engineers' Journal.

The "pure and simple" A. F. of L. policy, good enough for the reactionary delegates, is not quite good enough for Hayes and Coyle, who supported the hybrid proposition to organize a non-partisan political movement independent of all political parties, which would organize Cleveland by ward committees and in case the old parties fail to nominate "Labor" men for any office, would put up "good" men for such office. This vague proposal, because of its possibilities of developing into independent political action, was opposed by the "Old Guard," and because of its close resemblance to the regular Gompers' program, was unacceptible to the more class-conscious elements.

Labor Party Sentiment.

However, the early discussion showed a strong sentiment in favor of a Labor Party, so when the question of adoption of a policy came up, the machine feared to allow a definite vote.

Max Lerner's motion to organize a Labor Party was ruled out of order. Smith, the gang's floor leader, moved to adopt the Hayes proposal and continue to follow the A. F. of L. policy. Severino, of the Bricklayers, pointed out that this motion stood for two contradicting propositions, and made a plea for a Labor Party. N. Shaffer also made a strong speech for a Labor Party which was enthusiastically received. The contradictory Smith motion was voted down; but the machine feared to press an out and out endorsement of the Gompers' policy.

The machine steam-rolled a proposal to reconvene the conference for further discussion and action, and the motion to recess left the calling of a future conference to Chairman McLaughlin, which, in effect, killed the conference.

The advocates of the Labor Party have already taken steps to continue all the more aggressively the fight for a real class political expression for the Cleveland workers.

PICKETING PROVED EFFECTIVE; BOSSES FEAR GOOD FIGHTERS

"Thruout the entire history of labor strikes, the picket has played a prominent part. To him or her is committed the task of keeping the strike alive. The picket's job is to patrol outside the premises of those against whom the strike is directed and, insofar as he can, see to it that no persons engage in work vacated by the strikers."

Sounds like a union definition of the importance of picketing, but it's the "Employers' News," organ of the Chicago Employers' Association getting off a little editorial on picketing. The article continues with misstatements of the activities of pickets and legal opinion on that great "right" of anybody to work anywhere whenever he pleases. It fails to add, "if the boss also pleases," which always conditions the workers' "rights."

The editorial concludes with the threat that "Those who are thus at fault (i. e., guilty of contempt for picketing enjoined places of business), tho their cases be appealed, must eventually suffer the consequence of their acts."

The reference is clearly made in regard to the ladies' garment workers' strike now in its twelfth week here. The Chicago Employers' Association took the dress manufacturers to its bosom and trusted its pet labor-hater Dudley Taylor, to clean up the strikers in short order with the aid of Judge "Dennie" Sullivan's injunctions, State's Attorney Crowe's special thugs, private sluggers, and ordinary police assistance.

The combined opposition thus offered has failed to accomplish its purpose and the Employers' Association is sore. Their words in the "News" are wasted, for there are some legal authorities who disagree on that holy right of injunction. The garment strike is effective, in spite of the Employers' statements that the manufacturers are operating 85 per cent of normal, or the Employers' Association wouldn't be belly-aching about pickets on the front page of its "News."

DETROIT BOSSES OUT TO SMASH CARMEN'S UNION

Look On Organization As Bad Example

By SHERMAN BOWMAN.
(Staff Correspondent of the Fed. Press)

DETROIT, May 19.—Local 26, Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway employes has forestalled a lockout or strike on the Detroit municipally owned street railway lines, by petitioning the circuit court for a writ of mandamus compelling the commission to recognize the arbitrator the union has named and to name another to negotiate with him.

The 3,600 platform employes are demanding a 14 per cent wage increase, readjustment of working schedules to reduce 12 hour split runs and recognition of the union.

The attitude of the commission toward organized labor has become public knowledge thru a telegram from one of the members, G. Ogden Ellis, now in California, in which he urges a showdown on his contention that the union must be destroyed.

Attempt to Smash Unions.

No more flagrant union-smashing methods have been used by private corporations than by the working executives of the city's railway lines and and the commission. These gentlemen have been told by industrial employers here that the solidarity of the street railway men's union is a dangerous example to unorganized factory workers. Consequently, union officers have been forbidden the right of collecting dues at car barns, forbidden leave of absence as platform employes to carry out their union duties and refused permission at the barns to circulate a petition declaring that the local and international union executives were the accredited representatives of the men.

Owing to intimidation carried on against the workers, it is regarded as a triumph for the union that only 32 per cent of the workers voted at a primary election staged by the commission May 13 for creating a dual "democratically elected" organization.

Welcome Strikebreakers.

The commission has acknowledged the offer of the Employers' Association of Detroit to act as a strikebreaking agency in a strike or lockout. The manager of this employers' "union" pointed out to the commissioners that between 6,000 and 7,000 former platform men were working in Detroit shops. And the manager said the member firms would be asked to call volunteers from their own plants to man the idle street cars, the volunteers being granted leaves of absence while their services as strike breakers were required.

A stench bomb syndicate operating thruout the nation is the latest "labor conspiracy" discovered by the bosses.

The Employers' News of the Chicago association has made the discovery known:

"According to reports coming out of Milwaukee, a case is pretty well established against a national stench bomb syndicate. A motion picture theater owner of that city, experiencing difficulty with the local musicians' union, was the victim of several stench bombing outrages. The perpetrator of these drastic measures, to force capitulation to the union's demands, was found to be from Indianapolis. Investigation developed the fact that he had been sent from that point to Milwaukee with a full complement of "bombs." When apprehended and imprisoned, the attorney for the motion picture operators' union came from New York city and furnished bail for his release. Subsequent facts tend to indicate that the theatrical unions, on a national scale, are in conspiracy to intimidate the theatrical field and the public by illegal methods."

There is nothing illegal about stench bombs—yet, we beg to correct the News, and certainly not as much deplorable in their use as in the foul-smelling fulminations bosses usually deliver against workers who try to organize and get some sort of decent living for themselves at the cost of the bosses profits.

Prove British Aided "White Guard."

(By Rosta News Agency.)

MOSCOW, May 19.—The Krasnaya Gazete, a leading Leningrad organ, publishes a document over the signature of General Holman, Chief of the British military mission at ex-General Denikin's headquarters, in 1920, addressed to the Don and Kuban Cossacks. This appeal reads in part:

"Cossacks! I have been dispatched here by His Majesty the King of England to help you win in your fight against the enemies of Christianity. . . . I have reported to His Majesty that you have all decided at any price to abolish those people. I am fully aware that this war is a hard one and I know gallantly you have fought at all times and wherever you were. . . . I know that in your struggle you have been lacking many necessaries, but now I can and will help you in all this, as soon as I shall be able to, with equipment and munitions. . . ."

The Leningrad paper remarks that such a document will be useful to support the counter-claims of U.S.S.R. which the Union will have to put forth against any British claims of compensation for losses sustained by British subjects in Soviet Russia.

NEW YORK, May 19.—Art triumphed over prejudice in Greenwich Village last night.

Eugene O'Neill's new drama of miscegenation had its premier at the Provincetown Playhouse and Mary Blair, white actress, kissed the hand of her negro leading man, Paul Robeson, in the final scene of "All God's Chillun Got Wings," without causing a riot.

The only ban on the performance was that of Mayor Hylan, who wouldn't let eight of "God's Chillun" have licenses to play in the first scene, which had to be read.

World Enviously Eyes Kursk Iron Deposit Of Russia

(Rosta News Agency.)

MOSCOW, May 19.—The latest researches made in the field of the Kursk (Central Russia) magnetic anomaly have revealed that the ore-containing layer lies very deep and its volume is over 8,900,000 cubic "sajens" (1 cubic sajen is equal to 343 cubic feet) in one verst (about ⅝ mile); as the weight of one cubic "sajen" is estimated at about 2,000 poods, or 32.3 tons, the layer of ore must weigh at least 287 million tons in each verst of surface. Taking at about 35 per cent the contents of pure iron in the ore, it will be found that something like 100 million tons of iron can be expected to be uncovered per verst of surface.

A special laboratory has been organized at the Mining Academy in order to find the technical qualities of the mineral to be found and determine the economic value of the results achieved.

It should be noted that much interest is being evinced abroad—in Europe and, particularly, in America—for this discovery, among the scientific as well as the trade and business circles. This was eventually evidenced by the interest displayed for the lectures delivered abroad on this matter by the Russian Academician, Professor Lazonoff, who dwelt on the scientific and practical importance of the Kursk anomaly.

DAUGHERTY SPENT MILLIONS TO BREAK SHOPMEN'S STRIKE

"Incalculable" is the word used to value the "loss to business and industry" and the "loss to the general public" from the railway shopmen's strike of 1922, according to the recently published report of the attorney general of the United States.

A regular bill was sent the Railway Employes' Department, American Federation of Labor, with "The American Public, Dr.," at its head. It includes losses (excepting damages to property and loss of business) to the extent of $96,501,376, plus "expense incurred by the department of justice, serving for our protection," amounting to $1,922,639. The report claims that 53,831 "necessary additional guards and police officers" were required.

The shopmen lost their strike, but the big bosses of this country, who like to call themselves "the public" when they have a howl, paid heavy tribute to Burns and other stool pigeons and sluggers. Then these bosses have the nerve to charge up the workers with the damages of their own dirty work!

DEATH PREVENTS FRAME-UP OF THREE WORKERS

S. P. Railroad Can't Charge Corpses

By MIRIAM ALLEN DeFORD.
(Staff Correspondent of the Fed. Press)

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., May 19.—This item is dated San Francisco, because it is in this city that the ferry boats and railroad stations have been placarded for months with pictures of the three d'Atremont brothers, will Ray in his prison clothes and his prison number prominently displayed, and with lurid notices of $4,800 reward for their arrest and conviction. It was these three boys against whom indictments were issued following an attempted train holdup in northern California last October, resulting in the death of several trainmen.

At the time it appeared that the chief reason for naming these brothers was that all had been active in the I. W. W., and that Ray, one of the 23-year-old twins, had served time under the draft law in Washington during the war. The boys had been out of work, largely because of their radical affiliations, and had gone on a long camping trip shortly before the holdup.

One Boy's Body Found.

Their father had always maintained that the real train robbers (the case was obviously a professional job) had stolen his son's clothes and probably made away with the boys themselves.

Last December a message was sent the father by an unknown tramp to "tell old man d'Atremont that two of his sons will be found under the bridge with their hands tied and their bodies weighted down; the third boy was blown up."

Now the body of Hugh, the 20-year-old boy, has been found in the Rogue river in Oregon and search is being made for the bodies of the twins.

What was intended by the police and Southern Pacific officials to be a Pacific Coast version of the Sacco-Vanzetti case has fallen thru because of this discovery; and the signs offering a reward for the apprehension of these "three dangerous criminals" are being removed from ferry waiting-rooms and cabins.

Modern Lazarus Gets Crumbs From Corporation Dives

TOLEDO, Ohio, May 19.—Charity crumbs are abundant this month, announces the May issue of the Toledo Chamber of Commerce Journal. The Community Chest, seed box for the victims of corporation birds of prey, is full to the brim, and is at the service of farmers and workers who have been exploited to an extent that makes them forced recipients of public aid. The consciences of the parasites are eased, and they can now start profit mongering again with a Christian spirit, and that feeling of social superiority which is the reward of the dealer in charities.

ANDY FURUSETH SAVING SEAMEN IN WASHINGTON

Red-baiting Labor Faker Begging of Solons

By LAURENCE TODD,
Federated Press Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, May 19.—Before the house and senate adopted the conference report on the immigration bill, the conferees were compelled to explain that the vague language they had adopted with regard to the landing of alien seamen in this country did not in any way interfere with the fundamental principle of the seamen's act, under which foreign seamen may freely quit their vessels in American ports and re-ship on other vessels at the American rate of wages. Andrew Furuseth of the seamen's union had sent a printed appeal to every senator and congressman to refuse to vote for the report until sections 19 and 21 of this measure had been stricken out. He held that these sections of the bill would repeal the "emancipation" clause of the seamen's act.

Some Jokers.

The progressive group in the house met and voted to support the motion of Representative Sabath of Chicago to recommit the bill to conference in order that this and three other jokers in the bill should be cut out. The vote to recommit was not even enough to secure a roll call. On the final vote in the house the progressives split. Beck, Schneider, Schafer, Sinclair and others voted against the adoption of the report. Browne, who had spoken for the motion to recommit, voted for final adoption, as did Nelson and Cooper of Wisconsin. Browne stated to the Federated Press afterward that if the bill became law, and it was construed to interfere with the quitting of their ships by foreign seamen in our ports, his group would try to have the law amended.

In the senate, an hour later, the report was attacked by Senator Shipstead, who asked of Senator Reed of Pennsylvania, in charge of the bill, a series of questions showing that the conferees had at least put the seamen's act in jeopardy. They had empowered a hostile secretary of labor to place endless difficulties in the way of the quitting of their jobs by alien seamen coming to American ports. At the same time, Shipstead forced Reed to admit, nothing had been done to compel shipmasters to carry away as many seamen as they brought.

"That would be an unreasonable requirement," Reed asserted. "The master is compelled to explain the absence of any member of his crew who quits or deserts or otherwise disappears, but we know that great numbers of alien seamen desert every spring and go to work on the Great Lakes. Besides, we do not want to make it possible for half a dozen waiters, by striking just before a liner leaves her dock, to delay her sailing.

"As for the seamen's act, the conferees have all tried to explain to Mr. Furuseth that this report seeks to avoid any interference with that law, and we believe it will not in any degree limit the freedom that alien seamen now enjoy in our ports. He does not see it, but I think that is due to his extreme anxiety and caution."

Nevertheless, Reed was unwilling to have the bill sent back to committee and so changed as to leave no doubt in the minds of trade union officials as to its effect on the liberation of seamen. His reference to the advantage of having a lot of alien seamen go to work each spring on the Great Lakes merely reflected the steel trust background of his rise in politics.

Senator Fletcher, Senator Robinson and Senator Jones of Washington also took part in the questioning of Reed with reference to the alien seamen clause. Fletcher did not appear any better satisfied than was Shipstead.

Firemen Suicide-Savers.

BERLIN, May 19.—Firemen have been equipped with oxygen gas tanks for use in rescuing would-be gas suicides. Since the number of gas suicides has been steadily increasing and since the firemen respond to calls faster than the emergency hospital ambulances, they have been given the oxygen tanks. The public has been urged to call on the firemen whenever a suicide case is discovered.

The Dead And The Living

John Fitzpatrick, president of the Chicago Federation of Labor, has at last taken his place along side of Samuel Gompers. Since Fitzpatrick discarded his policy of independent political action by fighting the organization of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party, on July 3rd, of last year, he has been traveling very rapidly to the right, swiftly and surely into the camp and arms of the most reactionary labor bureaucrats strangling the trade union movement.

At Sunday's meeting of the Chicago Federation of Labor, Fitzpatrick threw the last spadeful of earth on the grave of whatever little progressivism that he might have been accused of. Fitzpatrick told the central labor body to drop all notions of independent working class political action and to go back to the staid old bankrupt policy of "reward your friends and punish your enemies." In practice this policy of Mr. Gompers has proved to the workers and farmers of the country one of rewarding their enemies and punishing themselves. It was the inevitable step for Fitzpatrick to take, once he fought the organization of a genuine national farmer-labor party. Sad as this truth may be, it is precisely what the Communists said would happen to Fitzpatrick. The course of development of the class conflict, a war which has its battles inside the labor movement as well as in the ranks of the capitalist class and between the workers and farmers, inevitably drives the wavering, hesitating elements to the right or to the left. Having betrayed the farmer-labor political movement last July 3rd, having chosen Gompers in preference to the great mass of workers and farmers and their Communist spokesmen, it was obvious that Fitzpatrick would swing to the extreme right.

But there is a certain measure of bitter historical justice and atonement in another event of far greater importance to the workers and farmers of Illinois and the rest of the country that occurred on the same day at Peoria. While Fitzpatrick was signing on the dotted line of the death warrant for his feintest pretense at progressivism, there was being organized the first genuine mass farmer-labor party in Illinois. The disappearance of all the farmer-labor paper groups and puppets of sundry labor fakers and so-called progressives and the rise of a living organization, a virile political party, of the workers and expropriated farmers in one of the key states of the country is an event of paramount importance. It bids fair to lend considerable impetus to the farmer-labor movement sweeping the land for the St. Paul convention. The simultaneous announcement of the collapse of the last remnant of progressivism of Fitzpatrick and Fitzpatrickism with the declaration of principles of the new fighting party of the workers and farmers only dramatizes this welcome move in the direction of the achievement of complete working and farming class victory.

Pullman, Boston, Peoria

The DAILY WORKER admires the courage and the spirit of the delegates of Local No. 100, of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, in presenting resolutions to the Boston convention, asking it to express its appreciation of the splendid services rendered during the Chicago strike.

This is the striking local of the Chicago dressmakers. Its members know the brilliant support they have received from the DAILY WORKER. They wanted to place the convention of their "International" on record in favor of their views.

The officials of the union knew the facts to be straight. The whole of the DAILY WORKER'S staff, from proofreaders to editors, had spoken at strike meetings, or served on the picket lines. The DAILY WORKER was practically the official expression of the strike, circulated at all strike meetings, denounced by courts and prosecutors, upheld by the workers, but the DAILY WORKER does more than support strikers in their daily struggles. It has a program of its own, the program of the Workers (Communist) Party. It fights for that program, and the officialdom of "The International" is opposed to that program, and so they object to any credit being given the DAILY WORKER, for any service it may render, no matter how meritorious.

The DAILY WORKER fights for amalgamation, for the class Farmer-Labor Party, for the protection of the foreign-born, for the organization of the unorganized, for the recognition of Soviet Russia, for a Workers' and Farmers' government, for all power to labor. The officialdom of "The International" opposes these measures. It is, therefore, easily understood why the resolutions of Local No. 100, failed, and we feel that their failure is the greatest possible tribute that could be given the DAILY WORKER.

How different during the rank and file strike of the workers in the Pullman carshops, where the workers themselves, on picket duty, sold the DAILY WORKER, by the thousands of copies to those who still blindly stuck to their jobs. No international officials, to safeguard their reaction, to wet blanket their enthusiasm.

A great comparison this—Boston and Pullman. It is this comparison that again makes it easy to understand the attacks of President Frank Farrington, of the Illinois Mine Workers, on the DAILY WORKER at the Peoria convention.

Farrington is even more reactionary than the officialdom of "The International." He is out for the republican governor, Len Small, for re-election. We have already pointed out the serious charges that International President John L. Lewis has made against him, and the charges that he has made against Lewis. These are facts that these labor officials would like to keep hidden. But the job of the DAILY WORKER is to throw light into the dark places. And it will continue with that task.

The coal miners are reading the DAILY WORKER, at Peoria, just as it was read by the delegates to the convention at Indianapolis. They like it. They appreciate it. That will bring us their enthusiastic support. Which is all the support that we need to keep up the fight. When the masses move, there is nothing on earth that can stop them.

Meet the Issue

The action of the United Mine Workers of Illinois in adopting a modified, limited, resolution urging the recognition of the Soviet Republic of Russia, brings to the fore a phase of this question that needs particular emphasis at this moment.

Today, with countries falling in line rapidly in resuming peaceful relations with and according complete de jure recognition to the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics, it is only a ruse of self-defense on the part of the reactionaries that drives them to resort to miserable compromise resolutions on this problem. When Soviet Russia was blocked, when the Soviet power had not yet succeeded in breaking the iron ring of death thrown around the Workers' and Farmers' Republic by the capitalist imperialists, the enemies of Soviet Russia openly fought American recognition. The times have changed. Therefore, these enemies of Soviet Russia are no longer making frank, frontal attacks on the Soviet Republic, but are resorting to devious, labyrinthian methods having the same objective of preventing the complete recognition of the only Workers' and Farmers' Republic.

These dishonest methods of fighting Soviet Russia must be fought with as much determination by the genuine friends of the Workers' Government as they fought the enemies of the Soviets when the attack was made in the open. There can be no hedging on the question of recognizing Soviet Russia. All conditions and limitations attached to the resumption of peaceful, normal relations with the Russian republic are only steps calculated to thwart their announced purpose. When Farrington and his ilk, or when Lewis and his gangmen, attempt to palm off on their convention delegates a modified indorsement of Russian recognition, they are treacherously fighting the Workers' and Farmers' Republic as much as Gompers is when he openly denounces recognition. In some respects Gompers is a less dangerous enemy of the Soviet Republic because he fights it openly.

The friends of the Soviet government, those who are animated solely by the welfare of the working and farming masses, those who owe allegiance only to the working class and are not subject to the beck and call of the reactionary capitalist interests, should fight more resolutely than ever for unconditional recognition of Soviet Russia. The enemies of the Soviet Republic should be smoked out in the open and shown up in all their naked ugliness. They should not be allowed to dodge. It is time to meet the issue openly and squarely and to fight it out in the same fashion.

Mr. James J. Hill is valiantly battling to save $200,000 from the hands of a 24 year old divorcee who claims that the son of the railroad king made violent love to her, which she just as violently reciprocated. The fire burnt out quickly as far as Hill was concerned, so notified the girl that her attentions were no longer desired. Thus the suit. It is hard enough for hardworking millionaires to fight the workers but the girls must also make life miserable for them. Love, unlike patriotism (the Coolidge brand) seems to have a price.

They say "Cautious Cal" is suffering from "rose fever." The specialists are trying to find out whether the roses were red, yellow or blue. It is bad the great sleuth, "Bill" Burns had to be fired at this historical moment.

Double the Party Membership!

By C. E. RUTHENBERG,
Executive Secretary, Workers Party.

IT would be a great achievement for our party if we could double the strength of the party organization during the next two months. Every party member would hail that as a great victory for the Communist movement in the United States.

It is possible for us to do that. While we may not be able to double the membership of the party in two months' time, we can double the strength of our party in efficiency of working power during the next two months.

At the present time the party organization is working on about one-fourth of its potential strength. Thru an aggressive and energetic campaign to increase our organizational efficiency and to increase the number of members who actually participate in the work of the party organization, we can at least double the amount of work which we are doing.

An illustration of the way the party is working as an organization is given in the figures which the national office has received from the district organizers covering the branch reports for the month of March. The following table contains these figures:

District	Total Branch	Total Reporting	New Members	Total Members	Members Paid to Date
1	84	54	38	1,506	985
2	127	58	96	2,825	1,757
3	59	29	21	515	326
6	56	44	15	1,170	758
7	39	21	65	662	404
10	63	46	28	646	468
13	16	14	11	511	323
Agri.	13	5	2	91	33

Look at this table and see what it shows! First, out of 15 Party Districts, seven districts have reported the tabulation of branch reports for the month of March. That means that we have eight District Organizers who are not efficient enough to even carry out a little routine work which has been assigned to them. Then look at the picture of the way the branches of the Party function. In the districts which reported there were 457 branches. Out of these, about one-half were interested enough in the Party work to fill out a report card requiring about fifteen minutes' work and send it to the District Organizer.

Then take a step further and come down to the membership. In the branches reporting to the seven districts which sent in their reports there were 7,926 Party members. Of these Party members, 5,054 had paid their dues to date, and close to 3,000 were from one to three months' in arrears in making dues payments. It that the best we can do as a Party? Can we find only eight District Organizers out of fifteen who will send in their reports monthly and one-fifth of the Party branches who will send their report cards to the District office, and only an eighth over half of the membership who will pay their dues regularly?

These facts show that our Party is not paying enough attention to the organizational efficiency. Efficiency within our organization means a more efficient organization in conducting the work among the masses of this country. We may be assured that if we are only one-fourth efficient in our organizational work, then we are even less efficient in our organizational work outside of the Party.

First Step Toward Remedy.

The first step toward remedying this condition is to create an organ in every Party unit which will be charged with the duty of developing organizational efficiency. This organ of the Party is the Membership Committee.

The Central Executive Commitee at a recent meeting approved the recommendation that every branch, City Central Committee, and District Committee at once create a Membership Committee.

This Membership Committee must consist of Party members who take their duty as Communists seriously and who are ready to give their time and energy, even at some sacrifice, to the work of improving the efficiency of the Party organization.

This work of the Membership Committee cannot be left in the hands of comrades who have not proven by their past work that they can be trusted to carry out earnestly any duties given them. Every Party unit should at once canvass the membership of its unit of the organization and pick out the three members of the Party unit who nearest fulfill the description above.

Duties of Membership Committee.

The duties of the Membership Committee are threefold. One: the Membership Committee must take the necessary action to see that every Party member regularly pays dues to the organization. Second: It must organize a persistent campaign to obtain new Party members. Third: it shall assign work to every member of the branch so as to draw all the potential strength of the Party into the work we are carrying on.

A Membership Committee which sets to work to carry out these three tasks energetically can, in a single month's time double the working efficiency in a Party branch. It can improve the dues payments so that we will not have a picture such as the table above shows. It can organize so that new members are regularly brought into the organization. It can give some work to every member of the branch, thus increasing the amount of work which the branch does.

Collection of Dues.

The Membership Committee should, at the end of the month, examine the branch records to see whether all members have paid their dues. It should see that the financial secretary notifies those members in arrears and carries on a persistent campaign to collect back dues and to induce all members to pay their dues regularly monthly.

Toward this end, the Membership Committee must conduct a campaign to see that every member who has not a good excuse, shall attend his branch meetings regularly, and that those who neglect to pay their dues are called before the branch for explanation in case of persistent neglect in this respect.

If members are out of work, they are entitled to exempt stamps and should secure the stamps as evidence of their good standing in the Party. With a properly functioning Membership Committee, we will have 25,000 Party members paying dues regularly by July 1st.

Campaign for New Members.

The second task of the Membership Committee, of equal importance, is to conduct a systematic campaign for new members. In carrying out this campaign, it should adopt the following plans:

1. It should secure a list of the readers of all Party papers in the territory which the branch covers and assign Party members to visit these readers who are not Party members and endeavor to induce them to join the Party. (Subscription lists of Party papers have recently been sent to District Organizers who in turn were instructed to furnish lists to the respective Party units.)

2. The Membership Committee should, periodically, ask each member of the branch to come before it and should secure from such members the names and addresses of sympathizers for the purpose of bringing them into the Party organization.

3. The Membership Committee should see to it that at every open Party meeting where non-members are invited, an invitation is extended to those present to join the Party.

4. The Membership Committee should maintain a mailing list of sympathizers to be built up by securing names from Party members, and by using the mailing list of the Party branch and other means, send literature to these sympathizers from time to time and should invite them to come to the branch meetings and attempt to get them to join the Party when the ground is sufficiently prepared.

5. The Membership Committee should see to it that every Party member who is working in a non-Party organization such as a trade union, co-operative, or fraternal organization, makes an effort to draw into the Party those members of such organization who are sympathetic to our Party.

It is not sufficient that we should carry on general propaganda for individuals along the lines outlined above and the Membership Committee should be charged with the duty of seeing that these appeals and invitations are made.

Assignment to Party Work.

The third task of the Membership Committee is the assignment of all Party members to work for the Party organization. For this purpose, the Membership Committee should create a file of the Party members thru building up a card file in which there shall be noted the organizations to which members belong, such as trade unions, co-operatives, fraternal organizations, and other facts in regard to their relationship with masses of workers such as the place of their employment. The National Office will shortly print cards for this purpose so that these can be in a standardized form. The work of the branch should be divided as follows:

1. Work in other organizations.
2. Literature distribution, including DAILY WORKER.
3. Defense work.
4. Propaganda meetings.

Work in other organizations: Those Party members who are members of other organizations such as trade unions, cooperatives and fraternal organizations, must be assigned as their first task the work in these organizations. By having a list of all such members, the Membership Committee can quickly mobilize all the members of the branch when the Party initiates a campaign. For instance, in relation to the June 17th Farmer-Labor campaign, it would give immediate instructions to these members, take up the questions of the organization of a state Farmer-Labor Party or sending delegates to the National Organization. The Membership Committee would receive reports from all the members of the branch on what they have done along this line from time to time, and give such instructions as are needed. The same would be true in regard to outside organizations. These members, too, could be instructed, when the Party holds mass meetings, to advertise such meetings in the organizations in which they are members, to sell literature in these meetings, circulate Party defense and other contribution lists there, and generally to secure support of the Party work.

Literature distribution: Not all members of our branches are members of other organizations, and the remainder of the members should be organized in committees for the specific task of carrying on some other form of activity. One such is the distribution of Party literature. Every Party branch should have a group of workers whose first duty is to devote themselves to the distribution of Party leaflets and the sale of Party pamphlets and books. These members should not only work in their own branch and at public meetings but should be charged with systematic work in other organizations by canvassing to sell the Party literature.

Propaganda meetings: Similarly, a group should be formed in each branch for the purpose of building up interest and bringing sympathizers to the open propaganda meetings which the branch holds from time to time, and to support the general mass meetings which the Party organization as a whole in any city holds from time to time. By having a special group of this character to do the advertising, meetings can be greatly improved in attendance and in the results for the Party.

Defense Campaign: Another group of Party members should be organized for the purpose of supporting the defense work of the Party organization. It should be their first duty to support the campaign to raise funds for this part of the Party activities.

Other divisions of party work will arise from time to time as the party develops its campaigns. Whenever a campaign is initiated by the party, such as the Protection of the Foreign-born Campaign, and similar campaigns, the Membership Committee should assign the specific task of supporting these campaigns by all the means at the command of the party branch to a specific group of the members of the branch.

If the Membership Committee does its work conscientiously, if it seeks to organize the whole membership of the branch and bring all the potential strength of the party branch into its work, the party strength would be doubled within the next two months' time.

This is indeed an achievement worth our struggling for. Let every branch appoint its Membership Committee at once. Let us show by the efficiency of our work that we are Communists, that we are capable of directing our affairs and training the workers for the direction of the affairs of society as a whole.

On to St. Paul!

By HENRY GEORGE WEISS

Ye workers in fields and in orchards,
Ye toilers in factory and mill,
Ye makers of wealth, piling fortunes
With your brain and your brawn and your skill,—
Do you love so the shackles that bind ye,
That ye kiss the fetters that bind?
Do you hate so the sunlight of freedom,
That ye'd rather wear blinkers, walk blind?

Now by the gods that grind slowly
The grinding has ground up the meal,
The sacks are filled to o'erflowing—
And yet you still sweat at the wheel.
For what? That your masters may rule you.
For what? That they tread you in scorn.
For what? That your children may hunger
And curse the dark day they were born.

For God's sake awake and arouse ye!
A Moses is walking the land
With the scythe of the field and the hammer
Of labor aloft in his hand.
They day and the hour approaches
For the slaves to arise in their might:
Farmers and workers, join forces,
On to St. Paul—and the fight!

Brookwood Labor Graduates To Go "Back To Unions"

(Special to The Daily Worker)

KATONA, New York, May 19.—"Back to the union" is the slogan of the machinists, miners, seamen, men's and ladies' clothing, millinery and laundry workers who will graduate from Brookwood Labor College on May 30th. Every one of the second class to graduate from Brookwood is a union member and expects to go back to the industry from which he or she came better fitted to serve the labor movement.

Brookwood has now been in existense for three years, and the members of the first class, which graduated in 1923, are back in industry working in the labor movement whether in an official capacity or as active union members. Several of the graduates have already been instrumental in starting workers' classes in Philadelphia, Baltimore, Worcester and Cincinnati.

The 1924 graduating class includes a former manager of the New York Waist and Dress Makers' Joint Board of the I. L. G. W. U., a former President of the Salem (Mass.) Central Labor Union and others who have held minor positions in their unions. The organizations represented include the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, the International Seamen's Union, the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, the United Cloth Hat and Cap Workers, and the International Association of Machinists.

Preparations are under way at Brookwood for the Commencement exercises on May 30th. The speakers who have been invited to address the graduating class on this occasion are all prominent labor leaders and men and women active in the Workers' Education movement.

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

The local American Legion, mostly composed of swivel chair warriors who never heard any noise more closely resembling the boom of a cannon than one of the frequent bomb explosions which bootleggers in Chicago indulge in, to give the police something to get excited about, are all het up over the announced opening next Saturday of an international summer school. Aiding the American Legion is an aggregation of mentally fozzilized females representing various antique societies, such as the Daughters of 1812. These bloodthirsty Legionnaires have no objection to the internationalism of Hell-and-Maria Dawes and the international bankers but they fear a spread of knowledge of the economic causes of war would bring the military business into disrepute. But behind the puppets who protest against peace propaganda, are the capitalists who fear their supply of cannon fodder may be polluted, so the brave heroes who fought in Washington during the war are trotted out to do their stuff.

Even "Labor," leading organ in boosting Senator LaFollette for the presidency, is not certain that the Wisconsin progressive will run even if nominated by the Cleveland conference of the C. P. P. A. If there are any who are not yet fully convinced of the futility of expecting action from the C. P. P. A. for a Farmer-Labor Party, the leading editorial in the May 10 issue of the above paper should complete their disillusionment. In order to help "Labor" convince the workers and farmers that the C. P. P. A. is a delusion and fraud we are reproducing its leading editorial on this page. Read it carefully and then forget July 4, and get ready for St. Paul, where the largest auditorium in the Twin Cities is engaged for the biggest Farmer-Labor convention ever held in the United States. That convention is going to act.

John L. Walker does not like to be referred to as a "renegade Socialist." The definition of "renegade" given in "Funk and Wagnall's New Standard Dictionary of the English Language," is "one who selfishly or wickedly deserts his party and joins another: a deserter." Walker was a member of the Socialist Party and quit it for the Farmer-Labor Party. He left the Farmer-Labor Party and lined up with the Small wing of the Republican Party of Illinois. He has left a party that stood for the interests of the working-class and joined a party that represents the interests of the capitalists. Walker will not get away with his treason to the workers by a flood of crocodile tears and outbursts of moral indignation.

Had Walker changed his allegiance from one working class political party to another, his explanations that he changed his ideas on tactics could be accepted in good faith provided his actions squared with his words. But he did not do that. He has lined up with the party which speaks for the Chamber of Commerce that Walker pretends to be so much opposed to. That Walker protests against being called a renegade shows that the masses are beginning to call him to book and that the workers, particularly the miners of Illinois, no longer refer to him as "Honest John" but as the man who sold out his political convictions to the bosses.

Delegate Mercer, chairman of the resolutions committee at the Illinois Miners' convention, proved how ignorant a payroll patriot can be when he explained the insulting resolution on the recognition of Soviet Russia he managed to sneak over on the convention. Soviet Russia should be recognized of course, Mercer argued, provided the Soviet government is willing to recognize other countries. If Mercer had knowledge instead of cunning he would know that Russia was the only country in the world to recognize the right of self-determination, one of Wilson's Fourteen Points. Russia freed several small countries long held in bondage by the Czars. The other capitalist nations, instead of freeing the subject peoples under the rule added more to their list. And the United States is not lagging behind. Soviet Russia is no longer begging for recognition from capitalist nations. European governments are falling by the wayside because of their non-recognition policy and Senator Borah is writing a Soviet recognition plank for the next convention of the Republican Party. The labor fakers are as usual behind the times.

ILLINOIS MINERS ICY TO LEWIS

HOWAT WINS VICTORY AT PEORIA MEET

Miners Endorse Fight For Progressives

PEORIA, Ill., May 20.—Alex Howat receiving the most rousing reception so far accorded anyone who has addressed the Illinois Mine Workers' convention, crushed the cheap insinuations by which Farrington attempted to stampede the convention away from Howat, and made a stirring defense of the Progressive Miners' Conference of the United Mine Workers of America. The convention ordered the speech printed in pamphlet form and distributed to the mine workers.

President Farrington admitted in his attempted excuse of his desertion of Howat, following the latters speech, that "there is no law in the constitution of the miners' union that would sustain Lewis in doing what he did to Howat and the Kansas miners."

"If the time ever comes," declared Howat, "when I have to crucify a member of the miners' union in order to keep in with the international officials and to keep on the payroll, then I hope some one will blow my head off."

A Coal Digger Again.

"I am again a member of the United Mine Workers of America," Howat announced amid great applause. "I joined a union in Kansas, and have job mining coal. But I am going o continue to fight for reinstatement with my full rights and privileges as an old member."

"Farrington made a good fight for the Kansas miners when we were in jail for 17 months—I'll say that for him. But in a letter he wrote me almost a year ago, stating his reason for not keeping on with the fight, I don't think he gave sufficient reason for quitting the fight. I'll admit I was disappointed to hear from Farrington that he couldn't go along with

PHOENIX, Ariz., May 20—The value of co-operative marketing has been demonstrated to the 300 members of the Roosevelt Hay Growers' Association in the two years of its existence thru saving $20,000 to the members in 1923. They received about $3 per ton more for their hay than the average market price.

The association is a non-profitmaking co-operative which furnishes baling wire at cost to members, helps secure labor for harvesting and baling, grades and markets the hay at not exceeding $1.25 per ton. When the hay is delivered to the association the grower is given advances of from 60 to 70 per cent of the market value and during the year further advances are made. If the market price at delivery is less than $15 per ton the hay is stored in the warehouse of the association awaiting a higher price.

Socks or Bombs?

A special bomb squad of the police department of Chicago will be organized, Chief Collins announced yesterday. Part of their job will be to distinguish between socks and stink bombs.

THE BANKER'S NIGHTMARE

ADVICE TO THE ROBBERS OF THE WORKERS AND FARMERS:—Better be careful what you read just before falling asleep. The above shows a terrible nightmare of a banker, after reading in his newspaper that Communists are running the farmer-labor movement.

Call Convention For May 23rd

LIMA, Ohio, May 20.—A provisional committee elected by the Lima Trades and Labor Council has called a convention of all trade unions and central labor bodies, workers political parties, co-operatives, etc., to meet in Lima, Ohio, on May 23rd for the purpose of forming a county branch of the state Farmer-Labor Party.

The convention is called as part of the organization plan for that formation of the state Farmer-Labor Party which will be organized at a convention held in Columbus on June 7th and 8th.

The call for the Lima Convention states: "The County and State Conventions above referred to are in conjunction and harmony with the national Farmer-Labor Party movement, which convention will be held in St. Paul, Minnesota, June 17th, 1924."

The state of Ohio at one time had a strong radical movement and all signs point to the fact that the Farmer-Labor Party in that state will quickly become a powerful organization.

WASHINGTON, May 20.—Over $4,000,000 a year is spent by the "nightshirt naughties" of the Ku Klux Klan to carry on their propaganda and work in the United States, according to the admissions of Klan officers before the senate investigating committee. The committee is hearing evidence on the contested seat of Earle B. Mayfield, for whose election the Klan of Dallas is supposed to have spent $13,000.

J. E. MacQuinn, editor of the Klan, corroborated the statement of the tremendous expenses of the Klan and asked to be allowed to return to the imperial palace at Atlanta to sign the checks for his week-end payroll. MacQuinn said that he was the only man who could sign the checks for nearly $80,000 total.

WORKERS PARTY MAIN OFFICE NOW IN DAILY WORKER BUILDING

On and after May 20th the address of the National Office of the Workers' Party of America will be Room 301, 1113 Washington Blvd., Chicago, Ill.

From that date on, the National Office will be located in the building purchased by the DAILY WORKER Publishing Company as the home of the printing plant, and the DAILY WORKER.

The housing of the National Office, the DAILY WORKER, the the federation secretaries, in one building is expected to greatly promote efficient conduct of the Party business.

Methodists May Be Allowed To Sin Openly Henceforth

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., May 20.—Modification of the ban on dancing, attendance at theatres, participation in harmless games of chance, and other amusements were expected to be ratified by the general conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, following a vote by the committee on the state of the church.

Further reduction of the number of Episcopal residences in the United States and possible elimination of the residence in Paris, France, was anticipated as a result of the situation created by yesterday's vote on the matter of electing new bishops.

Bail For Released Millionaire Nut Set At Ten Thousand $

NEW YORK, May 20.—Bail for Harry K. Thaw, who came to New York this afternoon to answer an indictment in connection with his whipping of Frederick Gump, Jr., in the McAlpin hotel, seven years ago, was fixed at $10,000.

The case will cme up before Judge Olvaney in general sessions.

WALL STREET GAMBLERS LOSE ON VET BONUS

Caught Short When Veto Was Overridden

NEW YORK, May 20.—The sharpest declines in months were registered on the Stock Exchange this morning—the aftermath of news that the Senate had overridden President Coolidge's veto of the bonus bill.

Great numbers of selling orders, rushed in after the market closed strong yesterday, pushed issues down at the opening today from ⅛ to 6 points.

Passage of the bonus spelled one thing to Wall Street—the hope of a reduction in taxes gone glimmering.

Up to the very last minute yesterday the financiers hoped for sustaining of the president's veto by the Senate. This was clearly portrayed in the rally just at the close yesterday when stocks mounted fractionally higher for the day.

It has been assumed that many of the larger operators had fully discounted the passage of the bonus, but opening prices indicated many did not.

One of the phases of the overnight news of the bonus, so to speak, was the hurry up call for margins sent out to every margin trader in Wall Street. Clients who were unable to put up the heavy margin asked for were sold out this morning, as the initial quotations mutely testify.

Borah Demands Senate Wash Burton Wheeler Of G. O. P. Oil Charge

WASHINGTON, May 20.—The Senate was asked today by Senator Borah, Idaho, to go on record as exonerating Senator Burton K. Wheeler, of Montana, from charges that he misused his office, made in an indictment by a Montana grand jury. Borah demanded that the majority report of his committee, which recommended the exoneration be adopted as the sentiment of the Senate.

DUD TAYLOR LOST GOAT TO GIRL STRIKER

Bosses' Lawyer Razzed Out of Court

When Wanda Kolletta appears before Judge Sullivan to "show cause why she should not be punished for contempt of court," this morning she will be the proudest girl among the 50 garment strikers who will also be in court.

For Wanda was the cause of Dudley Taylor, the "brains" of the dress manufacturers' association, getting the razzberry in the S. Clark St. police court yesterday. Wanda was arrested Monday evening and charged with assault.

Yesterday when she appeared in the S. Clark street court to answer the charge Dudley Taylor was there to see that she got the brand of justice that his tool "Dennie" Sullivan hands out.

Taylor had come to represent the girl who claimed she had been assaulted. When Wanda's case was called Dudley marched up to the bench and asked that he be granted a continuance for a few days. "Who are you," asked Judge Eberhard?

The Great I Am.

"I am here for the complainant. I am Dudley Taylor," said Dudley. He told who he was as if he thot the court would drop dead of respect.

"This fellow apparently doesn't know much about the law,' said R. J. Ricker, lawyer for the union, who represented Wanda. "The defendant wants a jury trial. He will get all the time he wants. The case will not be heard here, Mr. Taylor."

"Tell your troubles to a jury," sighed the judge, and that was that.

When Wanda and her lawyer went to the rear of the court room Taylor followed them and tried to serve a notice "to show cause" on Wanda before she had left the court room.

"You Poor Fish."

Ricker gave poor Dud one look. "You poor fish, do you want to get soaked for contempt of court? Don't you know you can't serve a defendant in a court room? Take that notice back or I'll have you before the judge. Where do you think you are, in a bar room? Or maybe you think you are in Sullivan's court. Beat it!"

Dud had never been treated like that before and he was sore. He took the notice and attempting to recapture his lost goat marched from the room. In the outer hall he tried to disguise himself to look like a telephone booth and waited for Wanda.

Still Has His Goat.

When Wanda left the court room her quick eye penetrated Dud's disguise and she marched up to him and took the notice out of his hand. "Beat it," she whispered to Dud "before the squirrels get you."

That is why Wanda Kolletta is a proud girl this morning; she still has Dud's goat.

SUN NEVER SETS ON DAILY WORKER; THEY BUY IT IN AUSTRALIA

SYDNEY, Australia, May 20.—The DAILY WORKER is sold even this far from Chicago, by McNamara's Bookshop, 7 Clark street. Like the British Empire, the sun never sets on the DAILY WORKER, says a constant reader of the peppy American Communist paper.

CHICAGO WILL NOT GET RELIEF FROM UNSAFE SCHOOLS FOR 5 YEARS

The schools of Chicago will continue in their present overcrowded and unsafe condition for at least five years it became known yesterday when the board of education announced its building program.

The business manager of the board says that relief at once is impossible. Children must attend school in shifts and in unsafe buildings and in portables.

Many school teachers believe that this declaration is all the bunk. They declare that the school authorities are trying to continue the present condition so as to be able to force the platoon system down the throats of the people of Chicago.

SCABS LOST SIGHT OF IN RUHR STRIKE

Missing Strikebreakers Sought By Cops

BERLIN, May 20.—Scabs or "emergency" workers as they are called in the capitalist and socialist press are trying to operate the mines struck by the coal diggers who refused to accept the terms of the bosses, backed up by the capitalist government.

The disappearance of several scabs is made the pretext for the use of violence on the part of the police against the strikers. "Emergency" workers unacquainted with mining, are liable to meet with accidents, but instead of conducting more investigations the authorities are making wholesale arrests of Communist leaders.

Communists Lead Miners.

The Communists and the syndicalists, because of their championship of the shorter work day and their opposition to acceptance of the boss' terms, have secured the leadership of the miners. The Socialist and the Catholic leaders are urging the men to return to work.

Several leaders of the miners' union were arrested and the union headquarters searched.

In Gelsenkirchen 600 miners' wives entered the Koenigsgrube mine and drove off the scabs. The situation is pregnant with possibilities.

Farmers' Foes Plan To Disfigure Soil Teller's Relief Bill

WASHINGTON, May 20.—The McNary-Haugen Farm Relief bill today set out on its legislative career in the House.

With debate limited to 15 hours, and night sessions planned, its friends hoped to push it to a final vote by the end of the week. Opponents of the bill threaten to bury it under drastic amendments which would so change its nature that its authors could not recognize it. Advocates of the McNary-Haugen plan have agreed to resist all amendments.

John Brown's Body.

LAKE PLACID, N. Y.—Sixty representatives of the negro race, joined with the John Brown Memorial Association, in a pilgrimage to the grave of John Brown at North Elba near here on the 124th anniversary of the birth of the direct action opponent of slavery.

A monument to Brown is planned by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

"HANDS ACROSS THE SEA," UNITED STATES COMMUNISTS GREET BRITISH

Chicago, Ill., May 15, 1924

The Communist Party of Great Britain,
16 King Street, Covent Garden,
London, W. C. 2, England.

Workers Party of America extends fraternal greetings and hearty good wishes for success of your work in exposing hypocrisy of labor government and building mass Communist movement.

C. E. RUTHENBERG, Executive Secretary.

This is the cablegram sent to greet the Communist Party of England upon the opening of their annual congress. The American party is in entire sympathy with the British Communist party in disillusioning the masses of their trust in "progressive" or "liberal" or Socialist "labor" parties. Both parties realize the absolute necessity for mass class political action, independent of half-way thinkers.

DEPOSER OF HOWAT HITS 6-HOUR DAY

Makes Foolish Attack On British Union

By KARL REEVE.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PEORIA, Ill., May 20.—John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers' Union of America, addressed the District 12 convention of the Illinois miners for the first time today at the request of the district president, Frank Farrington.

In contrast to the enthusiastic reception given Alex Howat, expelled president of the Kansas miners, there was the cool, dissatisfied attitude of the same miners' delegates today when their international president was trying to "sell" himself to them. Howat had been invited to speak by the unanimous vote of the rank and file, while Lewis appeared by official grace.

On Defensive for Two Hours.

Lewis spoke to the convention for two hours, trying to explain what he has not done. He did not mention the Progressive Miners' committee, but he spent most of his speech discussing their demands for the six-hour day and the organization of the non-union fields.

"It is true that the miners have a six-hour day in Great Britain," declared Lewis, "but they have it at the sacrifice of the double and triple shifts, which makes the working conditions bad for them."

Lewis Knocks British Miners.

Lewis contrasted the miners' organizations of Great Britain and America for some time. He tried to show that the American coal miners are better organized and should be satisfied with their eight-hour day. He said that the British union was a loose organization, that locals did not meet, and that there was only a loose affiliation between the locals and the International.

British miners in the convention objected strenuously to Lewis' remarks on English conditions. John Hindmarsh, one of the delegates, asked the International mine president if he had ever been in these counties: Durham, Northumberland, Yorkshire, Lancashire.

Lewis replied that these were the four principal mining counties of Great Britain and that in these counties the miners have strong local organizations which hold meetings.

Another English delegate, a 60-year-old miner, asked Lewis if he had ever seen a company store in England. In his pompous way Lewis answered, "No," and the convention hall rang with the delegates' laughter.

Fears to Face Watts.

John Watts, a progressive delegate, tried to get Lewis' attention to ask another question but was completely ignored.

Lewis launched into a tirade against the press, charging that sensational stories against mine union officials prejudice non-union miners from joining the organization. He said that the non-union men reading the lurid press accounts would be afraid to join the miners' union.

The president gave a weak verbal plea for peace in the organization.

Lewis made a statement utterly contrary to that of Farrington in his report when he said that the price of coal had nothing to do with the people buying what coal they needed. Farrington's report says that unemployment has decreased among the miners due to cheapening the price of coal. Lewis said that people bought coal as they needed, regardless of price.

Murray Reviles Progressives.

Vice-President Philip Murray followed Lewis in speaking to the convention. He denounced the Progressive Miners' committee and their organization meeting in Pittsburgh. Murray stressed the fact that Howat represented a dual organization.

Howat rose and answered Murray that he represented the Progressives, and that they were not in a dual organization.

Delegates Angry.

Delegates were grumbling and dissatisfied after Lewis' and Murray's speeches and showed their discontent in group conversations. The English miners were particularly disturbed by the false statements and shoddy self-selling of John L. Lewis.

JESS SMITH WAS BOSS OF SPY BUREAU

Daugherty's Graft Pard Could Hire and Fire

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, May 20.—How Jess Smith virtually "ran" the bureau of investigation of the department of justice was told to the senate Daugherty investigating committee today by L. J. Bailey, formerly chief of the bureau.

"Smith was recognized as the most powerful man in the department of justice outside the attorney general himself," Bailey said.

Agents of the bureau were "hired and fired" by Smith with Daugherty's knowledge, the witness said in relating specific instances of dismissals at Smith's direction.

Pierce Miller, former newspaper correspondent "covering" the department, related how A. Mitchell Palmer, formerly attorney general, had "been sent for" by Daugherty in connection with the Bosch magneto case. After Palmer left the office Daugherty told him in answer to a direct question, Miller said, that he (Daugherty) "would not indict Palmer unless he was forced to."

Daugherty said Palmer had had a lot of trouble and he did not wish to indict him, Miller testified.

Bailey told him Smith "took an interest in almost everything in the bureau" and came into his office for daily conferences.

When Daugherty became attorney general, Bailey said that he sought his views on the policies of his bureau. Daugherty told him, he said, that he was "a very busy man" and said that Smith would give directions of what he wanted done in the bureau of investigation.

When Smith wanted an agent discharged, Bailey said, he would tell him that "the attorney general wants this man dismissed." Bailey said the attorney general would approve it.

Asked if Smith had access to the confidential files of the department of justice, Bailey said "he got anything he wanted in the department."

"Were Smith's orders carried out by other employes of the department?" Senator Wheeler asked.

"He was recognized as second in command; they knew that they could look for other employment if they didn't obey his orders," Bailey said.

COOLIDGE HAS VETOES ENOUGH FOR PRESENT

WASHINGTON, May 20.—President Coolidge will not veto the tax bill, despite passage of the $4,000,000,000 soldiers' bonus bill over his veto, according to word reaching the capital today.

With the bonus actually a law, administration leaders showed a tendency to drop talk of a veto of the tax measure because of the added drain imposed on the treasury by the measure. Their view is that Mr. Coolidge should approve any tax bill that Congress sends him and get the tax question out of the way as a campaign issue.

If more revenues are needed later to meet the added annual charge of about $152,000,000 imposed on the treasury by the bonus, special taxes can be levied, rather than to try to revamp the present tax measure, leaders say.

The bill, however, must be made acceptable to Mr. Coolidge by elimination of the tax return publicity provision and modification of the gradual corporation levy, leaders say. This, according to word leaking from conferees, is about to be done, thru "trading" between Republicans and Democrats, the latter to get their surtax schedules approved in return for elimination of the publicity provision.

PROGRESSIVES STOP FARRINGTON'S INCITATION TO VIOLENCE AGAINST DAILY WORKER REPRESENTATIVES

By KARL REEVE.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PEORIA, Ill., May 20—Frank Farrington was prevented from inciting his pay-roll hangers-on and adherents of his machine to incite the convention to do violence to the representatives of the DAILY WORKER in the miners' convention by the determined insistance of the progressive element at the Illinois miners' convention that order be restored.

Farrington's prestige was materially damaged at today's session by Howat's speech urging the rank and file to organize and fight the corrupt officials of the union. Farrington, in a cheap attempt to stampede the delegates away from Howat and the progressives, tried to incite a riot and have the press representatives of the DAILY WORKER thrown out of the convention.

"Reds" Farrington's Excuse.

After Howat was thru speaking, Farrington declared that he had written to Howat almost a year ago, telling Howat that he could no longer fight for the Kansas miners because Howat had contaminated himself by entering the Pittsburgh progressive conference and by association with Foster, the reds and the communists. Then Farrington, to show how vicious the reds were, cited the DAILY WORKER.

"We have their agents at this convention. They are circulated thru the hall, voting as delegates. They are trying to influence delegates against me. They have no business here. Their representative sits at the press table and each day he is misrepresenting the news of the convention." Cries of "Throw him out" from the Farrington machine delegates.

Some of Farrington's pay-roll experts, following the policy of the Lewis-Farrington strong arm advocates, started the cry, "Throw them out," "Where are they?"

"If this was any place but a miner's convention said Farrington, trying to increase the turmoil, "and they did what these reporters are saying they would be thrown out of the convention."

One old grandpa, waving a cane in one hand and a DAILY WORKER in the other, called out, "Is this the paper?" Farrington said "Yes," and the old machine delegate yelled, "Then let's throw them to hell out."

Delegate Sanders placed the responsibility for the turmoil by taking the floor and calling out, "If there [illegible] a riot here today, it will be your fault."

When Farrington saw the responsibility for the violence of his henchmen was being placed where it belonged, he immediately called the convention to order and Howat began his reply to Farrington's false insinuations.

"Deserter!" Cries Hindmarsh.

The delegates showed their resentment for Farrington's attitude on Howat. When Howat had completed his first speech, Farrington tried to say that he had not deserted Howat. He tried to show that Delegate John Hindmarsh again charged from cause he ran against Farrington for president of district twelve when Farrington was supporting Howat.

Hindmarsh again charged from the the floor that Farrington was a traitor to Howat.

"Hindmarsh not only ran against Farrington," called out Joe Tumulty, "But he was elected, too."

"You deserted all right," one delegate called. "The army is still here fighting for the Kansas miners, but the leader has gone. He is a deserter."

Will Distribute Speeches.

A motion was unanimously passed to print the two speeches of Alex Howat and the statements of Farrington on the Howat case in pamphlet form and distribute them to the membership of the mine workers.

The sale of the DAILY WORKER is exceptionally good. The girls who are selling it declare they will continue their work.

Bandit Knocks Low Wages.

BAKERSFIELD, Cal.—"Low wages turn girls to easy money. It is impossible to live on $15 per. Give girls an equal chance with men and they will go higher." This is the conclusion of Eleanore Walling, 19 who has confessed to armed robbery of a bank at Taft, Cal.

CARNEY WARNS INVISIBLE EMPIRE TO QUIT WHILE QUITTING IS GOOD

SAN FRANCISCO—Jack Carney, fighting editor of Labor Unity (a Federated Press member paper) has locked horns with the Ku Klux Klan. In a recent issue Carney ran a big headline, Smash the Klan! detailing beneath it some of the klan activities against the I. W. W. and the Workers Party in San Pedro, Los Angeles and elsewhere in California.

The next day the editor got the following letter, which is given verbatim: If you knew what was good for you, you'd let up on attacking the Government of this here country! If you don't like it get the hell out of it and go back where you belong—to Mexico, or some other one of them foreign countries. If they won't allow you in Mexico go to Ireland, but what I want to emphasize is that you go somewhere, and the sooner you start going, the sooner you'll arrive at whereever you intend to go. I hope you get what I mean, because if you don't go, you're going to stay—now get that right, YOU'RE GOING TO STAY. Verbum sap apienti—look that up in your dictionary—you Bolsheviki, so now get wise and go. —Dominus Vobiscum, KKK.

Carney learned how to handle anonymous threatening letters in a good school for fighters—as editor successively of Truth, The Butte Bulletin and The Voice of Labor. His reply to this threat is an editorial invitation to the klan to "go where snowballs have an unusually short stay."

FARCE OF 'BOYS' WEEK' BARED BY YOUNG WORKERS

Name Capitalists Who Control Institution

By AL SCHAAP.

Today is Boys' Day in entertainment and athletics. For 364 days in the year the children of Chicago must play in the dirty lots and today they must do the same. They are forced to play in the gutters and the filthy dumping grounds while the children of the rich play tennis, baseball and other sports on grounds which are well laid out.

Boys' Week is another means of making slaves of the young masses by making them feel important.

Among the founders of Boys' Week there is not one representative of the working class. All the directors of this movement are either brankers, old party politicians or big industrialists, who only care for the development of their own children and do not give a ripple of worry for the children of the class that works. The capitalists make it necessary for even the child to go to the factory in order to have a mere right to exist.

George W. Dixon—President Arthur Dixon Transfer Co., director Grand Trunk Western Ry. System, Central Trust Co. of Ill., Security Life Ins. Co. of America, Chicago Morris Plan Bank, B. & Q. Chicago & Conn. Ry., Mem. Ill. Senate, staff of Gov. Yates, rank of colonel, member Army and Navy Club.

Melvin A. Traylor: Vice pres. First National Bank, Ballinger, Tex., vice pres. Stock Yards National Bank, vice pres. Live Stock Exchange Bank, Pres. Chicago Cattle Loan Co., pres. First Trust & Savings Bank, vice pres. and dir. First National Bank, Chicago, dir. Industrial Ban. N. Y. etc.

William Grant Bierd—Railway official, president C. & A. R. R. since 1914; gen. supt. and gen. mgr. Panama R. R. & Steamship Co., Colon, Panama.

Lewis E. Myers—Trustee Allandale Farm for Boys; Pres. Central Ill. Utilities Co., Mich. Gas & Electric Co., Southern Wis. Electric, Big Falls Power Co., Gogebic & Iron Counties Ry. & Light Co., Ashland Power Co., Ironwood & Bessemer Ry. & Lt. Co.; chairman State Council of Defense for Cook Co.

W. Rufus Abbott:—Dir. Union Trust Co., Beardslee Chandelier Mfg. Co., Richardson Sand Co., Ill. Bell Tel. Co., Chicago Assn. Comm.

Benjamin Franklin Affleck. Pres. Portland Cement Co., pres. Calumet Supply Co.; dir. First Nat. Bank.; member Union League.

Eaton Marquis:—Lawyer; official attorney for city treasurer, Chicago; dir. Chicago Trust Co., University State Bank; chairman Chicago Chapter Red Cross; Decorated Commendatore Italian Crown for war services.

C. W. Folds:—Banker, First National Bank, Lake Forest, Ill.; Commercial Acceptance Trust, Federal Securities Corp.

D. R. Froagan:—Banker; pres. Union National Bank; pres. National City Bank, Chicago.

W. F. Hypes:—Gen. sales manager Marshall Field Co., dir. Towle & Hypes Co., Continental Audit Co. & Account Co.; first pres. Chicago North Shore Music Festival; pres. Chicago Y. M. C. A.

Samuel Insull:—Pres. Edison Gen. Elec.; controls entire electric lighting business in Chicago; pres. Public Service Co. of Northern Ill., Midwest Utilities Co., Peoples Gas & Light Co., etc.

Nathan Wm. MacChesney:—Lawyer; commd. lt. col., U. S. A.; Nat. Com. on prisons and prison labor; past comdr. American Legion.

C. H. Markham:—Railway president, Ill. Central.

C. S. Peterson:—Pres. Peterson Linotyping Co., Regan Printing House & Co.

H. A. Revell:—Merchant, member Legion of Honor, France.

B. E. Sunny:—Telephone official; pres. Chicago Telephone Co., Nat. Bank, Chicago.

Wilson, Thomas E:—packer; Wilson & Co., dir. Guaranty Trust Co. N. W.

Wrigley, Wm. Jr.:—p. Wm. Wrigley, Jr. Co., dir. First Nat. Bank, First Trust & Savings Bank, Boulevard Bridge Bank, etc.

These bankers and big industrialists want to fool the children, that they are getting freedom out of their capitalist system.

The only freedom that the children of the working class will get is when the workers themselves will rule and govern this country. Every boy a member of the Young Workers League and its Junior section!

Child Labor Law Blocked In Senate By King Of Utah

WASHINGTON, May 20.—Action on the proposed child labor amendment was again blockedwas again blocked in the Senate today.

When Senator Walsh, Montana, Democrat, asked unanimous consent to consider the amendment on May 27, objection was made by Senator King, Democrat, Utah.

Walsh announced he would move again to take up the amendment within a few days.

FRENCH FRANC AGAIN HITS THE CHUTES

Financial Kings Fear For the Future

PARIS, May 20.—The franc sold today on the opening of the exchange at 18.50 to the dollar and 80.55 to the pound sterling.

Nervousness on the part of the financial magnates over the fall of their pet Poincare and the probability that J. P. Morgan would not open his purse any wider after the debacle that overtook the reactionary elements which supported the government about to pass out in a few weeks.

Reports that Poincare used the Morgan millions to fix the elections, were made by the official organ of the Herriot group, but denied by both Poincare and Morgan.

The charge was that Poincare used several million dollars to beat down the dollar and pound sterling and only halted when called by Morgan.

The American banker denies that he was in on the plot. He does not deny, however, that his French friend was innocent of the charge.

FOOD WORKERS TO PUT STRIKE ON WIDE FRONT

Meet Tonight To Plan City Wide Fight

The restaurant and lunch room workers organized in the Amalgamated Food Workers' Union will hold a mass meeting tonight at their headquarters, 14 N. State street, to plan an organization campaign to reach all the workers in all the restaurants of the city.

That will be their answer to the message of the Chicago Restaurant Association, representing the Greek restaurant owners who have just notified the union they will not meet with the union representatives to discuss a collective agreement.

Strike Worries Association.

The association had approached the union to see if they could not end the strike of the union against the restaurants of the North Side. The union informed them of their demands and indicated their willingness to talk settlement. Then the association sent back a reply they would not settle or negotiate for a collective agreement.

The International office of the Food Workers' Union has notified the Chicago strikers that they will render them all the aid in their power.

Tonight's meeting will hear reports from Organizer Norman on the strike situation and also on his organizing work on the South Side.

12-Hour Day Must Go.

"This campaign means the beginning of the end of the 12-hour day in the Greek restaurants of Chicago." Norman told the DAILY WORKER yesterday. "The bosses are going to learn that the workers no longer consider themselves slaves. To the demands of the union and the workers for decent conditions the bosses reply with injunctions. They are going to learn that injunctions don't win arguments or strikes."

"Hundreds of new members are coming into the union and we are going to win. The active workers in the union know that now is the time to go forward to victory and they are on the way."

Chamber Of Commerce Agent Failed To Scare Kansas Workers

KANSAS CITY, Mo., May 20.—A group of rank and file workers endorsed the call for a State Farmer-Labor convention, to meet June 8th. The local Communists have done yeomen service in getting the ball started. They invite the local socialist party and all class conscious workers to attend the next meeting, May 25, at 8 p. m. Delegates to the convention will then be elected.

Errol D. Leniton, a fat, slow-witted spy of the local chamber of commerce, remarked that he proposed to "stamp out" the organization. He seemed abashed when courteously reminded that such bad manners are out of place except in bootleg circles. The local thug groups have been unruly since a drunken score of the Murray Davis Post of the Legion created a disturbance at a Workmen's Circle meeting in the new building of the Carpenters' Local.

Shorten the Workday!

By ARNE SWABECK.

"I hold no brief for the Illinois operators, but I do for the Illinois miners and my only desire is to help the miners. but nl order to do that I must help the operators find a wider market for their coal."

This is the solution offered by President Farrington to the present heavy unemployment in the Illinois coal fields, as contained in his report to the Thirtieth consecutive and Ffth Biennial convention of District No. 12, United Min eWorkers of America, and he explains his solution in the following manner:

"There is only one way whereby we can get more work for Illinois and that is to cheapen the cost of production to the degree that will enable the Illinois operators to sell their coal in competition with coal mined in non-union and sparsely organized districts where the cost of production is much less than in Illinois."

A Sham Solution.

Indeed, a poor solution. Cheapening the cost of production of any article has never been known to extend the markets. It has on the other hand, served to increase profits of those who own the tools of production, and perhaps this is what Mr. Farrington desires.

Alexander Howat, in his address to that convention, stated very clearly and definitely that no gains could be made by the working class in general and by the coal miners in particular except what they were ready to fight for and could bring sufficient pressure to bear to obtain. In no instance does the interest of the operators correspond with that of the coal miners. Co-operation with them will help swell their coffers, but bring no additional work to the miners.

Non-Union Conditions.

Farrington's report draws a comparison between the output of the organized mines in Illinois and that of the unorganized mines in West Virginia, Kentucky and Alabama, stating that during the last fiscal years with an average of 146 days work the former show a total output of 73,410,857 tons, while West Virginia during approximately the same period and about the same number of men employed mined 103,000,000 tons. In the West Virginia field wages are much lower than in Illinois. In Alabama miners work 10 hours per day and the operators pay whatever they feel disposed to pay, and "the situation is almost identical with what it was in Illinois prior to 1897."

Would Stop Strikes.

Farrington's report proposes to the Illinois miners, "Respect for contract, elimination of strikes in violation of contract, work when the operator has work to do, careful workmanship, load clean coal, reduce the amount of slack by careful shooting, give an honest day's work, co-operate with the management in doing the things that are right." In other words, do away with strikes, speed up production, make it possible for the Illinois operators to compete with those of the unorganized miners; accept their conditions of work; go back to the conditions which obtained in Illinois prior to 1897.

Fatal to Miners' Union.

This will mean nothing but the ultimate destruction of the miners union. Grant the operators the speed-up system, limit your right to strike, and the next thing which will follow inevitably is a wage reduction. Acceptance by the miners of the proposals made in Farrington's report, will mean an immediate weakening of the miners' union and an invitation to the operators to demand greater concessions. The coal miners' unions of Germany, with the beginning of the occupation of the Ruhr, granted several concessions to the operators, under the general plea of supporting the nation. Today 600,000 of these coal miners in the Ruhr are out on strike against the threat of the operators to take away the prevailing seven-hour day for work below the surface and the eight-hour workday on the surface.

Super Power Pill.

To detract the attention of the rank and file mine workers from the burning issues within their organization and the need of practical steps to relieve the present situation of unemployment and destitution. Farrington's report advances some alluring schemes for the establishment of one or more giant power plants on the Ohio and Mississippi river for the manufacture of electricity. Even this is put up as a means to extend the market and create more work, when as a matter of fact it would rather reduce the need of coal.

In any event the coal operators of the nation are today so completely consolidated into great trusts with interlocking directorates that any temporary gain made along these lines by the miners in one state could only be on the cost of the miners in other states. just as much as the lowering of the conditions of work in one state would react to the same degree on the workers in other states.

Eenemy Press Likes It.

It is rather illuminating that the Chicago Tribune, so bitterly condemned by Frank Farrington during this convention, a few ago, carried an editorial lauding Farrington's scheme for co-operation with the operators as a sane and sensible plan. When the capitalist-controlled dailies praise proposals made by labor leaders there is reason for the rank and file workers to viewing these proposals with suspicion, because these papers voice no other interests than those of the bosses.

Would Be Disastrous.

Acceptance of Farrington's proposals for the cheapening of production of coal in order to "extend the market and create more work for the coal miners" would be disastrous for the miners' union and be the beginning of its complete annihilation. The unemployment situation, however, is a real problem which demands a concrete solution. On the first day of this month, according to Farrington's report, 150 Illinois mines were completely closed, leaving fully 30,000 mine workers out of jobs, with very few of the mines now in operation working more than half time and the great majority of them not even that much.

Shorten the Work-Day.

Yet, what is needed is an adjustment of the hours of worker with no reduction of the day's wages so as to afford employment for all, with compensation at regular union rates for any eventual unemployment and actual steps toward the nationalization of the coal mines. That, however, would mean a real fight with the bosses, for which the rank and file mine workers are ready, but which is feared by Frank Farrington.

POLICEWOMEN IGNORE HUNGRY POLISH GRANNY

Matrons Talk Of Nifty London Policewoman

Police matrons of the West Chicago station were more interested in discussing the proposed visit of Commandant Mary S. Allen, London Women Police, than in providing lunch for a poor old Polish woman who had been brought in friendless at 11:30 at night.

The thin, wrinkled old woman shuffled about the women's quarters of the police station, munching a thick slice of bread she had picked from some one's lunch remains. Over her white-haired head a cheap blue handkerchief was tied. A coarse white knit waist, part of an under garment, covered her lean body and a trailing black shirt hung on the old frame somehow. Her shoes were too large and run over at the sides.

Prisoners Don't Feed.

The matrons claimed they had fed her well, that she hadn't even drank all the coffee with real cream and sugar that they had offered her for breakfast. The policewomen were jollying one another over their lunch and couldn't be bothered with the prisoners.

A Polish reporter approached the old woman as she wandered in and out of the open cell rooms, opening a bundle on the desk without eagerness but as tho she might find something for herself within. The old woman waved him off, chewed again on her crust of bread, and wouldn't answer.

"Granny," the reporter spoke in Polish, "where do you come from?"

A bread-muffled answer at length: "My son lives near Hoyne and Webster. Stanley Bednarek." She continued her slow shuffle about the rooms.

"Granny," the reporter tried again, but she wouldn't reply nor would she be coaxed into a room with a younger, defiant Polish woman. Granny wouldn't go in and sit down until some one came for her.

Everyone Has a Friend.

"She must have some friend," the police matron in charge remarked. "We can keep her until they find some one to take her; a few days, you know. We're pretty crowded here. Mostly 'sporting women' and drunks."

The wizened old Polish woman kept on wandering about, unemotionally. To be left alone seemed as much as she wished. Her persistence with the dry bread indicated that she hadn't had enough food for a long time, even if the police matrons had given her breakfast. One meal won't fill a stomach that has been nearly empty for weeks.

In the hall the police matron joked with the officer in charge of the men's ward, both speaking in good Irish brogue.

British Can't Tell Irish.

"They say she has her hair short and brushes it back pompadour," the officer said of the British police woman.

"They needn't think they can come over so smart and tell us anything," retorted the rotund matron.

"She wears a uniform, slick. O, she'll come around here. Any place interestin' like this," the officer added.

"Fancy us going to England and getting the royal reception she's getting!"

The old Polish woman shuffled up to the door.

"No, granny, you go back!" The police matron returned to her charges.

OHIO ORGANIZING FARM-LABOR FOR NATIONAL ACTION

Convention Planned To Precede June 17

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LIMA, Ohio, May 20.—A provisional committee elected by the Lima Trades and Labor Council has called a convention of all trade unions and central bodies, workers political parties, cooperatives, etc., to meet in Lima, O., on June 3rd for the purpose of forming a county branch of the state Farmer-Labor Party.

The convention is called as part of the organization plan for the formation of the state Farmer-Labor Party which will be organized at a convention held in Columbus on June 7th and 8th.

The call for the Lima Convention states: "The County and State Conventions above referred to are in conjunction and harmony with the n tional Farmer-Labor Party movement which convention will be held in S Paul, Minn., June 17th, 1924."

The state of Ohio at one time had a strong radical movement and all signs point to the fact that the Farmer-Labor Party in that state will quickly become a powerful organization.

Hoover Opposed To Publishing Secrets Of Corporations

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, May 20.—Herbert Hoover, defender of the Chicago meat packers during and after the war, is now trying to head off the adoption of income tax returns in the conference report on the revenue bill. The Senate voted overwhelmingly for publicity, because it realized that La Follette would make that an issue in the presidential campaign. The House conferees were expected to agree to this Senate amendment to the House bill.

Hoover argues that big business corporations will learn the financial secrets of theirsmall competitors, and will be able to crush them by the use of that information. On the other hand, he fears that fake concerns, desiring to fleece the public into buying their stock, will make inflated returns and pay taxes not really d in order to put up a convinci "front."

He claims that publicity of tax returns was required from 1867 to 1872, and that it added to the industrial and financial chaos of the time.

However, Congress is not muc frightened; it is familiar with the co poration twist in Hoover's brain.

Chicago Federation Labor Party Ditches National Convention

The Farmer-Labor Party of the United States has abandoned plans for holding a national convention in Cleveland July 4th, Jay G. Brown, national secretary announced yesterday, coincident with the holding of the conference for Progressive Political Action.

This decision follows and is the result of the action of the Chicago Federation of Labor abandoning the Farm Labor Party at their meeting Sunday. The reason given is that the national committee of the Party does not feel justified in incurring the expense necessary to a national convention without better support than has thus far materialized.

It is believed that "The New Majority" which has been the national organ of the party, will no longer be used for that purpose because it is owned by the Chicago Federation of Labor.

Young Workers To Hold Mass Meeting Tomorrow Night

Believing that there is something in a name, the Englewood Branch of the Young Workers' League has selected Prospect Hall, 64th street and Ashland avenue, for its bi-weekly "mass" meeting Thursday night.

The Englewood branch is grappling at close range with the difficult task of organizing the American youth into Communist groups. This effort is deserving of all possible help.

Talks on problems now confronting the League will be given by Comrades Barney Mass and Max Shachtman. Dancing will follow, the music being furnished by the Young Workers' League's own orchestra.

WASHINGTON, May 20.—The Barkley-Howell railroad labor bill has been favorably reported to the senate interstate commerce committee by its subcommittee, with an amendment under which a strike would automatically result in suits by the government to throw the roads into a receivership. STONE PROMISES TO OUST FINKS FROM BUREAU

However We Are From Missouri

By LAURENCE TODD.

(Staff Correspondent of the Fed. Press)

WASHINGTON, May 20.—An end has come temporarily to the dream of the boss detectives to create a secret political police, or political spy system, serving the employing and banking interests thru both the big capitalist parties.

The hint given by Attorney General Stone appears to be confirmed by the statement to the Wheeler-Brookhart committee by John E. Hoover, master red-catcher now in charge of the bureau of investigation. Hoover said Stone had issued orders that none but lawyers should henceforth be employed in the bureau, and that the work of the bureau should be limited to the assistance of federal attorneys in the preparation of cases already in their hands. The personnel, now 607 in all, is to be weeded out, and much of the work undertaken under Palmer and Daugherty has been stopped.

What has been indicated in recent weeks is:

That spies are abhorrent to Stone as a lawyer, and are not contemplated by law as part of the government machinery. Spying is to end.

That the "dossier" or irresponsible secret report system established by Palmer as a means of terrorizing the country into making him president is abolished. Burns and Daugherty found these jackets in the files of the bureau—jackets filled with charges and gossip from cowardly enemies of great numbers of citizens, whose whole tendency was toward government by blackmail and frame-up. Burns enlarged this dossier library paying large sums of public money, illegally, for secret "evidence" against the political critics and opponents of Daugherty.

That the system of exchange of finger-prints and other identification between police offices thruout the country and with foreign police, as built up Burns, will be dropped. Burns is supposed to have been permitted by himself to gather records for the Burns agency in this way at public expense.

Whether Stone is sincere will be tested by the fate of this John E. Hoover and of Rush Holland, who still draw salaries as assistants. It was J. E. Hoover who caused the issuance of 10,000 warrants of arrest of labor radicals and caused the violations of law known as the red raids of January, 1920. He is temporarily the head of the bureau of investigations, while Stone is finding a suitable lawyer for that job.

Rush Holland, equally rabid in his attacks upon liberals, was Daugherty's representative in attendance on the Teapot Dome oil scandal hearings.

Then there is Grimes, who has represented the department before the Wheeler-Brookhart committee, and who has admitted on the stand that the records of his bureau may show that Albert Fall used part of the $100,000 he got in the suitcase from Doheney to finance the Cantu revolt in Mexico. Senator Wheeler charged that the evidence of that crime was in the department's files, and Grimes did not deny it.

President Coolidge, then, must rely upon the privately financed gunmen and spies for the service rendered in national politics for the past six years by the bureau of investigation and its affiliates. The appropriation of $2,250,000 a year for the bureau will be sadly shrunk, and the hopes of the "convention of 62 patriotic societies," which has just met here to restore prosperity for the anti-Russian spying industry will be dashed—if Stone does what he promises.

Predict Bitter Debate.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., May 20.—Bitter debate was forecast as pacifists and anti-pacifists in the 4th quadrennial convention of the Methodist Episcopal church prepared for a vote today on the anti-war resolution reported to the convention by its committee on state of church.

"The rank and file of Methodism thruout the United States would not tolerate such a resolution for a single minute," William Van Benschoten, New York attorney, said. "If adopted, it would cast the country's flag out of the church."

Russia to Exhibit In England.

MOSCOW, May 20.—The question of the participation of the U. S. S. R. in the London Exhibition of 1925 has been settled. Ten branches of the economic life of the U. S. S. R. will be represented in the Soviet pavilion, the principal place being assigned to raw materials.

WORKERS PARTY CANDIDATES ENTER MINNESOTA PRIMARIES; CAMPAIGN WITH STRONG TICKET

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., May 20.—The Workers Party is entering the political field of this state on June 16 with almost a full ticket of candidates bound to the support of the workers' and farmers' interests in office. The Farmer-Labor candidates are provisionally recommended to voters where the Workers Party has not entered.

"Free Yourselves from the Dictatorship of Wall Street! Establish a Workers' and Farmers' Government!" These are the party cries raised for the voters of Minnesota in the forthcoming primary elections.

The official statement of the District 9 organization follows:

During the past few months much has been said of the activities of the Workers Party by both the capitalist newspapers and the more conservative supporters of the Farmer-Labor Party. We, therefore, take this opportunity of telling the workers and farmers of Minnesota exactly what the aims of the Communist movement are.

WORKERS AND FARMERS EXPLOITED.

The financial interests of this country are ruthlessly exploiting both the farmers and the industrial workers. During the past few years millions of farmers have been driven from the land because they were not able to secure from their labor enough to supply their families with the necessities of life. Millions of other farmers will be forced to follow the same course unless they take a militant stand against this exploitation by the privileged capitalist class. Instead of the present government taking steps to relieve the farmers, those in control are using their political power further to fatten the pockets of their masters, the grain gamblers, the bankers and the railroad magnates.

During the same period of time, this same capitalist class, working under the guise of "open shop associations," has launched a bitter attack against the workers in the cities. Taking advantage of the industrial depression, it has cut wages, lengthened hours of labor, and seriously weakened the labor unions by its attacks. In every strike, the government has allied itself with the financial interests. It has used the police, the militia, and the courts to force the workers back into the workshops and mines. Injunctions against the workers are an every day occurance. The infamous Daugherty Injunction against the railroad workers still stands an injunction which at one stroke robbed the workers of every right supposedly guaranteed by the constitution.

The Republican and Democratic Parties have proven themselves equally the tools of the financial interests of Wall Street. They have both contributed their share toward maintaining the dictatorship of organized capital over the lives of the producing masses.

THE WORKERS AND FARMERS MUST RULE.

The first task confronting the farmers and workers is to establish themselves as the ruling power in government. The control of the financial interests must be broken. A workers' and farmers' government must be established.

The greatest enemy of the farmers and workers is the group of financial parasites who live off their labor. The Workers' Party is an organization made up entirely of farmers and workers, pledged to the abolition of the capitalist system of society and the establishment of a workers' and farmers' government. It carries on its activities entirely in the open. It has no interests; it adopts no policies that are not in the interests of the producing masses of the world.

The Workers' Party is for the Farmer-Labor Party. We will do our utmost to build and strengthen the party in every state in the union. We do this because we recognize that the Farmer-Labor Party can gather the masses of the workers and farmers inside its ranks and that by necessity it must carry on a struggle against the capitalist class. The aim of the Communist Movement is more far-reaching than the platform and program of the Farmer-Labor Party. The Farmer-Labor Party contents itself with demanding temporary remedial reforms. The Workers' Party and its candidates will fight aggressively for every measure which affords relief from capitalist exploitation. They will use every effort to bring about the adoption of the measures proposed in the platform of the Farmer-Labor Federation of Minnesota. They will strive to build up and strengthen the Farmer-Labor Federation in an effort to develop it into a real fighting machine against the financial interests.

REFORMS NOT A SOLUTION.

The platform of the Farmer-Labor Federation does not offer a permanent solution for the problems confronting the workers and farmers. The present bankruptcy of the farmers and the chronic unemployment developing among the workers are world-wide symptoms of the cancer eating at the heart of society. The cancer is capitalism. The workers and farmers of England, France, Germany, thruout the world in fact, are waging the same struggle as are the producers of this country. Recent elections in these countries indicate that the producing classes are making great gains in their battle for control. The workers and farmers of Russia have forced the government out of the hands of their exploiters and have established a workers and farmers' dictatorship in its place. The next logical step the workers and farmers of Minnesota must take to improve their conditions is to unite their forces nationally into a class farmer-labor movement; wage a relentless struggle against the capitalist system itself; and at the first opportunity set up a government of workers and farmers in this country. The Workers' Party pledges itself to blaze the way in this struggle. Our organization, our money, our energy will be used to bring about a dictatorship of workers and farmers as opposed to the present dictatorship of capital.

DOWN WITH THE DICTATORSHIP OF CAPITALISM.

FORWARD TO A WORKERS' AND FARMERS' GOVERNMENT.

VOTE FOR THE WORKERS' PARTY CANDIDATES JUNE 16.

For U. S. Senator, Hjalmar Dantes, Orr.

For Representative in Congress, Fourth District, J. F. Emme, St. Paul. Fifth District, J. O. Johnson, Minneapolis. Eighth District, J. O. Bentall, Duluth.

Signed.

WORKERS' PARTY OR AMERICA,
District Executive Committee,
District Nine.
By NORMAN H. TALLENTIRE,
District Organizer, No. 9.

SUPPORT THESE CANDIDATES JUNE 16.

The Workers' Party has not filed candidates for all offices. With the large number of candidates filed on the Farmer-Labor ticket the nomination of candidates by the Workers' Party for all state offices might cause the election of men who were opposed to the Farmer-Labor Federation and the building of a great national Farmer-Labor Party at the St. Paul convention on June 17. The District Executive Committee of the Workers' Party, therefore, recommends the following candidates to the workers and farmers, and urges that you support them on June 16. These men are not Communists, (except those who are listed as such in this leaflet). They will not carry out our program. Support them, not because we think they will go as far in waging a struggle against capitalism as they should go, but because we feel that out of all the candidates filed, they are the staunchest supporters of the Farmer-Labor Federation, and we believe they will give the best administration for the workers and farmers.

MINNESOTA! VOTE FOR THESE MEN JUNE 16! FORGET OLD PARTIES!

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., May 20.—Here are the men the Workers Party members of District nine are urged to support in the primary elections, June 16, in accordance with the instructions of the accompanying proclamation:

For U. S. Senator—Hjalmar Dantos, Orr.

For Governor—Dr. Wm. A. Schaper, Minneapolis.

For Lieutenant Governor—Emil E. Holmes, Hopkins.

For State Treasurer—Carl Berg, Erskine.

For Attorney General—Thos. V. Sullivan, St. Paul.

For Railroad and Warehouse Commissioner—A. E. Smith, St. Paul.

Representatives for Congress.
1st District—Otto Baudler.
2nd District—O. F. Swanjord.
3rd District—J. B. Lokkesmos.
4th District—J. F. Emme, St. Paul.
5th District—J. O. Johnson, Minneapolis.
6th District—Halver S. Halverson.
7th District—O. J. Kvale.
8th District—J. O. Bentall, Duluth.
9th District—Knute Wefald.
10th District—Irving G. Scott.

SENATOR SHIES AT RED REMARKS OF INTERVIEWER

Brookhart Denies His Speech Communistic

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, May 20.—One of the Workers Party members here took up the challenge of his group to go to see just what Senator Brookhart of Iowa meant in his recent speech in the senate. The Senator's remarks sounded suspiciously communistic to the friends and they wanted to "get the guy right."

The interview with the Senator, who was in a non-committal mood, follows:

Balks at Daily Worker.

"Senator," I began, "there is considerable comment going the rounds of the Communists with reference to certain remarks that you made in the Senate recently."

"To what remarks do you refer?" interrupted the Senator.

"In referring to Henry Ford's industrial machine you stated that you believe it is not a good thing for the country to accumulate wealth thru the sweat and work of other men. Some of our members say that this is only another way of saying that you are opposed to the exploitation of labor. The Communists would appreciate your interpretation.

"I am not," replied Senator Brookhart, "with the Communists. I believe in co-operatives."

"I am aware of that, Senator. Would you care to elaborate upon your other statement that you belong to the economic theory that never makes a millionaire and never makes a pauper. It is quite possible to interpret that remark as a belief in Communism. The Chicago DAILY WORKER would be glad to print your interpretation."

"The WORKER will make its own interpretation anyway. I have nothing to add to what I said in the Senate."

TEAPOT DOME SPECIAL BREAKS IN POLAND AS EX-MINISTERS BEGIN TO CASH IN ON THEIR PATRIOTISM

By ANISE

(Staff Correspondent of The Federated Press)

WARSAW.—It will be a long time, I realize now, before the big imperialists and international capitalists of the world will be much interested in concessions in Russia. Why? Because they can get such juicy profits out of the little states in eastern Europe which have been created and maintained for that purpose.

A scandal, like our own Teapot Dome, is just starting in Warsaw. The Polish senate is to investigate Kukharski, former minister of trade and industry, and before that of finance. It seems he lent millions of public money to start stock companies in the big industries that Polish and French capital had grabbed from the old Russian or German states. Later he allowed these millions to be repaid in depreciated Polish marks, worth only a few thousand.

Still later he was director of one of these companies which had been presented with millions from the Polish treasury.

Mortgaged to Bankers.

But this is only one little sample. The real profits are made, not in small stock companies, but in great international loans. Italy has just issued a loan of 400 million lire to Poland, at 10 per cent. One condition is that 40 per cent of all tobacco bought from abroad for the Polish state tobacco monopoly shall be purchased of two designated firms in Italy. Those firms appear to have a stand-in with either Mussolini or the Bank of Italy, for they will be repaid three times or more by the workers of Poland to the firms that have the proper connections in Italy and they will still owe the principal.

Must Guzzle French Booze.

Of course, the French are the real beneficiaries of Polish natural resources. They have concessions in oil which they are exploiting ruthlessly, taking the crude oil out of the country in order to build up refineries in France over the protests of the Poles, who would like to develop a little industry themselves. France also has a tariff treaty whereby she gets 40 per cent lower duty than Germany. German merchants are shipping to Warsaw by way of France to escape the high tariffs. And France has forbidden Poland to set up any barrier against French wines, silks or perfumes, altho all these little countries much desired to cut down on imported luxuries. Incidentally, no wines but French can be brot into Poland at all.

There has been a great fury of national speculation on the basis of patriotism. Generals or former prime ministers give their names to stock companies, which then proceed to get concessions and loans from the government, and sell stock in America or elsewhere abroad where loyal Poles, led by the famous name, subscribe to "help build up the industries of Poland." Some of these materialize, others don't.

United Front.

Meantime the Polish workers are just beginning to act together. The Poles and Jews are in separate trade unions, but they have formed a joint central committee. It is strong enough so that recently when the textile workers had failed to get together on account of the anti-Semitism of the Poles, the offending Polish union was expelled from the Central organization of trade unions. In textiles, leather and bakeries, the workers of both groups now act on joint agreements, but in the metal industries there is no recognition of Jewish workers by the Poles unions.

Strong nationalist feeling and old habits of division are still the curse of the Polish working class movement.

us. I feel that he was misled, that somebody was telling him lies."

Refused to Betray Miners.

"I was expelled and deposed as president of the Kansas miners because I refused to go down the line with Lewis and refused to do some of the things he wanted me to do. I suppose if I'd gone down the line with Lewis I would still be president of the Kansas miners. But I am not going to surrender my principles as a man for anyone. I always went the limit for the Kansas miners and I would rather go to jail for the members of the miners' union and keep my principles than stay out of jail and continue as the president of the Kansas miners' organization and betray the men and my principles.

"I suppose I could have gotten along easier if I had permitted the mine operators to impose on the Kansas miners."

In answering Farrington's misstatements that the progressive Miners' Conference believes in a dual union, and that he had deserted Howat because he was associated with Foster in this conference, Howat said:

Against Dual Unionism.

"No man on earth can show that I have ever tried to do anything against the United Mine Workers of America or that I ever advocated a dual union. I have always advised the miners to stay inside the union and fight corruption from the inside, no matter how dissatisfied they may be with the officials of the miners' union."

"I have always tried to do my part in making the miners' union stronger and I always will, no matter what the disposition of any individual case may be. Farrington says he quit the fight for the Kansas miners because I attended the Pittsburgh progressive conference. I am not going to let Lewis tell me where I can go and where I can't go.

Best Men In Conference.

"The Progressive Miners' convention was composed of coal miners. Some of the best men you have in the miners' organization were at that convention. The meeting was composed of union men, and because I was not a member of the miners' union I had no right to participate as a delegate. I addressed the meeting for half an hour. Regardless of whether or not the International officials condemn the progressive miners as a dual organization, the men there had no more thought of breaking up the mine workers or forming a dual organization than have you men sitting here today. They are the same loyal men who went thru the bitter fight with me in the old days to form the United Mine Workers of America. I would have been a delegate to that conference had I been a member of the mine workers' union.

Building Stronger Unionism.

"The conference of progressive miners was called to find means of making the mine workers union stronger for the rank and file members, and aimed to do more for them than the international officials are doing for them. If I had been president of the District 14, no doubt I would have been there—I would have been there for the same reason that the other miner delegates were there—to get the miners better organized among themselves.

"A platform was drawn up at the Progressive Miners' convention which demanded things which I am sure the rank and file members of the U. M. W. of A. want, and which, if put to a referendum vote, 95 per cent of the miners of this country would have voted for. The convention had one thing in mind—to get the miners to go into the international convention and fight for those things which were for the best interests of the miners' organizations. Their platform demanded a six hour work day, the nationalization of the mines, and the reinstatement of the Kansas miners' officials. In all my travels among the miners of this country, I have not heard one word of condemnation from the miners of this country of this platform.

"True, Walter Nesbit and Farrington complained about it, but if the international officials thought it a dual union, why didn't they say so before the Pittsburgh conference. It was well advertised for two months, and yet the officials let these poor devils attend the conference and after it was over, condemned them as dual unionists.

Fight On Industrial Court.

Howat told the delegates of his early struggles to build up the miners' organization in this country, and told them of his fight against the industrial court law. He told how he smashed it after spending 17 months in jail. Howat declared that Lewis deposed Dorsey and himself while they were in jail, without notice and without cause, and in direct violation of the constitution of the miners' union, which gives everyone the right to a fair trial.

Howat expressed the sincere appreciation of the Kansas miners for the aid Illinois miners gave in fighting for the reinstatement of the Kansas leaders. "I voice the sentiment of at least 95 per cent of the Kansas miners when I say that we appreciate your help. And I would feel that I had lost almost my last friend if the Illinois miners deserted this fight. I call on the rank and file of the miners of Illinois to stand by us now as in the past even tho the district officials of district 12 do not."

Illinois The Backbone.

"The miners of Illinois are the backbone of the American Labor movement and I don't believe they will allow any set of men to crucify a man in the miners' union because they do not like him." The fight would have been won before this if the union officials of district twelve hadn't layed down on us."

Some of Farrington's statements were challenged from the floor of the convention when Howat spoke for the independent political action of labor as against the Gompers policy of dealing with the politicians of the old parties. Howat is a delegate to the St. Paul conference on June 17th, elected from the Pittsburgh-Kansas central labor council.

Not "Dual," Farrington Admitted.

The wind was taken out of Farrington's sails, when Freeman Thompson, in spite of excessive use of the gavel on Farrington's part, shouted out to the convention that he had a letter signed by Frank Farrington, in which Farrington stated specifically that he did not think the progressive miners' organization was a dual union. Farrington had stated to the convention that he had stopped fighting Howat's case because the international executive board had ruled the progressive miners' organization a dual union. But Freeman's letter shows that Farrington admitted that he did not think so.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., May 20.—Activities of radical groups here have been subject to the constant spying of the American Legion Intelligence service, according to this organization's recent report to the Department of Justice. The alleged Communist leanings at Central High School were particularly subject to the Legion's investigation.

Members of the American Legion Intelligence service, led here by Major Charles Edwards and R. B. Boyle, attend meetings held by Socialist, Communist, or I. W. W. groups and make reports on what is said; particularly when derogatory remarks are made concerning the flag, the United States Constitution, the military organization, the klan, or any of the special privileged groups. Most of the members of the service work like ordinary dicks, without disclosing their identity or purpose.

RAILWAY BROTHERHOODS OF WISCONSIN SPURN C. P. P. A. CLEVELAND CONFERENCE

MADISON, Wis., May 20.—Rail brotherhoods and powerful LaFollette republicans in Wisconsin have declined to participate in the national Conference for Progressive Political Action, on which many third party advocates pin their hopes.

At the "organization" meeting of the Wisconsin conference here yesterday, the railroad brotherhoods, altho supporting Senator Robert M. LaFollette, withdrew after the conference got under way, saying its promoters were "too radically inclined."

Republican progressives who are partisans of Governor John J. Blaine, and who also favor LaFollette, were sparsely represented at the meet, and former promoters of the Non-Partisan League controlled the convention.

The Wisconsin conference elected three delegates to the Cleveland national progressive convention July 4 and also chose a representative for the St. Paul Farmer-Labor Convention, June 17.

N. Y. COMMUNISTS HAIL VICTORIES; GERMAN, FRENCH

Point American Need Of Farm-Labor Party

NEW YORK, May 20.—The revolutionary workers of New York celebrated the great Communist victories in the recent French and German elections recently at Yorkville Casino.

William Weinstone, chairman, made a few brief remarks, illustrating how the German workers were rapidly casting off the yoke of the social traitors, and were joining the ranks of the revolutionary proletariat. The Communist Party in Germany has gained the adherence of the revolutionary workers thruout the country.

Jack Stachel, organizer of the Young Workers League, spoke on the role of the young Communists in the revolutionary movement. Thousands of the young workers were killed in the Spartacan days of 1918, fighting side by side with their older comrades. In every important struggle the youth can be found in the front ranks fighting the master class.

Ring of Steel Breaks.

Arnold Roller, who spoke in German, showed how the ring of steel that was forged by the Curzons and Poincare, aimed to crush the Russian and German workers was rapidly crumbling. The French workers have gone to the polls and registered the vote of condemnation against the imperialism of the arch-reactionary Poincare, and the Socialist renegade Millerand.

Earl Browder, editor of the "Labor Herald," spoke on the June 17 conference at St. Paul, and pointed out the importance of workers' organizations sending delegates to the conference for the formation of a class Farmer-Labor Party. He appealed to all those present to help the Workers' Party carry on the work for a revolutionary class party in this country that will fight for the abolition of capitalism and for a workers' and farmers' government.

James P. Cannon, member of the Central Executive Committee of the Workers' Party, delivered the main speech of the evening. He pointed out that the only way to help the revolutionary workers in Europe is to join the Workers' Party, the American section of the Communist International. It is the duty of the revolutionary workers in this country to strengthen their organization, and only this way can they emulate their European comrades. The German workers have shown by this election that they have finally forsaken the yellow banner of special patriotism for the red flag of communism. The meeting adjourned with the singing of the Internationale.

Remember Political Prisoners' Birthdays Coming During June

Birthdays in June of political prisoners, confined in the American Prisons, are announced by the Workers' National Prison Comfort Club, 1923 Chestnut street, Milwaukee, Wis., as follows:

At Massachusetts State Prison, Charleston, Mass.

June 11, Bartholomeo Vanzetti.

At Leavenworth, Kan., Box No. 7.

June 10, Jos. Baltrusaitis.

June 29, Pedro Paroles.

Cora Meyer, National Secretary, invites friends and sympathizers to send birthday cards and letters (money is advisable for gifts) to these political prisoners. Books and publications must be sent directly from the publishers.

J. Baltrusaitus, who recently was made a political prisoner, writes: "It is indeed a cheer—yes—more than that, a pleasure appreciated very highly to receive letters of comfort.

Missouri Federation of Labor.

MOBERLY, Mo.—The 31st convention, Missouri State Federation of Labor, opened in the Moberly high school auditorium with almost 200 delegates. Workmen's compensation legislation, still absent from Missouri statute books, is a principal topic before the convention. Other matters dealt with by the federation's legislative committee are a miner's washhouse bill, child labor and the defeated industrial court bill modeled on the Kansas measure that has proved a farce.

Hiram Tosses Sponge.

PIERRE, S. D., May 20.—Hiram Johnson will release South Dakota's delegation to the republican national convention and they will go to Cleveland uninstructed, John Sutherland, state manager for the Johnson campaign, said today.

Meetings Forbidden.

BERLIN.—Demonstrations of the workers on May First, the international labor day, were forbidden in Italy, Hungary, Spain, Bulgaria, Roumania, Jugo-Slavia, and Germany.

COMMUNISTS OF ROUMANIA FACE REIGN OF TERROR

Labor Press Stopped; Union Offices Shut

BUCHAREST, Roumania, April 15.—(By mail)—While "patriotic" demonstrations were staged in Bessarabia and in other parts of occupied territory, at the same time the rich landowners' government of Bratianu proclaimed a state of seige in Bucharest, Chernovitz, Kluye, and Jassy. After mass raids the political police discovered that the Communist Party of Roumania is in close contact with Soviet Russia and is therefore, guilty of "treason." The editors of the Communist paper of Bucharest and the paper of the Madjar workers of Semigrad, "Munkach," will be court-martialed. The party attempted to issue another paper, but the editors as well as the compositors have been arrested.

At first the government prohibited the use of mails to the Communist press and the sale of the papers in the streets, but with the declaration of a state of seige the government decided to destroy the labor press altogether. At the same time the military prosecutor closed up the offices of the trade unions.

All Suspected Deported.

The terrorism of the government takes on different forms. In Semigrad, Temeshware, and Brassove mass arrests are going on among the civilian population as well as among the soldiers. The usual accusation is "espionage." The capitalist press of Bucharest is accusing every "foreigner" of being a spy, and is demanding that all "foreigners"—i. e., all those who are not Roumanians by birth, and there are at present 6,000,000 of such out of the 15,000,000 population within the borders of the "Greater Roumania," shall be expelled from government and civil offices, and shall be denied such rights that are still enjoyed by the Roumanians. Many such "foreigners" who have been born and lived all their lives in the territory now occupied by the Roumanians, are being arrested and deported abroad. Not only workers are the victims of these deportations, but also small business people, intellectuals, etc. Everyone who is suspected of being unfriendly to the conquerors is liable to be arrested and deported.

At the same time the government press agents are widely advertising abroad the "patriotic" manifestations carefully staged with the aid of stool pigeons, the political policy and small bands of Fascisti.

Bessarabian Terror Reign Protested By Refugee Thousands

MOSCOW, May 20.—A big demonstration was held in Vienna with the participation of thousands of refugees from Eastern Galicia and Bessarabia, to protest against the Polish and Roumanian terror and the occupation of Bessarabia by Roumania.

A delegation of Vienna Bessarabians called on Mr. Krestinsky, the Chief Delegate of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, and presented documentary evidence of the reign of terror now prevailing in Bessarabia, demanding the withdrawal of Roumanian troops, a general referendum and the release of all political prisoners now in jail in Bessarabia.

Pat Harrison to Talk.

NEW YORK, May 20.—Senator Pat Harrison of Mississippi will be the temporary chairman and deliver the party keynote address at the Democratic national convention here.

SOCIALISTS LEARN ABOUT ST. PAUL -

By C. E. Ruthenberg

IN reply to the open letter addressed to the National Executive Committee of the Socialist Party by the Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party, demanding that the Socialist Party sever its connection with the Conference for Progressive Political Action which is still in the business of endorsing old Party candidates and affiliate with the June 17th Farmer-Labor Convention, the following letter has been received from Bertha Hale White, Executive Secretary of the Socialist Party:

Workers Party of America,
C. E. Ruthenberg, Executive Sec'y.
1009 N. State St., Chicago, Ill.
Dear Comrades:

This will acknowledge receipt of your communication of May 10, addressed to the National Executive Committee of the Socialist Party, in which you demand the immediate withdrawal of the Socialist Party from the Conference for Progressive Political Action, to which the Socialist Party is affiliated, and its participation in a convention which has been called to meet in St. Paul, Minn., on June 17th, for the announced purpose of forming an alignment of farmers and workers for the coming campaign.

While the National Office of the Socialist Party has had indirect information of the St. Paul convention, it has had no official communication whatever respecting it.

In order to decide fairly whether the convention at St. Paul offers more to a truly revolutionary, class conscious political party of the working class than the Conference for Progressive Political Action, will you kindly send this office copies of the platform and program upon which the call was issued for submission to our executive?

For the information of our committee, may we ask if you have the authority to invite our participation, and, if so, is the letter which you have submitted to be considered as a formal invitation? It has been our understanding that the invitations to the St. Paul convention were issued some time ago, and it is hardly possible that the time yet remaining before June 17th will permit the election of delegates should the National Executive Committee obey your rather imperious command.

Fraternally yours,
Bertha Hale White,
Executive Secretary.

To this letter, the Workers Party has replied as follows:

Bertha Hale White, Executive Sec'y.,
Socialist Party,
2653 Washington Blvd.,
Chicago, Ill.
Dear Comrades:

Official invitations to the St. Paul Farmer-Labor Convention are being sent out by the National Arrangements Committee of which William Mahoney is chairman and C. A. Hathaway, secretary. The address of the Committee is, Labor Temple, St. Paul., Minn.

If your organization has not received an invitation from this committee, it is undoubtedly due to an oversight. If you will communicate with the Committee I am sure that such an invitation will be sent at once.

For your further information, I am enclosing a copy of the call for the Convention. You will note that this call reads:

"We extend an invitation to send delegates to this convention to all farmer organizations, local unions, central labor bodies, state federations of labor, international unions, co-operative organizations, labor fraternal organizations and all farmer and labor political organizations . . ."

The call further provides that "each national organization shall be entitled to five votes."

This invitation which has been broadcasted thru the labor press of the country, I am sure, is broad enough to include the Socialist Party.

Fraternally yours,
C. E. Ruthenberg,
Executive Secretary.

We are very happy, indeed, that the Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party was inspired to send the open letter to the National Executive Committee of the Socialist Party. It seems if it were not for this inspiration on the part of the Central Executive Committee of our Party, the Socialist Party would have remained in complete ignorance of the class movement of farmers and workers which is expressing itself in the June 17th Convention, altho the call for the June 17th Convention has been printed in labor papers all over the country and has been commented upon by even most of the capitalist newspapers.

It is curious, indeed, that under these circumstances a Party such as the Socialist Party which claims to be a party of the working class should have remained in complete ignorance of the character of the June 17th mass movement of farmers and workers.

It should not be difficult for the National Executive Committee of the Socialist Party to decide whether the June 17th "convention at St. Paul offers more to a truly revolutionary, class conscious political party of the working class than the Conference for Progressive Political Action." To us this seems a very simple question. It can be answered by contrasting the attitude of the groups behind the June 17th Convention and the Conference for Progressive Political Action on one point only, and on this point the Socialist Party should have as much information as any one else in the United States.

The Socialist Party knows that the Conference for Progressive Political Action does not stand for independent political action of the workers and farmers. It knows that the Conference for Progressive Political Action has met three times and three times refused to go on record for independent political action by the workers and farmers. It knows that even now the Conference for Progressive Political Action is supporting candidates on the old party tickets. We cite as evidence the action of the C. P. P. A. in the state of California, which is fighting against independent political action and even goes so far as to bring the prestige of the American Federation of Labor decision to bear as a means of preventing the workers and farmers of California from supporting a movement for independent political action of which, contrary to the position of the national organization of the Socialist Party, the state organization of the Socialist Party of California is a part.

In contrast to the position of the Conference for Progressive Political Action asking the voters to support candidates on the old party tickets, the June 17th Convention is a call for independent political action. The June 17th Convention will not endorse any old party candidates. The June 17th Convention and the state organizations affiliated with it will support candidates on the Farmer-Labor ticket only. The June 17th Convention group has forever cut its relationship with the capitalist political parties.

This is the answer to the question in the letter from the Executive Secretary of the Socialist Party. The facts are so plain that even the Socialist Party cannot deny them. Will the Socialist Party, in the face of these facts, continue its affiliation with the Conference for Progressive Political Action or will it break away from this group which still plays old party politics and align itself with the mass movement of workers and farmers which is going forward to the formation of the class Farmer-Labor Party in this country.

Let the National Executive Committee of the Socialist Party answer that question.

No member of the Socialist Party who has even the slightest conception of the class basis of political struggles will have any doubt as to what the answer should be. Various local and state groups of the Socialist Party are already supporting the June 17th Convention contrary to the policy of the National Executive Committee. They should demand that the National Executive Committee of the Socialist Party do likewise and cut its affiliation with the betrayers of the movement for independent political action organized in the C. P. P. A.

SAN FRANCISCO BENEFIT BAZAAR COMES SATURDAY

German Children To Profit By Program

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., May 20.—The grand international concert, bazaar and ball for the benefit of the starving children of Germany, promised for Saturday evening, May 24, at 8 p. m. in California Hall, Turk and Polk streets, will be one of the most interesting events held here for some time.

The evening's entertainment will be of the highest order, including numbers by the Freundschafs Saenger Band; the Gesang Verein "Alpenroesli;" the San Francisco Spartan Club, the Maennerchor; and Damenchor "Lyra;" Bittner brothers at the violin and piano; Mrs. Johnson, soprano; R. Bamattre, cellist; Miss Alice Kagan, international dances. W. Heidelmann is stage director.

German delicacies will be offered to appease the lower appetites of the audience. Gabler and C. G. Blickle, Moorgarten Lodge, Druids, are in charge of the food, and Otto Santer in charge of the bar.

Donations of money and goods for the bazaar have been pouring into the office of the committee in charge. All indications point to a most successful and delightful evening with tangible results for the needy German children.

But He Went to the Races.

WASHINGTON, May 20.—President Coolidge cancelled all his engagements and remained in his rooms in the White House suffering from a cold.

C. Bascom Slemp, the president's secretary, said the indisposition was not serious and that Mr. Coolidge expected to attend the horse show here

FARMER-LABOR FUND CONTRIBUTIONS

Returns received by the National Office of the Workers Party, during the past week, show contributions to the Farmer-Labor fund from the following branches:

		English, Berkeley, Cal.	8.00

These branches are showing the right spirit in giving support to the campaign the party is carrying on at the present time. They represent, however, only a small proportion of the total number of branches of our party, not more than one-fifth of the branches having responded thus far. That is not a good showing. It indicates that our party membership does not yet realize the importance of the Farmer-Labor United Front campaign. Those branches which have not yet made their report, are urged to send in their contributions.

OUR BOOK REVIEW SECTION

Mexico.

"Where the outsider has seen nothing but tumult, revolt, restlessness, lack of discipline, bloodshed, there has really been a consistent striving for a single end—to give the enslaved, oppressed and humiliated masses of Mexico a status of full economic, political and social equality."

Thus writes Plutarco Elias Calles, associate of Obregon and probably next president of Mexico, in the May issue of The Survey Graphic. Writers in the magazine agree that the government south of the Rio Grande has a sweeping program of social and economic reform, but that the program has not been put into operation for the most part.

"No government in Mexico can last unless it recognizes the age-long cry of the Indian for land," says Calles. But the government is "proceeding cautiously," secretary of agriculture Ramon P. de Negri admits: "So far only about 3,000 villages (out of a stated 15,000) have been given provisional possession of their lands."

The power of the organized labor movement which has taken the place of the military class as the dominating force in Mexican life is described by Frank Tannenbaum, who shows that Obregon defeated the recent militarist rebellion by arming and sending into battle under their own leaders the peasants' and workers' organizations.

Mexico is not a workers' state. "Obregon obviously placed more faith in his Yaqui Indians than in his volunteer workers and peasant brigades which might subsequently be tempted to inaugurate industrial revolution," says Carleton Beals.

Artists such as the Communist Diego Rivera and educators like Jose Vasconcelos show by their articles and pictures in The Survey not only that Mexicon Indians, the vast bulk of the population, have a rich esthetic and communal heritage but that a revolutionary rebirth is taking place. That this is having a profound effect on all Latin America, is the testimony by V. R. Haya de la Torre, president, Students' Federation of Peru.

More Balkan Barking.

MOSCOW, May 20.—The Yugo-Slavian press is indignant at the fact that the Roumanians pillaged two small towns which were to be handed over to Yugo-Slavia prior to evacuating them. The press advances that the government take strong measures and do not turn over to Roumania those localities which should be turned over according to the treaty, before Roumania compensates for the losses and settles the frontier questions.

It is reported that the Yugo-Slavian government will address a strong note of protest to the Roumanian government.

Try to Bluff With "Siege."

MOSCOW, May 20.—Vienna reports that, in connection with the student and Fascist troubles, the Roumanian government has decided to declare a state of siege at Bukharest.

The Rosta correspondent at Vienna learns, however, that the reason given above for the declaration of the state of siege is but a pretext, the true object being to terrorize the labor movement and eradicate any move in favor of the realization of the plebiscite as demanded by the Soviet government. Even the official Vittorul avows that the state of siege is a measure to fight "White and Red Bolshevism" alike.

Russian Platinum Found.

MOSCOW, May 20.—Platinum has been uncovered in quite a considerable amount in the bed of the Belaya river, an affluent of the Anadyr river (Siberia).

Kruse Lectures At Lewis Institute On Russia And Germany

On invitation of the "Liberal Club" of Lewis Institute, a leading technical college in the Middle West with an enrollment of 2500 students, William E. Kruse lectured in the school auditorium on the subject of his recent visit in Russia and Germany. An excellent attendance was assured when upon request of the students, several teachers dismissed evening classes to permit them to attend.

Two reels of pictures were shown in connection with the talk. Unfortunately, the short version of the regular "Russia and Germany" film which was shown by the speaker at the University of Chicago, was going the rounds of eastern colleges, showings having already been made at Yale and Swarthmore. On short notice the two opening reels of the full length picture were used at Lewis. These showed the Youth Day demonstration in Moscow and the great Moscow International Agricultural Exposition. Conditions in Germany were then described by the speaker, and several interesting questions on Russian education were answered.

Russian Delegation Touring Turk Land With Trade Exhibits

(By Rosta News Agency).

MOSCOW, May 20.—Before leaving for Turkey, the trade delegation of the Russo-Oriental Chamber of Commerce, visited the Turkish Ambassador, Akhmet Mukhtar Bey, who remarked that he was confident the delegation would meet with a warm reception on the part of the Turkish government and the business and public circles in Turkey.

The delegation also visited Mr. Chitcherin, the People's Commissary of Foreign Affairs, Mr. Krassin, the People's Commissary of Foreign Trade and Mr. Lejava, the Chairman of the Commission for Internal Trade.

The delegation is taking to Turkey about 500 poods of different samples of the Russian industry, including the textile industry, chemical-sugar, electro-technic, leather, metallurgic, glass and china, timber, cement, butter and also samples of flour and grain exported from Russia.

The delegation intends to leave from Constantinople for Angora, where it will be introduced to the Turkey government and come into contact with the economic institutions. Afterwards it will visit Smyrna and other big ports of Asia Minor. The part of the delegation intends to establish connections with the eastern districts of Turkey. Altogether the delegation will stay in Turkey about four to six weeks.

LABOR CRUCIFIED BETWEEN 2 OLD BOSS PARTIES

But Labor Fakers Have Lots Of Patience

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK, May 20.—How is labor in picking one of the old political parties to reward its friends and punish its enemies when both republicans and democrats turn out to be enemies? This riddle presented itself to persons listening to the report on the New York state legislature given by Secretary-Treasurer John M. O'Hanlon, state federation of labor, to the New York City Central Trades and Labor council.

The republican assembly defeated four of labor's bills and helped kill a fifth, while the democratic senate defeated the measure prohibiting use of injunctions in labor disputes prior to jury trial, O'Hanlon explained. The republican speaker of the assembly promised support for the eight-hour bill for women, and then called a caucus to kill the bill. The anti-injunction measure was endorsed by the democratic state platform and the democratic governor, but the democrats defeated it.

Other planks in labor's program as enumerated by O'Hanlon are legalization of light wines and beer, restoration of direct primaries for state officers and U. S. senators, repeal of movie censorship, opposition to enforced incorporation of unions, insurance fund for workmen's compensation, state and municipal development of light, heat and power, restoration of original penalty stopping payments on contracts if eight-hour law is violated, and inclusion in anti-monopoly law of declaration that labor is not a commodity.

Retraction from Mayor Hylan was demanded by the meeting for his statement that labor officials asking a union scale for city employes are highwaymen. The recent 10 per cent increase in rates by the New York Telephone company was condemned in another resolution.

NEW YORK CITY Party Activities

The new North Hudson English branch has been given authority to arrange street meetings for the campaign of the Farmer-Labor Party and for the conference being called for June 5 at Eintrachts Casino, Union Hill.

A branch of the Young Workers' League is soon to be organized in the North Hudson district.

DETROIT CALLS FARMER-LABOR CITY CONVENTION

May 25th Meet Will Vote For St. Paul

DETROIT, Mich., May 20.—A call has been issued by a representative group of trade unionists of Detroit for a city convention to be held on May 25th for the purpose of organizing a branch of the Farmer-Labor Party in this city.

The opening sentence of the call endorses the June 17th convention in the following terms: "The enclosed call for the Farmer-Labor Progressive Convention to be held in St. Paul, Minn., June 17th, presents an opportunity for the workers to register their profound disapproval of the misrule of the two old political parties which the recent Washington exposures have shown to be equally the tools of the privileged class."

The call for the convention is signed by Wm. Reynolds, Carpenters' Union No. 2140; Robert Funk, Tailors' Union No. 229; Herman Richter, Carpenters' Union No. 420; Edgar Owens, for the Workers' Party; Anna Krakaitis, Federated Working Women's Organizations, Detroit; and George Tries, Member Executive Board of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party.

The convention will be held in the Bricklayers' Hall, 4325 Cass avenue, beginning at 10 a. m. There has been a strong movement for independent political action in Detroit for some time and it is expected that the call will bring a big response from the trade union movement as well as from other organizations of workers in this city.

Remaining Dates, Places, Announced For Trachtenberg

Wednesday, May 21—Butte, Mont., Carpenters Hall, West Granite St., at 8 p. m.

Sunday, May 25—St. Paul, Labor Temple, 416 Franklin St., at 8 p. m.

Monday, May 26—Minneapolis, First Unitarian Church, 8th St. and La Salle Ave., at 8 p. m.

Tuesday, May 27—Superior, Workers' Hall, cor. Tower Ave. and North 5th St., at 8. p. m.

Previous meetings have been enthusiastically attended. Trachtenberg's discussion of the present German situation has never failed to hold his audiences.

MEMBERSHIP, ATTENTION!

Continuing the work of familiarizing the party membership with the united front policy of the party in relation to the Farmer-Labor party, the central executive committee has arranged a series of meetings at which Comrade James P. Cannon will speak on the question of the party labor party policy. The meetings arranged will be held in the following cities:

Buffalo, N. Y.—Friday, May 23, 159 Grider street, 8 p. m.

Pittsburgh, Penna.—Saturday, May 24, Labor Lyceum, 35 Miller street, at 8 p. m.

RHODE ISLAND CALLING LABOR PARTY ASSEMBLY

State Meet Settles Nat'l Action Sunday

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PROVIDENCE, R. I., May 20.—The state convention of the Labor Party will be held next Sunday, May 25, at 3 p. m. in American Co-operative Association Hall, 1735 Westminster street, according to a call just sent out to all members of labor unions, of workers fraternal organizations and of co-operatives in Rhode Island.

The circular letter call states in part:

"Two years ago a group of workers in Rhode Island got together and organized the Rhode Island Labor Party. Later on they affiliated with the Federated Farmer-Labor Party. This Federated Farmer-Labor Party has succeeded in grouping together various independent political parties into a federation, hence the name Federated Farmer-Labor Party. . . .

"A call has been issued for a national convention of delegates from all these groups. The Rhode Island Labor Party can take part in that convention by sending delegates. But we do not want to take any part unless we have a mass state convention. We want you to come to the state convention, either as a representative of your organization, or as an individual member. Read the enclosed call for a National Convention. Read the tentative program. If you agree to that you are welcome, in fact WE WANT YOU.

"If you think your organization will send delegates to our state convention, then bring this matter before it. If you cannot get such action, then show this call to some of your fellow members and ask them to attend. We do not ask what your political faith is, we only ask if you belong to a labor group and if you are willing to help build a Labor Party in Rhode Island, and in the nation. Don't be misled by the sham battles that are now being staged by the politicians of both old parties. Organize a Labor Party and we can make our own laws."

Watchmakers' Union Protests Company's Cheap Labor Plans

The Watch and Clock Makers' Union of Chicago, is following the protest of the Cincinnati union against the petition of the Gruen Watch Company for permission to bring fifty more watchmakers to this country.

The Gruen Company of Cincinnati, has applied to government authorities to allow them to import more European workmen when the unions claim that there are already more watchmakers here than jobs for them. The Cincinnati Watch and Clock Makers' Union passed a resolution of protest explaining this situation and sent it to the United States Department of Labor.

The union sees in the move of the Gruen concern only another effort to import cheap labor and break down the standards so painstakingly developed here by union organization. The local watchmakers say that it is only another phase of the open-shop drive and the Chicago union approves the action of Cincinnati workers.

ANTI-RED DRIVEL USED BY GOMPERS AGAINST RADICALS IS USED BY GARY AGAINST UNIONS

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, May 20.—Wm. J. Burns, now retired from the department of justice by the dismissal route, denies that Herbert Little worked for the bureau of investigations. J. F. Hoover, temporarily in charge of the bureau, denies that any agent of the department ever was sent to Russia to get evidence of the connection between the Third International and American labor.

That is the reply of the administration to testimony by H. J. Burton, detective formerly under Burns but now employed by the Randall agency in Cleveland, that one Herbert Little gave him a lot of valuable material on this Third International connection with radical labor in America.

Burton's testimony, given before the Brookhart committee as a supplement to his story of the failure of the department to prosecute a series of big whisky-fraud cases in Ohio, was that Little introduced himself as an agent of Burns' bureau, and showed a badge and identification card. Little wanted Burton to introduce him to some labor leaders in the Cleveland district. A few days afterward, Burton met Little in the latter's office in Pittsburgh—at a location he could not describe, as they went there at midnight in a closed taxi. The information he received as to Russian intrigues with dangerous labor agitators in this country from Little, Burton said, was so valuable that he made a pamphlet of it and sent it to rubber and pottery manufacturers in Ohio. The A. F. of L. was at that time trying to organize their unskilled labor. This data helped to break that effort by the unions.

Little told Burton that he was paid $4,000 by the government, but got $11,000 a year from the U. S. Steel Corporation, which was interested in having him take a trip to Russia and bring back material. It was a case of stopping an organization movement in the steel industry, last year, and the steel people were not stingy. Burton reported to the department at the same time that he reported to steel. Afterward, Burton noticed that Secretary Hughes was publishing the same charges as to the Third International and its American propaganda as Little had recited to him in Pittsburgh last October.

On this information, Burton testified the manufacturers had been able to cause the arrest of two men at Youngstown for circulating "anarchistic" labor literature.

When Burton made an attempt to get further data, recently, from Little, the latter told him that the staff in Pittsburgh had been sent into the field for a few days, when the Daugherty investigation by the Senate committee began, and that during their absence the records were all removed and had not reappeared.

Norwegian D. Of J. Stops City Relief Of Striking Workers

KRISTIANIA, May 20.—The strike and lockout situation is unchanged. The students' society, which has been under Communist management, elected a conservative chairman for the next semester. He got 82 votes, the communist candidate 75.

The Department of Justice, relying upon paragraph 26 of the law for city administrations, has declared void actions by different city councils. The paragraph states: "City Council may not take actions that especially benefit political organizations or purposes." The actions have been to provide medical attention to locked out workers and free milk for their children.

Three thousand tons of barley have been ordered from Russia. This is the first purchase for a long time, Russia lately having sold no grain.

MOTHERS PICKET UNSAFE SCHOOL IN HAVERHILL

Strike Declared On Condemned Firetrap

By BETTY CONNELLY CARPENTER

HAVERHILL, Mass., May 20.—As I came to Currier square, I saw a large crowd of women with their banners bearing the inscription, "Currier School Unsafe," "Currier School Unsanitary," "Don't Send Your Children to Currier School." These women marched up and down in front of the building, some knitting, others reading, while still others pushed baby carriages. There was a parking place for the carriages, whose accupants had fallen asleep, which was under guard of a special committee of mothers.

The ground around the building was littered with rubbish, low, and was crowded with children of all nationalities. The children of the mothers in the picket line, were explaining to those still in school why, they, too, should take a vacation until the school board made the building safe for them to occupy.

Building Condemned 20 Years Ago.

The building, which was constructed fifty-two years ago, is in keeping with the general architectural design and construction that was common in those days. Twenty years ago, after the building had been declared unsafe, a tower was built at each end of it, in which was placed a fire escape. This has since drawn away from the main part of the building, on one end so far that it has been torn down since the protest has been going on. The other tower is about three inches from the main part of the building.

I went into the school. In the basement, on the girls' side of the building and not twenty feet away from the toilets is a stove. The toilets, stove and a small play room are all in the same room. It is on this stove that noon-day meals, for those who do not go home to lunch, are cooked. The ventilation is in keeping with the building itself. Old and unsanitary appliances are a constant menace to the health of the children.

At the other end of the basement is the kindergarten. Its white-washed windows form the partition between, the room and the girls' toilet.

Light Match to See Way.

Its rickety old stairs, narrow, with a turn half way up, and placed in dark corners of the building make them very dangerous in case of fire. They are so dark that we had to light a match so that we could see our way.

Some of these same mothers who formed the picket line of from seventy-five to one hundred people told me that they were also present at a meeting held three years ago which was addressed by State Senator Charles H. Morrill. It was at that time that the school board and the city council promised relief. Nothing in the way of anything permanent was done. More or less agitation has been going on since the meeting held three years ago.

This time the women have resolved to stick to their task until they succeed in getting the place made safe for their children. Although the police have ordered them away on several occasions they are determined to gain their demands. Even the threats of the truant officer to the effect that he would put them in jail if they did not send their children to school have not shaken their determination.

"We would rather be in jail than to have our children in this school," is the answer of the women.

Councilmen who have feared for the safety of the building, which has been declared unfit by state authorities have placed a special guard around the building.

The council rooms have been the scene of many sharp criticisms from the mothers who are in daily attendance to voice their protest. The women have employed an attorney to represent them to see if they can get any relief in the civil courts. The school board has been swamped by communications and committees who have demanded that immediate action be taken. This time the committee says they will continue their agitation until they get relief.

They will not send their children to the school in its present state, and the attendance is getting smaller each day so it is fast coming to a point where the board will probably decide to act upon the kindly suggestion of the good and welfare committees and rent a temporary building until such time as the old one is either repaired or replaced.

By JOHN GIFFORD.

DRUMHELLER, Alberta, May 20.—The struggle in District 18, between miners and operators, has become intense, after almost two months of the strike and with both sides still showing determination that they will win in the end.

To date, the miners have not received any relief in any way from the District or International organization, but have been distributing whatever small funds are in the local treasuries, and only then to needy cases. However the fact that the miners in the southwestern states have settled up, is of good omen to the striking miners in this district, as it will release all the available funds necessary to the successful conclusion of the strike in this district.

President William Sherman is at present in Indianapolis, negotiating with John L. Lewis regarding the possibilities of relief for District 18, miners. Immediate relief is urgently needed as there are some non-union fields out with the union miners, and to hold these miners, and to make a successful conclusion to the present strike, immediate distribution of relief is desirable. The miners are determined to stick to the strike, relief or not.

Such is the stand of the miners of Alberta and British Columbia, realizing that not only is their future determined by the stand in this strike, but also the future of the rest of the industrial slaves in this western country. The miners to date have been the main defense, in the attacks of the capitalist class, in their wage reduction offensive.

It is the duty of every member of the working class, to assist the miners of District 18 in their adversity, and help to make this strike a victory, thereby paving the way to greater success for all workers, and the final abolition of this system of exploitation, which permits a small group of men to stand and dictate to over 20,000 men, women and children, the conditions under which they must exist. Canadian and American workers, the miners of Alberta are depending on you, to come to their aid in saving them from degradation and misery.

N. Y. Taxi Drivers Win Fight Against Mogul Checker Cab

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK, May 20.—Victory on the industrial and legal front has been won by the union in the New York taxi war. Union recognition, 40 per cent of receipts for day men and 35 per cent for night drivers with half the receipts above $90 a week, are terms of the new contract with the Mogul Checker Cab Corp., which runs until Nov. 1.

Fleet owners of the Mogul Corp., have withdrawn charges of extortion against officials of the union, the Brotherhood of Taxi Chauffeurs of Greater New York, an independent organization. At the same time the judge exonerated the men.

Tho the contract covers only Mogul Checker employes, about 4000, the union claims that about 600 of its members working for the Premier and Luxor companies are receiving the union scale following the strike. The American Yellow concern, which has the patronage of the city administration and the police, continues to pay its drivers only 33 1-3 per cent.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., May 20.—The last week of the painters' strike shows a big gain. A few more members of the bosses' association settled with the union and are employing union men. A good number of them are conferring with the representatives of the strike committee, with very good prospects for a satisfactory settlement.

The stand taken by the association from the start was a flat refusal even to meet any representative of the union. As the strike was progressing they had to change their attitude. Conferences are now being held daily with individual members of the association. The only issue in the controversy is the "open shop" question.

A vigorous organization campaign is being conducted. Many new members are joining the union every day.

A conference of 19 Jewish organizations was organized in Boyle Heights to organize and control public opinion in support of the striking painters. This conference is now very active in raising funds for the strikers.

The striking machinery is in good order and works harmoniously. The confidence of the membership shown to their strike committee is wonderful. The fighting spirit of the strikers is splendid.

Methodists Dodge on War.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., May 20.—The "anti-war" resolution of the committee on state of church of the Methodist Episcopal General conference, has been cast aside and a special committee authorized to deal with the question, it was announced this afternoon.

The resolution, adopted by the state church, was to have been presented to the general conference today.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., May 20.—The United Farmer-Labor Party of New York was organized here yesterday at the state convention called by the Federated Farmer-Labor Party of New York and the Buffalo Labor Party. The platform and program of the national Farmer-Labor Party was endorsed, including the convention at St. Paul to be held June 17th.

Representatives of organized labor, workers' fraternal organizations and farmers' granges participated in the convention and enthusiastically rallied to the cry for independent political action.

FIRST PICNIC OF SEASON TO BE HELD MAY 30TH

Plan To Visit Graves Of Labor Martyrs

The coming joint picnic on May 30th of the T. U. E. L. and the Y. W. L. at Altenheim Grove, Forest Park, holds a double attraction for the militants and youth who will gather at this first major social affair of the year.

Besides the opportunity presented for sport and diversion, the militant workers and youth can make this a revolutionary pilgrimage to the graves of the pioneers of the movement for the eight-hour day in the United States. In the cemetery across the road from the picnic grove lie the bodies of Spies, Parsons and other victims of the Haymarket Riot's gallant fighters in the class struggle to whom the militants and youth of the T. U. E. L. are the logical successors.

Many of those coming to this yearly re-union of Chicago's radicals will be pleased to take advantage of this double reason for attendance.

But besides revolutionary inspiration, the picnic promises further advantages. The grove includes a merry-go-round, swings, shelter and shade for rain or shine. An elaborate program beginning with noted speakers and including sports and games, besides many novelty features new to Chicago's social activities of trade unionists, has been drawn up by the committee in charge.

A group of the Amalgamated Food Workers will be in charge of the food arrangements and mean to prove their reasons for an increase in wages.

Branches of the Young Workers' League each are to have charge of separate booths promising new features and novelties while the T. U. E. L. groups of the various trades promise a co-operation that bespeaks success for the affair.

"Dennie" Helps Bootlegger.

"Injunction" Judge "Dennie" Sullivan, who has been especially vicious against the striking garment workers of the city, doesn't mind issuing injunctions to the owners of suspicious restaurants and hotels. His latest is an injunction against the police interfering with the business of Roy Rush's restaurant at 115 North Wells street.

This "feed house" has been the hang-out of gangsters and the more "elite" bootleggers, but Rush claims that he has reformed it now and wants the police to get over their bad habits of raiding his place. Judge Sullivan was glad to assist.

Make Better City Slaves Hope Of U. C. Investigators

Grievances of City Hall employes are to be investigated by an expert committee from the University of Chicago, according to a statement by Francis X. Busch, Corporation Counsel. Mayor Dever has sanctioned the inquiry and seemed quite impressed with the suggestions offered by Prof. Charles E. Merriam.

"The investigation is to be undertaken purely from the employee's point of view," Busch stated, but added that the result of the university researchers may be a new efficiency system. The new system would take the giving of efficiency marks from the hands of department heads and make the rating according to "scientific" civil service records of the employee's work for the city.

The City Hall investigation is similar to inquiries made in various private firms, resulting in better business for the boss. The city may be hoping to get overtime grievances and pay adjustments of its employes overshadowed by interest in ratings.

Workers' Health Bureau Holding N. Y. Conference

NEW YORK, May 20.—Plans for eliminating the danger of carbon monoxide poisoning in the new vehicular tunnel now being driven under the Hudson river were presented in New York city on Saturday by Professor Yandell Henderson, whose experiments with carbon monoxide gas have been widely discussed in connection with the accident in the Liberty tunnel, near Pittsburgh. Professor Henderson's work has been considered the standard in the field.

Professor Henderson will discuss his work at the health conference of the Workers' Heauth bureau, at which over fifty labor organizations thruout the country will be represented. The conference, which takes place May 17 and 18, at 7 East Fifteenth street, has been called by the bureau to consider safeguards in industry.

Cop Kills Cop.

NEW YORK, May 20.—Patrick Ryan, finger print expert for the New York police department, is in the Tombs, charged with the murder of Ferdinand Downs, another policeman, as the result of an attempt on the part of Downs to stop Ryan when he was running an auto load of bootleg booze from his home in Astoria. Ryan has been engaged in booze running for some time, he admitted. At the same time he was employed as a finger print expert by the police department.

AMALGAMATED FLAYS ENEMIES OF FOREIGN BORN

Exposes Scab Purpose Of Immigration Laws

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, May 20.—In striking contrast to conventions which allow Secretary James J. Davis to speak from a labor platform, the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America—at the convention just ended—made the following declaration against the finger-printing and strike-breaking conspiracies now being carried thru under the guise of "selective immigration." The resolution reads:

Whereas, America has been traditionally an asylum for the oppressed and persecuted in their countries;

Whereas, the immigrant workers in this country have helped make America what it is and have, thru their great labor organizations, raised the standards of living for the workers in this country:

Registration of Workers.

Whereas, there is proposed legislation, providing for the registration, photographing and finger-printing of non-citizens, which violates every cherished ideal upon which this government was founded.

Whereas, such proposed legislation, if enacted into law, will impose upon this country a system more disgraceful than the Prussia of the Hohenzollerns ever knew, and will compel non-citizen-workers to act as strike-breakers against citizen-workers, be it

Emphatic Protest.

Resolved, that the Sixth Biennial Convention of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, representing 150,000 workers, protests emphatically against all immigration restriction legislation and denounces the attempt to place the non-citizen workers in a status of criminals as a denial of the elementary principles of decency and justice, an insult to the intelligence of the American people, and a menace to the welfare of American labor, and be it further

Resolved, that we authorize the General Executive Board to cooperate in all efforts to liberalize the immigration laws and prevent the shameful alien registration legislation from being inflicted upon this country.

Burns Will Go to Europe.

Raymond J. Burns, crown prince of stool pigeons and "framers," will take charge of the destinies of the Burns detective agency when the "king"—W. J. himself—goes to Europe for a vacation, he announced yesterday. Officially the "king" has not been running his agency while in charge of the bureau of investigation of the D. of J., but the I. W. W. has proven that he was really directing it in spite of his loud denials.

The "crown prince" was loud in his praise of his father's work as head of the bureau of investigation of the D. of J. That makes two friends Burns has—his son and Daugherty.

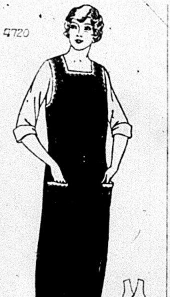
OUR DAILY PATTERNS



A Practical, Comfortable Apron Model

The pattern is cut in four sizes: Small, 34-36; medium, 38-40; large, 42-44; extra large, 46-48 inches bust measure. A medium size requires 5¼ yards of 27 inches material.

A Cool and Comfortable Frock With or Without Guimpe.

4704. Dotted voile in blue and white, with bindings of blue is here depicted. The Guimpe may be of batiste, lawn, crepe or voile. This is a pretty style for pongee or gingham.

The pattern is cut in four sizes: 2, 4, 6 and 8 years. A 4-year size requires 3 yards of 36-inch material for dress and guimpe. For the guimpe alone ⅞ yard is required.

Russian Crops Gaining.

MOSCOW, May 20.—The representative of the People's Commissariat of Agriculture has officially reported to the State Planning Commission that the area under winter crops has increased nearly by six per cent, while the sown area of spring crops—by nine per cent, as compared with last year's. This will make the total sown area in Russia proper about eighty per cent of the pre-war dimensions. The harvest forecast for the whole of the Union of Soviet Republics, is fairly favorable.

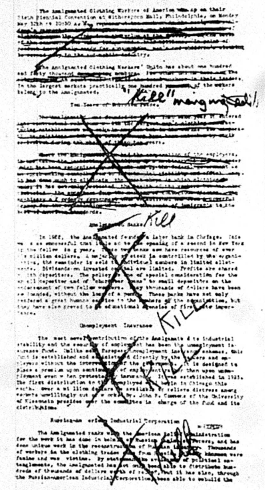
Under the Kept Pencil

If workers only knew just how the news of labor's activities is treated by the kept pencils of the copy readers in capitalist newspaper offices, they would turn in disgust from the yellow press. But few workers are really acquainted with what really goes on in the editorial rooms of the subsidized dailies.

The DAILY WORKER, therefore, takes considerable pleasure in reproducing an excellent insight into the practices of the yellow press as it appeared in "The Week," a convention publication that appeared during the recent gathering of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, at Philadelphia. Here is exposed the treatment of a convention story by one of the local dailies, said to be the Philadelphia Enquirer.

The convention reporter evidently worked up a fairly good story, for a capitalist sheet. But then the slaughtering began. "Kill" is the newspaper term for striking out. Stuff marked "kill" is not wanted. It is to be discarded. And the news of the "Amalgamated" convention certainly fell under the copy reader's pencil, like other labor news. It looks as if the managing editor had even had a shot at it. The accompanying reproduction shows how much was "killed" of the original story, leaving only one small paragraph. Here is the evidence:

HOW LABOR NEWS IS KILLED



"Kill" mang. ed.
Kill
Kill
Kill
Kill

In contrast to the above, the readers of the DAILY WORKER will certainly appreciate the thoro manner in which their paper has reported the conventions of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union and the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, at Boston and Philadelphia, and now the meeting of the Illinois coal miners, at Peoria.

Our increasing army of readers is convinced of the fact that in order to get the labor news from labor's viewpoint they must rely on the DAILY WORKER.

The "Buyers" Strike

The Chicago Tribune is conducting an investigation of the economic conditions prevailing in the middle and northwestern states. Its investigator has found that the farming masses inhabiting this section of the country are face to face with a serious economic crisis.

We welcome this discovery by "the world's greatest newspaper." We have seen this sad plight of the farmers in evidence for some time, while this same capitalist sheet was befuddling the minds of its excessive number of readers with the unfounded yarns and glowing tales of prosperity in the rural areas.

Yet, even now that the state of affairs amongst the farmers is so desperate that "prosperity" bunk can no longer be peddled, the Tribune takes it upon itself to resort to the most ingenious devices and tricks to give its readers, principally the city readers, the workers, a dangerously erroneous impression of the situation. The Tribune would have the world believe that there is a "buyers" strike among the farming masses of the section of the country, that the poor farmers constituting the overwhelming majority of the rural population, are simply refusing to buy and that this "strike" is having its disastrous effect on factory employment and wages.

This analysis, if we may call it such in spirit of generosity, is wrong from beginning to end. The farmers are ceasing to buy, not out of their own desires, but out of cruel necessity. For years the agricultural industry of the country has been going from bad to worse. Slowly but surely the savings of the farmers, the small savings earned during the war-prosperity, have been disappearing. At the same time the promised and hoped for relief failed to materialize. The farmers, like all other human beings, would like to get as many of the good things of life, as much of the comfort that can be secured, as possible. The wherewithal, the economic capacity, to secure these good things of life, has been deserting the farming masses with unbroken regularity in the last five years. Today, these dispossessed farmers can no longer buy, they can no longer meet even some of their most elementary demands. The ghastly spectre of economic bankruptcy is making itself felt amongst increasing numbers of farmers.

When the Tribune speaks of the inability of the farmers to buy back even as much of their produce as they did yesterday it is misleading the workers. This is simply another attempt on the part of this loyal servant of the big capitalist interests to pit the workers and farmers against each other and to prevent their uniting against their common capitalist enemy. The Tribune will not get very far in making the working masses believe that their wages are being slashed, that the factories are shutting down, that steel and coal production are going to the dogs, because the farmers are on a "buyers" strike. The basic cause for the poverty of the workers and the bankruptcy of the farmers is the same. Both take root and grow out of the capitalist private ownership and control of the means of production and exchange and the government.

Lessons In Democracy

We acknowledge our thanks to the National Security League. For once this organization of watchdogs of the capitalist class has rendered service potentially useful to the workers. Of course, the achievement was unpremediated and has a totally different object than the lessons that can be drawn from it.

The National Security League has just published the findings of an investigation captioned "Government By Default." This survey is primarily a statistical statement based on the election results of 1922.

We gather from these findings that democracy, capitalist democracy in practice, is completely devoid of one of its most advertised blessings. The proponents and champions of pure democracy, as we know it today, under capitalism, have always maintained that this institution accurately reflects the desires and opinions of the entire population. The findings of the National Security League blast this contention into smithereens.

First of all, we are told that most of the thirty-three states investigated show considerably less than 60 per cent of the possible voters participating. In Pennsylvania, dominated by the steel and coal trusts, Senators Reed and Pepper were elected by about 18 per cent of these eligible to vote. In Massachusetts, Lodge was elected by only 22 per cent of the possible voters. In Mississippi, Senator Stephens was elected by only 7 per cent. It is particularly enlightening to note that in this banner state of the Democratic Party only 8 per cent of the possible voters participated in the last Senatorial elections.

The bankruptcy of capitalist democracy as an organ for the expression of the wants of the working and farming classes becomes even more painfully clear when one considers some additional features of this system. The fact that the rural and city masses are compelled to vote away from the places of their employment and as an amorphous mass only aggravates the confusion of the issues and makes it impossible for them to view the situation as it really is, on a class basis.

The control of the press, the moving pictures, the theatre, the schools, the church, and sundry other organs of information and misinformation by the employing class, tends to blight the efficacy of the present system of suffrage still more. Add to that the fact of the government machinery, the financial and industrial power, the legal capacity to restrict and limit suffrage and the ownership of the workers' jobs being all in the hands of the capitalist class and you have a picture of the utter inadequacy of the capitalist democratic system as an organ of working and farming class expression in their conflict with the exploiters.

The findings of the National Security League afford excellent propaganda material for the class conscious workers. They present indisputable, authorative evidence of the hollowness of the principal claims made for the preservation of capitalist democracy and its superiority over the Soviet system based on the mass organizations of the workers and farmers which enables every worker and farmer to vote as a functioning, useful, economic unit in his industry and through his employment.

Communism will abolish all wars thru eliminating the cause of war; capitalism perpetuates war because it carries within itself the seeds of new wars

Ralph Chaplin's Book of Heroes

By ART SHIELDS.

Ralph Chaplin, whose battle songs of the West Virginia miners furnished inspiration to the readers of the old International Socialist Review ten years ago, deals with another dramatic story of the class war in the Centralia Conspiracy, just reissued in greatly amplified form by the Defense Committee.

The armed defense of the loggers' union hall against the Lumber Trust's white guard is a theme that Chaplin does justice to as probably no one else could. The author was one of the first investigators on the scene after the battle and by revolutionary temperament and artistic insight he was qualified to tell the story with color and power.

There is a magnificent militancy running thru the 144 pages of Chaplin's book, without any straining after effect. The story tells itself. It would have been easy for another writer, seeking to avoid the sickly apologetics of liberalism, to have veered over into a penny-dreadful style. Not so with Chaplin. The battle of Centralia and the class war background behind it had been stamped into his heart and mind in the weeks that he spent going over the ground, while the White Terror was still rampant.

Chaplin is a poet and artist but he is also one of the boys. In fact he is first of all one of the boys. And he tells the story of the Centralia fellow workers in this book just as tho he were talking to an audience of lumber workers—which in fact he is doing, for the book will have its largest sale in the logging camps of the northwest.

Wesley Everest's Last Stand.

We hear the wobblies discussing the coming raid.

"I hope to Jesus nothing happens," said the secretary.

"Wesley Everest laid down his few unsold papers, rolled a brown paper cigarette and smiled enigmatically over the empty seats in the general direction of the new One Big Union label on the front window. His closest friends say he was never afraid of anything in his life."

"Torn and defiant as a wind lashed reed,
"Wounded, he faced you as he

begins Chaplin's great sonnet to Wesley Everest.

It was a hero's death that is described in the prose narrative—Everett's last stand on the banks of the Chehalis River. The hall had been raided. Three Legionaires bit the dust. The mass of invaders broke thru bent on lynching the union men inside. Everest who ran outside, drew the fire on himself and saved the lives of his comrades.

"Having kept off his pursuers thus far the boy started boldly for the comparative security of the opposite shore, splashing the water violently as he waded out into the stream . . . Suddenly Everest seemed to change his mind and began to retrace his steps to the shore. Here he stood dripping wet in the tangled grasses to await the arrival of the mob bent on his destruction. Everest had lost his hat and his wet hair stuck to his forehead. His ammunition was nearly gone. Eye witnesses declare his face still wore a quizzical half-bantering smile when the mob overtook him. With his pistol held loosely in his rough hand Everest stood at bay, ready to make a last stand for his life."

Dale Hubbard, nephew of the lumber king who organized the mob, falls dead. Bullets gone, Everest battles with fists. The mob's fury vents itself on him. A gun barrel knocks his teeth out. A rope is thrown over him.

The night of torture and terror in the jail; the emasculation and lynching from Chehalis Bridge is told as only a strong man, wrung with the outrage of it, could tell it. This is the chapter of the Centralia story that must be told and retold, lest we forget.

A White Guard Leader.

"Tell the boys I died for my class," were Everest's last words as he was dragged out to mutilation and death.

Likewise the four white guard leaders who were shot down in the raid against the workers' hall died for their class—the employing class. This was recognized last summer by the late President Harding in one of his last official acts when he laid a wreath on the memorial to the four slain Legionaires, near Centralia.

"Warren O. Grimm came from a good family and was a small town aristocrat. Grimm was a lawyer, a college athlete and social lion. He had been with the American forces in Siberia and his chief bid for distinction was a noisy dislike for the Workers' and Peasants' Republic of Russia, and the I. W. W. which he termed the "American Bolsheviki." During the 1918 raid on the Centralia hall Grimm is said to have been dancing around "like a whirling dervish" and waving the American flag while the work of destruction was going on. Afterwards he became prominent in the American Legion and was the chief cat's paw for the lumber interests who were capitalizing the uniform to gain their own unholy ends. Personally he was a clean-cut modern young man."

Chaplin sketches the social background to Armistice Day, 1919, in clear cut strokes: The millions of fir and cedar trees "straight and majestic, with green and foam flecked streams purling here and there at their feet;" the lumber monopoly that stole this magnficent domain from the people; the lumberjacks who toiled 10 and 12 hours daily until their rebellious unionism won them some few of the good things of life and the hatred of their masters, with its culmination at Centralia.

"The lumberjack," says Chaplin, ". . . . is the perfect proletarian type—possessionless, homeless, rebellious. . . But as wage earners go, he is not the common but the uncommon type both as regards physical strength and cleanliness and mental alertness. He is generous to a fault and has all the qualities Lincoln and Whitman loved in men."

A Rebel Portrait Gallery.

So Ralph Chaplin says in the opening pages but he is too accurate an artist to see the individual I. W. W. loggers with whom this Centralia drama deals as "types." Each is reflected in his individual contour and light and shade. There is old Mike Sheehan, 64 at the time of the raid, born in Ireland and a stoker in the navy during the Spanish-American war who became a woodsman only in his latter years; Eugene Barnett and his sweetheart wife, who had gone into the timber game just to get some money to prove up his Idaho claim; Ray Becker, educated for the ministry; having "the zeal of a prophet and the courage of a lion;" O. C. "Commodore" Bland, the father of seven children and John Lamb, the father of five; James McInerny, whose neck was stretched all night by a rope while the inquisitors tried to make him turn stool pigeon; Britt Smith, hall secretary, 20 years a logger, who slept in the hall and watched it night and day; Bert Bland, one of the men who was posted on Seminary Hill during the fight; Loren Roberts, the unfortunate youth whose mind flew away during the night of torture and Bert Faulkner who was involved in the affair by accident; Tom Morgan, moral weakling who succumbed to the terror and turned stool pigeon as Rad Ike Brewer, one of the defenders of Matewan with Sid Hatfield.

Elmer Smith.

Elmer Smith stands in a still more individual light. Not that he is not heart and soul for their cause now as he was when he visited their hall and gave them the legal advise that they had a constitutional right to defend themselves. But because Elmer Smith is a revolutionist without the wage slave background. He is a lawyer—still a member of the Washington bar in spite of the conspiracy by lumber interests to disbar him—but so genuine a comrade of the boys in jumpers that not one of them would think of calling him anything but "Elmer." And physically he is a powerful giant who could give almost any lumberjack a tussle tho he insists he would not like to go up against tough old Mike Sheehan.

The legal analysis of the case is explained with more convincing detail than it has been explained before but this side of the case is of more importance to the outsider than it is to the rebel who is for the Centralia boys because they had the guts to fight back against the employers' gangsters and to inflict such a signal lesson that such raiding has ceased in the northwest.

After all, as Walt Whitman says:

Repulse Attack on International Workers' Aid

INFORMATION has reached the Committee for International Workers' Aid here that the Social Democratic leaders of Germany are planning a general attack on the International Workers' Relief Committee, of which the Committee for International Workers' Aid is the American branch. The coming of this attack was indicated as far back as two months ago at the congress of the Executive Committee of the Second International held in Luxemburg on February 15 to 17, when a veritable assault was made upon the International Workers' Relief Committee by the German Social Democratic leader, Adolph Brauns.

A circular letter has been sent out by the General Federation of German Trade Unions, which is controlled by the Social Democrats to all its local branch organizations stating that the International Workers' Relief Committee is a Communist organization and that "authentic" material about this organization is being gathered.

The real reason for the hostility of the Social Democratic leaders is the phenomenal sudden growth of the International Workers' Relief Committee, which has succeeded in establishing 150 new committees all over Germany, uniting a considerable group of trade unions and other workers' organizations. This development, the Social Democratic leaders consider a menace against their own position and they are preparing all kinds of plots against the International Workers' Relief Committee, including misstatements, garbled police reports a year old, "documents" which have been unsuccessfully used before.

The International Workers' Relief Committee has been giving medical relief to workers, has been constantly opening new soup kitchens, has been feeding the hungry, has provided milk for infants, has opened more and more nurseries, has cared for needy children, has provided for invalids, widows and orphans, has supplied aid for unemployed and striking workers. Thru this immense relief work the International Workers' Relief Committee has been keeping up the stamina of the working class of Germany in its resistance against the onslaughts of the capitalist class. The Social Democrats who are the lackeys of the capitalist class want to break the power of resistance of the working class and one means for doing this is to fight the International Workers' Relief Committee. The Social Democrats do not want to be behind the extreme reactionaries of Germany such as the monarchist government of Bavaria, which has been arresting relief workers and seizing money collected by the International Workers Relief Committee.

French Workers Pledge Aid.

The Social Democrats are especially incensed over the tremendous success of the congress of the German section of the International Relief Committee in Berlin on March 16, where, besides the delegates from all over Germany, there were representatives of many countries, including Camille Salles from Paris, who brought the assurance of solidarity from the French workers in spite of the imperialist Poincare government.

The Committee for International Workers' Aid, the American branch of the International Workers' Relief Committee is making every effort to speed up its part of the world-wide campaign for the relief of the suffering and battling working class of Germany.

RUSSIAN-JAPANESE TREATY IS EXPECTED SOON AS RESULT OF OFFICIAL PEKING CONVERSATIONS

TOKIO, Japan, May 20.—Russia and Japan seem to be nearing diplomatic negotiations thru the conversations carried on between L. M. Karakhan and Ambassador Yoshizawa, the official representatives of their respective nations at Peking, China. Both men have been given power to frame a treaty between the two nations if they can agree upon an adjustment of the points of difference between their respective governments.

Recognition of Soviet Russia is the chief obstacle to immediate formal treaty negotiations. The Vladivostok imprisonment incident, the Nokolaievsk massacre, and the Japanese interference in the island of Sakhalin are matters that are being carefully considered by the Japanese and Russian representatives.

Japan at present controls the northern half of Sakhalin island on which there is considerable oil. Russia has given the concession to this oil to Harry Sinclair, notorious American.

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

A nice little civil war is raging within the ranks of the Italian Fascisti. There are two main divisions, one called the "Savages" and the other "Legalists." The head of the "Legalists" is an old friend of Mussolini and one of the 52 original founders of the Black Shirts. It seems that he is getting tired of the bloodthirsty organization and editorially criticized the acts of violence perpetrated by the Mussolini heroes. For this his life was threatened by the "Savages" and Mussolini who was away on a political fence-building mission was compelled to return and settle the dispute. He did that by having the "Legalists" expelled from the Fascisti. It would not be surprising to see the two factions resort to arms in defense of their respective ambitions.

John Fitzpatrick has released all members of his Farmer-Labor Party from all obligations to cast their ballots for its candidates in the coming elections. While this looks at first sight like an act of generosity, we learn that there are no candidates running on this party's ticket and still more important, the party is placed in storage for the summer months. Whether it is ever destined to be separated from the moth balls again is a matter for profitless conjecture, but experience proves that political parties, unlike good wine do not improve in splendid isolation away from the maddening hustle and bustle of this topsy-turvy and complicated world, particularly when not even exercised occasionally.

Billy Sunday raves against sinners who refuse to come to Jesus but persist in living on this wicked earth, yet when fortune rapped at his door in the form of a rambunctious kidney, instead of letting the said kidney send him on his upward journey to see his heavenly meal ticket, the Rev. Sunday took a special train to Rochester to bring the offending organ back to normalcy. Rather remarkable what an aversion our preachers have to going to heaven when they are given a sporting chance. "Nearer my God to Thee" means nothing to them except a hymn chanted for the benefit of their pocketbooks.

Among the organizations listed in the All-American Conference to combat radical propaganda we find the American Federation of Labor, The American Defense Society, Hebrew Sheltering Immigrant Society, Knights of Columbus, National Catholic Welfare Council, etc. Rabbis, priests, labor fakers, capitalists and stool pigeons are joined together in an unholy alliance against the working class. This outfit claims to represent 20,000,000 Americans. But outside of a letterhead and Mr. Whitney of the American Defense Society the heterogenous collection of mental fossils who compose most of those organizations have as much influence on the course of human events as the Three Tailors of Tooley Street had on the history of England.

It is rumored in Washington that the impetus for the "united front" of these organizations comes from the "Ohio Gang" of grafters who attached themselves to the Harding administration and clung to Coolidge after Harding's death. While Daugherty was at his post Mr. Whitney and his stool pigeons had easy pickings but what with publicity and the need for political maneuvering Coolidge was obliged to dump the finks along with Daugherty and Burns. This compelled Whitney to do some real panhandling. The result is the calling together of a fake conference. The National Security League, The American Defense Society and other such organizations are in the business of jacking up the patriotism of the people of this country simply for the "jack" they can scare out of the bosses. Lately the latter have been tightening up their wallets and after the exposures in Washington it is not unlikely that a patriotic panhandler may have to show some real results before he succeeds in attaching some of the bankers' dough to himself.

This is a splendid labor movement we have, is it not? The American Federation of Labor in league with the most contemptible gang of scoundrels in existence. Gompers works hand in hand with the Department of Justice. Whitney, Gompers, Burns, Daugherty, Fred Marvin of the New York Commercial, the Socialist Party and the Jewish Daily Forward worked hand in hand against the radicals among the American labor organizations. What one of them missed the others provided. If Burns failed to pick up some story about Soviet Russia, Gompers or the Socialist Party supplied it. But they have fallen on evil days. In spite of their worst, Soviet Russia is forging ahead and the nations of Europe who were so impudent a few years ago are today practically begging Russia to do business with them. This is sad news for the American stool pigeons, but the worst is yet to come.

ILLINOIS MINERS BACK HOWAT

170 GREEK BOSSES GET COURT AID

Judge Friend Issues New Injunction

When the 17 injunctions issued by Judge Hugo Friend failed to stop the picketing of the Northside Greek Restaurants by the striking members of the Amalgamated Food Workers, the Greek bosses decided to band together and have just one association and one injunction try to stop the organization of the food workers.

Judge Friend has once more proved himself friend only to the Greek bosses by giving them another injunction.

170 Bosses Scared.

The injunction was given on May 19 to the "American Association of Greek Restaurant Keepers against the Amalgamated Food Workers (an independent labor union), Hotel and Restaurant Branch, Chicago." Union officials have just been served with the new injunction which is intended to prevent them from acting in over 170 Greek restaurants situated all over the city.

A. Askounis is president of the new association of the Greek bosses. He has a restaurant at the corner of N. Clark and Division streets and runs an extremely profitable real estate business on the side. John Papas is treasurer for the Greek bosses. He has three restaurants on the further north side.

Political Lawyers Lead Bosses.

According to the union officials, most of the restaurants included in the new injunction have never been approached with a union contract and some of the places are quite unqnown to them. Forty-four had contracts with the union. The Greek bosses, led by their counsel, Paul Demos and Felix J. Streyckmans, hope, the Amalgamated Food Workers say, to put an end to the union's fight for the six-day week and eight-hour day in the Greek restaurants of Chicago.

Fight Boosts Union.

Instead of stopping the work of the labor organization, the new injunction has actually stimulated interest in the union and many new members are coming in to join the fight for decent conditions in the Greek restaurants. Most of the workers in these restaurants are Greeks themselves and strongly resent their exploitation by their countrymen. They have to work seven days a week and 12 to 14 hours a day now.

The Amalgamated Food Workers held a big mass meeting last night at their headquarters, 214 N. State street, to consider what tactics to develop for the carrying on of their work and for the defeat of the Greek bosses' newest injunction.

Paul Demos one of the lawyers representing the Greek restaurant bosses told the DAILY WORKER that the main objection of the association he represented against the union is that the Amalgamated Food Workers' Union is not a "regular" labor organization. He said that they were only "pretending to be a labor organization."

"They have no connection with the Federation of Labor and never did have," he said. "Their whole plan is a conspiracy against the Greeks of this city."

Representatives of the union in answering the statements of Demos, said that their union is an independent industrial organization which admits to membership all workers in the lunch rooms and restaurants from the dish washers to the cashiers and the chefs. The reason attention has been paid especially to the Greek restaurants is because they pay very poor wages and work their help long hours and give them the poorest sort of food. The union is organizing the workers in the Greek restaurants because they are rebelling against the conditions imposed by their bosses not because the union has any feeling against the members of any nationality, union leaders say.

Morgan Dictates to France

A Great Victory!

The Illinois coal miners have spoken. They have declared for Alexander Howat and against the John L. Lewis-Frank Farrington reactionary regime in the United Mine Workers of America.

It was an historic moment in the Peoria Convention when the resolution went thru, practically unanimously, demanding "a fair and impartial trial for Howat" at a special convention.

* * * *

That is all that Howat demanded at Indianapolis at the international convention in February.

But when Alex Howat tried to mount the stage at Tomlinson Hall, to tell his story to the delegates, he was pushed off the platform by the gunmen and thugs of the Lewis dictatorship in the union.

Lewis was all-powerful at Indianapolis, behind the guns of his own thugs, just as he was at the Scranton convention, in the anthracite fields, and at the Pittsburgh convention of western Pennsylvania miners.

But the district conventions of Kansas and Michigan, and now Illinois, the largest in the miners' jurisdiction, has taken its stand with Howat, in the fight for the special convention to see that justice is done to the bravest fighters in the organization.

Howat was in jail in Kansas when he was expelled by Lewis without trial. Howat was in jail in his fight on the tyrannical Kansas industrial court, fostered by Governor Allen.

Since Howat went to jail and came out again, Governor Allen has been defeated for re-election in Kansas, the industrial court, weapon of the open shop bosses against the labor unions, has been put on the shelf, and now Lewis, with Farrington, is before the bar of the miners' union, to answer for their crimes, the biggest crime being the building of an alliance with the mine owners against the most courageous elements in the miners' union.

* * * *

At first Frank Farrington, president of the Illinois coal miners, stood with Howat against Lewis. But Lewis took Farrington up on the mountain, showed him the cross of gold, secured his pledge to forget their differences, and since then Lewis and Farrington have been as twin brothers against all progress in the fight of the miners against the mine owners.

* * * *

Farrington said he had to quit Howat because Howat met with the Progressive Miners in Pittsburgh now almost a year ago. This was a crime in Farrington's eyes.

Farrington, in order to bolster up his tottering position, has used all the arguments against Howat and the Progressive Miners, that Gompers uses against the militants in the American Federation of Labor, that Sigman, in the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, and Kauffman in the Furriers' Union, uses against the vanguard in these two organizations; that reaction in all labor unions uses to make war upon all progress.

Howat is for the workers. Farrington is for the political agents of the bosses and the big capitalists.

* * * *

The coal miners' delegates at Peoria knew all these things. All the soft and hard words of International President Lewis, in a two hour speech, couldn't move them against the facts they knew. All cajoling of Farrington, and his agent Mercer, could not budge them. They had learned their lesson well, the lesson that the strength of the union is built upon the intelligence and the will to act of the broad masses of the membership, and not upon the hesitating, standpat policies of a vascillating leadership, that seeks to curry favor with the employers at the expense of the interests of the rank and file.

It was a great day when the United Mine Workers of Illinois, a district with 100,000 members, stood with Howat and progress, and against Lewis, Farrington and reaction.

It was a great day not only for Illinois, but for the coal miners thruout the whole nation. The fight for the new day will now be carried forward everywhere that coal is mined with a greater enthusiasm than ever before. Howat is up in the front with the union's standards, helping carry the colors of workingclass emancipation in the right direction. Lewis and Farrington are being pushed to the rear and into the discard.

Thus does organized labor make progress. Thus does the Miners' Union march on to greater victories, to more magnificent triumphs, both against the enemies without, and against the enemies within.

ST. PAUL, May 21.—Endorsement and participation in the June 17th national convention of the farmer-labor movement is recommended to all of the 26 divisions in Minnesota of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers by the brotherhood's state legislative board. Chairman W. W. Royster of the board is a candidate for governor in the Farmer-Labor primaries.

A delegation from the engineers then called on William Mahoney of the June 17th committee on arrangements and pointed out that "Labor," the national publication of the standard railway unions, had make a mistake in attacking the St. Paul convention in its columns. They asked that the matter be dropped and that harmony and success for June 17th be the watchword from now on.

NEW CABINET GETS ORDERS FROM "J. P."

"Socialist" Herriot Is Told What's What

PARIS, May 21.—J. Pierpont Morgan, head of the international banking house of Morgan, will dictate the policies of the new French government.

The first step towards formation of a cabinet to succeed that of Premier Poincare was taken at the Elysee palace today.

Herriott Gets the Dope.

President Millerand informed Edouard Herriot concerning engagements France made to J. P. Morgan in exchange for the loan that saved the franc from collapse a few months ago.

Before Herriot, leader of the radical socialists, is formally invited to form a cabinet, Millerand wants to know the attitude of his party towards the agreement with Morgan. It is also necessary for the next premier of France to understand what France has promised the American banker.

The socialist statesman who probably will succeed Poincare, went on foot to the president's palace. Premier Poincare drove up and a moment later ex-Premier Painleve, peace maker of the left arrived.

The three were closeted with the president, who had spent the morning consulting with his financial advisors regarding the exchange situation and with M. Doumergue, president of the senate.

"My line of conduct is clear," the socialist leader said upon reaching Paris, the first time he has come to the capital since the elections. "I wish to follow out the logical conclusions of the elections and constitute a cabinet from the bloc of the left.

"My policy will be open. There will be no secret communications. I will examine the situation tonight with my party's committee. France has clearly indicated her political leanings and I will respect them."

When Money Talks.

After the conference at the Elysee, it was officially announced that Herriot and ex-Premier Painleve had given their pledge that rigorous equilibrium of the budget would be considered an absolute necessity, no matter what government succeeded that of M. Poincare.

Leaving the palace, Herriot said: "We spoke only of France."

This was taken to mean that the composition of the new cabinet was not discussed at this time and that the convention had been confined to Millerand's expose of the financial situation.

The Franc Is Skidding.

The condition of her exchange is the most vital thing to France right now and already the franc has shown signs of skidding. The financial decrees and the increased taxes—plus a very important loan of some $40,000,000 from Morgan—arrested a recent downward plunge of the franc. With a new government, socialist in character, coming into office, the financial stability achieved temporarily by Premier Poincare, may be lost.

According to the Matin, J. P. Morgan and the financial syndicates which aided France during the recent crisis of the franc, wish to know just what the policy of the next government will be. These bankers, says the Matin, had counted upon France pursuing a policy of strict equilibrium of the budget and now want to know if the new regime will renew assurances on this point.

President Millerand was requested to inform Herriot and Painleve, in the presence of Poincare, how matters stood.

The premier called a cabinet council for today and the president summoned a ministerial council for tomorrow, all part of the elaborate machinery of a change of regime in France.

Here is the resolution which the Illinois Miners' convention passed with only half a dozen dissenting votes, rebuking the Lewis-Farrington machine for their unfairness to Howat, and demanding a special international convention for the purpose of giving Howat a fair trial.

The issues were clearly put before the delegates. Lewis made excuses to the delegates as to why he had not succeeded in putting into effect the rank and file platform of the progressive miners.

Howat stood squarely with the rank and file for the organization of the non-union coal fields, for the six-hour day, for an independent working class labor party, and for the complete progressive miners platform. The cheers and enthusiasm and votes of the Illinois miners went to Howat. Here is the resolution:

The Howat Resolution.

Belleville, Ill., February 20, 1924.

To the Thirtieth Consecutive and Fifth Biennial Convention of District No. 12, United Mine Workers of America:

WHEREAS, The right of all members to a fair and impartial trial when charges are filed against them is a fundamental principle of trades unionism which must be jealously guarded if labor organizations are to prosper and avoid serious and disastrous internal dissention, and

WHEREAS, It is a well known fact that when the officials of District No. 14 were removed from office in October, 1921, and their charter was revoked, that no charges were preferred against Howat and his associate officers in accordance with the Constitution, nor have such been filed since and it is also well known that Howat and his associates have never been accorded a fair trial, despite the fact that overwhelming numbers of the membership desire that this measure of justice be accorded them, and

WHEREAS, When John L. Lewis arbitrarily adjourned the 29th Consecutive and 6th Biennial Convention on February 2, 1924, before the Howat case could be properly considered, not only was a great injustice done to the loyal fighters involved but also the seeds of discontent and division were sown broadcast in our organization to such an extent as to threaten to disorganize and disrupt it, and

WHEREAS, The only way this great controversy which threatens the life and health of our organization, can be settled, is to thresh it out before a convention; therefore be it,

RESOLVED, That District No. 12 of U. M. W. of A. demand that a Special Convention of the United Mine Workers of America be called in accordance with Article 13, Section 1, same to be called within three months for special purpose of giving a fair and impartial trial to Alexander Howat and his associates; and be it further

RESOLVED, That in as much as it requires that five districts must request a Special Convention before it can be called, that copies of this resolution be sent immediately to all the District Organizations with a request that they join with us in this demand for a special convention.

Signed,
JACOB PETRI, President
JOSEPH PETRI, Secretary.

Garment Workers' Delegates Return From Conventions

The Chicago delegates from the two conventions of the clothing workers which just closed in Boston and Philadelphia are expected to begin returning to town today. Many of the delegates to the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union convention in Boston, went from there to New York to confer with officers of the International about the strike situation here. Meyer Perlstein who is in charge of the Chicago strike of dressmakers is expected to return to Chicago this morning.

By KARL REEVE.

PEORIA, Ill., May 21.—The Illinois Miners' Convention here almost unanimously passed a resolution demanding a special convention of the United Mine Workers of America, to be called within three months, for the special purpose of giving Alexander Howat, of Kansas, a fair trial and rebuking President John L. Lewis for arbitrarily adjourning the last national convention in Indianapolis, Ind.

After listening for almost two hours to President Lewis defend himself and the international officers of the Mine Workers' Union, the convention, with few dissenting votes went on record in favor of Howat, and administered the first severe defeat since the start of the convention to the Lewis-Farrington machine.

Demand Impartial Trial.

The resolution, "Resolves, that District Twelve, of the United Mine Workers of America, demand that a special convention of the U. M. W. A. be called in accordance with article 13, section 1, same to be called within three months for the special purpose of giving Alexander Howat and his associates a fair and impartial trial."

It declares that, "It is a well known fact that when the officials of District 14 were removed from office in October, 1921, and their charter revoked, that no charges were preferred against Howat and his associate officers in accord with the constitution, nor have such charges been filed since.

It is also well known that Howat and his associates have never been accorded a fair trial, despite the fact that overwhelming numbers of the membership desire that this measure of justice be accorded them.

The resolution further declares that, "When John L. Lewis arbitrarily adjourned the 29th consecutive and biennial convention on February 2, 1924, before the Howat case could be properly considered, not only was a great injustice done the loyal fighters involved, but also the seeds of discontent and division were sown broadcast in our organization."

Howat's Enemies Are Timid.

In presenting a substitute motion, the resolutions committee did not dare to declare themselves against Howat in the face of the overwhelming rank and file sentiment for him. Delegate George Mercer, in presenting the substitute, declared that "altho Howat made mistakes, the entire resolutions committee is in sympathy with him."

The substitute gave the impression that the Kansas matter was ended with the smashing of the Kansas industrial court law, and declared in the belief that every union member had a right to a fair and impartial trial.

Mercer, in defending the weak and meaningless substitute, which was finally defeated by a vote of 185 to 261, took the typical Farrington position, behind well sounding phrases which the machine has now worn threadbare. Mercer pleaded for "peace" and "tranquillity," "good-feeling" and "solidarity." He told the delegates they would appear "ridiculous" before the nation if they voted down his substitute. He said, "Wait until the Howat case is decided by the international executive board. Don't be hasty or premature."

Thompson Wrecks Machine.

The Farrington machine was blasted, however, when Delegate Freeman Thompson, Springfield sub-district president, told the convention, "Mercer pleads for the law of our organization. He pleads that the constitution of the mine workers be upheld. But John L. Lewis did not uphold the constitution when he deposed Alex Howat as president of the Kansas

FARRINGTON HAS WORKING CLASS REPORTER BARRED

Lets Capitalist Scribes Scribble For Operators

PEORIA, Ill., May 21.—Enraged by the stinging defeat and severe drubbing it suffered yesterday at the hands of the delegates on the question of calling a special international convention of the United Mine Workers to reconsider its action on the Howat case, the Farrington machine today launched a vicious counter-attack against the left wing and progressive delegates by forcing thru a motion to request the correspondent of the DAILY WORKER to leave the sessions.

Thruout the convention the DAILY WORKER has proved a steel rod to the militant delegates determined to make the convention respond to the needs and demands of the rank and file of the United Mine Workers of Illinois.

The move to bar the correspondent of the DAILY WORKER, the only labor daily represented at the convention press table, was carried, after a stormy debate, by a vote of 234-169.

Farrington and his agents blamed the DAILY WORKER, which has been carrying complete stories of the sessions and which has been widely read by the delegates attending the convention, for the one-sided defeat his machine and Lewis suffered yesterday on the Howat question.

Farrington Begins Attack.

The attack on the working class paper was introduced by a sham attack on the Associated Press. Farrington opened the afternoon session by reading a letter from the "A. P." correspondent insisting that the district president was wrong in an earlier criticism he had made against the "A. P." despatches.

Farrington explained to the convention that he had no desire to do the Associated Press correspondent any injustice but that he was goin to complain if the news of the con-

RUHR MINERS REFUSE TO ALLOW SCABS TO COME NEAR THE MINES; STRIKE SITUATION DESPERATE

BERLIN, May 21.—The tension owing to the increasing violence accompanying the Ruhr strike is increasing. Communist patrols are picketing the mines in many sections. Miners are using force where necessary to prevent scabs from entering the mines. More than 600,000 coal diggers are now idle.

The Berlin government is helpless to cope with the situation. Coming on the heels of the break with Russia—only a commercial break it is true—the Ruhr strike is one of those straws that may be the last the German capitalist camel's back can withstand without breaking.

Police are lining up everywhere against the strikers. The agents of the capitalists cannot make much headway in the Ruhr where the workers are solid against the long workday which the fake boss arbitration board handed to them.

Young Communists are taking an active part in the strike. Their pickets are everywhere and prevent scabs from entering the mines on any pretext even for the purpose of keeping the pumps going.

McLEAN AID EXPOSES BIG BURNS PLOT

Organized Frame-up of Daugherty Committee

WASHINGTON, May 21.—Details of a plot engineered by the Department of Justice to frame up on the members of the Daugherty investigating committee were made public today by W. O. Duckstein, private secretary to Edward B. McLean, editor and publisher of the Washington Post and right hand man of the Calvin Coolidge administration.

The orders sent out by Daugherty and Burns, when the investigation began was "get something on every hostile member of the committee."

Wheeler Is Feared.

Wheeler was considered the most dangerous, so he was tackled first. Inkling of approaching breaks on the part of the underlings in the Daugherty-Burns conspiracy was mainly responsible for the decision of Burns to quit. While Burns was in charge of the Investigation Bureau of the D. of J. it was impossible to get to the bottom of the conspiracy.

There was another condition to be eckoned with and that was the ability of the notorious frame-up artist to make it unhealthy for anyone who made a clean breast. Now that he is out minor cogs in the "Ohio Ring" are squealing.

Duckstein knows as much about the secret doings of Daugherty and Company as any man in Washington. His wife was Burns' private secretary and had access to the secret code. As is usual in such cases the famous "defective" confided to Mrs. Duckstein, intimate details of the crooked game, that were considered too sacred for the ears of outsiders. And, as is also usually the case, when Burns fell from grace into disgrace and was no longer surrounded with the glamor of office, the female spy is reported to have considered herself under no further obligation to hold Burns' confidences inviolate.

Probe to Go On.

According to Duckstein, who took the witness stand today, the agents of the D. of J. who had charge of the plot to frame the senators, were P. J. O'Brien and Walter Petit. In reply to a query of Wheeler's, Duckstein admitted that O'Brien informed him they were investigating the committee. They had a crew with them he said, including wire tappers, second story workers, shadows, confidence men and professional safe crackers. "They were investigating you, Senator Wheeler and Senator Brookhart."

While it was reported here recently, that the Daugherty committee would terminate its work at an early date, it is now doubtful, as every day brings new revelations, surpassing in interest anything that was unearthed since the Fall-fruit telegrams were made public involving Coolidge in the oil scandal.

HOLLAND URGED TO RECOGNIZE SOVIET RUSSIA

Resume Negotiations, Demands Communist

(Special to The Daily Worker)

AMSTERDAM, Holland, May 21.—Van Ravensteyn, a Communist member of the second chamber, severely criticized the foreign minister, Van Karnebeek, for his part in breaking off the Berlin negotiations between Holland and Soviet Russia. The Communist member questioned the government to determine what state the relations of the governments were in at present.

"Greedy Merchant."

Van Ravensteyn pointed out that Holland could not do without her trade with Russia, especially if France recognizes the Soviet government. He showed that Holland could not afford isolation. The United States, he declared, could exist without Russia, but Holland needed the Russian republic.

The Communist charged that the foreign minister had acted like a greedy merchant at the Berlin proceedings and had not been willing to make the least concession to the Soviet government, which had shown willingness to meet Holland half way.

Pirate Heir Discovered.

LIMA, Ohio, May 21.—One of our heirs of Sir Francis Drake, British pirate, was discovered here. His name is Henry Smith who so far forgot his ancestral dignity that he degenerated into a patternmaker. The other heirs of the famous thief are in business. Besides $18,000,000 in cash, the thirteen known heirs will share castles, crown jewels and much valuable real estate between them. The stock of honest progenitors has gone down like a plummet in Lima, since Smith's good fortune became known.

Lewis-Farrington Clique Meets Crushing Defeat

miners when Howat was in jail, and expelled him.

"The constitution provides that charges shall first be filed with the district where the accused is a member and this was not done. If we do not call a special convention, Alex will continue to remain outside the miners' union, where he has been for the last two and one-half years. Alexander Howat is outside the union, not because he committed any crime, but because he had the guts to run for international president—and he polled a large vote, too.

"Mercer tells you his substitute will do Howat the most good, but Howat has just told me the passing of this substitute will mean nothing to him—it will do him no good. The resolutions committee knows that the overwhelming majority of our membership wants the reinstatement of Alexander Howat. If the international officials have kept Howat lingering outside the union for two and one-half years, they will do nothing at this time to put him back in the union. I am convinced that unless you call this special convention, which you have a perfect right to do, Alex Howat will remain outside the miners union. If the substitute passes it will mean nothing—except that we have carried out the wishes of these same men who have kept him out of the union for so long.

"Lewis told you this morning of the dirty, rotten ruthlessness of the coal operators. As he was speaking I sat back and wondered if you boys remembered what Lewis had done to Alexander Howat."

In answering the plea of the resolutions committee that no decisive action be taken until the decision of the international executive board, Delegate John Hindmarsh said that, "The statement made by Farrington some time ago that nothing would satisfy Lewis but Howat's blood, is a correct one. Howat never will receive a fair and impartial trial at the hands of the international executive board. If they intended to give it to him, they would have done it long ago. We must force the international executive board to realize that we, the rank and file membership, are still determined that Alexander Howat shall have a fair trial. The only way to get that trial is by the calling of a special international convention.

"Alex has shown us that he is still not afraid to dig coal. He has shouldered a pick and again works at the coal face because he wants to get back into the union. Remember who Alexander Howat is. He is a stalwart warrior of the best type in the miners' organization. His record proves that there is no man more sincere and determined, and honored by the membership then Howat. No man has sacrificed more for the coal miners than has Howat."

Delegate Joe Tumulty declared that, "A crime has been committed by John L. Lewis in expelling Howat when he was behind the bars in the interests of the Kansas miners."

The overwhelming victory of the rank and file membership is all the more significant in the face of the fact that Farrington had set the stage for the defeat of the Howat resolutions. With Howat's speech disposed of on Monday, Farrington put Lewis up to talk Tuesday morning. But Lewis fell down on the job.

Many of the delegates declared that Lewis made gross mis-statements, especially about the English miners, but Lewis talked up until the time for adjournment and only a few questions were permitted by Farrington, who then adjourned the convention until 2 o'clock. After dinner the delegates attempted to correct some of the statements of Lewis, but Farrington denied them the floor.

Howat With Rank and File.

Lewis was not able to hold the attention of the delegates. Many were reading newspapers while he spoke. There was almost no applause for Lewis in direct contrast to the loud cheers for Howat. Lewis had made a speech of excuses as to why he did not carry out the progressive miners' program of a six-hour day, and organization of the unorganized. Lewis had attacked the newspaper reporters.

Howat, on the other hand, stood squarely with the rank and file on the progressive miners' platform. Howat had stood against the international and district twelve officials for the formation of a working class farmer-labor movement. And the convention, with the issues clearly placed before them for the first time, gave their overwhelming support to Howat and repudiated John L. Lewis.

Farrington, true to his daily practice, again tried to incite the delegates to violence against the press representatives. This time the target for Farrington's attack was the Peoria local papers. Farrington has been extremely active in trying to get the press to send out news which he wants sent out. He again elicited cries from his henchmen on the floor of "Throw them out," and before adjourning he declared if there is one more press report that does not please him he will make the offending reporter leave the convention.

It is generally understood that Farrington is soon going to attempt to have the DAILY WORKER representatives put out of the convention.

Urge Beer Referendum.

The convention voted to put the question of the amendment of the Volstead law so as to allow light wines and beers to a referendum vote of the membership. A resolution was passed urging all local unions to send delegates to the next convention of the State Federation of Labor. A resolution to operate a labor bank was voted down by the convention.

A resolution instructing the district executive board to demand the abolition of questionaires and the abolition of discrimination in hiring was referred to the district executive board. It was brot out in the debate on this resolution that all thru Illinois the coal operators have tried to use the unemployment among the miners to weed out the older men in the industry and those who are most active organizers.

Farrington explained that this matter had already been ruled on by the district executive board which decided that the only questions which the men must answer when seeking employment are those directly concerned with the compensation laws. Farrington instructed the miners that they do not have to submit to physical examination when seeking employment.

vention was not properly reported. He objected to the statement that Howat had defeated Farrington.

The case against the representative of the Associated Press, was then promptly dropped. No motion was made to unseat him. It had served its purpose. The drive on the DAILY WORKER then started.

Delegate Sage, a Farrington man, got the floor and made a motion that the representative of the DAILY WORKER withdraw from the convention.

Admits He Is Payroller.

Delegate Freeman Thompson interrupted and said: "Is not Delegate Sags the very man who is complained of in the DAILY WORKER as an appointee of President Farrington?

"Were you not appointed a member of the scale committee by Farrington?" continued Thompson.

"Yes," admitted Sage.

Crooked Count Suspected.

When Farrington announced that the vote was 234 to 169 there was demand for a roll call from delegates who felt that Farrington had miscounted the votes.

The motion to ask the DAILY WORKER reporter to withdraw was not in order because the question for discussion on the floor was a resolution asking for change in compensation laws.

The DAILY WORKER reporter withdrew. Capitalist reporters were allowed to stay and continue scribbling for the operators.

Green Discusses Unemployment.

In the morning session, William Green, international secretary-treasurer of the mine workers, said he stood appalled at the specter of unemployment among the coal fields. He mentioned as one solution the inauguration of a six hour work day basis, but he admitted there is no practical solution for this depressing period of unemployment.

He said he hates to stand by and see stern economic laws, over whose working we have no control, make many Illinois mining communities deserted and poverty stricken.

"The situation," he said, "is in part due to the over expansion of the coal industry during and after the war. We will have to suffer until our organization can think of and work out a solution, as the unemployment problem must be solved. Our ills are not due to the mine workers, but due to the lack of organization in the non-union coal fields."

Wage Reduction Won't Help.

Green spoke of the past accomplishments of the union, but admitted the impossibility of further organizing non-union fields and solving unemployment. He said he is committed to the belief that a reduction in wages of the miners will not bring about a solution of the unemployment problem.

A substitute of the resolutions committee for the resolutions presented by local unions on a new Illinois compensation law to be like the Ohio compensation law is now before the House. The substitute ignores the good Ohio law and merely urges the legislative department to try for the enactment of better compensation and state insurance law and commends them for securing the rotten Illinois compensation law.

Farrington again denounced all the newspapermen and threatened their expulsion. Green, like Lewis, Murray, Walker and the others, admitted their bankruptcy. They dwelt on past achievements and pleaded for peace and harmony. They said in effect: "Be satisfied with what's already accomplished," but were pessimistic about the future.

UNITED FRUIT COMPANY LOSES IN LATEST HONDURAN REVOLUTION

(By The Federated-Press)

WASHINGTON, May 21.—Honduran revolutionists having failed to run away when American marines were sent inland to the capital to guard foreign residents and interests, Secretary Hughes has arranged for early recognition of the Tosta provisional government at Tegucigalpa. He has authorized the American minister, together with the ministers from the four remaining states of Central America, to pledge to the provisional government their "moral support" toward the restoration of constitutional stability."

This revolution threw out of Honduras one group of United Fruit Company politicans, and disturbed the loans which had been settled on the necks of the peons. No report is available as to whether Tosta will be amenable to the bankers and United Fruit, in exchange for recognition.

BADGER STATE SENATOR CLEARS AIR "A LITTLE"

Robert LaFollette Now Senator of Doubt

WASHINGTON, May 21.—Senator LaFollette has just returned to the Capitol after a brief sojourn at Atlantic City in an effort to regain his health.

The Wisconsin senator, as usual, is not talking much for the press. But judging from the talk of his closest lieutenants the atmosphere of mystery and doubt as to his plans is clearing.

According to one intimately associated with LaFollette for some time, the senator from Wisconsin has about made up his mind that he will not head a new third party before the elections and will rather run as an independent.

The DAILY WORKER learns from reliable sources that LaFollette plans to move for the organization of a third party only if the election results secured by him as an independent warrant it in his judgment. "Fighting Bob" feels that he would not gain much in the way of votes if he would organize definitely into a new party before the elections.

On the other hand, it is his opinion that he can poll a much bigger vote for the presidency as an independent and then utilize the election support accorded him for the launching of a new party.

This policy of postponing definite action has brought dissatisfaction amongst some of LaFollette's supporters. While the senator was in Atlantic City some of his friends and political allies conferred with him, about his plans. LaFollette's decision to run only as an independent has temporarily, at least, lost him some of his supporters often classed as independent democrats.

An outstanding figure in the latter group has recently declared himself for Al Smith because of his conviction that the Wisconsin senator would not make a clear fight in the coming presidential race.

Needless Precautions.

NEW YORK, May 21.—The most reliable detectives on duty in the "Roaring Forties" section of New York, will be detailed to protect delegates and visitors to the Democratic convention from a horde of prostitutes who are reported to be concentrating on the American metropolis from all parts of the world, prepared to make an honest dollar even at the cost of Democratic virtue. It is more likely, however, that the police will be more often called to protect the prostitutes from the Demo-

KLAN FACTIONS SPLIT INDIANA G. O. P. MEET

Convention Scraps On National Delegates

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 21.—Republicans of Indiana opened their state convention today with every prospect of a strenuous fight between delegates representing the discordant elements of the Ku Klux Klan. Every effort is being made to restore harmony." State Chairman Walb acted the role of peacemaker.

The first tilt between the rival groups came in caucusing over the election of delegates-at-large to the national convention. A report leaked out of a caucus of old guard leaders that only friends of Senator Watson, who would back him for the nomination for vice-president, would find a berth on the delegation to Cleveland.

Imperial Wizard Whizzes In.

The arrangement met the approval of the Klan element, headed by H. W. Evans, imperial wizard, who journeyed here from Atalnta to be on hand for the state convention, and Walter Bossert, imperial representative.

In the camp of the Stephenson faction of the Klan, however, bitter resentment was aroused by the move to bring the Watson and Bossert elements into an alliance.

The principal battle ground between the Klansmen will be on delegates-at-large to the national convention and on selection of nominees for a few of the state offices.

Gifford Ernest Postpones Meet Of Sham Part

Gifford Ernest's Incorporated Farmer-Labor Party has postponed the convention-conference which it had called to meet in Springfield, May 24-25. The Illinois LaFollette-for-President Club, which was to hold a meeting at the same time and place, has also called off its meeting.

No date for the holding of the postponed convention-conference has been decided on. In a statement to the newspapers announcing the calling off of the convention, Gifford Ernest says it was done in order to permit more unions and organizations to send delegates. The statement also praises the action of the Chicago Federation of Labor for going back to the A. F. of L.'s political policy. Ernest's statement says that action leaves his party as the only Farmer-Labor party in Illinois. That statement completely ignores the Farmer-Labor Party, which was organized in Peoria Sunday and which represents tens of thousands of organized workers and farmers of the state.

The LaFollette-for-President Club gives the same reason for delaying its meeting as does Ernest's party.

Goose-step Tramples Art Radical.

BERKELEY, Cal.—The Goose Step has triumphed once more at the University of California. After several years of conflict, Samuel J. Hume, famous all over the country for the artistic standards of the plays he produced at the university's Greek theatre, has been forced to resign and his position as professor of dramatic art and literature has been abolished. Hume didn't care for the Main Street type of play, and the university Babbitts were frequently shocked by the advanced views of the dramas he put on.

Ludendorf Is Right.

COOLIDGE CHANGED MIND SO OFTEN THAT HE GOT A SORE NECK

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, May 21.—A wild yell of derision for Coolidge went up from the floor of the House, Saturday afternoon, when the presidential veto of the soldier bonus bill was overruled by 4 to 1. It was recognized as the most crushing defeat the president had yet suffered, and as a portent of more defeats to come.

White House spokesmen at once set afloat a report that Coolidge had no intention of vetoing the immigration bill. Instead, he would fail to sign it, and let it become law by default. This would square him with both sides.

From Japanese quarters came the report that Ambassador Hanihara suspects Secretary Hughes of having tricked him, in asking for a letter giving frankly the views of Japan as to exclusion, and then making that letter public at a moment when it would do the most damage to Japanese friendship. There seems no doubt that Hughes initiated the Hanihara letter, that it was cabled to Tokio for approval and was accepted as being confidential, and that it then became public without Hanihara's consent. President Coolidge then went to the California primary as an "exclusion" advocate, and after he won the primary he tried to please the Japanese. He has pleased neither side, on his present record.

His stand has been similarly unfortunate, since he advocated the bonus in Massachusetts and fought it here.

Packwood At Inquest Next Friday

The American Legion and every other militaristic organization in the country is honored by the membership of Lawrence Packwood, the Chicagoan responsible for holding up of the inquest over the body of John Bajur, who, on the evidence of reliable witnesses was last Saturday shot to death without warning by Dewey Norman, Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad detective, for the crime of taking a few rotten potatoes to keep his family alive. Packwood's connections with sword-rattling bodies was announced with due pride by his wife at their office at 6426 Stony Island avenue.

Packwood's letter to the coroner in charge of the inquest, asking the postponement of the inquest until he could be present to defend Norman, was written upon the request of a Legion member who notified him that a member of the organization, Dewey Norman, was in trouble.

Packwood is undertaking the defense of Norman as a constructive, educational supplement to his goose-stepping activities at Midland college, where he is studying law. He will appear at the Desplaines street police station on Friday morning at 10 o'clock to defend his club-fellow.

Dewey has been charged with manslaughter and his case will be continued until May 27.

Garment Bosses Convene.

The International Garment Manufacturers' Association in convention at the Hotel La Salle, protested against the use of prison-made garments. One of the bosses said that the association advocated the government using prison-made clothes for the prisoners. Chicago manufacturers involved in the ladies' garment strike, are attending the big bosses' convention.

Nathan Bosin Removed By Perlstein

The International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union officials in Chicago may or may not change their attitude toward the expelled members who cooperated with them to carry on the strike of garment workers. Meyer Perlstein, who is in charge of the strike and who is the recognized spokesman for the union officials, said yesterday to the DAILY WORKER that he was not prepared to make a statement about it.

But, Monday when Perlstein got back to Chicago, he wired Nathan Bosin, one of the expelled members who has been organizing the workers in the Isenberg garment shops in Waukegan, to return to Chicago at once. Bosin returned and Perlstein told him he wanted him to return to work in a garment shop here in Chicago. In place of Bosin, Perlstein sent Sam Letterman to Waukegan to take charge of the organization Bosin had built up.

Bosin's Fine Work.

In Waukegan Bosin managed to get the workers of the Isenberg shop to go on strike and stop making garments sent from struck shops in Chicago. He organized and lead the picketing. When the bosses went into court and asked for an injunction Bosin managed to have the issuance of the injunction refused. Again the bosses asked for an injunction and again they were defeated. The same thing happened when they asked for an injunction the third time. Now Bosin has been recalled from his work and a "safe" right winger put in his place.

The expelled members of the union were asked by the strike committee to come back and help the union just the day before the strike was called. As a result of the activities of the expelled members in behalf of the strike most of the delegates from the Chicago locals were instructed to vote for reinstatement.

What attitude will be taken by the union officials to the expelled members and their co-operation in the strike will probably not become known till those who went to the Boston convention return to the city and try to take up their strike work.

WOMEN DENIED PARADE PERMIT; DEMONSTRATE

Police Halt New York Workingclass Council

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, May 21.—The United Council of Workingclass Women held a great demonstration in Rutgers Square Saturday, when their parade to the City Hall was prevented by the lack of a permit.

Slogans were carried by the local councils such as, "Will the workers on Allen St. have to pay real estate sharks for Sunshine?" "Do away with fire-trap tenements," "More playgrounds—less accidents," "The only way to be safe is to Organize!" "Demand City-built houses to be rented to workers at cost."

Police Forbid Collection.

The police were very hostile. They were out in full force and Captain McKensey himself, was in control continuously. He forbade the selling of 5-cent stamps to help defray the expenses, and the taking up of a collection. He even forbade a donation for the Council. When the secretary informed the crowd that they have a full right to donate their hard-earned money to whom they pleased, a patrol wagon appeared on the Square, as tho dropped from the sky.

The women were not a bit frightened and a number of them brought donations to the committee voluntarily. They are determined to continue their good work, regardless of the obstacles.

The women were very dissappointed when they learned that the parade to City Hall would not take place. It had been planned by the United Council of Workingclass Women about four months ago.

The secretary of the council applied for a permit which was not denied until the day of the demonstration. She was told that the Chief Inspector refused to sign the permit. When asked why the permit was denied, "No reasons," was the cold reply. The secretary then asked to see the Chief, and the answer again cold, "You can't see him."

Women Still After Mayor.

A letter was sent to the mayor, asking him to receive a committee of the marchers on Saturday afternoon at 3:30 p. m., but there wasn't even an answer. The women are still determined to see the mayor to present to him their demand for city-bu[illegible] houses to be rented to workers at cost.

The United Council of Workingclass Women asks the workers' aid to go on with the work. Show your protests! Send as much as you can. Get your neighbors to contribute.

All checks, money orders, etc., should be sent to Kate Gitlow, secretary-treasurer, 127 University Place, New York City.

Die Hards Will Sign With Equity; Fall To Fighting About Jack

NEW YORK, May 21.—Now that the Producing Managers' Association has agreed to sign up with the Equity on a four to one basis, the two managers' groups have fallen to scraping among themselves about the division of the treasury of the Producing Managers.

The Producing Managers were the hard boiled guys who said they would not settle with the Equity. A group of managers withdrew from that organization and formed the Managers' Protective Association and signed with the union. The fellows who withdrew from the older outfit want to split up the money in the treasury and the old fellows don't want to split.

TO PROTECT THE LANDLORDS AND FINANCIAL INSTITUTIONS AGAINST RENT DROP, BUILDING BOOM HALTED

By LELAND OLDS
(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

Halt of the building boom in order to protect big financial institutions against a fall in rents and collapse of inflated real estate values,can be predicted from facts reported by the National Association of Real Estate boards

The association states that rents have been stabilized for houses and apartments in three-quarters of the principal cities of the country and that a downward trend has appeared in 16 per cent of the cities.

The high level at which this stabilization has occurred is revealed in the association's statement. The least desirable living quarters in the least desirable locations, it says, can still be obtained in any sized city as low as $4 a room per month. But the average for accommodations which are barely desirable is $10 a room. The average monthly rental of first class living quarters ranges from $15 to $25 a room, according to the size of the city.

This means that a worker desiring a decent home in which to raise his family must pay an average of $40 a month if a 4-room flat is sufficiently large to meet his requirements. Rent will thus take nearly 33 per cent of the average wage paid in industry today. To permit necessary expenditures for food and clothing rent should absorb not more than 15 per cent of the family income.

Rents in American homes have increased on an average 85 per cent in the last 10 years, according to the National Industrial Conference board, an employer's organization. The report shows that in spite of decreases in some items of the family budget the nation's rent bill has continued to increase. In the 12 months ended March 15, 1924, rents showed an average advance of 9 per cent.

The east and middle west lead in both number and size of rent increases during the four months ended March 15. In the east 31 cities reported increased rents and of these 7 reported increases of from 11 to 20 per cent. In the cities showing rents up from 11 to 20 per cent and 3 cities increases of from 21 to 30 per-cent.

Send Charles Krumbein To St. Paul Meet

SCHENNECTADY, N. Y., May 21.—Support of the June 17 St. Paul convention to launch a class farmer-labor party on a national scale, was voted by the United Farmer-Labor Party of New York state, organized at a convention in Schenectady. Charles Krumbein, New York, was chosen as delegate to the St. Paul meeting. A fund of $100,000 will be raised for the 1924 campaign if the intention of the convention is carried out.

Resolutions demanding recognition by the United States government of Russia, organization and protection of foreign born workers, release of political prisoners were passed. The menace of American imperialism was the subject of another resolution.

The new party is to be in charge of an executive committee of 17.

The movement which came to such was fathered by the Federated Farmer-Labor Party and the Labor Party of Buffalo. Trade union locals, farmers' co-operative organizations and fraternal bodies joined in the formation of the new combined party.

The convention was attended by 92 delegates representing 82 organizations in New York City, Buffalo, Rochester, Binghamton, Syracuse, Schenectady, Albany, Peekskill, Schuylerville and Gloversville. Representatives were present also from the Federated Labor Party, Workers' Party, Paole Zion and the Committee of Forty-eight.

Delegates came to the convention from New York City, Buffalo, Syracuse, Rochester, Binghamton, Schenectady, Albany and many smaller towns, making the convention a representative gathering of workers from practically every part of the state. Six delegates from the Committee of 48 attended the convention.

Ballam's Key-Note Speech.

The convention was opened with a key-note speech from John J. Ballam, who emphasized the need of a class Farmer-Labor Party to represent the exploited farmers and industrial workers against the all-inclusive so-called "Third Party." Ballam showed in his opening speech that the June 17 convention represented the movement for a class party as against the July 4 convention representing the Third Party generally.

Joseph Kucher, representing the Amalgamated Metal Workers' Union of New York City, was elected chairman of the convention. A program committee was elected with representatives of all the various groups in the convention, which brought in a unanimous report for the platform of the state Farmer-Labor Party.

Unanimous for F.-L. Name

J. A. H. Hopkins, of the Committee of Forty-eight, desired to have the party called the Progressive Party, whereas the majority of the delegates were for Farmer-Labor Party or United Farmer-Labor Party. The name of the Farmer-Labor Party was finally adopted by a unanimous vote, with the alternative of United Farmer-Labor Party, should the first name be pre-empted by the fact that in the past an organization calling itself a Farmer-Labor Party had existed in the state.

The biggest fight of the convention came on a resolution proposing affiliation of the New York party with the Federated Farmer-Labor Party. This proposal was opposed by the delegates from the Committee of Forty-eight organization in the state. After considerable negotiations on the question the resolution was withdrawn with the understanding, however, that a substitute resolution calling for the formation of a national Farmer-Labor Party in the June 17 Convention would be introduced. This resolution, calling for organization of a party at St. Paul, was adopted unanimously.

The New York Farmer-Labor Party is therefore on record against a coalition such as advocated by some groups, and for definite party organization at St. Paul.

An executive committee of 17 members was elected, the various cities represented in the convention being given representation on this executive committee. Out of the total of 17 members, nine were designated as members of an executive council located in the headquarters city of the party which will be New York City.

The members of this executive council were Ludwig Lore, William W. Weinstone, Benjamin Lifshitz, Jack Jampolsky, Juliet Stuart Poyntz, Harry Winitsky and J. A. H. Hopkins.

PHOTOGRAPHS CAN NOW BE SENT OVER WIRES A FEW MINUTES AFTER PICTURES OF INCIDENTS ARE TAKEN

NEW YORK, May 21.—This year, for the first time in the history of national political conventions, people far from the scene of action may be able to see and hear the proceedings practically as soon as they occur, as well as read about them.

As a result of successful tests in the transmission of news photographs by wire, the American Telephone & Telegraph company announced today that pictures of the big conventions next month can be sent to newspapers for printing within a comparatively few minutes after the incident photographed occurs.

Arrangements already have been made for broadcasting the proceedings of both conventions by radio.

Successful Tests.

The experiments conducted by the A. T. and T. resulted in 15 photographs being transmitted from Cleveland to New York within two hours. The success of the tests led to the general conclusion that the work of sending news photos by wire has now reached such an advanced stage of development that it can now be placed on a commercial basis.

Different kinds of pictures were used for the experiment first, several studies of President Coolidge were transmitted, coming out with amazing clearness and permitting first-class reproduction in the morning New York newspapers. Following these was a picture of the high level bridge at Cleveland, bringing out clearly not only the structure, but surroundings, a tug boat and smoke from the boat funnel. Pictures of E. C. Hopwood, editor of the Cleveland Plain Dealer, and H. B. R. Briggs, editor of the Cleveland Press followed, each strikingly clear in detail.

Invention Practical.

All were reproduced in New York papers without finishing touches and demonstrated clearly the practicability of the invention.

The sending machine for the experiment was set up in Cleveland and its operator was under the direction of A. T. and T. engineers. The experiment was witnessed by numerous newspaper publishers and reporters. The general principles of the process are simple, altho there is an infinite amount of complex detail. The basis is a photo-electric cell which translates every variation of a beam of light into a variation of electric current, which in turn, is translated into a variation of light at the receiving end.

The source of light in the sending machine is the same as an ordinary automobile lamp. The spot of light from the lamp passes thru a lens upon a photographic film which, in turn, is transmitted. The film is in the form of a cylinder, and as this cylinder revolves, the point of light passes thru the transparent film and falls upon a potassium pencil, which runs thru the center of the cylinder.

The fluctuations of the current from the photo-electric cell are then imposed upon the direct current, which flows thru the telephone wires. This current is several billion times as powerful as that caused directly by the light, but the strong current is made to reproduce every variation in intensity.

The telephone people believe that the development of their invention in this field surpasses that of other experiments by the Radio Corporation and C. Francis Jenkins, a Washington inventor, who for several years has been attempting the transmission of pictures by radio. Telephone officials explain that radio transmission of photos, while possible, is less practical because of the disturbances it would cause and be subjected to in the ether.

Use of telephone wires instead of the air for such transmission eliminates this difficulty, they point out.

BRITISH BIRD STARS IN UNIQUE RADIO CONCERT

Over Million Fans Hear Nightingale

LONDON, May 21.—A nightingale sang in a moonlit surrey thicket last night and all England heard the song.

More than a million radio fans in all parts of the country "listened in" as the clear notes of the feathered songster, entirely unaware of its share in the most remarkable radio concert ever held, were caught in a microphone and carried by land line to London, whence they were broadcasted.

It is planned to repeat the concert next week, if the nightingale will sing and it is hoped that radio fans of the United States may hear.

The scene at Oxted, near which the experiment took place was remarkable. Several nightingales had been coaxed to a thicket, where they were accustomed to nest. A microphone had been concealed in a bush.

Tiptoeing softly about the garden near where the little songsters were nesting, Miss Beatrice Harrison played several soft notes on a cello.

Suddenly the nightingale's clear song burst on the moonlight air. The cello accompanied it for a few minutes, then ceased and the nightingale sang on alone.

Jazz bands were stilled thruout the county and all other broadcasting stations ceased operating while everyone tuned in to catch the song.

U. S. Ambassador In Leaving Japan Blames His Mother-in-Law

TOKIO, May 21.—Japan is bidding a fond farewell to American Ambassador Woods, convinced he is leaving as a result of the Senate's immigration legislation.

The Japanese Foreign minister and other high officials lauded Woods, declaring few Americans had so endeared themselves to the hearts of the Japanese. They recalled his services during the earthquake.

To the United States, Ambassador Woods declared:

"I regret the necessity of leaving my post and retiring, but the health of my mother-in-law, Mrs. Marchand, requires that she return to the United States and I feel I should be with her.

"The excitement of the earthquake produced a serious effect upon her health, which had been failing and caused a case of aggravated heart trouble."

Roosevelt Opened Way For Communism L. A. Doctor Charges

LOS ANGELES, Calif., May 21.—Roosevelt was given a new role by Dr. Granville MacGowan, newly elected president of the California Medical Association. The doctor said, in addressing the annual state convention here, "that Roosevelt and his followers opened the way for a slow and persistent attack upon our constitutional growth by the pestilent, destructive, radical insects of socialism, communism, and sovietism, which threaten to destroy it."

Bryan and Wilson also shared in the doctor's denunciation. He called them the quacks, chiropractors, naturopaths of the body politic. He objected to the gland operations on the constitution and electronic treatment of social ills.

SWISS SOCIALISTS DEMANDING RECOGNITION OF SOVIET RUSSIA

MOSCOW, May 21.—Berlin reports that the Swiss Socialist Party wishes to interpellate the Federal Council and demand the restoration of diplomatic and economic relations with the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

The Neue Zuricher Zeitung writes that it would be most desirable to put an end to the Russo-Swiss conflict arisen out of the Conradi affair.

Russian Cotton Thriving.

MOSCOW, May 21.—The Russian cotton industry is expected to yield a profit of eighty-five million roubles for the working year, in spite of the prices having reached a lower level, according to an official report made to the bureau of the State Planning Commission.

YOUNG WORKERS EXPLAIN BOYS' WEEK IN MEETS

Outdoor Rallies Show Up Capitalist Gush

By AL SCHAAP.

The following "press agent" material is being sent to all papers in Chicago in order to "arouse" interest in Boys' Week.

"Purpose—1. To interest fathers and mothers in their own boys. 2. To emphasize the home as the greatest institution for character building and good citizenship. 3. To emphasize family responsibility toward the boy. (It is not in any sense a father and son night, but a night in which the state of the mother and the rest of the family is equally emphasized with that of Dad.)

"Suggestions—Arrange radio programs when prominent speakers will make short talks on the general subject, 'The Boy and his Home.' On that evening, mothers will serve a special dinner of the good things she knows her boy likes. Father will plan to give the entire evening to his boy; tell him stories of his own boyhood, games he played, and some of his experiences; he will be a boy again himself and make his boy feel that he is really and truly a pal of his; he may make this an occasion to present him with a game, a baseball, a glove, or something that he knows will please him. Find a homeless boy and add him to the circle. If there is a radio in the house, tune in to the splendid broadcasting stations where programs especially interesting to boys will be given."

The chairman for Boys' Day at Home is the infamous ex-Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis, who won an inglorious name thruout the country for the so-called "Landis Award," which attempted to cut the wages of union labor and then finally destroy their union organizations. This same Landis has been responsible for imposing long term sentences upon radical labor leaders. J. Louis Engdahl, the editor of the DAILY WORKER, together with other Communists, has been sentenced by the notorious judge to life imprisonment because they dared to tell the workers to keep out of a capitalist war.

Along with the Czar of Baseballdom we find many czars of industry and the educational system who are aiding in an effort to see that Boys' Week be "put across" by having the children feel "important."

Fathers are asked by the Boys' Week founders to take an interest in their own boys. This can very well be done by the rich and middle class fathers, but cannot be done by the workers. In an average working class family today the sons of the workers usually have to work as newsboys or at some other occupation in order to keep alive. With the father working late hours and the mother engaged in household duties and the boy arriving late after work, how is it humanly possible for the working class fathers and mothers of America to give the necessary attention to their children? And even if time permitted, the parents of the working class children have had no real opportunity to learn to take a real interest in their children.

The reason for this is very obvious since the ones that rule this country only care that the future slaves be brought up so that they can work at a machine all day. How can these homes, most of which are filthy and not fit for human beings to live in, become the greatest institution for character building and good citizenship? They are great institutions for revolution.

Is it possible for the workers to establish a family responsibility toward the boy, when all the limits of such responsibility lie in the hands of the capitalists who employ the boy's parents, seeking only to give them a meagre wage. These wages do not allow them even to assume full economic responsibility, let alone any other responsibility.

Mothers are being asked to serve good dinners to their children on this day. Fathers should buy their sons a baseball glove or a game. Find a homeless boy and add him to the circle, the statement says.

Are homeless boys not given proper attention by the administration, that parents are requested to find them and "add them to the circle?" Haven't the working class parents enough to take care of at present? Why can't boys have good meals every day, both at home and in the schools?

Tune in your radio is some more advice of this benevolent committee on Boys' Week. One would think they were giving away free radios to the working class children so that they can get the hot "air" that will be transmitted over the broadcasting stations today.

MILLIONAIRE BOOTLEGGER DELIVERED THE DOUGH BUT DAUGHERTY AND CO. DID NOT DELIVER THE GOODS

By LAURENCE TODD

(Staff Correspondent of The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, May 21.—George Remus, millionaire wholesale bootlegger of Cincinnati, reported by the prison schoolmaster as being treated as a privileged guest in Atlanta penitentiary, takes the stand before Senator Wheeler's committee investigating the Daugherty regime in the department of justice.

Remus is 47 and a chemist and lawyer by training. He says he handled between 600,000 and 800,000 gallons of whisky in violation of the federal law, but under the paid protection of Daugherty's friend, Jess Smith, in a year and a half. He testifies, in a convincing way, that when he bought his string of distilleries in Kentucky, Ohio and Indiana, he was soon introduced to Jess Smith in the Hotel Commodore, in New York, by Attorney Zoline, partner to Thos. Felder, Daugherty's aid in the notorious Morse pardon affair. He reached a "gentlemen's agreement" with Jess Smith.

To Keep Out of Can.

Wheeler, Brookhart, Moses and Jones took turns in questioning this amazing witness while he recited the story of his payment of between $250,000 and $300,000 to Daugherty's pal, for "permits and protection" in defiance of the law. He said he never inquired whether Smith split the money with the attorney general, but he made the payments under the distinct understanding that Smith was "close to the attorney general," and would furnish him permits for removal of his whisky for distribution to the bootleggers of the middle west. Moreover, Smith was under agreement to keep him and his gang out of jail. Indeed, they were to be saved from any prosecutions by the prohibition unit.

Smith Went Underground.

His first payment to Jess Smith, said Remus, was $50,000, in $1,000 bills. All payments were in cash. He offered to give the committee his cancelled checks and stubs, showing that he had cashed checks and had marked "J. S." on many of them as a record of the use to which the cash was put.

He was double-crossed or unfortunate—he was not sure which—when Smith died after getting $30,000 from him to secure a pardon after his protection had failed and Remus had been sentenced to prison. Even when his conviction had been appealed, Smith assured him that Daugherty would cause a pardon to be signed by the president, and he would never see the prison doors. Zoline, Felder's associate, became Remus' chief counsel, and he counted upon freedom from any interference by the law.

"What did you pay Jess Smith for?" was the question repeatedly asked by Senator Wheeler.

"To keep me out of the penitentiary—to keep the boys out—to use his influence with the attorney general. . . The money I paid him was all covered by our contract. He was to render all possible assistance in the department, where I had not the least doubt of his influence. He told me the attorney general would do everything he could in the premises, when finally I was convicted."

So many were the points on which Remus withheld detailed data, that Wheeler finally asked him if it were not a fact that he was afraid to testify freely, for fear of further prosecutions.

Remus answered that anyone in his position would be afraid. He complained that—far from having had a gentleman's treatment in prison, he was locked up alongside a group of negroes, and that he had lost 23 pounds of his generous weight.

What Remus' testimony indicated was what the earlier testimony of more than a score of witnesses had shown—that around Harry Daugherty were a group including Zoline, Felder, Bill Orr, Jess Smith, Howard Mannington and others—who grew rich by taking "protection and permit" money from the millionaires of the whisky ring. The enforcement of the dry law had been stopped in Daugherty's office. Prohibition had never been enforced because the government had not tried to enforce it. And on the vast profits of this corruption the political machinery back of the Harding-Coolidge administration had been reinforced.

Tobacco Workers Attack American Warehouse, Greece

ATHENS, Greece, May 20.—Locked out tobacco workers at Saloniki and police fought today with the result that ten persons were injured. Cavalry were called out to quell the disturbances when 30,000 people marched thru the streets. The American consul, Leland B. Morris, was forced to appeal to the governor general to protect the American tobacco warehouse.

MAY CALL TROOPS TO QUELL KLAN FIGHT FESTIVAL

Notre Dame Police Break Heads of Klaners

SOUTH BEND, Ind., May 21.—State troops may be called out to keep order here where Ku Klux Klaners and anti-klaners have been fighting since Saturday when the Klan forces began arriving for a "May festival." The festivities have been confined almost entirely to battles.

Last night the Klan headquarters were raided by the "anti" forces and a fiery cross was destroyed. Mounted police backed by the entire city force battled everybody. The mounted men rode into the crowd and used their clubs with force and gusto. Several people were sent to the hospital as a result of the mounted police brutality.

The Klan has gathered itself in Island Park and no one is permitted there except thru the good graces of Klan officials. Newspaper men were closely followed when they finally managed to get permission to inspect the Klan camp.

One young man who managed to get past the guards stationed at the entrances of the Klan camp, was shot at several times and escaped only by running.

Thousands Join Norway's Red May Day Festivities

KRISTIANIA, May 2. (By Mail.)—The 1st of May celebration this year all over Norway was greater than ever before. In Kristiania 10,000 participants paraded in the afternoon. The red boy scouts led the procession and sang their parade song: "We swear the oath of faithfulness in circle around the red banner and fight like heroes for liberty and bread. Our banner waves proud and red. Forward to victory or death. On guard, you red scouts of the proletariat!"

Ole O. Lian, the president of the Federation of Labor spoke. He said that the labor organization formed the large and strong united front of the workers, that they were fighting a three-headed monster, the government, the banks and the employers' association. He explained the evolution of the present conflict, the greatest the Norwegian labor movement had ever experienced.

MYSTERY CLOUDS HUGHES' LATEST CHINESE PUZZLE

Secretary May Soon Wake Up

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, May 21.—Mystery still shrouds the meaning of Secretary Hughes' latest note to the Chinese government, reminding Peking that China is held by the powers, under Resolution XII, of the Washington Conference of 1922, to be responsible to the powers—which did not, of course, include Russia—for her disposal of control of the Chinese Eastern Railway. This mystery centers upon the meaning of Hughes' statement that Russian interests are among those which China must account for, in any dealing she may have with Moscow regarding the road.

The Chinese Eastern was built by the Russian imperial government, some 25 years ago, as the result of a treaty with China under which the Chinese were to subsidize a Russo-Asiatic Bank which, when established, was to own the stock of the proposed railroad. Stock in the bank was divided between the Russian and Chinese governments, and Russia advanced the funds with which to build, maintain and operate the line. It was agreed that China should be privileged to buy back the stock of the road from the bank, at the end of a period of years, by paying off the costs of construction and any deficits in maintenance and operation that may have been borne by the Russians. Count Witte, then premier, proceeded to lavish money on the enterprise, to a degree which soon made it unlikely that China could ever buy Russia off.

During the Allied and American intervention in Siberia in aid of Kolchak, and for some time afterward, the Allied Technical Board was in actual control of the Chinese Eastern's finances, altho the remnants of Kolchak's reactionary forces continued, and are reported to still continue, to operate the line and keep both the railroad and the bank from coming back into possession of the government of Russia. It is over these investments of the Russian government, withheld by diplomatic chicanery, that the Russo-Chinese negotiations, involving recognition of Moscow, have been delayed.

Inquiry here as to whether Mr. Hughes proposes to indefinitely maintain a "Russia" in the offices of the Russo-Asiatic Bank and the Chinese Eastern Railway which is at war with the Russian government recognized by Britain, Italy and other powers, remains unanswered. He blandly asserts that he is safeguarding the interests of all outside nations in China's stewardship of the road since the Allied board gave it up. The new French government may force him to guess again, as France was his ally.

"IL LAVORATORE" BEGINS ITS DAILY LIFE ON MAY 31

Italians Picnic Sunday For Communist Paper

May 31 is the date set for the first issue of the new Italian Communist daily, "Il Lavoratore." It's birthday will be heralded with a grand concert held under the auspices of the Italian Federation of the Workers' Party.

The next big meeting for the benefit of "Il Lavoratore" will be a monster picnic on Sunday, May 25th, at Hawthorne Park, Cicero avenue and 22nd street.

Whole Country Waits Birth.

The Federation has arranged numerous meetings thruout the country among the Italian workers to celebrate the victory of their organization as it will be expressed in the new paper.

Philadelphia, New York, Boston, Rochester, Cleveland, Detroit, and many lesser cities where the Italian workers are strong, will help to make the new organ of the Italian Communists a potent weapon in the class fight in this country, as well as abroad in the "land of the black shirts."

Hail "Il Lavoratore."

Italian workers are hailing the new "Il Lavoratore" as a sturdy guardian of their interests and expect the paper to eliminate many of the fascisti newspapers, which have been poisoning the minds of Italians here and abroad.

Further announcement of the plans for the great concert marking the first publication of "Il Lavoratore" on May 31 will be given later. Some of the best singers in the city, among them Italian opera stars, will donate their services to the musical program.

On and after May 20th the address of the National Office of the Workers' Party of America will be Room 301, 1113 Washington Blvd., Chicago, Ill.

From that date on, the National Office will be located in the building purchased by the DAILY WORKER Publishing Company as the home of the printing plant, and the DAILY WORKER.

The housing of the National Office, the DAILY WORKER, the the federation secretaries, in one building is expected to greatly promote efficient conduct of the Party business.

Russian Picnics.

The district committee of the Russian branches, Workers party, has arranged a picnic for Sunday, June 1, at Bergman's Grove, Riverside, Ill.

The Society for Technical Aid to Soviet Russia has arranged picnics for Sunday, June 8, at Stickney Grove, and Sunday, August 24, at National Grove.

BUTTON MICHIGAN DEFENSE THRU YOUR BUTTONHOLE

Button, button, who's got the button.

You can buy one for 10 cents and wear the picture of Foster and Ruthenberg on your coat lapel. The Labor Defense Council has just had made 50,000 of these attractive buttons—not (as will soon be the fashion in the campaign year) to advertise candidates for president and vice-president, but to symbolize the great issue of the Michigan defense.

Buttons are to be sold thru all branches of the Labor Defense Council; they will be on sale everywhere and will be used for tagging purposes at picnics. The idea is to impress the Michigan Defense upon the minds of everyone; to make it so widely known that it will be a tangible reality to every worker who hears the issue raised.

Remaining Dates, Places, Announced For Trachtenberg

Sunday, May 25—St. Paul, Labor Temple, 416 Franklin St., at 8 p. m.

Monday, May 26—Minneapolis, First Unitarian Church, 8th St. and La Salle Ave., at 8 p. m.

Tuesday, May 27—Superior, Workers' Hall, cor. Tower Ave. and North 5th St., at 8. p. m.

Previous meetings have been enthusiastically attended. Trachtenberg's discussion of the present German situation has never failed to hold his audiences.

MEMBERSHIP, ATTENTION!

Continuing the work of familiarizing the party membership with the united front policy of the party in relation to the Farmer-Labor party, the central executive committee has arranged a series of meetings at which Comrade James P. Cannon will speak on the question of the party labor party policy. The meetings arranged will be held in the following cities:

Buffalo, N. Y.—Friday, May 23, 159 Grider street, 8 p. m.

Pittsburgh, Penna.—Saturday, May 24, Labor Lyceum, 35 Miller street, at 8 p. m.

May 25—Cleveland, Ohio: mass meeting, Labor temple, 2536 Euclid avenue, at 3 p. m.

May 26—Detroit, Mich.: House of the Masses, 2646 St. Aubin, corner Gratiot, at 8 p. m.

Every party member is urged to attend these meetings and branches to see to it that at least some members of the branch attend so that a further report can be made at the branches.

The Third Annual Picnic of the Workers Party, Local Chicago, will be held on Friday, July 4, at Stickney's Grove. Speakers, dancing, games, refreshments, etc., are being provided. Sympathetic organizations are requested not to arrange any other affair, but to give all possible support to the July 4th picnic.

YOUNG WORKERS DEDICATE BANNER TO INTERNATIONAL

Youth Hold Festival At Forest Preserve

Sunday a banner was dedicated by the Young Workers League of Chicago to the Young Communist International, at a picnic given by the league in the Forest Preserve as a symbol of international solidarity of the communist youth.

The banner was designed by Nat Kaplan, member of the National Executive Committee of the Young Workers League and was sewed by hand by comrades Emma Blechschmidt and Elsie Newman, members of the Chicago League. The letter was of gold thread embroidered on a flaming red background and bears the hammer and sickle of the Communist International.

"This in a small measure indicates the close bond which holds the communist youth of the world firmly together," said Harry Gannes in making the dedicatory speech. "The international of socialist youth was a losely formed body with but little more than sentiment holding it together. The war shattered it asunder. In 1915 the revolutionary remnants of the socialist youth of the world met in Berne to realign those willing to fight against imperialism and war as a class issue. The groundwork of the young communist international of which we are so proud to be part, was formed there. The Young Communist International is a unified organization; the national sections are as much a part of the central body of the international as are the local branches integral sections of the city central committee.

"I attended the presentation of a banner similar to this given by the communist youth of Berlin to the Moscow league. Everywhere we find this spirit of tangible comradeship and cooperation. But we shall fail of our high task if we do not back up this expression of fervor and solidarity with the actual work of putting into effect the program of the Young Communist International.

"Let us hope that the time is not far distant when we can by our acts and our deeds show our tangible relationship to the Y. C. I."

The banner will be sent on its way as soon as possible and there is no doubt a celebration will be arranged by the Y. C. I. to receive it in the name of the executive committee.

Other sections of the Young Workers League are expected to follow the example of the Chicago organization. The future plan is to present banners from shop nuclei of a particular industry to a like shop organization of communist youth in some other country.

Advancing German Revolt Picture In N. Y. Next Week

NEW YORK, May 21.—The new Soviet film "Russia-Germany" which was shown for the first time in New York City at the Central Opera House, was received with prolonged cheering as the advance pictures of the German revolution and the Red Army were flashed on the screen. This film will now be shown for the first time downtown at the Labor Temple, 14th street and Second avenue, for three days only, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, May 26, 27 and 28.

The scenes of Russia change sharply in contrast to that of Germany. Russia is shown at peace, building up its industries. There are complete scenes of the famous Moscow international exposition showing Russia one thousand years ago, and Russia today. The exposition shows the meager huts that the peasants lived in and the new model cottages built for the workers today by the Soviet government. All the hundreds of nationalities living in vast Russia today are shown at the fair in their picturesque native costumes.

This new film is superior in photography, dramatic interest and titling to any of the other films which have been shown in America by the Friends of Soviet Russia.

In addition to Russia-Germany, the funeral pictures of Lenin will also be shown.

Hear Arguments For Soviets Sunday

NEW YORK, May 21.—The United States Senate has been invited to attend en masse the forthcoming debate on the Soviets between Bertrand Russell and Scott Nearing which is to take place on Sunday, May 25th, at 3 p. m. It is rumored that many will be there incognito.

The subject of this significant debate is: "Resolved: That the Soviet ideas of government are applicable to Western civilization." Mr. Russell, who supports the negative, is in an authoritative position to uphold his position by virtue of the fact that he spent a considerable period of time in Russia during the Communistic regime. He feels that Sovietism has nothing to offer to America, England or France, and that it will never be applied to these countries.

Scott Nearing, the foremost radical lecturer, whose sympathies are with Soviet Russia and who subscribes to the Communist philosophy of government will try to prove that the Soviet principles can be applied to this country.

Samuel Untermyer, the well-known attorney, will act as chairman.

The League for Public Discussion, 500 Fifth avenue, under whose auspices this debate has been arranged, reports an unprecedented demand for tickets.

Maplewood Branch In Meeting With Englewood Thursday

The regular meeting of the Maplewood branch on Thursday evening, May 22nd, will not take place as scheduled. Instead we are to attend the meeting of the Englewood branch. This meeting will take place at 6357 South Ashland Avenue at 7:30 p. m. We must give our support to the comrades of the Englewood branch and help them make their meeting a success.

On Friday, May 23rd, at 7:30 p. m. sharp, the Maplewood, Hirsch Lekett, Rykoff and Lenin branches will hold an outdoor meeting on the corner Division and Washtenaw. This is where you can show your Communist discipline by being there and being on time. Bring outsiders along. The purpose of this meeting is a counter demonstration of the patriotic celebration of Boy's Week.

MOSCOW, May 21.—It is reported from Constantinople that the Russian raw materials exhibition, arranged there by the Russo-Oriental Chamber of Commerce, has met with a great success.

tA joint sessions of this Chamber with the Turkish Chamber of Commerce, important and fundamental decisions were taken by representatives of the latter organization with regard to Russo-Turkish economic rapprochement.

Halt Sabotage of German Relief

THE newest general attack of the Social-Democratic and yellow trade union leaders against the International Workers' Relief met with its first repulse in this country when the United Workmen's Singers and United German Trades of Philadelphia decided recently to disregard the circular letter sent them by the General Federation of German Trade Unions denouncing the International Workers' Relief as a Communist organization whose real object is to spread Communist propaganda. Both these Philadelphia organizations participate in the Philadelphia Conference for German Workers' Relief, which is affiliated with the Committee for International Workers' Aid, the American branch of the International Workers' Relief. The United German Singers and the United German Trades, both of which contain Socialist elements, decided to redouble their efforts in support of the International Workers' Relief and to proceed with the work on the international bazaar for German workers' aid, which was held in Philadelphia on May 1, 2 and 3, under the auspices of the Committee for International Workers' Aid. The two organizations were represented at the meeting of the Philadelphia Conference for German Workers' Relief on April 16, which was a rousing demonstration for the International Workers' Relief and at which over 100 delegates were present.

The circular letter of the General Federation of German Trade Unions has been followed by a press service statement of the Amsterdam International Federation of Trade Unions, a statement full of slander and misinformation concerning the International Workers' Relief, which recently has had a phenomenal growth and is enlisting the sympathy and aid of the rank and file trade union organizations everywhere. This press service statement talks of money spent purely on Communist propaganda and is a repetition practically of the circular letter sent out by the General Federation of German Trade Unions.

No mention is made of the 50 soup kitchens established by the International Workers' Relief in Berlin alone, of the 1,715,000 warm meals distributed in Germany up to March 15, of the special dairy kitchens established in the Rhine provinces for the children of striking workers, of the nurseries maintained by the International Workers' Relief. Nothing is said of the 1,000 children sent from Germany to be cared for abroad, of the clothing repair rooms opened, of the medical assistance departments opened.

The fact is that the International Workers' Relief is a non-partisan organization whose proletarian work of solidarity enlists the collaboration of artists, men of science and workers belonging to the most varied organizations and parties. The International Workers' Relief unites all persons who honestly desire to co-operate in this great international, genuine and practical solidarity and mutual aid.

But the Social-Democratic and yellow trade union leaders are afraid that relief for the German workers would bolster up the fighting strength of these workers in the struggle against the German capitalist class and the capitalists of the world. The Socialist and yellow trade union leaders are doing their utmost to help the capitalist class break the resistance of the German workers.

The workers of Germany are giving a clear answer to this treacherous attack. With the aid of the workers of the world they are continuing the battle against enslavement by the capitalist class, against the 12-hour day, against the scourge of unemployment, against starvation brought on by capitalist misrule.

The Committee for International Workers' Aid, the American branch of the International Workers' Relief, is carrying on the fight here against the machinations of the enemies of the suffering and struggling workers of Germany.

NEW YORK, May 21.—The tag day held in New York City for the relief of the German working class children, which was run jointly with the International Workers Aid, New York Section, and the Jewish Workers' Relief recently, brought in the sum of $5,500.

The appeal sent out by the two organizations brought out over 500 volunteers, members of the Workers Party, Young Workers League, Junior Young Workers League, the Left Paole Zion, Junior Left Paole Zion, Independent Circles and Krankenkasse branches as well as trade unionists and sympathizers with the international working class labor movement; all came out and fully gave their services for this work.

The Jewish Workers' Relief and the International Workers' Aid warmly thank the many workers who so devotedly gave of their time for this cause.

The stations reported the following receipts, $3,100 of which was turned in to the Jewish Workers' Relief from the stations which they supervised:

Total, $5,500.

FASCISTS SCRAP, ALL YELL GRAFT; PARTY SPLITTING

Mussolini Worrying And Working For Harmony

ROME, Italy, May 21.—Since Massino Rocco launched his attack on the minister of finance last week, charging there was shady work connected with the leasing of certain property to the Standard Oil Co., there has been a general fight on in the ranks of the Fascists. All Fascists have enemies within the party and all took the attack launched by Rocco, as the signal to take a swing at their pet foes. Rocco was kicked out of the Fascist organization, but that has not stopped the internal fights among the black shirts.

All the little local black shirt chiefs are yelling their heads off trying to get their rivals fired from the party. The two great rival banks of the country, the Commerciale and the Credito Italiano, have their backers attacking each other. Harry F. Sinclair has an oil lease he is trying to get across and that furnishes more material for the scrappers. Charges of graft among the Fascist higher ups are flying thick and fast.

Indications are that the Fascists will be split into twenty or more sections by the merry wrangle. Mussolini is having fits at the prospect. His entire time and energy are being put into repairing the damage and attempts to bring back harmony. Rocco who was once an anarchist, threatens to "tell all." Interesting developments are sure.

Nearing Speaks In Philadelphia Friday On Russia, Britain

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., May 21.—Scott Nearing, internationally known speaker on radical subjects, will address an audience on Soviet Russia and the British Labor Party on Friday evening, May 23, at 435 Girard avenue, the Progressive Library, West Philadelphia. In view of Nearing's coming debate with the British philosopher, Bertrant Russell, on the applicability of the Soviet system to Western nations, this meeting ought to particularly interest Philadelphia people who will miss the New York debate.

Are you self-conscious about the impression you make on people?
PERSONAL appearance has a lot to do with the way you feel. Clothes count, of course. But still there is one thing so many people overlook—something that at once brands them as either fastidious or careless—the teeth.
Notice today how you, yourself, watch another person's teeth when he or she is talking. If the teeth are not well kept they at once become a liability.

SACCO-VANZETTI RE-TRY MOTIONS COME TO JUDGE

Five Motions Made In Frame-up Case

(By The Federated Press)

BOSTON, May 21.—Judge Webster Thayer, whose conduct of the trial which resulted in the conviction of Nicola Sacco and Bartholomeo Vanzetti has been criticized all over the world as prejudicial, is about to file a decision on five pending motions for a new trial in the case.

Whatever its character, the decision will start a new battle for the lives of these Italian workers. If favorable, preparations will begin for a new trial. If adverse, the case will be taken to the higher courts and further testimony impeaching the prosecution's case will be presented to the court.

Rumors in Massachusetts legal circles say that Judge Thayer will deny all five of the motions for retrial. These motions include confessions of perjury by state's witnesses, exposes of so-called identification witnesses as crooks and prostitutes, and other testimony that in ordinary cases would assure a new trial. How Thayer will manage to brush aside evidence that on the face of it seems incontrovertible is not known.

Prejudice Not Proof.

"An adverse decision on the mass of new evidence seems like a monstrous reversal of common sense," a member of the defense committee told the Federated Press. "The identification evidence in the trial has been completely exploded. By their own confession the witnesses lied, usually under duress. The state's contention that the mortal bullet came from a gun belonging to Sacco, likewise, has been eliminated. The state's own gun expert has filed an affidavit accusing the district attorney of misinterpreting his words and of refusing to ask a question to elicit a direct answer. All that remains is the general prejudice against the two men as "reds" and as "dagos."

One of the five motions was filed soon after the trial, two years ago. It has not yet been ruled upon by the court. It proves by means of jurors' affidavits that the jury foreman brot into the jury room cartridges which had not been admitted as exhibits and that he used them as a basis for comparison with other cartridges involved in the case.

The federal and Massachusetts constitutions provide that a defendant must be confronted with all the evidence against him. The violation of this guarantee may be the basis for an appeal to the U. S. supreme court as a last resort if Judge Thayer rules against a new trial.

In preparation for the next and most important phase of the fight, the Sacco-Vanzetti New Trial League has been formed, with Vice-President J. Van Vaerenwyck, Massachusetts Federation of Labor, an active member of the executive committee.

President Morris Sigman and a committee sent by the biennial convention, International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, in Boston, visited Sacco and Vanzetti in prison, assuring them of the garment workers' financial and moral support in their fight for life.

The Amalgamated Clothing Workers' convention also voted financial and moral support to these unjustly imprisoned men.

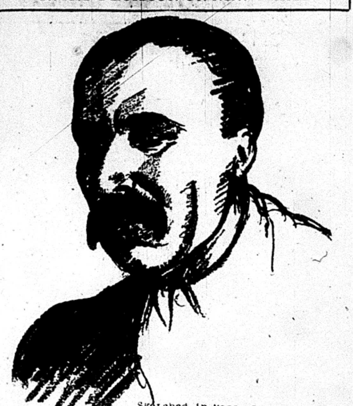
AWAIT DECISION ON NEW TRIAL



Sketched in Mass. State Prison May 1, 1924, by Lydia Gibson.

BARTHOLOMEO VANZETTI

Irish Labor Magazine Urges Workers To Look To St. Paul

The May number of The Irish People, in an article entitled "The Coming Elections," by T. J. O'Flaherty, urges its readers to get behind the movement for the organization of a national Farmer-Labor Party at the great convention that will meet in St. Paul on June 17th. The Irish workers in the United States are very much under the influence of the Irish labor leaders, the majority of whom are cogs in the wheel of the Democrat Party in the United States.

One of the most interesting contributions in the May number is a reprint from the New York Commercial of an article by Fred Marvin, independent stool pigeon exposing The Irish People as a Communist sheet. William F. Dunne, one of the contributing editors and T. J. O'Flaherty the editor, are attacked as enemies of christianity, etc. Marvin gets his facts considerably mixed as usual but the Irish People does not deny that it is a Communist publication. It is rather proud of the fact.

Donagh O'Dwyer, reviews the year's work of the magazine which is now about to start its second year, in an article, "The First Year." There are three pages of snappy review of the situation in Ireland. The magazine is published at 2540 West Adams St., Chicago, Illinois. Subscription price is $1.00 a year.

Russian Peasants Buy More Machines For Agriculture

(Rosta News Agency.)

MOSCOW, May 21.—The demand for agricultural machinery on the part of the peasants is very brisk, most of the machines being sold on the local markets. The goods are usually sold on a long-term credit basis at a price but slightly higher than the net cost. A large quantity of plows received from Tchekho-Slovakia and scythes from Austria have been sold by the State Commercial Department at prices lower than last year's.

When Restaurants Sell Booze They Should Dodge Strikes

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK, May 21.—A union and the United States government have succeeded in putting an open shop combination out of business. Of course, the government has nothing against open shop concerns—likes them rather than otherwise, but this was a case of law enforcement. To be sure, the government is not long on law enforcement. There is oil for instance. Or booze. Governor Pinchot of Pennsylvania, who ought to know, says his fellow Pennsylvanian, Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, is still making money in the whisky business while winking at law enforcement.

But when the prohibitionists raise too much of a howl, it is good politics to sacrifice some of the little fellows. Which, perhaps, partly explains the closing of Broadway's nine most notorious jazz and hootch joints, owned by the Thompson-Salvin gang.

For two months these places had been hit by the strike of 500 waiters, cooks, etc., members of the Amalgamated Food Workers, Hotel and Restaurant Workers' branch, an independent industrial union. But with the help of injunction judges and strike-breaking sluggers the cafes had managed to run after a fashion.

Finally the testimony of the striking waiters regarding prohibition evasion forced the federal authorities to close the places for a year on an injunction.

Opponents Halt Bill Which Would Abolish Railroad Labor Board

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 21.—Opponents of the Barkley-Howell Bill, which would abolish the Railroad Labor Board, managed to stop its progress toward enactment last night by carrying on a well organized filibuster against it in the House.

The House was considering the bill as a committee of the whole, and the opponents of the bill by a series of parliamentary moves managed to hold things up. After hours devoted to parliamentary moves and counter moves the House adjourned.

Representative Nelson continued to deliver speeches against the railroad bosses for propaganda against the bill.

Representative Barkley declared that the opposition to the bill was powerful and had decreed that the bill should not pass or even, receive decent consideration.

Only Pity for John Walker

JOHN H. Walker is one of the most pathetic figures in the labor movement; to hear him down at the Peoria convention of the United Mine Workers of Illinois, flaccidly complaining about the Communists, to have heard him at the Portland convention of the American Federation of Labor last October going thru the same motions, arouses a feeling of pity rather than of vigorous hate.

For the truth is, that Walker is not one of the strong forces of the reactionary camp; his abuse of the radicals and his plea for old party politicians carry little conviction. The feeling comes over the auditor that "Honest" Jack is playing his part with no joy in the performance.

At the state convention of the Illinois federation at Decatur last summer, Walker's eyes were moist as he made recantation of his professed beliefs in independent political action by the working class. There are those who saw this lacrymose dew as of the crocodile variety, but our opinion is that they were tears of shame.

Long ago John H. Walker did some rather vigorous organization work in the new miners' union. "Mother" Jones still tells of tramping the ties of West Virginia with him when John was young. But that was long ago. His socialist beliefs he wore more and more lightly. But they gave him some comfort—he still stood before the world as a progressive.

Came the war—that Pizarro sword line that made public men stand in one camp or the other. The opportunistic habits of the professional labor faker carried the day and we shortly found John rooting behind the lines with might and main for the bloody fray which buried millions of workmen in the mud of Europe for capitalist profits. The profit lords rewarded him and used him by giving him a "mediator's" job in the northwest woods where the capitalists were trying to trick the lumberworkers out of the fruits of their 1917 strike. And John gave his employers full meed of service by denouncing I. W. W. and other political prisoners at labor conventions during the war.

The war over, John stoutly denied that he was a reactionary. The labor parties that sprung up then found him in their fold and he stayed with them until the class conscious workers began to take control of the movement for independent political action.

Again the line was drawn and "Honest" Jack, cherishing his state federation presidency—a post where he is a mere tool for more rugged labor lieutenants of capitalism—crawfished backward all the way into the ranks of the pure white reactionaries.

The latter end of this dead progressive is a sad one. There is not even peace to his ashes.

TEACHERS SHOULD KNOW HOW TO USE KNIFE AND FORK

Must Acquire Social Polish, Says Speaker

By SHERMAN BOWMAN.

DETROIT.—The lack of social polish in public school teachers was said by Pres. Charles F. McKenny, Michigan State Normal College, at Ypsilanti, to be "the biggest social, educational and moral problem facing normal schools today," in an address that astonished the National Congress of Mothers and Parent-Teacher Associations in Detroit.

"It is not fair to the children of Michigan to have to sit under the guidance of teachers being turned out by normal schools here and elsewhere," he said. "The girls who go to Ypsilanti normal and other normal schools in the state do not come from the best families. They come from the families of workingmen and others in which it is necessary for the children to earn their own way. Therefore, altho they are nice and intelligent girls they lack a certain social culture, a certain presence which is necessary if they are to stand before their classes and represent themselves as proper men and women in the cultural sense of the term."

Spy Leader.

McKenny is one of the leaders in the development of modern campus espionage systems, in which deans are hired as specialists in organized spying. Under this system the dismissal of men and women students resembles the deportation of aliens by an unscrupulous and autocratic bureau of immigration, fostered by the department of labor. In making this speech, bristling with phrases and pronouncements characteristic of a rotting class-civilization, McKenny stood before an audience of 2,000 educators and parents as the state-appointed head of one of the two largest normal schools in the United States.

"This condition will continue to obtain as long as students are forced to room as they are in Ypsilanti in 400 different rooming houses and eat around in boarding houses. They can never acquire social polish in this way," he continued. "I think the solution lies in building dormitories at the schools by the state. Splendid women could be placed in charge of these dormitories and inspire the girls placed in thei rcare. Then, teachers would learn to use their knife, fork and spoon properly and would learn not to leave the dining room with a toothpick in their mouth."

Toothpick Professor.

The function of the proposed dormitories in "this man's school" could readily be guessed by the wives of McKenny's workingmen who were in his audience. Dormitories, these wives and mothers later said, would make spying easier, would standardize behavior, foster snobbery and give a dessert spoon and salad fork the prestige of a philosophy.

These women did not believe that McKenny had succeeded in stating the "biggest social, educational and moral problem facing normal schools today." They believed, however, that his speech made plain what the problem really is,—for the workers.

I. A. M., 337, On Record To Help Boost June 17; Protest Expulsions

Local No. 337 of the International Association of Machinists, at their last meeting went on record as favoring the June 17th St. Paul convention of Farmer-Labor Party groups and elected Ben Schlessinger, president of the local as delegate to the convention. The same meeting also passed a resolution protesting against the suspension of certain members from the Machinists' union in Toledo, because they were members of the T. U. E. L.

Business agents Buck and Olander reported to the meeting on the steps which are being taken to get a new wage scale for Chicago machinists.

"Work and Pray": Live on--$17

THERE is a type of employer who is doing more real harm to the working class than any of the oil, steel and coal barons with their rough-neck methods, who help, rather than hinder the progress of the workers.

We need to be more alertly concerned about this type of employer, who lulls us into a lotus-like sleep and whose methods when fully realized, are disgusting, to say the least. One of the classic examples of this kind, is George F. Johnson of the Endicott-Johnson shoe works in the towns of Endicott and Johnson City, near Binghampton, New York.

In the last published report of the company, there were 16,131 in his employ and his company is said to be the largest shoe works in the world.

Boss Won't Have Union.

Johnson City and Endicott have a false appearance of smug prosperity, when one realizes how dependent the population is upon their employers, the E. J. Corporation. Johnson has been heard to say "that if the workers form a union, he will lock the doors of the factories and throw the keys in the river." He is an excellent advertiser and allows no one to forget that the company runs a maternity hospital and clinic, a swimming pool, dance hall, race track and recreation park for its workers. He issues booklets about it and publishes the "E. J. Workers Magazine," of which I will say more later.

No "Square Deal" to Workers.

At the entrance to Johnson City is a large unattractive stone arch reaching across the road. On it is inscribed, "Gateway to the Square Deal Towns." "Erected by the E. J. Workers." On the right of this arch is a bronze tablet with a relief of Johnson's smug bourgeoise face, and on the left a bronze tablet with this Bible verse. "As ye would that men should do unto you, do ye also to them likewise."

The money to erect this monument to hypocrisy was raised by the foremen collecting it from the workers, taking their names down in a book. The foremen threatened loss of job to any refusing to pay the two to three dollars required, as more than one worker can testify.

He is sentimental, is Johnson. He calls the situation of the towns the Valley of Fair Play, and there is your Home Library and Ideal Park, and one of the factories is called "The Fair Play Factory." Can you beat it? Sounds kind and homey hey? This Fair Play Factory, like the others, is on the piece work basis and you can begin at 5 o'clock in the morning and work until 6. He loves his dear workers if they are good, and says that he works 18 hours a day planning good things for them.

Workers Won't Own Factory Soon.

Let us leave this twaddle and get sensible. Johnson boasts that 25 per cent of the stockholders are E. J. workers, but the outstanding stock is $33,454,000, and only $1,400,000 of this stock is owned by the E. J. workers, or 4 per cent of the stock is owned by the workers.

In reckoning the average wage, they lump all the workers together, high salaried clerks and all, and from this deduct the average wage as $1,600 per year. This brings me around to the main part of my story, which is all in an E. J. Workers' Magazine, whose motto on the back page is, "Much good work is spoiled by the lack of a little more."

I could tell you a lot more, but I think the following letters printed in the E. J. magazine for February, 1924, tell their own story. Johnson is so proud of his methods of dealing with the workers that he also had the woman's letter and his reply printed in the Binghamton Morning Sun, a daily paper.

How Support Seven on $17.

Binghamton, N. Y., Jan. 25, 1924.

To the Editor of E. J. Workers Magazine:

Would like to ask you to have Mr. Johnson in the next issue of this magazine publish a formula for supporting a family of five on an average wage of $17 a week and not go in debt.

I am sure it would be appreciated not only by myself but hundreds of others.

Am not writing this letter for publication but would like to ask Mr. Johnson how he would live on $17 a week and not be in debt when you have rent, coal, light, groceries and other incidental expenses. I don't think you will find any French pastry on the bill of fare.

AN E-J WORKER'S WIFE.

Johnson Likes Child Labor.

Answering the poor worker's wife, George F. Johnson (or his press agent) says in part:

"The first thot crosses my mind: What good is it to go in debt, if you can't live on $17 a week; because how do you expect to pay it?

"The second thought crosses my mind: Why doesn't this family earn more than $17 a week? Our average wage, man, woman and child, thruout the whole industry, must amount to nearly $30 a week, even this past year."

"I want to be courteous and considerate, and I also wish to be very patient, because I quite realize the desperate frame of mind of a woman who has to support a family of five on $17 a week, with living costs the way they are now. But it is perfectly fair to say: there is no wage basis that can be worked out, that will guarantee a living to every worker. So much depends on the worker himself.

"I should say right off, that $17 a week to support a family, would be very close work; and still, if the woman was a good thrifty manager, and if the husband was careful and prudent, and possibly one or two of the children might be able to work and help—such a family might indeed get along, particularly where there are no doctor bills to pay—where there are benefits provided in sickness—where any accident that may happen to a worker is carefully cared for—where the stores furnish groceries and meats for about two-thirds market value. . . .

" . . . men do not get bigger wages because they have large families. . . . . While I am sure you must sacrifice and live very prudently, while the children are young, there is great compensation coming to you—first, in the joy of the children—then in the helpfulness of the children a little later, when they, too, are able to work and bring something into the family.

The Boss Teaches Birth Control.

"We have in our employ, families where the father—sometimes the mother—but very frequently the father and four, five or six children, are able to earn good big wages—all drawing a bonus—all enjoying the priviliges which the company provide for their workers. . . . .

"Our piece prices are liberal. . . . .

"There are so many questions I would like to ask, but not having the man's name, I have no way to do so.

"Don't you see how foolish it is to figure that because you have a large family—perchance because you are a poor manager—that you should expect to be paid more money than those who have smaller families, and perhaps are better managers?"

George F. Johnson's formula for the poor slaves' families that have to live on $17 a week is: "Just be yourself. Live your own life. Make it wholesome, and make it successful and happy." A lot of blathering meaningless rot!

IS YOUR NAME ON THE HONOR ROLL?

Of militants who have given their support to "their paper" by securing a new sub for THE DAILY WORKER

If we were to reprint all the names of those who have brought honor to themselves and strength to the labor movement thru support of their daily, "THE HONOR ROLL" would require an entire issue. Many have sold doens of new subs. Hundreds have sold several.

Have You Sold One?

We are asking every reader of THE DAILY WORKER to give evidence of his support by selling at least one new sub before June 15th. The special rates of $1.00 for two months will be withdrawn then.

The Bonus "Victory"

After two years of political dickering and log-rolling there has been enacted a sham bonus law. The measure which the senate and house passed over the president's veto has been appropriately called a "tombstone" bonus. The provisions of this law enable millions of ex-soldiers to borrow money and pay heavy interest on insurance policies granted them by the government.

The real significance of the outcome of the bonus controversy is not to be found in any advantages accruing to the ex-soldier masses. The basic importance of the senate and house overriding the president's veto is rather to be looked for in its being an index to the status of the republican party on the eve of the coming elections. There is no question but that Coolidge, as president, is the only logical leader for the republican machine in the coming campaign. Supported by the maximum financial aid that Wall Street could muster and backed by an almost unanimous press Coolidge fought all bonus measures tooth and nail. He even organized breakfast-table lobbies.

The senators and congressmen voting for the very limited adjusted compensation bill did not do so out of regard for the welfare of the ex-soldiers but were animated simply by a desire to get back to the capital after November. Here we have a basis of conflict between the only logical leader of the republican party and his lieutenants. Coolidge will be unable to change his front on the bonus issue which now will become more of a cash proposition than ever before. The senators having taken cognizance of the mass demand, by voting to over-ride the president's veto, will be compelled to lend more attentive ear then ever to the new bonus demands of the ex-soldiers. To-day, the republican party stands only one chance of coming out of the fight intact. It must have strong centralized leadership and unity on fundamental issues. The outcome of the bonus dispute will prove a source of deep dissension in the republican fold during the coming campaign.

It may be true as C. W. Barron of the Wall Street Journal said that Coolidge and Mussolini are the "two greatest economic minds in the world." Yet, billions can't be juggled even by "Silent Cal" at a time when the expenses of maintaining the strike-breaking government are mounting so rapidly. The leadership of Coolidge has been substantially impaired by the decisive defeat administered him by the Senate and House on this question.

We do not accept the law enacted by the senate as giving the ex-soldier masses even a fraction of what the capitalists owe them. We believe the time is at hand for forcing the employing class government to recognize that the masses have some interests and that for once an end should be put to the employers' receiving huge bonuses from the governmental authorities. We hope that the defeat of Coolidge will prove only an entering wedge for a series of real mass demands on the government by the workers and farmers in behalf of themselves.

Stone at Work

The first serious jolt which many of our hopeful, democratically inspired liberals have received at the hands of the new law-abiding Attorney General Stone is rather harsh. We confess that in our most sanguine estimate of the lack of difference between the policies of Stone and his predecessor Daugherty we did not venture to expect so severe a disappointment to the innocents at home at so early a date.

Attorney General Stone has flatly refused to allow Remus to get the papers giving the details of the transaction in which he paid from $250,000 to $300,000 as "protection money" to Jess Smith, Daugherty's go-between. In accordance with his declaration of policy, Mr. Stone hides his refusal to help the Brookhart committee investigating the Department of Justice, by an emphatic declaration "to adhere strictly to the statutes." Mr. Stone is ready to help the committee in the courts but not at this juncture when it is busy getting evidence.

Herein lies the sole difference of approach and tactics between the former attorney general and his successor. Mr. Daugherty was pretty blunt and took little heed of legal pretenses in his administering the office in behalf of the big business interests. Mr. Stone, reputed to be afflicted with a judicial mind and dedicated to the preservation of law and order, runs his office much more in accordance with the law but at least as effectively in behalf of the employers as Daugherty did.

The refusal of Attorney General Stone to permit Remus, the uncrowned king of America's bootleg empire, to supply valuable evidence to the committee, is a most damaging blow struck at the Brookhart committee. It shows very plainly that beneath the skin Stone and Daugherty have all in common and practically nothing in difference.

Facts and Fancies

Propaganda is one of the most effective weapons in all wars. Just now the country is being treated to an example of its use in the class war, in the present political conflict.

The last six weeks have seen the inauguration of a powerful propaganda campaign to psychologize if not convince, the masses to the effect that the oil investigation disclosures have had no fundamental effect on the politics of the country. We are now told that there has been no change in the political divisions. Toward this end the press is harping on the following illusions and spending considerable energy in posing them as facts: First of all, we are asked to believe that the Republican Party is as sound and intact as ever and that Coolidge is already elected to succeed himself. Secondly, we are asked to accept as a fact that McAdoo has succeeded in ridding his system of Doheny oil and that he is once more the only serious Democratic presidential aspirant. Thirdly, great stress is being placed by the kept press on the impossibility of a Third Party being organized in 1924. These editors would have us believe that for some mysterious reason or other, the conditions at hand, though admittedly more favorable then ever for the organization of a Third Party, still will not produce one.

An examination of the facts betrays the unfounded character of these contentions. The success of the Coolidge forces in the primaries only shows that within the rank of the active Administration agents what is left of the Republican machine, Coolidge money, because of its abundance and strategic location, is still spreme. The success of Coolidge in the primaries does not, in the least, indicate popular sentiment towards the chief executive. Nor do "Cautious Cal's" victories over the discredited Hiram Johnson obliterate the truth that the Republican party is in the throes of disintegration. When so many Republican Senators and Congressmen, on the eve of a national election, so handily repudiate their only possible leader, the President, as they did in the Bonus and Japanese exclusion votes, it is clear to all that the Republican party is not unified and is face to face with numerous serious difficulties of disorganization. Out of 32 Senators that are to be elected in November, the Old Guard is sure of only three seats. Not a single one of the insurgents is in danger of losing his place in the Senate.

As to LaFollette heading a Third party we need but cite the fact that so reactionary an individual as James R. Howard, formerly president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, is convinced after touring the country, that the Wisconsin Senator will lead a new party campaign against Coolidge next November and will lead it in so well organized a fashion as to insure the loss of Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota, Idaho, Montana, Nebraska, Iowa, and Washington to the President.

We need not delve into these questions at any greater length. The gap between facts as they are and fancies as they are advanced by the employing class press, is too great for the overwhelming mass of the workers and farmes to overlook.

A Black United Front

Sixty-two organizations have united to form a permanent body to fight and exterminate "revolutionary and destructive radicalism." The leader in this move is the American Legion. The new self-appointed guardian of Americanism was baptised at the recent sessions of a gathering of nondescript organizations advertised as the All-American Conference.

This new trust, dedicated to red-baiting, is committed to wage campaigns extraordinary against all forms of Soviet propaganda, the recognition of Soviet Russia by the United States, and unrestricted immigration. The giant red-scare corporation blazons forth its demand for "unadulterated and undiluted American history in American schools, as opposed to the emasculated history which has been introduced so generally, robbing Americanism of much of its elemental significance and robbing democracy of its precious heritage."

A rather auspicious program in the way of hypocritical ranting in patriotism! The program is as hackneyed as the purpose. However there is one phase of this development in the extra-legal auxiliary organizations of the capitalist class that deserves the most serious and immediate attention of all the workers and farmers. It is the personnel of the black outfit that is interesting as well as important.

Among the leading bodies affiliated with the new synod of reactionary bishops are the American Legion, the American Defense Society, the Association of Newspaper Executives, the American Women's Legion, the National Civic Federation, the National Grange, the United States Chamber of Commerce, and the American Federation of Labor. Truly, a better collection of the spokesmen of employing class reaction could not be marshalled.

What is the American Federation of Labor doing in company with the United states Chamber of Commerce, an organization which refused to employ a single union man on its big building in Washington? Why its warm embrace of the strike-breaking, labor-hating National Civic Federation on the very day that the International Brotherhood of Stationary Firemen voted unanimously to withdraw from it because of its being controlled by the capitalists?

Gompers does not dare answer this hobnobbing with the vilest enemies of the labor movement. There is no possible excuse, there is not even the slightest organizational pretense, behind which the grand old menace to the welfare of the working class can hide this organic connection with the blackest united front that the country has seen for years.

FUTURE BELONGS TO UNION MILITANTS

By Rebecca Grecht

Does the Convention of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union Represent the Rank and File?

This question will challenge the attention of every impartial observer who has followed the bitter internal struggles in that union and has noticed the seemingly solid support of the overwhelming majority of the delegates for the administration and its policies.

In order to give a definite answer to this question it is necessary to review the life and activities of the organization for the past few years. Two years ago, when the Cleveland convention convened, the administration found itself in a peculiar position. It found, to its astonishment, a left block at the convention which was not only representative of the majority of the membership but came very near controlling the majority of the votes at the convention.

Abe Cohen at Cleveland.

The large vote of the opposition threw the machine into a panic, and immediately machinery was set in motion towards reaching a compromise. Abe Cahan (an "insider"), who was present at the convention undertook the task of bringing about an understanding between the two groups in the organization.

This attempt to break the left block by offering eight concessions was continued after the adjournment of the convention. These tactics, which at first appeared to bring good results, were soon proven to be a complete failure, as the left wing became more crystalized. It is quite true that some of the leaders of the militants fell a prey to the promises of the administration; but the rank and file, whose opposition was based upon real differences of policy and tactics that touched the most vital problems of the organization, persisted in their activities even after some of the leaders deserted their ranks.

Faced with a movement which was daily gaining new adherents, and would not compromise its principles, the administration recognized in this movement a real menace and was compelled to adopt more drastic measures so as to assure a majority at the next convention. The most convenient weapon was to stigmatize the militants as duel unionists and proceed to expel them from the organization.

EXPULSIONS BROUGHT CRISIS

The expulsion order was the first step in preparation for the convention. Never in the history of the union has any action of the leaders given rise to such bitter opposition. From the largest centers to the remotest towns, the membership protested against the order of the G. E. B. This great storm of protest more than anything else convinced the administration that the operation must be made at all costs. "If we cannot control the union we will break it," was their slogan.

It was only the great devotion and revolutionary restraint of the militants that prevented the complete destruction of the union. There was one single thought, one single desire that motivated all the actions of the officialdom, and that was the coming convention.

Locals For Convention Use.

The various organization departments which had remained a dead letter were equipped with staffs of organizers and sent out to the suburbs to organize, not the workers in the shops, whose standards are much lower than those in the large centers, but to get together a few workers here and there who at one time or another belonged to the union, organize a local, and elect delegates to the convention. Thousands of dollars were spent, not to organize the workers, a task for which the militants have been agitating for many years, but to send eighty delegates to the convention.

These activities, together with the elimination of active members as a result of the expulsion policy prepared the ground for the present farce in Boston.

Opportunity For Solidarity.

The convention of the International Ladies' Garment Workers, which marked 25 years of proletarian struggle, might have been a great event in the history of the union. On such an occasion true proletarian leaders come together not only to paint in glowing colors the struggles and achievements of the past but also to review the cause of many defeats, examine the structure and policies of the organization in order to devise new methods of struggle and shape new tools to suit the constantly changing conditions.

Not so with this convention. The opening was a real holiday for the workers of Boston to lay down their tools and join the parade of welcome to the delegates. The flying red banners and the genuine spirit of joy gladdened the hearts of every worker who is dreaming of the day when those who toil will become the masters of the world.

Militants Inspired.

Even the committees of expelled who had come from various parts of the country to appeal against their expulsion, forgot for a while the bitter persecution that was the reward for their long years of service in the union. They forgot that they who are ready to give their all to strengthen and build the union have been expelled, black-listed and subjected to great suffering, not by the employers but by the leaders of their own union. All this was lost sight of and they joined in the general celebration.

It seemed as though the smoke of the battle that had been raging for the past few months disappeared, and all, even those who had come to regard the union as a means of assuring for themselves a comfortable living as union officials, fondly looked back when, urged on by an irresistible feeling of revolt, they came together to lay the foundation of a dream that was to come true in the distant future.

Amid all the celebration, there lurked in the subconsciousness of every worker and rank and file delegate, the questions: Will the administration use this convention to continue its ruthless policy of expulsions, which has brought chaos and demoralization in the ranks of the workers? Will it unseat the delegates who have come with mandates from some of the most important local unions to participate in the deliberations of this convention, or will it openly give lie to their own statement, made in the opening address of the president, that nothing but another demonstration like the strike of 1910 can bring real results in the present negotiations with the employers in New York?

Is there still a spark of the old idealism in the hearts of those who at one time were part of the revolutionary movement in this country, or have they gone over body and soul to Gompers and will they emulate his example at Portland by converting the convention into a slaughter house of all those who dared challenge their incompetent leadership?

MACHINE BEGINS ATTACK

The credentials committee definitely settled all doubts. The first attack was launched against the delegates of Local No. 1, four of whom were recommended to be unseated.

Local No. 1 is one of the largest units in the organization with a membership of 11,000, and has for many years been the corner stone of the International. It is largely composed of young and more militant elements, and has always been a thorn in the side of the officialdom. The local had once before been reorganized but, due to the persistent efforts of the workers in the shops, the expelled members soon found themselves at the head of the organization again.

Membership Defied.

The report of the credentials committee was received in intense silence. When the chairman had concluded it seemed as tho even the stand-patters were shocked at this open defiance of the expressed will of the membership. For a few moments no one stirred. When the discussion finally started it was a battle royal. The technical charge of violating the order of the G. E. B. sunk to the background. The real issue was the advocacy of revolutionary methods of struggle displeasing to the powers that be.

The discussion clearly marked the division in the union. On the side of the administration were well-fed officials who had long forgotten the woes of the worker at the machine. The revengeful tone of their speeches indicated a spirit of retaliation for all the defeats they had suffered at the hands of the membership. On the side of the militants, were workers who, tho not trained in the arts of oratory, expressed the class conscious spirit of the worker and the conviction of the true idealist.

Youth's Impassioned Cry.

One of the contested delegates cried out in an impassioned voice: "I am a young man eager to give my youth and enthusiasm to the service of the organization. You may unseat me as a delegate but I shall still remain at the machine, and it is there amid the workers that I shall continue my work and receive appreciation."

Another speaker openly boldly stated that he considers the action of the G. E. B. detrimental to the organization. He contended that grouping of members along lines of policy was healthy and essential for the organization, and challenged the officials to prove that the League was a dual union.

Artificially Prepared Majority.

The discussion was to no account. The artificially prepared majority, many of whom were newcomers, were unmindful of the long years of service rendered by the delegates in question. They were little concerned about the effect that suppression of opinion and ideas would have upon the future life of the organization. To them, the revision of the old methods of struggle which had proven so fatal and the insistence of the militants for a radical change, were of no account. The machine had worked for their election. They were sent here to vote against the lefts and religiously obeyed.

In spite of the campaign of terrorism started months before the convention, in spite of the expulsion and disfranchisement of many active members, reorganization of locals, removal from the ballot and arbitrary and illegal elections, the opposition lined up 51 votes which, together with the 20 contested delegates numbered 70, one-fourth of the convention, representing about 40 per cent of the membership. It required real men and women to raise their voice against the administration in a carefully staged atmosphere of prejudice and the lynching spirit.

MAD STEAM ROLLER TACTICS

The unseating of Local No. 1 delegates was followed by others. Whatever the technical charge may have been it became more clear as the convention went on that a mad terror had seized the present rulers of the International, and the charge of dual unionism was merely used as a cover under which the administration hoped to eliminate all revolutionary elements opposed to their ruinous policies.

In the case of Chasanow, Local No. 38, New York, the chairman of the credentials committee read a leaflet which endorsed his candidacy. The leaflet outlined the program of the progressive element, such as the shop delegate system, amalgamation, all-inclusive labor party, etc.

Like the League Program.

Chasanow was not a League member, but the chairman stated that since this program is similar to that advocated by the League, the convention will declare him unfit to take part in its deliberations.

While the machine showed great liberality in discussing the technical charges, they carefully shut off all discussion on the principles of the League, when this was attempted by the contested delegates.

Unseating of Local 9 Delegates.

Another dramatic incident was the unseating of eight delegates of Local No. 9 which had freed itself from the domination of the reactionaries three years ago. The recommendation also carried with it a clause placing the local under the supervision of the G. E. B.

In a stirring address Louis Hyman, manager of the local, hurled serious indictments against the machine, charging a frame-up against the local which the machine had attempted to capture on many different occasions but had failed to seize because of the opposition of the rank and file. He accused them of taking advantage of this artificial majority to accomplish what they had failed to do in the elections of the local.

In the case of George Halpern, they came out clearly with their intention to administer a blow to the Workers Party which at present is the spokesman of the revolutionary workers in this country.

It is difficult to believe that this convention, which involves the expense of more than $100,000 collected out of the meager earnings of the workers, bears any relationship to the difficulties facing the workers in the industry.

It is hard to reconcile oneself to the fact that this is a convention of a trade union meeting during a critical period of its existence, when union control, the fruit of many years' struggles, is fast slipping out of its hands, and the sweat-shop system is fast returning to the industry, reducing to nought the higher wages and sanitary conditions of the workers.

Not Like a Trade Union.

Any observer who sat thru the long days at the convention is more likely to receive the impression that this is more of a tribunal of the masters of the world calling to account all those who refused to bow their heads in submission rather than a convention of a trade union.

The workers of the International have vainly looked to this convention to lay down plans for curbing the ravenous appetites of the employers for greater profits and to alleviate the hardships of the workers. The leaders have a far more important task to perform. It is the rebels, the disobedient in their own ranks that must be put down first, and then all will run smooth and easy.

Militant's Work Begins.

The leaders of the International may have an artificial majority at a packed convention. They may attempt to stifle every form of opposition, but so long as they cannot answer the crying needs of the workers in the industry, so long as they cannot and dare not face the pressing problems that confront every worker in his daily struggles, they are doomed. They may gloat over their empty victories, but their desperate policy proves conclusively that they fear the revolt of the masses in their union who consider them the direct cause of their misery.

Militants! The convention is over, but our work has just begun. It is idealism, courage, foresight and determination that will finally win. You have all that on your side. The future belongs to you.

The Poor Fish says: Billy Sunday has given religion a bad jolt. He is always advising people to go to Jesus, but when he got a pain in the belly that was liable to send him there, instead of going in the general direction of Christ he went to Rochester to have his kidneys treated.

Russia's Production Increasing.

LENINGRAD, May 21.—The production of the Leningrad industries for last February had considerably increased as compared with January, 1924. The productivity of work in the Leningrad metal branch has grown 20 per cent. The output of the tobacco works has increased 25 per cent. The paper mills produced over 40,000 poods more of paper.

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

The Committee on Union Label of the International Ladies Garment Workers' Union recommend that the sum of $200,000 be appropriated by the convention for advertising union label goods in such widely read magazines as the Saturday Evening Post and the Ladies' Home Journal. This would make an Egyptian mummy laugh. It happens that both magazines are non-union publications, owned by Curtis, the notorious scab herder and open shopper. The fakers who control the I. L. G. W. U. are continually howling against the radicals in their ranks and accusing them of trying to break up the union. Yet we have the yellow socialists union leaders recommending that $200,000 be dumped into the coffers of open shop publishers. Labor fakers patronize scab taxis, scab hotels and scab on each other. It is well they are shedding whatever shred of decency that clung to them so that the workers may be thoroughly disillusioned.

McAdoo looks considerably more like a candidate now than he did the day after it was learned he accepted a retainer of $50,000 from Doheny, the oil king. Since then his managers have gone over him several times with soap and water, and tho oil and water don't mix, anything is liable to happen in politics. It speaks volumes for the Democratic Party that a damaged oil can is the best it can offer the imperial American voting king—king for one day.

Calvin Coolidge may apply for his share of the Soldiers' bonus which he tried to kill by veto. Being a practical fellow, he probably reasons that he is entitled to some compensation for the hundreds of thousands of votes, the little patriotic speech will cost him. The press informs us that the president was "gassed" forty-five minutes by Brigadier General Sawyer, as a treatment for a sore throat. Now, if Calvin can dig up a second-hand gas mask, he can claim his share of the price of patriotism with as good a right as many of the members of the American Legion. He, at least served on the Massachusetts water front.

James Brown, socialist member of the British parliament, is a nice, moderate sort of a fellow who would not hurt a hair on the head of a member of the ruling class even tho it be a King. "Comrade" Brown knows what the wicked Communists of Russia failed to realize that the workers can emancipate themselves, not by tearing down what has already been built up, but by exchanging places with those who are already in the places that are built up. For instance: when the Russian workers came into power, the czar lost his head and went underground. When the British socialists assumed office, James Brown became king of Scotland. Everybody was satisfied—but the workers. The confoundedly stupid wage slaves found themselves no better off than before and went on strikes to get a little more salt herring for their wives and children.

James Brown is a former miner. He is now chancellor of the Church of Scotland. The nobility call him King. They hail his wife as Queen. Isn't that more pleasant for "Comrade" Brown, than going to the trouble of overthrowing the capitalists system and establishing a Soviet Republic, abolishing titles, and royal robes and maids-in-waiting, etc. Of course! Nobody would think otherwise but a revolutionist. When "Comrade" Brown arrived in Edinburgh, 21 of His Majesty's guns fired a royal salute for him. So the king is not such a bad fellow after all! If the workers only knew their masters—if they could only get close enough to them—how different things would be.

At Holyrood palace the Queen's (Mrs. "Fellow Worker" Brown) Seventh Hussars mounted guard as the royal flag was hoisted over the palace. Comrade Brown wore the uniform of Lord Lieutenant of Ayrshire. After the royal pair were properly rigged out they proceeded to St. Giles cathedral and opened the general assembly of the church. They were hauled to the religious edifice in a gold state coach. After the religious ceremonies were over a series of levees and banquets were initiated that will last for ten days. They are still going full blast. So you see, how the British Socialists, the prototypes of our Hillquits and Bergers are freeing the British working class. They will free them one by one, somewhat after the fashion of our American labor bankers.

MINERS FIGHT FARRINGTON POLICIES

COMMUNISTS CONVENE IN RED MOSCOW

Russian Party Congress Begins Today

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, Russia, May 22.—The opening session of the Enlarged Executive Committee of the Communist International has been postponed until the 10th of June. The Executive Committee of the Communist International also postponed the opening of the fifth World Congress of the Communist International until June 15.

MOSCOW, Russia, May 22.—The congress of the Russian Communist Party opens here today to consider the national policy and elect the party committees which supervise the administration of the government.

The party is expected to vote further encouragement to the present campaign against the bourgeoisie and private enterprise. Undoubtedly more drastic action against the retail traders will be planned by the Communist congress in its sessions.

Attack Petty Bourgeois.

The program at present calls for attack on the petty business men by special assistance given to the co-operatives. The government now allows co-operatives to choose their own locations for business, reduces taxes and rents for them, and in other ways gives direct support. The co-operatives are permitted to offer workers credit terms on purchases of clothes and other necessities.

Private traders are not given the right to offer credit, are taxed to the limit, are charged high rents on their stores and homes, and must pay high rates for the education of their children.

Boost Manufacturing.

The question of stimulating the manufacturing industry of Russia will be the cause of much lively debate, it is anticipated. The authorities have been continuing their support of the manufacturing work even at considerable loss, because of the militancy of the city workers. They have attempted to pay for the losses here by gains in agriculture and raw material production.

F. G. Dzerzshinsky's work as head of the supreme council of national economy will be scrutinized carefully by the Communist congress. Dzerzhinsky has attempted to put thru a program of strict business methods since his coming to office at the first of the year. He has met a good deal of opposition. He closed non-paying factories and tried to reduce the overhead expenses of large official staffs.

Who Shall Lead?

The leadership of the party will be of great moment to the congress. Leon Trotzky, Commissar of War and the Red Army, and G. E. Zinoviev, president of the Leningrad Soviet and chairman of the Communist International, are the two most outstanding figures of the party in Russia. Zinoviev has had the longer association with the dead leader, Lenin, which many of the Communists consider a great advantage to him in the bid for leadership.

Another matter that will receive important consideration by the Communist congress is the "spring housecleaning" of the party. All doubtful elements will be subject to investigation and a thoro purging process will be used to rid the Communist Party of Russia of unsafe elements.

The Communist International and the Red International Labor Union meetings will follow the Russian Communist Party congress here.

NEW YORK, May 22.—The great debate of the season has all New York on its toes with expectancy. Next Monday, May 25, at 3 p. m. in Carnegie Hall, Bertrand Russell, noted English philosopher, and Scott Nearing, well known American professor, clash on opposite sides of the subject: "Resolved, that the Soviet form of government is applicable to western civilization. Nearing takes the affirmative; Russell, the negative. Samuel Untermeyer, the lawyer, will act as chairman.

Bertrand Russell has travelled in Russia and China extensively and holds that the Soviets are not applicable to western nations. He is a great admirer of the Chinese culture. Among his many books is a late one: "The Prospects of Industrial Civilization," which was written after his Russian experiences.

The debate has been arranged by the League For Public Discussion.

HARVEY TO SPIT FIRE AT HUGHES IN EDITORIALS

McLean Hires Knee Pants Boy On "Post"

WASHINGTON, May 22.—Anouncement by F. B. McLean, of the Washington Post, heretofore the mouthpiece of the administration, that he has engaged Col. George Harvey as editorial director of the paper, beginning June 1, has sent a chill thru the state department, and has raised the eyebrows of the entire administration.

Harvey Visits Cal.

Harvey resigned as ambassador to Great Britain after Coolidge came into the presidency, and it was at first understood that he was to manage the 1924 campaign. He came here and stayed a week as a guest of the White House. Then he vanished, and soon afterward his personal representative here ceased to pick up hopeful business magnates and other notables and escort them to private interviews with Cautious Cal.

At that time it was noised abroad that Harvey had urged Coolidge to begin negotiations with Russia. Sen. Borah and Harvey had met and talked. Sen. Ladd and other travelers thru Russia had given Harvey their views. Coolidge made an equivocal statement in his December message, and then permitted Hughes to slap the Russian government in the face when it interpreted this declaration as a hint to offer a conference on Russo-American questions. Harvey had never loved Hughes; now it was thought that he esteemed the Secretary of State even less.

Harvey Tough Reactionary.

While Harvey is a reactionary of the most outspoken, even vindictive type, he is likewise incapable of forgetting personal differences. His control of the editorial policy of the Washington Post means that drops of vitriol will be deposited on the blushing countenance of Hughes at critical moments, if Hughes remains in the cabinet.

United States Navy Needs More Cruisers To Fight For Peace

WASHINGTON, May 22.—A naval construction program involving $150,000,000 is necessary to bring the United States navy up to the 5-5-3 treaty ratio, Chairman Butler of the House naval affairs committee, declared in the House today. A bill providing for this program will be called up in the House next week.

EDOUARD HERRIOT, PROSPECTIVE FRENCH PREMIER ASSURES BANKERS THEY NEED NOT FEAR HIS POLICY

PARIS, May 22.—Edouard Herriot, slated to be the next premier of France, assured President Millerand today that the radicals and socialists who will assume office, intend to pursue a sound financial policy.

The assurance had an immediate effect on the exchange, the franc rising to 18.05 to the dollar. It is understood that what Herriot told the president, will enable him to reassure J. P. Morgan and the syndicate, which loaned France money when the franc was tumbling.

The entire political situation is brighter as a result of the conference, which took place at the Elysee, with Premier Poincare and ex-Premier Painleve present.

GARY STEEL TOILERS HOLD BIG MEETING

Speakers Talk Unionism To Large Audience

The exploited slaves of the Steel Trust in the city of Gary, Indiana, are recovering from the psychological effects of the defeat suffered by them in 1919 and are showing an interest in organization that is a decided relief from the apathy that prevailed there until recently.

This was indicated when Roumanian Hall was packed with workers of all nationalities on Wednesday evening where an organization meeting under the auspices of the Executive Council of Organizations in the Steel Industry was held.

The steel workers listened attentively to the speakers and at the conclusion of the meeting many of them signified their willingness to join and help organize the workers in the steel industry thruout the country in one united body, in order to be in a position to win more of the product of their toil from the greedy robbers who own the steel industry.

E. Johnson, chairman of the Lake County organization committee, presided. William Hannon, secretary-treasurer of the Executive Council of Organization in the Steel Industry, spoke on the necessity of organization and invited the steel workers to sign application blanks for membership.

Other speakers were A. Wilson, of the Broommakers' Union, W. N. Tucker, Electrical Workers; E. Wermer, Electrical Workers, and T. J. O'Flaherty.

The organizers of the meeting were pleased at the numbers that turned out. Many of the leaders in the great 1919 steel strike were present. Some of them frankly expressed their view to the DAILY WORKER reporter that only a union comprising all of the workers in the steel industry, would challenge the enthusiasm of Gary's slaves.

They held that the workers who saw their strength frittered away in 1919, between rival international unions, who quarreled for the per capita would not care to go thru the same experience again. They wanted to organize along the lines of industry and ignore craft divisions.

This is also the position of the more progressive and farsighted organizers that the DAILY WORKER representative came in contact with. One could not but feel optimistic after seeing the splendid enthusiasm at the Gary meeting on last Wednesday evening that sentiment for organization is now growing so fast among the steel workers that only a rigid adherence to an antique form of organization can halt the forward march of the mill slaves.

All the speakers made a very good impression on the audience with the exception of an interruption from the floor, which caused a little irritation and annoyance. It was understood, of course, that a goodly number of Steel Trust spies were present with the object of attempting to break up the meeting, but there was too much unanimity to give any such attempts even a slight hope of success.

Those in charge of the organization work in Gary and vicinity announced that another meeting would be held at an early date.

It does give the staff of the DAILY WORKER a great deal of satisfaction to get letters like the following from its readers. Everybody likes to know that their work is being appreciated and Communists are no different in that respect. We will try to make every paper a little better than the one the day before. Let us know what you think of it.

"To the DAILY WORKER: Will this make you happy? They are the words of one who did not escape the cross during war days. The DAILY WORKER is simply great, and destined to have a very large influence. We read it and pass it on to others, who pass it on in turn. I trust,—how far that little candle throws its beams.

The Truth Hurts

We would like to put this question up to President Frank Farrington presiding at the Illinois Miners' Convention at Peoria:

"What do you hope to accomplish by forcing the withdrawal of the DAILY WORKER reporter from the Miners' Convention?"

There can be only one answer. By some far stretch of the imagination, Farrington hopes to intimidate the DAILY WORKER. He thinks he has the power to stop the DAILY WORKER telling the truth about the crimes of the reaction within the Miners' Union. He thinks he can play the role of censor.

* * * *

But the DAILY WORKER will not be intimidated. It will not be bludgeoned into hiding the truth. Our reporter on the outside of the convention hall at Peoria, Illinois, is more powerful than ever. The DAILY WORKER attacked by Farrington, the enemy of progress, will become stronger than ever among the wide masses of the miners' union membership.

* * * *

It was Albert Sidney Burleson, as postmaster general during the late war, who tried to crush the labor press that was opposed to the war.

Burleson thought he could make the workers of the nation back the Wilson war regime if he could wipe out labor's publications.

So he barred them from the mails, while the department of justice brought indictments against labor's editors and sent some of them to prison. But the truth persisted. All the nation now knows it was a capitalist war. The Wilson regime has fallen. Burleson has been forgotten. J. Mitchell Palmer and Harry M. Daugherty, the war and post-war attorney generals, have been swept into the discard.

Instead of a compromising, timid socialist movement of the pre-war and war days, there is now a fighting, courageous Communist movement in the United States.

* * * *

One of the biggest issues at Peoria was the Howat issue. That is the issue on which the backbone of Farrington's power was broken. That is the issue that the DAILY WORKER stressed at the Indianapolis Convention, last winter. It is the issue the DAILY WORKER has raised continuously since the convention of the Illinois Miners' Convention at Peoria. And it was this issue that was settled in a brilliant victory for the rank and file.

* * * *

If the Howat fight had failed Farrington would have rested on his laurels. If Howat had been sent back to Kansas, repudiated by the Illinois miners, Farrington would have been satisfied, and the chances are that the DAILY WORKER would not have been molested.

But the Howat fight won. The DAILY WORKER played a great part in winning that fight. The crushing defeat of the whole Lewis-Farrington alliance, drove Mr. Farrington stark mad. He went the way of all despots. In desperation he turned on the DAILY WORKER, and in his wild rage, forced the DAILY WORKER reporter out of the convention hall.

We accept the attack of Mr. Farrington as the greatest tribute he could possibly pay the DAILY WORKER. We have but to remind the miners' delegates, and the membership of the miners' union, that the kept scribblers of the worst capitalist sheets, and the yellowest of the subsidized news agencies, are allowed to remain in the convention hall. Those who fawn on this cheap edition of a Caesar are tolerated.

* * * *

The fight of the DAILY WORKER for the rank and file of the Miners' Union will continue. Our reports of the present historic convention of the Illinois Miners' Union will continue to be as exhaustive as ever. Let Farrington know that the truth cannot be silenced by a Czarist decree. No matter how much the truth may hurt Mr. Farrington, and his ally, Mr. Lewis, it will be told in the columns of the DAILY WORKER.

And it is the truth about all the varied phases of the tremendous struggle in which they are engaged that will help solve the problems confronting the membership of the United Mine Workers of America. It will help free them from the capitalist system that now holds them enslaved.

For six days a wrinkled little old lady lay unconscious on a cot in one of the county hospital wards. No one ever called up to find out about her. No one ever came to see her. She lay there fluttering between life and death ever since she had been brought in after a street car struck her. Then she died.

Perhaps somewhere in the city the little old lady has left a distraught family, a daughter or son who doesn't realize that the government sometimes knows what happens to lost children and wandering grannies. Perhaps there was a sick old grandfather at home waiting the pathetic old lady's return.

Anyway, the worn old body of the little granny will be laid in the Patters' field, unless someone claims it for other services. Some one from the hospital may remember to send a few flowers for the funeral and then earth will claim its own.

NEW YORK—Roy Meyers, an actor first and only person arrested for buying liquor in New York since the prohibition laws became effective, was fined $50.

Indiana Senator Endorsed For Cal's Running Partner

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 22.—A resolution endorsing Senator James E. Watson for the Republican nomination for vice-president was unanimously adopted early today by the platform committee of the Indiana Republican convention.

The platform approved does not mention the Ku Klux Klan but declares that the laws must be enforced upon the "high and low alike," without prejudice to race, creed or color. This plank, coupled with Senator Watson's declaration in his keynote address that quetsions of religion or membership in secret organization are not within the province of political patries, was found acceptable by the Klan.

Three hundred delegates said to be members of the Ku Klux Klan bolted district caucuses last night to attend a meeting at which a slate for state offices of the Klan was agreed on.

ALBANY, N. Y.—Herbert Fuller fell three tsories down an airshaft, shattering the glass canopy. He was arrested, charged with malicious destructino of property.

CLASS COLLABORATION AND APPOINTIVE POWER HIT BY RANK AND FILE DELEGATES

By KARL REEVE.

PEORIA, Ill., May 22.—Not one delegate supported District President Frank Farrington's report, in that part which recommended a "class collaboration" policy, in the discussion at the District 12 Miners' Convention today.

The delegates are bitterly protesting against the appointive power, and are fighting the report of the committee on officers' reports, which has recommended to them that they disregard their local union instructions urging the abolition of the appointive power. The fight over this issue is likely to continue for several days.

Unanimous Opposition.

There was almost two hours discussion on that part of the president's report, pages 42 and 43, which not one delegate from the floor supported.

Delegate after delegate disagreed with this but felt that their hands were tied because of the Jacksonville contract.

Delegates showed that the union had not kept pace with the development of industry. They showed that what was offered by Farrington was also offered by the coal barons and that we should organize as a class; that it had been wrong for the miners to stay at work when the railroad workers were on strike, and vice versa.

Boost Non-Union Coal.

Delegate John Watt pointed out that the Federated Press had showed that there was a movement on foot to buy non-union coal, no matter whether it cost more than union coal, in order to destroy the United Mine Workers of America.

He showed that it cost in Illinois $1.65 per ton to mine coal and $2.70 per ton for freight, while in West Virginia it cost $3.25 per ton to mine and the freight rate was $3.17.

He showed by statistics that it cost more to mine and ship coal in non-union fields than it did in union, and that Farrington's proposition was not a solution, but only aggravated the situation.

Exposes Farrington's Bunk.

He pointed out that to cheapen production was bunk. He showed that to live up to the present agreement was going to bring the greatest hardship to the organization. Not one single delegate supported that part of the report. None of them seemed to know what should be done about it.

Farrington Gets Pessimistic.

Farrington, talking in support of his class collaboration scheme, painted a pessimistic picture of the conditions in the mining industry. He stated that his report was only an emphasis of the contract and that no part of his report was out of line with that contract.

He stated that there were grave doubts in the minds of the international officers, as well as in his own mind, as to whether the miners would get much work under the present contract. He said that he had many letters from Illinois coal operators, stating that there would have to be a modification of the contract and that no one could tell what the future held for the miners unless the Kentucky coal operators were forced to accept the contract.

Delegates, hearing this, remembered that part of the published letters between Farrington and Lewis which was concerned with the keeping of

6-HOUR DAY IS HAILED BY COAL DIGGERS

Farrington Makes Plea For Mine Owners

By KARL REEVE.

PEORIA, Ill., May 22.—Dissatisfaction over the three year wage agreement was expressed by delegates to the Illinois mine workers convention, in a spirited attack on the section of President Farrington's report dealing with the wage scale. The progressive delegates declared that it was "a fine accomplishment"—yes, a fine accomplishment for the coal operators.

The report of the committee on officers' reports designated the three year agreement signed between the officers of the mine workers of America and the coal operators at Jacksonville, Fla., last February as a "splendid accomplishment," and "appreciation is extended to our scale committee." But delegate Tumulty pointed out that if the miners, in their referendum vote, had been allowed to vote on the wage scale first and then on the three year agreement, that the contract would have been voted down by the miners.

"We are told by our officers that this is a great achievement," said Delegate Tumulty, "and that they made the best contract they could under the circumstances." But we are also told by the coal operators that "this is the best contract that they have ever signed with the miners union."

Delegate Lawrence Lamb demanded that the committee on officers' reports tell the convention just where this splendid accomplishment came in, and the chairman of the committee replied by hinting at mysterious circumstances which prevented a better contract. He declared that the contract was made under difficult circumstances and that it was the best contract that could be made, considering all circumstances.

"Under the present agreement the men are working eight hours a day and producing 50 per cent more coal than the supply demands," said Delegate John Watts. "How many of you delegates are now earning more than $4 per day? In my sub-district 20 out of 36 coal mines are closed down, and that is true of all our sub-districts.

Officials "Powerless."

"All the officers of our union, one after the other, have stated that they did not know of a way out of our troubles. They have admitted they are

BERLIN, May 22.—Communists are mustering wives of their imprisoned comrades for demonstration in and around the Reichstag at the opening sessions. While a clamor is raised in the corridors and outside the parliament buildings, Communist members plan to demand amnesty for all political prisoners.

SOCIETY PARASITES THREATEN TO DIE FOR COUNTRY; SPLENDID IDEA

MOLINE, May 22.—The Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs pledged itself to "stand side by side" with the manhood of the country in defense of the flag. No doubt the fighting Amazons will stand where they always stood, several thousand miles behind the firing line, with that portion of the countrys' manhood that clips coupons and lives on the fruits of the workers' toil.

These society ladies hate the very thot of pacifism, and so do we. There cannot be any pacifism in society as long as these female parasites can live without labor, while millions of workingclass women are eking out a miserable existence on the pittance that the husbands and keepers of these female hypocrites give their slaves.

MYERSCOUGH NAILS LIES OF PHIL MURRAY

Denounces His Slanders Against Coke Strikers

Vice-President Phil Murray, of the United Mine Workers of America, used the platform at the Illinois Miners' District Convention, now in session, to make false statements against the gallant strikers in the non-union coke fields of Western Pennsylvania who were so basely deserted by the International Union in the 1922 strike. In the following article he is answered by Thomas Myerscough, secretary of the Progressive Miners' Committee, and one of the leaders of the rank and file strike activities in 1922.

By THOMAS MYERSCOUGH.

PEORIA, Ill., May 22.—All miners agree, that the chestnuts were pulled out of the fire in the strike of 1922, because the non-union miners of the country came to our assistance by laying down their tools when we did on April 1st of that year. This is particularly true of the Somerset, Westmoreland and Fayette Counties of Western Pennsylvania.

Yet, in spite of this fact, Philip Murray, international vice-president of the U. M. W. of A., himself a product of a non-union field, undertook to place the blame for the loss of the strike in those fields, on the strikers themselves.

When he did this, Murray knew he was not telling the truth, but he thot he could get away with it because the Illinois miners were far removed from the scene of conflict and would not be familiar with the facts in the case.

Contradicting Murray's Lies.

Being an active member of the U. M. W. of A. in District No. 5 at that time, and being familiar with the entire situation because of such close proximity, I will try to correct the false statements of Murray by giving you the facts.

The coke region miners, who were specifically mentioned in the attack, were, without question, as good a bunch of strikers as any who participated in that memorable struggle. They had actively taken part in the preparatory work, and when April 1st rolled around they dropped their tools, thereby giving hope to the none-too-confident men of the old organized fields. During the progress of the strike and up to the time when the Cleveland Agreement was signed, there was no semblance of a break in the ranks in the coke region.

Union's Promise to Coke Men.

Representatives of our union at meeting after meeting were telling those men that, because of the manner in which they had rallied to our support, the U. M. W. of A. would never forget them, that there would be no contracts signed in any field unless the coke region was signed up. In spite of these promises the International Union signed contracts and settled the strike elsewhere. The coke region miners then began to feel that they were being betrayed and so notified the officials in charge. However, they were pacified with the promise of relief and with positive ultimate victory, only to find that this also was only a promise to be broken. It should be mentioned here that very few men returned to work, even after the Cleveland agreement was signed, and those that did, were mostly men who had union cards from the adjoining union field, according to their own statements to the men of the region who were doing the picketing.

Doubled Crossed By International.

Many things enter into the loss of the strike in the coke region and the adjoining counties of Pennsylvania, and the strikers cannot in any sense be blamed. For instance, at a certain meeting in one of the principal camps in the strike zone, one of the miners asked this question of one of the organizers who was engaged with the task of pacifying these men after the old union territory had returned all its men to work: "Will the United Mine Workers sign contracts with the coal companies who own both union and non-union mines, if such contracts fail to include all the mines owned by any given company?"

"Under no circumstances," answered the organizer, will the U. M. W. of A. sign contracts with any company, unless that contract covers all the mines owned by the company in question."

This answer was so definite that it was believed by every one who heard it, but a few days were suffice to inform the miners who had made our victory possible, that the promises of organizers were like the proverbial pie-crust, easily broken.

Signing Hillman Contract.

The words of these organizers had scarcely stopped ringing in the ears of those who heard them, when information reached them that the officials of District No. 5 had signed up with the Hillman Coal & Coke Company for their mines in the union territory, but that nothing had been done for their mines in Fayette county (coke region). Fact is, the ink was scarcely dry on the contract for the mines in the union territory when this same Hillman concern began throwing furniture and families out on the street at its non-union holdings.

Thus began the misery of the men who had in no small way made possible the victory in our struggle of 1922 and had made the "No Backward Step" slogan of Lewis, a seeming reality. Immediately after the signing of the Hillman contract, many other coal companies signed up in like manner, much to the chagrin of the men who had hoped to escape the miseries of non-unionism.

Lewis Signed Despite Protest.

One notable case of this kind was the signing of a contract in District No. 2 (central Pennsylvania) at Nanty Glo, where John L. Lewis signed a contract himself over the head of John Brophy. It appears that this company had a non-union mine in Somerset county, Pa., and they were desirous of starting the mine at Nanta Glo, but Brophy told the coal company that the only way they could start this mine was by signing for the other one in Somerset county. This they refused to do, saying that Lewis had told them that it was unnecessary and that Brophy would have to sign up. To make it brief, I will merely say that after Brophy, his executive board and even the miners in local union meeting, had decided that the company must sign up for both mines before any could work, President Lewis signed up with the operator himself, with the result that the mine in Somerset county is still a non-union mine.

Strike Refused to Collapse.

It is well known that the miners had been working for some time before the International Executive board levied an assessment on the membership, and its appears from things that followed that Lewis thought that the strike would come to an abrupt end and that the blame would fall on the men of the coke region themselves. However, things did not turn out that way, and in the month of December, 1922, Lewis sent a committee of National Board members into the coke region, to conduct an investigation. This committee, accompanied by the National Board member of District 5, and also by Wm. Feeney, the organizer in charge of that field, made an extensive survey of the conditions in that field and recommended that the strike be continued. This information was conveyed to a responsible officer of the United Mine Workers, by one of the members of the committee, who no doubt thought that the report being submitted by them would be accepted.

Strike Called Off.

Such was not to be, for when the board met in Indianapolis early in January, 1923, at the end of the first day's session, Lewis called the committee to his private chamber and when the report was submitted to the board it was to the effect that the strike should be called off. On January 18, 1923, the coke region miners were hurriedly called into convention at New Salem, Pa., and by the use of threats of cutting off relief, well-known machine tactics and innuendo, the strike was brought to an end. Then the storm broke loose, the strikers, who, with their families, had fought a valiant battle, were practically deserted and the best opportunity in thirty years to organize that field had been lost.

When Miners Got Relief.

The Pittsburgh Miners' Relief, referred to by Murray, was the only medium thru which relief could be secured during the strike, and was distributing relief where it was needed most before either the coke region relief committee, headed by Board Member O'Leary, or the officials of District No. 5 made any effort to secure relief. If there were any dual relief movements there in the coke region, the two last named groups were the ones. These two factions, battling for official supremacy, staged an open war on October 1, 1922, in the city of Pittsburgh, over this matter, but failed to reach a satisfactory settlement. Only the then approaching 1922 election brought peace between them, and that after the writer refused to enter into a political arrangement with Feeney, against the Lewis-Murray-Fagan machine of District 5.

Westmoreland-Somerset Later.

In this brief manner, I believe I have shown that the officials in charge of the affairs there and the National Executive Board are responsible for the loss of the strike in the coke region. Thru these columns I will give the details later, also the contributing causes. I will also cover the Westmoreland and Somerset County fields in like manner.

OF COURSE LABOR REACTION FEARS TO HAVE THE RANK AND FILE READ

Selling "The Daily."

Reading "The Daily."

This is why the reactionaries get sore. The DAILY WORKER not only prints the truth about them, but it also gets on the job and sees that it is circulated among the workers and the militants at all conventions. The above pictures show Kitty Harris and Natalie Gomez selling the DAILY WORKER at the Peoria convention of the Illinois Mine Workers, and a militant worker anxiously scanning the copy he has just bought. The reactionaries wouldn't mind if the DAILY WORKER printed the truth if it never got any circulation. What gets under their hides is that people actually read it and believe in it.

EUROPEAN COMMUNISTS REJECT DAWES REPORT IN CONVENTION

BERLIN, May 22.—The sharp difference that separates the two great factions in the German working class movement from each other finds expression in the attitude toward the Dawes reparations report.

The Communists held a convention of delegates from France, Germany, Italy and Belgium in Berlin, at which it was unanimously agreed that the Dawes report and its recommendations are unacceptable from a Communist point of view and even worse than the treaty of Versailles. The Communists will oppose acceptance.

The Socialists, on the other hand, have taken the lead among the German political parties in the agitation for acceptance. The Socialists state that they are not unmindful of the heavy loads the plan lays upon the German workers, but they welcome it as a positive way out of the present impasse. They take comfort in the fact that France is struggling against its acceptance, while their Socialist comrade, Ramsay MacDonald, over in England is in favor of it.

Secretary Of Whisky In Coolidge Cabinet Not To Quit Just Yet

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, May 22.—Passage of the soldier bonus bill by the Senate, over the veto of the president, will not lead to the resignation of Secretary Mellon or any other member of the cabinet. Before the final vote was taken it became evident that the stock market and banking lobbies were doing their utmost to secure votes to sustain the veto, and Mellon would be considered merely their agent rather than the responsible leader of the anti-bonus campaign.

Mellon's resignation will come later—and for quite another reason—after Francis H. Heney and Senator Couzens have started the official investigation into his administration of the Internal Revenue Bureau.

GARY MILLS RUN AT THREE-FIFTHS FULL CAPACITY

Lack Of Orders Shuts Out Workers

By H. W. GARNER.

HAMMOND, Ind., May 22.—From what one hears from the numerous workers who are walking the streets of Hammond, East Chicago, Indiana Harbor and nearby towns in search of jobs, there can be no doubt that business is slowing up all over the country. Many coal miners are here now, having come to Lake county after the closing down of the mines.

Depression has not yet affected the Standard Steel Car Company here to any extent, but the smaller plant of the Keith Railway Equipment Company, which manufactures and repairs coal cars, is practically closed down.

Car Makers Slow Up.

As for East Chicago, I am informed that the General American Company, manufacturers of freight and tank cars, laid off a considerable number of men some weeks back. The Sinclair Oil Refining Company's plant is operating on a large scale, altho decidedly less than a year ago.

It is very difficult to get information concerning the output of the Inland Steel Company and the Marx Steel Mills of Indiana Harbor, but one of the best barometers I know is the L. C. L. Transfer, of the Indiana Harbor Belt Railway. This is a large freight transfer house, located at Gibson, just out of Hammond, where the Belt Railway transfers practically all incoming and outgoing freight between Indiana Harbor and all parts of the United States. I am informed by a checker, who is a close friend of mine, that transfer of freight has fallen about 35 per cent.

The decline in steel shipment is exceptionally large. A car which formerly carried from three to five orders now contains as many as 20 orders, indicating that producers of steel products are operating on small orders. As small orders are seldom placed for future delivery, it would appear that advance bookings are small indeed. While considerable steel is being moved, the outlook for the future is bad.

In the building trades there is still plenty of work, but here, too, the prospect for the future is not encouraging. The local building boom has been entirely a question of putting up rental residences and small cheap homes (on the partial payment plan) to take care of the great number of workers from southern and central Illinois and other parts of Indiana who have flocked to Lake county. Owing to the extreme scarcity of dwellings, many of these men were literally forced to build a home on the payment plan or stay on the streets. With the collapse of the steel and equipment industries, it is probable that the bottom will fall out of the building boom.

SOUTH CHICAGO DISTRICTS FEEL BUSINESS LAPSE

Unemployment Grows In Steel Towns

By J. RAMIREZ.

GARY, Ind., May 22.—Conditions here have changed materially since last year. No longer do carloads of negroes and Mexicans swarm into the town with every train. The brief, shabby "prosperity" which Gary knew, is at an end. Unemployment is the big issue of the moment.

A few weeks ago, the United States Steel Corporation, which owns Gary body and soul, and dominates the lives of many thousands of workers here, began to curtail operations because no new orders were being booked. At present, the company's plants are working at less than 60 per cent of capacity and the situation of the Gary workers is becoming worse every day.

Open Hearth On Part Time.

The Open Hearth section, employing some 3,000 men, is working only four days a week. The "Merchant's Mills" including the biggest steel trust plant manufacturing finished steel products, is on a three-day schedule. This effects about 6,000 workers.

In the sheet and tin mills, only four mills out of 24 are running. The Plate Mill is almost entirely shut down. Both the electric shop and the big machine shop laid off one-third of their working force Monday.

On all sides one hears talk of a wage cut. Nothing definite has been announced along this line, but the various straw bosses are hinting that the company will take advantage of the severe depression to force down the wages of the workers to as low a level as possible.

Canadian Miners Evicted.

CALGARY, Can., May 22.—Evictions of coal miners in the Edmonton field where the union is fighting a wage cut are setting public opinion against the Western Canada Coal Operators Assn. The co-operators claim that the use of fuel oil has injured the Canadian coal market. The strike includes camps in Alberta and eastern British Columbia, organized as District 18, U. M. W. A.

MINER'S HAIL 6-HOUR DAY

powerless to lead us in this difficulty. Instead they dwell on past accomplishments, and tell us how much better off we are than we were years ago when there was no union."

"Our international officers tell us that the coal industry must be stabilized. They tell us that there are 50 per cent too many mines and 50 per cent too many miners. They tell us that 50 per cent of us must find some new occupation. We are told to go to the farms, but we find the farmers are bankrupt and they are being told to go into the mines. Some of the miners are going to the farm, but the only farm they go to is the poor farm.

Nationalization and Six Hours.

"The only immediate solution of the problems of the coal miner is the nationalization of the mines, the establishment of the six-hour day, and the demand that the industry be compelled to take care of its employes, and the organization of the non-union coal fields."

In defending the report of the committee on officers' reports, President Farrington pessimistically stated that the six-hour day is not a solution of the problems. Farrington said, "It is popular to talk of a shorter work day. It tickles the ears but it is not possible at this time."

Talks For Operators.

Farrington showed his consideration for the coal operators by saying that "It would be impossible for the Illinois mine operators to go on a six-hour day and compete with the non-union coal fields. The non-union fields are working ten hours a day and for lower wages and the central competitive fields would have to close down if they had to accept a six-hour day. The six-hour day is not a solution to our problem."

Some of the delegates pointed out to the DAILY WORKER reporter that if the miners had taken Farrington's view in the past, it would have been impossible to secure the eight-hour day, as they secured it under the same circumstances as now prevail in the fight for the six-hour day.

That "Non-Union" Excuse.

"In order for a shorter work day to succeed we would have to have all or the major portion of the miners on a shorter work day basis, and the non-union fields must be organized," Farrigton said.

"An aggressive bunch of mine officials! They tell the miners they can't have a six-hour day until the non-union fields are organized, and then they say, as Lewis, Green and Murray said, that it is impossible to organize the non-union fields. Every demand that means something to the miners is, 'imposible at this time.'"

The report of the committee on officers' report with regard to the wage scale was adopted.

In the discussion of the section of Farrington's report, devoted to the Illinois Miners. Delegate Pritchard of Herrin accused the Illinois Miner of doing Herrin and Williamson county an injustice by accusing the Conservative Party in that place of being a Ku Klux Klan Party. He, Pritchard, practically admitted he is a member of the Klan. He stated the Ku Klux Klan has made Herrin the cleanest town in the county and "If I lived in Peoria I would clean this town up too."

DAILY WORKER DEFENDED.

Delegate Miller from Panama suggested that now that the Illinois Miner had been attacked, every paper at the press table had been accused of lieing and he suggested that the DAILY WORKER reporter be brot back and re-seated at the press table.

Upon request of Vice-President Fishwick, who took the chair during the action on Farrington's report, Pritchard withdrew his remarks from the minutes of the convention. Fishwick gave as his reason that "I do not want to bring on the floor of this convention such controversial matter as that mentioned by Delegate Pritchard. We do not want to discuss whether one faction in Herrin is right and another wrong."

In plain words Fishwick's request was an admission that the officers of District 12 are afraid of offending the Ku Klux Klan.

the Kentucky fields unorganized.

Farrington stated that at present there was no demand for coal either from non-union or union fields and when the demand came, those who could sell cheapest would get the market. He assured the delegates that they would fight against any reduction of wages or lowering of the standard of living. He stated that West Virginia, "one of the fields we have to compete with," had mined 30 million more tons of coal than Illinois with approximately the same number of miners.

Draws Dismal Picture.

Farrington expressed the hope that some day the workers would wake up and close their ranks. He repeated that the agreement was there and had to be lived up to and that his report only reiterated that. He drew a dismal and hopeless picture.

Many delegates showed the inability of the coal operators to run the mining industry, pointed out the terrific waste and said that the contract forced the miners to work in unsafe mines. Delegates seemed saturated with the pessimism of Farrington and could not see how class action would materially help them now. The picture drawn by Carry and others seem far away to them.

Not one delegate supported this part of the report altho they accepted it as the inevitable.

In the discussion on the appointive power a hot fight began. The committee on the officers' report recommended the retaining of the appointive power of the president of the district, altho over 70 resolutions had been introduced for the doing away with this tyrannical usage.

Committee Member Rebels.

The surprise of the convention came when Matt Pickford, a member of the committee on officers' report, opposed the committee's report. He did not send in a minority report but spoke from the floor.

"Men sell their souls to the appointive power," cried Pickford. "Its power is unlimited. Thru this appointive power the International has taken everything away from us."

Pickford claimed that he was one of the pioneers in the building of the organization and that for the interests of the union organization the appointive power should be abolished.

Delegate Corbishley, of Zeigler, stated that Farrington had no right to ask delegates to disregard their instructions. He said that he came there instructed to oppose the appointive power and that his local of 1,100 members had discussed the matter thoroly, as had every other local in the district. He maintained that his local of 1,100 members had a right to tell him how to vote on this or any other question.

Corbishley pointed out cases of grievances which the Tit committee and sub-district officials had taken and said they were lost because of some appointee. He showed that at the last election for the district president and the executive board, he had been elected along with two other members at Teller. He said that on the day of the election he was subpoenaed to appear before the grand Jury at Benton.

Corbishley called up the judge and told him that he had an important union function to perform and wanted to be excused. The judge told him that if he did not come, the judge would send for him. When Corbishley went, he told the convention, he found out that the grand jury was not to meet and the judge laughed at him, saying:

Tried to Steal Election.

"You must be against Farrington. He wants you out of town."

Corbishley attributed this action to appointees and charged them with being part of the Farrington political machine.

Delegate Tony Schragel of Johnston City, showed that appointees had tried to steal the election for Farrington. He said that he caught them stealing 65 votes cast for Hindmarsh out of 160 votes and giving them to Farrington. These men were fined by the local and not allowed to hold office for three years. They appealed their case to the district executive board, and one of its members heard the evidence which plainly showed their guilt but he found them "not guilty" and let them be restored to full membership.

Manufacturers' Head Attacks Child Labor And Rail Bills

NEW YORK, May 22.—The closed shop, and child labor legislation aroused the ire of John Edgerton, president of the National Manufacturer's Association. In a speech before that body, which is meeting here in convention, he denounced every sign of progress as the work of "reds."

The Howell-Barkley bill, which would abolish the railroad labor board was also denounced. Americanism of the 100 per cent variety and the G. O. P. were the only things that didn't get Edgerton's goat.

Mellon Urges Cal To Swing Veto Ax On Taxation Bill

WASHINGTON, May 22.—Secretary of the Treasury Mellon will recommend to President Coolidge that he veto the tax bill, it was said on his behalf at the treasury department today.

The bill as it stands, is highly unsatisfactory to Mellon, and his opinion is that it will have a depressing rather than stimulating effect on business in general, it was said.

Magazine for Blind Children.

LONDON, May 22.—A Braille magazine for blind children has just been started here. It is called the "School Magazine" and reports itself as the first magazine with Braille raised letters for the blind little readers. Essays, poetry, humor and a competition page are included in the new publication.

STRIKING GIRLS APPEAL FOELL'S LAST SENTENCE

Judge Gets Tough To Garment Workers

Three striking garment workers were sentenced to pay fines of $250 each and serve 60 days in the county jail yesterday by Judge Foell. The judge in passing sentence pulled the ancient gag, "If you don't like this country why don't you leave?" He did not give the girls a chance to tell him that a garment workers' wages do not permit of travel. After asking why the girls didn't leave the country he asked if they were citizens. They all said they were.

Bosses Don't Tell Them to Go.

"Our bosses never asked us why we don't leave this country," one of the girls said after court. "They are willing to have us work for them if they can dictate the wages and conditions. When you ask for American wages and conditions then you are asked why you don't leave."

The girls fined and sentenced were Kate Miller, Albino Cag and Eleanor Sadlowska. They were all released on bonds pending the decision on the appeals that will be made on their cases.

In Judge Sullivan's court Meyer Barkan was tried for contempt. The judge reserved decision in his case. Barkan was charged with having directed the strikers to go to the picket line.

Rat-faced Stool Pigeon.

The chief witness against him was a little rat-faced stool pigeon named Dave Cohn. Cohn worked for the firm of Applebaum and Stern during the strike and apparently in slack times went around to the strike headquarters, at 180 W. Washington street, to spy on the strikers. He said that when he went to the Washington-street headquarters he heard Barkan give direction to strikers on how and where to picket. On the stand Barkan denied this, saying that he knew the strikers had brains enough to know the necessity of picketing and where to picket.

On cross-examination by Peter Sissman, Cohn was asked if he considered himself a member of the union. Cohn said he didn't know. Then Sissman asked him if he thot he was scabbing. Sullivan rushed to the assistance of Cohn by objecting to Sissman's use of the word "scab."

Legal Gents Can't See "Scab."

Sissman said that he was trying to get at the state of mind of the witness and not trying to intimidate him. He said that the word "scab" was well recognized and good English. Sullivan said that it was not recognized as good English among "legal gentlemen."

After Cohn left the stand, Pat Moran was called. He said that he had seen Barkan busy among the girls who were in court in the corridors of the court. He said that Barkan was instructing them on how to testify. He also said that Barkan had given Peter Sissman's son money to pay the fines of strikers who had been fined in Judge Foell's court.

Under cross examination, Moran admitted that he had not heard what Barkan had told the girls he had been talking to. "In other words, you don't know what he was doing. You don't know if he was instructing them," he was asked. Moran had to admit that this was true.

When Barkan took the stand he said that he had not given young Sissman the money with which to pay the fines. He also denied that he had instructed the girls how to testify.

Lying Skunk Moran.

When court had adjourned for noon recess, Moran had the gall to go up to Barkan and try to tell him that he had lied on the stand. Barkan refused to talk with him.

Later, when young Sissman was in Judge Foell's court waiting to have the three girls who were sentenced, released, Moran, came up to him and started to talk to him about the money Barkan had given him. Sissman told him that he was a liar and a damned liar at that. Moran grabbed at Sissman's glasses and tried to take a rap at him. Sissman countered with a push that made Moran realize he had picked on the wrong man. Moran walked out muttering to himself.

Moran's activities around the court since the injunction hearings began have been to try to make friends with strikers and then lead them into making statements that he could use against them when their cases were heard. He has tried to appear very pleasant and more or less in sympathy with the strikers, but all of them have managed to smell the skunk on him.

The cases of the other strikers who were not heard, will come up today.

East Side New York Grows Hairy While 2000 Barbers Strike

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK, May 22.—Most of the barber shops on the East Side in New York city are hit by the strike of 2000 barbers. The men, who have been getting $30 a week or less, are demanding $35 with 30 per cent of receipts over $45 a week. They wish the extra hour on Saturdays—8 a. m. to 9 p. m.—eliminated. The union, Journeyman Barbers' International Union of America, local 752, represents the men in the negotiations.

CALL MILWAUKEE LABOR TO ELECT F.-L. DELEGATES

Meet June 5; Support St. Paul Convention

MILWAUKEE, Wis., May 22.—The labor movement of this city has been invited to join in a conference on June 5th, at 8 p. m., Freie Gemeinde Hall, for the election of a delegate to the St. Paul convention, June 17th, of the national Farmer-Labor party.

The Madison conference for progressive political action demonstrated the futility of the proposed Cleveland convention on July 4th, according to the workers who have issued the call for Milwaukee labor men and women to join hands June 5th.

The call is signed by C. T. Donovan, secretary of the "Provisional Committee," member Cigarmakers Union, Local No. 26; Earl Sovenson, Local No. 15, International Union of Elevator Constructors; Robert Sprague, Building Laborers' Union, World War Veterans; Henry Kaplan, Workmen's Circle, No. 166; Chas. Kuzdas, Painters' Union; Sam Papovich, International Association of Machinists, Local No. 66; John Schlitt, Carpenters' Union, Local No. 1053.

Philadelphia Acts May 27 For St. Paul Farm-Labor Meeting

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., May 22.—The Farmer-Labor Party Conference called for May 27 in Machinists Temple is expected to be a big success. Five local unions are represented on the arrangement committee. In addition delegates to the conference were so far elected by Machinists Local No. 159 and by District Council No. 21 of Painters, Paper Hangers and Decorators.

Several branches of the Workmen's Circle of this city held a conference, and after a long discussion elected S. Glusman as delegate to the St. Paul Convention. A committee of nine was elected to secure the necessary funds for the delegate's expenses. Nine branches, with a membership of over 1,000, were represented. Several more branches are expected to join and help finance the trip of the delegate.

More than 500 copies of the call were mailed to the various labor organizations of this city.

New York Taxi Union Wins Recognition And New Wage Increases

NEW YORK, May 22.—Victory on the industrial and legal front has been won by the union in the New York taxi war. Union recognition, 40 per cent of receipts for day men and 35 per cent for night drivers with half the receipts above $90 a week, are terms of the new contract with the Mogul Checker Cab Corp., which runs until Nov. 1.

Fleet owners of Mogul have withdrawn charges of extortion against officials of the union, the Brotherhood of Taxi Chauffeurs of Greater New York, an independent organization. At the same time the judge exonerated the men.

Tho the contract covers only Mogul Checker employes, about 4,000, the union claims that about 600 of its members working for the Premier and Luxor companies are receiving the union scale following the strike. The American Yellow concern, which has the patronage of the city administration and the police, continues to pay its drivers 33 1-3 per cent.

Sick Workers Lose Millions, Commons Tells Officials

American workers lose $750,000 a year for sickness, asserted John B. Andrews, secretary of the American Association for Labor Legislation, at the convention of the Government Officials Association in the Hotel Congress yesterday.

Andrews said that $200,000,000 of this sum could be saved by extending workmen's compensation laws to make them cover occupational diseases. Accident compensation has tended to prevent accidents, said Andrews, by the introduction of safety devices, and disease compensation would spread hygiene measures in industry.

Attention

Daily Worker Agents!

A meeting of all Daily Worker Agents will be held this Saturday, May the 24th, at the Daily Worker office, 1113 W. Washington Blvd., 3 p. m.

Matters to be taken up:

(1) Soliciting subs.
(2) Sale of Dailies at shops, etc.
(3) Securing of renewals.

All Branch Agents must attend this meeting and officers of branches which have not yet elected their agents should come to the meeting themselves or see to it that their branch is duly represented.

RAILROAD LOBBYISTS USE CODE AND UNDERGROUND TACTICS TO KILL THE HOWELL-BARKLEY LABOR BILL

By LAURENCE TODD

(Staff Correspondent of The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, May 22.—Passage of the Howell-Barkley railroad labor bill was assured, and the most daring tactics to obstruct and cheat legislation known in the House in many years were doomed to failure, when the first rollcall in the second discussion of that measure on the floor of the House resulted in 203 in favor, 180 against.

This vote showed that two weeks of nationwide intrigue, wire-pulling and lavish expenditure of money openly and in secret by the railroad companies and the anti-labor forces of big business had not succeeded in driving a majority of the representatives to commit political suicide. The House voted to go into committee of the whole for the formal debate on the bill and amendments.

Johnson of South Dakota made the first tricky move in opposition, by raising a parliamentary question and permitting the railroad crowd to consume half an hour in a quorum call. Then Longworth and Sanders of Indiana—the same Sanders whom certain officers of the United Mine Workers have endorsed for the federal judgeship at Indianapolis—began new obstruction. When the House voted to take up the bill in committee of the whole, this pair loudly announced that there could be no agreement as to division of the time of debate. The meanness of their attitude was so evident, however, that Longworth presently yielded, and the debate began.

Winslow, chairman of the interstate commerce committee, opened with a general denunciation of the bill and of the methods used by organized labor to call to the attention of the country the votes cast by the individual members of the House, on May 5th, for or against the cause of the railroad workers. Reading a letter which was issued by the federated shop crafts on the Pennsylvania lines—the strikers who have been out for two years because the Railroad Labor Board betrayed them—Winslow bellowed the opinion that "That letter means 'Hands up!' That's all."

Representative Nelson of Wisconsin, chairman of the progressive group, took the floor immediately after Winslow, and presented documentary proof that while the labor elements have openly and sincerely been pleading with Congress to pass this remedial bill, the railroad companies have been using underground influences and secret plotters to coerce Congress to save the rail magnates once more at the expense of the workers.

More Fall Fruit.

He offered first, in code, a telegram sent by M. L. Countryman, general counsel for the Great Northern railway, on April 23, to H. E. Judge at Sioux Falls, S. Dak.: "House bill introduced by Barkley abolishes labor board and puts national labor unions in very powerful position as against railroads. Under new rules, bill has been called out of committee for consideration by House and comes up on or about May 5th. Please confer with other railroad counsel in your state and see whether thru cooly plaster and mattings in your stroll abide by leach craft cars drunk time rebuke chide. . . . At conference of railroad counsel today all agreed if any useful results are possible they will be obtained thru remit stoles thinly by sex flich."

A week later, April 30, the Sioux Falls Press reported that Mr. Judge had addressed the local Traffic Bureau on the previous day, denouncing the Barkley bill, and charging that it would add $1,000,000 a year to the taxpayers' burden. Resolutions were unanimously adopted, to telegraph the South Dakota congressmen urging them to work and vote against the measure. Individual members of the bureau were likewise pledged to send telegrams to Washington. On May 5th, all three South Dakota members voted with the railroads, and one of them, Royal Johnson, opened the fight with a filibuster game.

Nelson offered in evidence a circular issued to all local surgeons of the Santa Fe system, by W. P. Waggener, general attorney for the road, dated March 7th, notifying them "to proceed at once and secure letters from business men, farmers and others, directed to the congressmen from your districts," opposing the Barkley measure. A list of suggestions for the text of these protest letters was included, with a promise to refund necessary canvassing expenses.

Then there was the telegram sent May 6th by A. H. Mulliken, chairman of the legislative committee, Railway Business Association (which is the combine of railway supply companies that "milked" the railroads of vast sums in inflated prices on contract work), to the head of their membership committee, saying that 100 new member firms must be enrolled at once, to impress Congress with the opposition of business to this bill. "In House or Senate or White House," he said, "this bill must be beaten if possible."

California Cattle Men Profit By Hoof And Mouth Hysteria

LOS ANGELES, Cal., May 22.—No state in the union surpasses California in silliness whenever hysteria of one kind or another is on. At present tourists have to have camping outfits fumigated, must walk over medicated sawdust, and drive their cars thru medicated slop; very much as they had to keep a piece of cheesecloth tied over their nose during the flu epidemic. Back of these things there is the psychology of officialdom rampant and back of this there is a more or less carefully concealed graft.

Whatever the origin of the epidemic, it is well known in Los Angeles that it is being used by the big cattlemen to get rid of stock which they cannot afford to carry over the dry season and to kill off their competitors, the independent cattle men. Beyond question, the public authorities are paying for a lot of cattle ruthlessly sacrificed to the scare and the cattle monopoly in California suggests large possibilities in the use of such a scare for the benefit of certain well-known monopolists.

Smiling faces make "Dennie" Sullivan sore. Yesterday when fifty girl garment strikers faced him in their usual smiling good humored way he looked fierce and put their cases over till today. Quite apparently he doesn't relish the prospect of hearing the same witnesses for the garment bosses tell the same story he has heard scores of times.

The girls were walking on the streets and the poor judge must sit and listen to a half dozen witnesses say that over and over again fifty times. Yesterday's postponement of the contempt hearings was about the tenth postponement of their cases and the prospects are that the hearing will be set over again today.

Foell's Feet Also Cold.

Judge Foell, altho not faced with as hard a job as Sullivan, was no more willing to go thru with it.

He set the cases of the two girls who came before him yesterday to be heard Friday with the prospect that he would then delay the hearings further.

Cops Seize Opportunity.

Bernice Nawrocki, a striker, was arraigned in S. Clark street police court yesterday to answer to disorderly conduct because she talked to a scab who was on her way home. The coppers, who are still doing strike duty and having a soft time of it, seized the opportunity to make an arrest. For weeks now they have not had the chance to do anything against the strikers and for their friends the bosses and they were glad to see opportunity walking down the street. Bernice took a jury trial.

New York Dress Bosses Break From Peace Talk With Union; Strike Sure

NEW YORK, May 22.—Negotiations between the International Ladies' Garment Workers' officials and the Cloak Suit and Dress Manufacturers' association were broken off here yesterday.

Sigman, president of the I. L. G. W. U. has set all machinery for calling and handling a strike June 1st, in motion. The strike will involve 60,000 workers. The bosses refused to debate the demands of the union for a raise in wages and the forty-hour week, guaranteed employment periods and the use of the union label and unemployment insurance.

The union is still in negotiation with bosses not represented by the association. The association bosses are the biggest in the city manufacturing the garments from start to finish in their own shops without the aid of contractors.

WAR LORD BURNT CITY THRICE IN AERIAL LECTURE

Audience Howled For More Gore

By C. A. MOSELY.

Federated Press Staff Correspondent.

In the opinion of the Illinois Manufacturers' Association as voiced by C. A. Livingston, assistant to the president, there will be another war. He spoke in the La Salle Hotel to the National Aeronautic Association. "We have," he added, "some pacifists here in Cook county, but of course there will be war." The peace school of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom is in session here.

The chief speaker of the aerial militarists was Rear Admiral W. F. Fullam. The admiral was pessimistic of getting adequate preparedness for the next war out of a pacifist congress. He hopes to build up a large fleet of commercial aircraft, which can be mobilized when needed for defense.

The admiral's talk was illustrated by several reels of motion pictures, in which commercial uses of aircraft were alternated with Barling bombers, dropping of bombs and torpedoes, and spreading of poison gases. The admiral's pictures showed the metropolis successively destroyed three times by explosion, flame, and poison gas, reminding one of the verdict of the coroner's jury, that the deceased came to death by a blow on board ship, was thrown overboard and washed ashore and froze to death.

Admitting the squandering of vast sums on airplanes which never reached France (he put the figure at $300,000,000, cutting the actual amount in half), Fullam laid the blame on the people who had prevented preparedness, evidently believing that it was too much to expect honesty of profiteers during national danger.

"Every red-blooded American," he said, "should wish to see America supreme in the air." His sentiments were shared by an audience composed mostly of young men,—a few aviators, many textbook flyers, and beardless youths with aspirations to be lords of the air.

No one suggested resolutions indorsing the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom. And by some oversight the national anthem was not heard. The aeronautic association sells life membership at $500.

Congress Considers Farm Relief Bills Before Adjourning

WASHINGTON, May 22. — Congressional leaders today saw but one obstacle to adjournment on June 7, and that was enactment of a farm relief measure satisfactory to middle western progressives.

Confident that the tax bill as revised by the conferees, will be signed by the president, the dictators of policy of all factions agreed to disregard the clamor for other legislation and get away for the summer. Progressives will aid in this move by dropping their fight for repeal of the rate-making section of the present railroad law.

The demands of the Ford Muscle Shoals group; the world court group's announced intention of forcing a vote upon that issue; and declarations by numerous senators that they intend to call up their special bills, are disregarded by various group leaders in their plans to adjourn.

OLE HANSON, RED-BAITER, REAL ESTATE SHARK, IS NOW A HORSE THIEF

LOS ANGELES, Cal., May 22.—Every radical from the Mexican border to Seattle was laughing his head off today, after reading in the papers the cheering news that Ole Hanson, the grafting real estate shark and patriotic faker was at last arrested for horse stealing. He was released on $1,000 bonds.

Unfortunately, the old California law, making horse stealing punishable by death, was changed so that Ole may get away with his life and perhaps, without any punishment, as all the capitalists and panhandling patriotic societies will be back of him.

Ole distinguished himself after the big Seattle strike in 1919, by claiming to have blocked the movement to establish a Soviet Republic in the United States. He toured the country under the auspices of Rotary Clubs and Chambers of Commerce and made violent attacks on the radicals for their indifference to the laws governing the rights of property, but after he was found guilty of selling mountain peaks instead of fertile valleys to poor workingmen, his stocks fell considerably and he was driven out of Seattle to the orange groves of California, where half a dozen suckers arrive every minute. Ole was out to catch them.

The role of horse thief may be his last turn on the public stage before he dons the striped uniform.

THE POWER COLUMN

LAST WEEK OF DRIVE PROVING GRUELLING CONTEST FOR LEADERSHIP

Toledo, after Brilliant Showing Gains Undisputed Hold At the Top.

Only three short weeks remain to the first big subscription drive and any one of a score of cities has more than a fighting chance to be at the head of the column before the last bell rings. DAILY WORKER boosters are finding this campaign tremendously more exciting and interesting than any they have ever before entered into. Their interest is evidenced by their strenuous activity and is recorded twice each week in the Honor Roll for those who read THE DAILY WORKER to become acquainted with those who are making the paper a success.

Toledo Gains Well Earned Honors.

There is one city, or more exactly one group of militants who deserve more than passing mention. A small group, captained by Comrade A. W. Harvitt has put Toledo on the map as far as the labor movement is concerned. To be sure these young militants have been mentioned before in this column, but their achievements can well be noted again so that others may have a mark to strive for. With no left wing movement of any size in Toledo on January 13 when THE DAILY WORKER was born, with practically no readers of any radical journal, in a few short months these hustlers have been able to secure hundreds of readers for THE DAILY WORKER. There is much to be expected from Toledo in the future not only for THE DAILY WORKER but for every activity in the revolutionary movement.

Toledo has worked hard and consistently and it is no wonder that it has at last gained the envious position from which it can look downward at the rest of the country.

Others Are Coming!

South Bend, Ind. another little city of which little or nothing has been heard has also covered itself with glory. The comrades there claim they have no intentions of remaining at even figures and expect to reach at least the 150 per cent mark before June 15th. Pittsburgh, Pa., and Kansas City, Mo., are still among the climbers and the comers, the former threatening to give Toledo a run for a banner and the latter still making its claim for cities with less than 100 quotas. Miles City is still waiting at the brink. Portland, Ore. another bright spot in the far west is also slowly but surely pulling up. Warren, Ohio gained another notch but seems to be waiting a while for the pack to pull up before taking another spurt.

There Is Still Time for the Rest.

Three weeks!! That is not a very long time, but Elinor Glyn made lots of things happen within its span. If a word slinger can do it, there ought to be a few thousand militants who deal with deeds instead of words who can do as well or better. There is still time for every city on the list to wipe off some of the low figures and replace them with more respectable ones. There is still time for the rest. Let each militant make it his personal business to use each day for the benefit of THE DAILY WORKER and the working class, for his own honor and that of the labor movement of his city.

Nightingale Sings for Radio.

LONDON, May 22.—The sweet song of a nightingale was broadcast over the radio last night, enabling many people who had never heard the bird to listen to its song. The birds were tempted to sing at the right moment by the soft notes of a cello played by a musician in Surrey wood. A microphone and amplifier were used to transmit the song to the London broadcasting station.

SENATOR NORRIS OFFERS PRIMARY DUEL TO G.O.P.

Would Race Old Guard In Special Vote

By LAURENCE TODD.

Federated Press Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, May 22.—Senator Norris of Nebraska, renominated by an overwhelming majority in the recent primary in his state, in the face of a violent and vituperative campaign, made against him by the Coolidge-Daugherty-Lockwood organization of the old guard, has challenged them to a political duel. He has replied to a demand made by the reactionary Republican organization chiefs in Nebraska, that he get off the ticket, by offering to enter a recall primary with every candidate and every member of the state committee who is seeking his withdrawal. Norris' name alone will go on the primary recall ballot. If he loses, he will resign; if he wins, all of his enemies will resign. He does not anticipate that they will take up the challenge.

Shows Up "Cal."

This act on the part of Norris throws into high relief the critical situation which the Republican party has reached, due to Coolidge's ceaseless warfare against the progressive elements within the party. In every quarter of the country his emissaries and job-holders are controlling conventions or conferences which ignore or attack the progressive and semi-progressive members of the House and Senate, while adopting resolutions endorsing the hard-boiled who surround the White House. Endorsement of Denby and denunciation of Couzens in Michigan is a fair sample of this war of extermination which Coolidge is waging. In Iowa it is an almost hysterical feud against Senator Brookhart; in Nebraska Norris is its target. Bankers, railroad attorneys, chambers of commerce, reserve officers of the army, all of the special privileged groups that join in mobbing labor radicals and political heretics, are enlisted just now in "purging" the Republican ranks of the men who have repudiated Taft, Hughes, Harding, Coolidge, Fall, Denby, Daugherty and their associates.

Norris specified that the primary be held 30 days after the adjournment of Congress, since he would not return home until his work here was done.

At the same time he presented to the Senate a 20-page list of business firms acknowledged by the National Republican to have bought quantities of "subscriptions" to that fascist propaganda publication in the 1920 campaign. Harry F. Sinclair, for his oil company, paid $1,096 on January 26, 1920, while hundreds of lesser concerns, covering most of the manufacturing industries in Massachusetts, Wisconsin, West Virginia and other states, paid less sums. The Republican national committee bought about $10,000 worth of the papers, up to September 23, 1920, the last date included in the report.

Norris said that this publication was "reading out of the party most of its good men."

What has the American worker to do with the worker of Germany, France, England, or any other country? Isn't the American worker better off than the European worker? Do you see workers in Germany riding to work in automobiles? Why should an unskilled worker get the same pay as the skilled worker? Is there a country that has a better educational system than the United States? These and many other questions were flung at members of the Irving Park branch of the Young Workers' League, Tuesday night, after Peter Hurd gave a talk at an open air meeting at the corners of Irving Park and Elston avenue.

After making clear that Boys' Week is another attempt on the part of the capitalist class to keep the youth of today in ignorance, the speaker reviewed the events of the late war and pointed out that the only way to overcome the system of wage slavery, injustice and inequality under which we are living, is for the workers of the world to unite against their common foe—capitalism. He also stressed the fact that the Workers Party and Young Workers' League are the only organizations in the United States which are working towards that goal.

The big crowd which encircled the speaker and members of the league, was loath to disperse. Many promised to attend the meeting of the league next Tuesday evening, at 4021 No. Drake avenue and continue the discussion there. Several prospective members were signed up and a goodly number of the Young Worker were sold.

S. P. Resents Taft's Income.

CHICAGO, May 22.—Chief Justice Taft's annual $10,000 income on the side from steel trust securities given him by Andrew Carnegie is branded as a disgrace to the supreme court bench by the Socialist party national office, which demands an investigation. The Socialists assert that Taft's $15,000 a year from the federal treasury for his life job as justice ought to be enough to live on.

DECISIONS OF CENTRAL EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF THE WORKERS PARTY

At a meeting of the Central Executive Committee, May 14th, the following decisions were made:

Farmer-Labor Assessment.

It was decided in view of the lack of funds to carry on the party work effectively at the present time and the failure of the Farmer-Labor Campaign Fund to bring in the necessary money to carry on the present party work, to levy an assessment of 50c per member in order to meet the expenses of the campaign in connection with the June 17th convention.

Italian Daily.

The question of publication of the Italian Daily "Il Lavoratore" was discussed with the Committee of the Italian Section, and the Italian Bureau was authorized to proceed with the publication of the Daily when a certain sum was on hand.

American Imperialism.

The Committee discussed the question of Pan-American Imperialism and the organization of a Pan-American Communist Bureau and Congress in the light of a report made by Comrade Jay Lovestone, who attended the convention of the Mexican Communist Party as the representative of the Workers Party. Decisions were made covering the work of organizing an immediate temporary bureau and a later Congress of all Pan-American Parties.

Philippine Independence.

Committee discussed the progress of our campaign in support of independence of the Philippine Islands and adopted a program of party work in support of the struggle of the workers and farmers of the Philippines against the American capitalists as well as the Philippine exploiters. The program will be published in the party press.

Greeting to British Communist Party.

Committee authorized the Executive Secretary to send greetings to the convention of the Communist Party of Great Britain which began on May 18th.

Small Businessmen as Party Members.

Following motion to govern the acceptance of small business men as Party members was adopted by the Committee: "That all small businessmen as such must be excluded from the party, but great care must be exercised in passing upon such applications. While we can accept workers as members of the party who are not yet thoroly grounded in Communist principles, non-workers can only be accepted as members if they have a fundamental grasp of Communist principles and show in their attitude a desire to work and a readiness to make sacrifices for those principles even at the expense of their economic interest.

"Under no circumstances can we accept as members of our party, employers who are in conflict or who have the reputation of engaging in conflicts with workers whom they employ.

St. Paul Committee of Arrangements Publicity.

The Committee instructed the Editorial Staff of the DAILY WORKER and the editors of other party papers to carefully examine the material received from the Committee of arrangements at St. Paul and when this material contains statements contrary to the established party policy, our party editors are instructed while publishing this material in the press to publish in the same number of the paper, editorial comment on the point with which we disagree, stating the party position in relation thereto.

Russian Section.

The committee approved of the cooperation of Comrade Borisoff as a member of the Bureau of the Russian Section.

Research Department Bulletin.

The Committee authorized the Research Department to issue a bulletin from time to time on economic and political facts and also a bulletin for party speakers.

Bedacht Explains St. Paul Program To Douglas Park

By S. USPRICH.

Members of the Douglas Park English branch of the Workers' Party, being rather enthusiastic with the report of the financial secretary, were delighted to hear Max Bedacht, who spoke to this branch upon the necessity to get behind the June 17 convention and making it a success.

Bedacht outlined very clearly the difference between the Opportunists and the Communists, the misconceptions of one, and the clear and definite stand of the other. He showed how it is the duty of every Communist to participate in all struggles, no matter how small, consequently when the party enters into this campaign it is not with the contention that our goal has been reached, but rather, as one of the demonstrations of a party of action.

Every comrade in the Douglas Park English branch understands the necessity of such a move, and will bend every effort to make the convention of June 17 a great success, and one that will voice the attitude of the Workers in America.

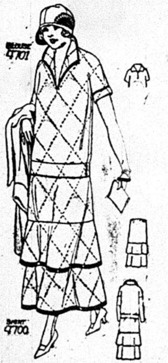
Russian Picnics.

The district committee of the Russian branches, Workers party, has arranged a picnic for Sunday, June 1, at Bergman's Grove, Riverside, Ill.

The Society for Technical Aid to Soviet Russia has arranged picnics for Sunday, June 8, at Stickney Grove, and Sunday, August 24, at National Grove.

All friendly organizations are requested not to arrange other affairs on those dates.

OUR DAILY PATTERNS



A VERY ATTRACTIVE STYLE.

4701-4700. This Costume will be nice in the new "plaid" materials or in mohair or linen suiting. Braid or stitching or banding in a contrasting color would be pleasing for trimming.

The Blouse 4701, has a convertible collar, and may be finished with wrist length or short sleeve portions.

The Skirt 4700 shows the new flounce style. It is cut in 7 Sizes: 25, 27, 29, 31, 33, 35 and 37 inches waist measure, with corresponding hip measure, 35, 37, 39, 41, 43, 45 and 47 inches. The Blouse 4701 is cut in 6 sizes: 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44 inches bust measure. To make this Costume as illustrated in the large view, for a medium size, will require 4 yards of 40 inch material. If made with long sleeves 5⅝ yards is required.

TWO separate patterns mailed to any address on receipt of 12c FOR EACH pattern in silver or stamps.

Send 12c in silver or stamps for our UP-TO-DATE SPRING & SUMMER 1924 BOOK OF FASHIONS.

A JAUNTY MODEL

4710. This "costume" is quite up-to-date, and attractive for any of the material now in vogue. The jacket may be omitted, or it may be made of contrasting material.

The Pattern is cut in 4 sizes: 6, 8, 10 and 12 years. A 10 year size requires 2⅛ yards for the dress, and 1 yard for the jacket of 40 inch material. Mustard color linen with stitching in brown floss would be nice for this model or pongee in a natural shade with pipings or bindings of white or green.

Send 12c in silver or stamps for our UP-TO-DATE SPRING & SUMMER 1924 BOOK OF FASHIONS.

RUTHENBERG APPEAL LAWYER SEES JUDGE ABOUT PROCEEDINGS

Developments in the Ruthenberg Appeal are proceeding rapidly. Briefs were filed on May 10. I. E. Ferguson, one of the defense attorneys, is going to St. Joseph tonight to confer with Judge White relative to the details of the Appeal proceedings before the Michigan Supreme Court. He will also confer with the prosecuting attorneys. The actual hearing of the Appeal will take place in June or July, it is understood.

Pullman Workers Make New Plans For New Battles

Workers in the Pullman shops, recently on strike, and workers in other industries on Chicago's far south side resolved to "carry on" against the big industrial corporations that have their open shop plants in this section of the city, at a spirited mass meeting held at Stancik's Hall, East 115th street.

Nick Leschner, the first strike picket arrested, was chairman of the meeting, that was also addressed by J. Louis Engdahl, editor of the DAILY WORKER, and J. P. McCarthy, its circulation manager.

The men are determined to stick together. If all the strikers are not taken back, without discrimination, a new strike will, no doubt, be called.

"Join your union and get into your political party, the Workers (Communist) Party," urged Engdahl.

"You must get ready for the next struggle," said McCarthy.

Plans were made for building the circulation in Pullman, of the DAILY WORKER, and for winning new members for the Workers Party.

Organizer Fails; Socialists Turn To Communists

DENVER, Colo., May 22.—Socialists who were disappointed in the failure of their national organizer, William H. Henry, to speak on the Farmer-Labor Party issue and the June 17th St. Paul convention have asked permission to attend meetings of the Workers Party for information on these vital subjects.

Henry spoke here to a small audience on the same evening Trachtenberg addressed a crowd of several hundred interested listeners. Henry cut his meeting short at the conclusion of his speech, giving no opportunity for questions. When approached later by some of the Socialists, Henry angrily told them that the Socialist party could not associate with Communists who believed in "the dictatorship" and refused to join the June 17th convention for a mass class party of the farmers and workers.

Remaining Dates, Places, Announced For Trachtenberg

Sunday, May 25—St. Paul, Labor Temple, 416 Franklin St., at 8 p. m.

Monday, May 26—Minneapolis, First Unitarian Church, 8th St. and La Salle Ave., at 8 p. m.

Tuesday, May 27—Superior, Workers' Hall, cor. Tower Ave. and North 5th St., at 8. p. m.

Previous meetings have been enthusiastically attended. Trachtenberg's discussion of the present German situation has never failed to hold his audiences.

NEW YORK CITY Party Activities

Coney Island Forms English Branch.

NEW YORK, May 22.—Coney Island's English branch of the Workers Party is the newest in the city. It was organized recently with promising prospects.

The next meeting of the branch will be Tuesday evening, May 27, in the attractive meeting rooms of the Workmen's Circle, 3109 Surf avenue, Coney Island.

Jeanette D. Pearl is the branch organizer and is urging all English-speaking sympathizers to join the activities of the lusty new branch.

TROTSKY TALKS ON JAPAN, U. S. AND CAPITALISM

Europe Rotting Under Capitalist Rule

(By The Federated Press)

MOSCOW.—So long as the ruling class in the United States is unfriendly or contemptuous in its dealings with the yellow races, it tremendously heightens the dangers to world peace, according to Leon Trotsky who has returned to Moscow after nursing his health for many months.

"War between the United States and Japan is not impossible," says Trotsky, "but it can be avoided if the anti-imperialist groups in both countries assert themselves. "It must be admitted, however, that both these mighty capitalistic states are separated by many hostile interests."

In the opinion of Trotsky, the 1923 earthquake has by no means put an end to Japanese imperialism. "Imperialism depends upon the social structure of a state," observed Trotsky, "and not upon its geological formation."

"As long as the question is one of fighting the despicable and shameful attempt to treat the Japanese people as an inferior race, the Japanese may expect always to find in Russia a true, steadfast and unselfish friend. The concept of 'superior and inferior races' reflects the conceit of the ruling classes of old Europe, which dates back to a time when Asia was still fast asleep. Asia has now awakened. And if Europe continues much longer to rot under the conditions brought about by the peace of Versailles, the center of historical development will definitely be shifted to America and Asia.

"Normal and lasting relations between the Union of Soviet Republics and Japan can and will, sooner or later, be established on the basis of equality and, of course, not at the cost of a third party like China."

The Third Annual Picnic of the Workers Party, Local Chicago, will be held on Friday, July 4, at Stickney's Grove. Speakers, dancing, games, refreshments, etc., are being provided. Sympathetic organizations are requested not to arrange any other affair, but to give all possible support to the July 4th picnic.

"Friend of Labor" Employs Scabs To Save City Money

TACOMA, Wash., May 22.—A committee from the Building Trades Council has visited the Cushman dam and power plant being built to enlarge the municipal electric system, to see what can be done in getting the standard wage scale paid. The contractors refuse to pay the Tacoma scale, preferring the scale used by lumber camps and logging roads in the vicinity, which is much lower.

The city commissioner in charge of the work frequently has another announcement of how he has saved some more money for the tax payers.

Among other things, he gets all the city printing done by scabs. Yet this same commissioner is supposed to be friendly to the workers and was recently re-elected by a three to one majority at the primaries.

The Building Trades Council and Central Labor Council placed a working class candidate in the field, who fought it out for the other commissionship (there are four, only two elected this year), with a man considered to be a mere rubber stamp for the mayor, an eighty-year-old hot-air artist, who has spent about sixty years in politics. He is a "progressive" old cuss, very fond of mud-slinging, and very popular.

The campaign was marked by an unprecedented amount of slander and lies, mostly whispered. The labor candidate was variously accused of belonging to the K. K. K., to the K. of C. (he is neither) and of helping dynamite the Los Angeles Times (he was never in California). The workers failed to support their candidate, and the business man's friend got in.

Capitol Branch Active.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 22.—At the regular meeting of the English Branch of the Workers' Party here Dr. S. R. Pearlman was elected Secretary-Organizer; Dr. Leon Brodsky was elected recording secretary and H. O. Watt was elected as press agent.

Five new members were admitted to the branch and one member proposed.

Addresses were made by Comrades L. F. Shea; J. H. Brasher and J. Powel. At the next regular meeting on May 29 Comrade Brasher will deliver an address on the mining industry in this country.

THE VIEWS OF OUR READERS ON LIFE, LABOR, INDUSTRY, POLITICS

The La Follette Movement.

To the DAILY WORKER: I am opposed to the La Follette movement. Not because I do not admire and respect the great senator, but because I realize that a political movement must not be based upon great men and leaders, but must be based upon broad fundamental principles and issues.

The able senator from Wisconsin has shown his mettle and caliber during the trying days of the war and since the war. He has stood steadfastly and consistently for the truth and justice; he has fought the battle of the enslaved and the oppressed; he has opposed unflinchingly and intelligently the profiteers and chauvinists, and he has fought for the rights which the constitution of the United States guarantees to all the citizens of this republic. And I greatly admire and respect and revere this noble man for these qualities.

But if there is to be a political movement built around the senator, there will be cliques of men whose interests are not entirely unselfish and altruistic. Some of these men will be extremely wealthy, and some millionaires will join in the movement. A large number of rich people will financially support such a movement. They will do so not because they dominantly believe that the government should be operated for all the people and that justice and equality should be administered to all, but they will support such a movement because some of them desire power and privilege.

It is our duty to form and establish a political party which will be for and in the interest of the great masses, and such a party should be supported, managed and controlled by the working people.

We have seen in our own generation the formation and establishment of progressive and reform political parties, and in every instance such parties were formed around so-called great men and were not based upon fundamental, radical principles, without which no movement can truly represent the great masses of the working people.

We need no great leader; we need no Messiah to lead us out of the wilderness of slavery and exploitation and oppression. We need only ourselves to become active members of a political party which shall have as its basis and platform the complete eradication of all injustice, slavery and oppression of the capitalist system. The workers must learn to unite for their own interests; they must be their own leaders; they must be their own deliverers of the slavery, starvation and abominable evils which flow from the capitalist system.

A great man such as La Follette cannot accomplish the complete change of government and the reform of the industrial system under which we live, but the great mass of wage slaves of whatever description must co-ordinate all their energies, must co-operate together in one political group to battle with the opposing forces. This political party shall have as its platform the elemental principles of a new industrial order and a just government, and then only will we accomplish that happy end, the establishment of the co-operative commonwealth.—SAMUEL RAPPAPORT, Los Angeles, Calif.

Wants "Iron Heel" Serial.

To the DAILY WORKER: Just a line to let you know I am still in the land of the living and am completely recovered from the attack of pleurisy and grippe which seized me in Chicago the latter part of February. I could not get in the County Hospital there. I was "not sick enough," they said, altho I was not able to walk a block... In asking for suggestions for a serial story, why not run Jack London's "Iron Heel." In that story many prophecies are being consummated; many things are occurring now which he describes, as tho he were still alive, watching capitalism rushing to its destruction. Comrade Louis Grass, Gary Ind.

BRITISH COMMUNISTS DENOUNCE BETRAYING 'LABOR' GOVERNMENT

MANCHESTER, Eng., May 22.—The British Communist party now holding its annual congress here, has passed a resolution denouncing the labor government of England. MacDonald and his cohorts were called "handrags" to the king for their vicious reactionary slavishness to the rule of things as they are. The "labor" government was called "the willing tool and accomplice of the capitalist exploiters," and was denounced for its "faithlessness and treachery to the working class."

Russian Imports Won't Unbalance Trade Advantage

(Rosta News Service.)

MOSCOW, May 22.— The active balance of Russian external trade, which insures a successful reform, is to be kept up as firmly as the foreign trade monopoly, according to a statement made at an important party meeting by Mr. Kameneff, Acting President of the Council of People's Commissaries.

At the same time the speaker explained there was a certain possibility of imports being increased, tho in the limits of an active balance, with a view, in particular, to assuring the stabilization of prices in the internal market. This question, Mr. Kameneff stated, was presently under discussion.

Steel Trust Wanted Pittsburgh Bishop's Diocese Eliminated

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., May 22.—Changes that the steel trust had attempted to get rid of Bishop Francis J. McConnell from the Pittsburgh diocese of the Methodist church were made by Rev. William F. Conner in the Methodist general conference progressing here.

"Bishop McConnell was the chairman of the committee that investigated the steel trust and its treatment of employes," said Dr. Conner (referring to the inter-church world movement's investigation of the steel industry about four years ago.) "If we eliminate the Pittsburg residence it will be said that the church has bowed to the capitalists and the money power. I don't charge that, but that will be the result."

The Pittsburg motion was defeated, so that the number of bishops remains intact.

For Labor Regent.

SAN FRANCISCO.—Once more the San Francisco Labor council heads a move to secure a labor regent for the University of California. The board of regents almost exclusively represents the power interests, bankers and their allies, with Mortimer Fleishhacker, owner of the "hell fleet" of the salmon industry, as its grand duke.

Dancer Hurt in Russia.

FROST FREEZES WASHINGTON'S FRUIT HOPES

Farmer-Labor Party Thrives On Blight

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WALLA WALLA, Wash., May 22.—The Farmer-Labor Party in this district is pushing its fight on behalf of the stricken farmers of this state, since the late heavy frost killed from 50 to 80 per cent of the fruit crop, from which so much had been expected.

Population Departs.

Southeastern Washington has seen high costs and low prices for three years now. Some fruit was canned but much could not be, nor could it be sold for enough to pay transportation charges. Wheat costs more to raise than it sold for and thousands of acres of wheat lands have not been planted this year.

Walla Walla had 19,000 population by the 1910 census, only 13,000 in 1920, and since then conditions have grown steadily worse.

"Eight Men Buried Alive."

The leading business of the town is the State Penitentiary, one of the worst prison hells in America, where the victims of the Centralia frameup are held. The state politicians who are running the place are anxious to put in a contract labor system which will increase their loot. The labor movement has so far prevented it. A start was made and then abandoned.

The prisoners are held idle in their cells most of the time, and fed on rotten food. The prison administration has changed four times in four years, and as each new set of officials have been getting their share of what was coming to them, conditions have grown steadily worse. Another riot is not improbable if conditions get much worse and the food much viler. Such a riot occurred some years ago and after three days of it the townspeople interferred. It was caused by rotten conditions, which were then bettered a little.

In this town members of the American Legion prevented a radical member of the grange from speaking in 1920, while a farm worker who advocated higher wages at the time, was tarred and feathered.

Methodist Merger Fight Looms.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., May 22.—Five cities today were bidding for the special conference of the Methodist church South, called by the College of bishops for July second to act on the proposal to merge with the northern branch. That the fight against the merger will be bitter, was indicated when the College of bishops vote on the merger, was announced as evenly divided, 7 and 7.

Meet June 5; Support St. Paul Convention

MILWAUKEE, Wis., May 22.—The labor movement of this city has been invited to join in a conference on June 5th, at 8 p. m., Freie Gemeinde Hall, for the election of a delegate to the St. Paul convention, June 17th, of the national Farmer-Labor party.

The Madison conference for progressive political action demonstrated the futility of the proposed Cleveland convention on July 4th, according to the workers who have issued the call for Milwaukee labor men and women to join hands June 5th.

The call is signed by C. T. Donovan, secretary of the "Provisional Committee," member Cigarmakers Union, Local No. 26; Earl Sovenson, Local No. 15, International Union of Elevator Constructors; Robert Sprague, Building Laborers' Union, World War Veterans; Henry Kaplan, Workmen's Circle, No. 166; Chas. Kuzdas, Painters' Union; Sam Papovich, International Association of Machinists, Local No. 66; John Schlitt, Carpenters' Union, Local No. 1053.

Philadelphia Acts May 27 For St. Paul Farm-Labor Meeting

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., May 22.—The Farmer-Labor Party Conference called for May 27 in Machinists Temple is expected to be a big success. Five local unions are represented on the arrangement committee. In addition delegates to the conference were so far elected by Machinists Local No. 159 and by District Council No. 21 of Painters, Paper Hangers and Decorators.

Several branches of the Workmen's Circle of this city held a conference, and after a long discussion elected S. Glusman as delegate to the St. Paul Convention. A committee of nine was elected to secure the necessary funds for the delegate's expenses. Nine branches, with a membership of over 1,000, were represented. Several more branches are expected to join and help finance the trip of the delegate.

More than 500 copies of the call were mailed to the various labor organizations of this city.

New York Taxi Union Wins Recognition And New Wage Increases

NEW YORK, May 22.—Victory on the industrial and legal front has been won by the union in the New York taxi war. Union recognition, 40 per cent of receipts for day men and 35 per cent for night drivers with half the receipts above $90 a week, are terms of the new contract with the Mogul Checker Cab Corp., which runs until Nov. 1.

Fleet owners of Mogul have withdrawn charges of extortion against officials of the union, the Brotherhood of Taxi Chauffeurs of Greater New York, an independent organization. At the same time the judge exonerated the men.

Tho the contract covers only Mogul Checker employes, about 4,000, the union claims that about 600 of its members working for the Premier and Luxor companies are receiving the union scale following the strike. The American Yellow concern, which has the patronage of the city administration and the police, continues to pay its drivers 33 1-3 per cent.

Sick Workers Lose Millions, Commons Tells Officials

American workers lose $750,000 a year for sickness, asserted John B. Andrews, secretary of the American Association for Labor Legislation, at the convention of the Government Officials Association in the Hotel Congress yesterday.

Andrews said that $200,000,000 of this sum could be saved by extending workmen's compensation laws to make them cover occupational diseases. Accident compensation has tended to prevent accidents, said Andrews, by the introduction of safety devices, and disease compensation would spread hygiene measures in industry.

RAILROAD LOBBYISTS USE CODE AND UNDERGROUND TACTICS TO KILL THE HOWELL-BARKLEY LABOR BILL

By LAURENCE TODD

(Staff Correspondent of The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, May 22.—Passage of the Howell-Barkley railroad labor bill was assured, and the most daring tactics to obstruct and cheat legislation known in the House in many years were doomed to failure, when the first rollcall in the second discussion of that measure on the floor of the House resulted in 203 in favor, 180 against.

This vote showed that two weeks of nationwide intrigue, wire-pulling and lavish expenditure of money openly and in secret by the railroad companies and the anti-labor forces of big business had not succeeded in driving a majority of the representatives to commit political suicide. The House voted to go into committee of the whole for the formal debate on the bill and amendments.

Johnson of South Dakota made the first tricky move in opposition, by raising a parliamentary question and permitting the railroad crowd to consume half an hour in a quorum call. Then Longworth and Sanders of Indiana—the same Sanders whom certain officers of the United Mine Workers have endorsed for the federal judgeship at Indianapolis—began new obstruction. When the House voted to take up the bill in committee of the whole, this pair loudly announced that there could be no agreement as to division of the time of debate. The meanness of their attitude was so evident, however, that Longworth presently yielded, and the debate began.

Winslow, chairman of the interstate commerce committee, opened with a general denunciation of the bill and of the methods used by organized labor to call to the attention of the country the votes cast by the individual members of the House, on May 5th, for or against the cause of the railroad workers. Reading a letter which was issued by the federated shop crafts on the Pennsylvania lines—the strikers who have been out for two years because the Railroad Labor Board betrayed them—Winslow bellowed the opinion that "That letter means 'Hands up!' That's all."

Representative Nelson of Wisconsin, chairman of the progressive group, took the floor immediately after Winslow, and presented documentary proof that while the labor elements have openly and sincerely been pleading with Congress to pass this remedial bill, the railroad companies have been using underground influences and secret plotters to coerce Congress to save the rail magnates once more at the expense of the workers.

More Fall Fruit.

He offered first, in code, a telegram sent by M. L. Countryman, general counsel for the Great Northern railway, on April 23, to H. E. Judge at Sioux Falls, S. Dak.: "House bill introduced by Barkley abolishes labor board and puts national labor unions in very powerful position as against railroads. Under new rules, bill has been called out of committee for consideration by House and comes up on or about May 5th. Please confer with other railroad counsel in your state and see whether thru cooly plaster and mattings in your stroll abide by leach craft cars drunk time rebuke chide. . . . At conference of railroad counsel today all agreed if any useful results are possible they will be obtained thru remit stoles thinly by sex flich."

A week later, April 30, the Sioux Falls Press reported that Mr. Judge had addressed the local Traffic Bureau on the previous day, denouncing the Barkley bill, and charging that it would add $1,000,000 a year to the taxpayers' burden. Resolutions were unanimously adopted to telegraph the South Dakota congressmen urging them to work and vote against the measure. Individual members of the bureau were likewise pledged to send telegrams to Washington. On May 5th, all three South Dakota members voted with the railroads, and one of them, Royal Johnson, opened the fight with a filibuster game.

Nelson offered in evidence a circular issued to all local surgeons of the Santa Fe system, by W. P. Waggener, general attorney for the road, dated March 7th, notifying them 'to proceed at once and secure letters from business men, farmers and others, directed to the congressmen from your districts," opposing the Barkley measure. A list of suggestions for the text of these protest letters was included, with a promise to refund necessary canvassing expenses.

Then there was the telegram sent May 6th by A. H. Mulliken, chairman of the legislative committee, Railway Business Association (which is the combine of railway supply companies that "milked" the railroads of vast sums in inflated prices on contract work), to the head of their membership committee, saying that 100 new member firms must be enrolled at once, to impress Congress with the opposition of business to this bill. "In House or Senate or White House," he said, "this bill must be beaten if possible."

California Cattle Men Profit By Hoof And Mouth Hysteria

LOS ANGELES, Cal., May 22.—No state in the union surpasses California in silliness whenever hysteria of one kind or another is on. At present tourists have to have camping outfits fumigated, must walk over medicated sawdust, and drive their cars thru medicated slop; very much as they had to keep a piece of cheesecloth tied over their nose during the flu epidemic. Back of these things there is the psychology of officialdom rampant and back of this there is a more or less carefully concealed graft.

Whatever the origin of the epidemic, it is well known in Los Angeles that it is being used by the big cattlemen to get rid of stock which they cannot afford to carry over the dry season and to kill off their competitors, the independent cattle men. Beyond question, the public authorities are paying for a lot of cattle ruthlessly sacrificed to the scare and the cattle monopoly in California suggests large possibilities in the use of such a scare for the benefit of certain well-known monopolists.

Smiling faces make "Dennie" Sullivan sore. Yesterday when fifty girl garment strikers faced him in their usual smiling good humored way he looked fierce and put their cases over till today. Quite apparently he doesn't relish the prospect of hearing the same witnesses for the garment bosses tell the same story he has heard scores of times.

The girls were walking on the streets and the poor judge must sit and listen to a half dozen witnesses say that over and over again fifty times. Yesterday's postponement of the contempt hearings was about the tenth postponement of their cases and the prospects are that the hearing will be set over again today.

Foell's Feet Also Cold.

Judge Foell, altho not faced with as hard a job as Sullivan, was no more willing to go thru with it.

He set the cases of the two girls who came before him yesterday to be heard Friday with the prospect that he would then delay the hearings further.

Cops Seize Opportunity.

Bernice Nawrocki, a striker, was arraigned in S. Clark street police court yesterday to answer to disorderly conduct because she talked to a scab who was on her way home. The coppers, who are still doing strike duty and having a soft time of it, seized the opportunity to make an arrest. For weeks now they have not had the chance to do anything against the strikers and for their friends the bosses and they were glad to see opportunity walking down the street. Bernice took a jury trial.

NEW YORK, May 22.—Negotiations between the International Ladies' Garment Workers' officials and the Cloak Suit and Dress Manufacturers' association were broken off here yesterday.

Sigman, president of the I. L. G. W. U. has set all machinery for calling and handling a strike June 1st, in motion. The strike will involve 60,000 workers. The bosses refused to debate the demands of the union for a raise in wages and the forty-hour week, guaranteed employment periods and the use of the union label and unemployment insurance.

The union is still in negotiation with bosses not represented by the association. The association bosses are the biggest in the city manufacturing the garments from start to finish in their own shops without the aid of contractors.

WAR LORD BURNT CITY THRICE IN AERIAL LECTURE

Audience Howled For More Gore

By C. A. MOSELY.

Federated Press Staff Correspondent.

In the opinion of the Illinois Manufacturers' Association as voiced by C. A. Livingston, assistant to the president, there will be another war. He spoke in the La Salle Hotel to the National Aeronautic Association. "We have," he added, "some pacifists here in Cook county, but of course there will be war." The peace school of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom is in session here.

The chief speaker of the aerial militarists was Rear Admiral W. F. Fullam. The admiral was pessimistic of getting adequate preparedness for the next war out of a pacifist congress. He hopes to build up a large fleet of commercial aircraft, which can be mobilized when needed for defense.

The admiral's talk was illustrated by several reels of motion pictures, in which commercial uses of aircraft were alternated with Barling bombers, dropping of bombs and torpedoes, and spreading of poison gases. The admiral's pictures showed the metropolis successively destroyed three times by explosion, flame, and poison gas, reminding one of the verdict of the coroner's jury, that the deceased came to death by a blow on board ship, was thrown overboard and washed ashore and froze to death.

Admitting the squandering of vast sums on airplanes which never reached France (he put the figure at $300,000,000, cutting the actual amount in half), Fullam laid the blame on the people who had prevented preparedness, evidently believing that it was too much to expect honesty of profiteers during national danger.

"Every red-blooded American," he said, "should wish to see America supreme in the air." His sentiments were shared by an audience composed mostly of young men,—a few aviators, many textbook flyers, and beardless youths with aspirations to be lords of the air.

No one suggested resolutions indorsing the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom. And by some oversight the national anthem was not heard. The aeronautic association sells life membership at $500.

Congress Considers Farm Relief Bills Before Adjourning

WASHINGTON, May 22. — Congressional leaders today saw but one obstacle to adjournment on June 7, and that was enactment of a farm relief measure satisfactory to middle western progressives.

Confident that the tax bill as revised by the conferees, will be signed by the president, the dictators of policy of all factions agreed to disregard the clamor for other legislation and get away for the summer. Progressives will aid in this move by dropping their fight for repeal of the rate-making section of the present railroad law.

The demands of the Ford Muscle Shoals group; the world court group's announced intention of forcing a vote upon that issue; and declarations by numerous senators that they intend to call up their special bills, are disregarded by various group leaders in their plans to adjourn.

OLE HANSON, RED-BAITER, REAL ESTATE SHARK, IS NOW A HORSE THIEF

LOS ANGELES, Cal., May 22.—Every radical from the Mexican border to Seattle was laughing his head off today, after reading in the papers the cheering news that Ole Hanson, the grafting real estate shark and patriotic faker was at last arrested for horse stealing. He was released on $1,000 bonds.

Unfortunately, the old California law, making horse stealing punishable by death, was changed so that Ole may get away with his life and perhaps, without any punishment, as all the capitalists and panhandling patriotic societies will be back of him.

Ole distinguished himself after the big Seattle strike in 1919, by claiming to have blocked the movement to establish a Soviet Republic in the United States. He toured the country under the auspices of Rotary Clubs and Chambers of Commerce and made violent attacks on the radicals for their indifference to the laws governing the rights of property, but after he was found guilty of selling mountain peaks instead of fertile valleys to poor workingmen, his stocks fell considerably and he was driven out of Seattle to the orange groves of California, where half a dozen suckers arrive every minute. Ole was out to catch them.

The role of horse thief may be his last turn on the public stage before he dons the striped uniform.

THE POWER COLUMN

LAST WEEK OF DRIVE PROVING GRUELLING CONTEST FOR LEADERSHIP

Toledo, after Brilliant Showing Gains Undisputed Hold At the Top.

Only three short weeks remain to the first big subscription drive and any one of a score of cities has more than a fighting chance to be at the head of the column before the last bell rings. DAILY WORKER boosters are finding this campaign tremendously more exciting and interesting than any they have ever before entered into. Their interest is evidenced by their strenuous activity and is recorded twice each week in the Honor Roll for those who read THE DAILY WORKER to become acquainted with those who are making the paper a success.

Toledo Gains Well Earned Honors.

There is one city, or more exactly one group of militants who deserve more than passing mention. A small group, captained by Comrade A. W. Harvitt has put Toledo on the map as far as the labor movement is concerned. To be sure these young militants have been mentioned before in this column, but their achievements can well be noted again so that others may have a mark to strive for. With no left wing movement of any size in Toledo on January 13 when THE DAILY WORKER was born, with practically no readers of any radical journal, in a few short months these hustlers have been able to secure hundreds of readers for THE DAILY WORKER. There is much to be expected from Toledo in the future not only for THE DAILY WORKER but for every activity in the revolutionary movement.

Toledo has worked hard and consistently and it is no wonder that it has at last gained the envious position from which it can look downward at the rest of the country.

Others Are Coming!

South Bend, Ind. another little city of which little or nothing has been heard has also covered itself with glory. The comrades there claim they have no intentions of remaining at even figures and expect to reach at least the 150 per cent mark before June 15th. Pittsburgh, Pa., and Kansas City, Mo., are still among the climbers and the comers, the former threatening to give Toledo a run for a banner and the latter still making its claim for cities with less than 100 quotas. Miles City is still waiting at the brink. Portland, Ore. another bright spot in the far west is also slowly but surely pulling up. Warren, Ohio gained another notch but seems to be waiting a while for the pack to pull up before taking another spurt.

There Is Still Time for the Rest.

Three weeks!! That is not a very long time, but Elinor Glyn made lots of things happen within its span. If a word slinger can do it, there ought to be a few thousand militants who deal with deeds instead of words who can do as well or better. There is still time for every city on the list to wipe off some of the low figures and replace them with more respectable ones. There is still time for the rest. Let each militant make it his personal business to use each day for the benefit of THE DAILY WORKER and the working class, for his own honor and that of the labor movement of his city.

Nightingale Sings for Radio.

LONDON, May 22.—The sweet song of a nightingale was broadcast over the radio last night, enabling many people who had never heard the bird to listen to its song. The birds were tempted to sing at the right moment by the soft notes of a cello played by a musician in Surrey wood. A microphone and amplifier were used to transmit the song to the London broadcasting station.

SENATOR NORRIS OFFERS PRIMARY DUEL TO G. O. P.

Would Race Old Guard In Special Vote

By LAURENCE TODD.

Federated Press Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, May 22.—Senator Norris of Nebraska, renominated by an overwhelming majority in the recent primary in his state, in the face of a violent and vituperative campaign, made against him by the Coolidge-Daugherty-Lockwood organization of the old guard, has challenged them to a political duel. He has replied to a demand made by the reactionary Republican organization chiefs in Nebraska, that he get off the ticket, by offering to enter a recall primary with every candidate and every member of the state committee who is seeking his withdrawal. Norris' name alone will go on the primary recall ballot. If he loses, he will resign; if he wins, all of his enemies will resign. He does not anticipate that they will take up the challenge.

Shows Up "Cal."

This act on the part of Norris throws into high relief the critical situation which the Republican party has reached, due to Coolidge's ceaseless warfare against the progressive elements within the party. In every quarter of the country his emissaries and job-holders are controlling conventions or conferences which ignore or attack the progressive and semi-progressive members of the House and Senate, while adopting resolutions endorsing the hard-boiled who surround the White House. Endorsement of Denby and denunciation of Couzens in Michigan is a fair sample of this war of extermination which Coolidge is waging. In Iowa it is an almost hysterical feud against Senator Brookhart; in Nebraska Norris is its target. Bankers, railroad attorneys, chambers of commerce, reserve officers of the army, all of the special privileged groups that join in mobbing labor radicals and political heretics, are enlisted just now in "purging" the Republican ranks of the men who have repudiated Taft, Hughes, Harding, Coolidge, Fall, Denby, Daugherty and their associates.

Norris specified that the primary be held 30 days after the adjournment of Congress, since he would not return home until his work here was done.

At the same time he presented to the Senate a 20-page list of business firms acknowledged by the National Republican to have bought quantities of "subscriptions" to that fascist propaganda publication in the 1920 campaign. Harry F. Sinclair, for his oil company, paid $1,096 on January 26, 1920, while hundreds of lesser concerns, covering most of the manufacturing industries in Massachusetts, Wisconsin, West Virginia and other states, paid less sums. The Republican national committee bought about $10,000 worth of the papers, up to September 23, 1920, the last date included in the report.

Norris said that this publication was "reading out of the party most of its good men."

What has the American worker to do with the worker of Germany, France, England, or any other country? Isn't the American worker better off than the European worker? Do you see workers in Germany riding to work in automobiles? Why should an unskilled worker get the same pay as the skilled worker? Is there a country that has a better educational system than the United States? These and many other questions were flung at members of the Irving Park branch of the Young Workers' League, Tuesday night, after Peter Hurd gave a talk at an open air meeting at the corners of Irving Park and Elston avenue.

After making clear that Boys' Week is another attempt on the part of the capitalist class to keep the youth of today in ignorance, the speaker reviewed the events of the late war and pointed out that the only way to overcome the system of wage slavery, injustice and inequality under which we are living, is for the workers of the world to unite against their common foe—capitalism. He also stressed the fact that the Workers Party and Young Workers' League are the only organizations in the United States which are working towards that goal.

The big crowd which encircled the speaker and members of the league, was loath to disperse. Many promised to attend the meeting of the league next Tuesday evening, at 4021 No. Drake avenue and continue the discussion there. Several prospective members were signed up and a goodly number of the Young Worker were sold.

S. P. Resents Taft's Income.

CHICAGO, May 22.—Chief Justice Taft's annual $10,000 income on the side from steel trust securities given him by Andrew Carnegie is branded as a disgrace to the supreme court bench by the Socialist party national office, which demands an investigation. The Socialists assert that Taft's $15,000 a year from the federal treasury for his life job as justice ought to be enough to live on.

The Workers Party in Action

DECISIONS OF CENTRAL EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF THE WORKERS PARTY

At a meeting of the Central Executive Committee, May 14th, the following decisions were made:

Farmer-Labor Assessment.

It was decided in view of the lack of funds to carry on the party work effectively at the present time and the failure of the Farmer-Labor Campaign Fund to bring in the necessary money to carry on the present party work, to levy an assessment of 50c per member in order to meet the expenses of the campaign in connection with the June 17th convention.

Italian Daily.

The question of publication of the Italian Daily "Il Lavoratore" was discussed with the Committee of the Italian Section, and the Italian Bureau was authorized to proceed with the publication of the Daily when a certain sum was on hand.

American Imperialism.

The Committee discussed the question of Pan-American Imperialism and the organization of a Pan-American Communist Bureau and Congress in the light of a report made by Comrade Jay Lovestone, who attended the convention of the Mexican Communist Party as the representative of the Workers Party. Decisions were made covering the work of organizing an immediate temporary bureau and a later Congress of all Pan-American Parties.

Philippine Independence.

Committee discussed the progress of our campaign in support of independence of the Philippine Islands and adopted a program of party work in support of the struggle of the workers and farmers of the Philippines against the American capitalists as well as the Philippine exploiters. The program will be published in the party press.

Greeting to British Communist Party.

Committee authorized the Executive Secretary to send greetings to the convention of the Communist Party of Great Britain which began on May 18th.

Small Businessmen as Party Members.

Following motion to govern the acceptance of small business men as Party members was adopted by the Committee: "That all small businessmen as such must be excluded from the party, but great care must be exercised in passing upon such applications. While we can accept workers as members of the party who are not yet thoroly grounded in Communist principles, non-workers can only be accepted as members if they have a fundamental grasp of Communist principles and show in their attitude a desire to work and a readiness to make sacrifices for those principles even at the expense of their economic interest.

"Under no circumstances can we accept as members of our party, employers who are in conflict or who have the reputation of engaging in conflicts with workers whom they employ.

St. Paul Committee of Arrangements Publicity.

The Committee instructed the Editorial Staff of the DAILY WORKER and the editors of othes party papers to carefully examine the material received from the Committee of arrangements at St. Paul and when this material contains statements contrary to the established party policy, our party editors are instructed while publishing this material in the press to publish in the same number of the paper, editorial comment on the point with which we disagree, stating the party position in relation thereto.

Russian Section.

The committee approved of the cooperation of Comrade Borisoff as a member of the Bureau of the Russian Section.

Research Department Bulletin.

The Committee authorized the Research Department to issue a bulletin from time to time on economic and political facts and also a bulletin for party speakers.

Bedacht Explains St. Paul Program To Douglas Park

By S. USPRICH.

Members of the Douglas Park English branch of the Workers' Party, being rather enthusiastic with the report of the financial secretary, were delighted to hear Max Bedacht, who spoke to this branch upon the necessity to get behind the June 17 convention and making it a success.

Bedacht outlined very clearly the difference between the Opportunists and the Communists, the misconceptions of one, and the clear and definite stand of the other. He showed how it is the duty of every Communist to participate in all struggles, no matter how small, consequently when the party enters into this campaign it is not with the contention that our goal has been reached, but rather, as one of the demonstrations of a party of action.

Every comrade in the Douglas Park English branch understands the necessity of such a move, and will bend every effort to make the convention of June 17 a great success, and one that will voice the attitude of the Workers in America.

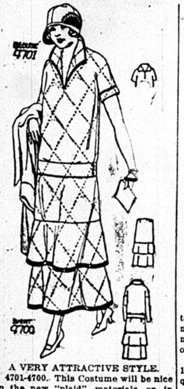
Russian Picnics.

The district committee of the Russian branches, Workers party, has arranged a picnic for Sunday, June 1, at Bergman's Grove, Riverside, Ill.

The Society for Technical Aid to Soviet Russia has arranged picnics for Sunday, June 8, at Stickney Grove, and Sunday, August 24, at National Grove.

All friendly organizations are requested not to arrange other affairs on those dates.

OUR DAILY PATTERNS



A VERY ATTRACTIVE STYLE.

4701-4700. This Costume will be nice in the new "plaid" materials or in mohair or linen suiting. Braid or stitching or banding in a contrasting color would be pleasing for trimming.

The Blouse 4701, has a convertible collar, and may be finished with wrist length or short sleeve portions.

The Skirt 4700 shows the new flounce style. It is cut in 7 Sizes: 25, 27, 29, 31, 33, 35 and 37 inches waist measure, with corresponding hip measure, 35, 37, 39, 41, 43, 45 and 47 inches. The Blouse 4701 is cut in 6 sizes: 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44 inches bust measure. To make this Costume as illustrated in the large view, for a medium size, will require 4 yards of 40 inch material. If made with long sleeves 5⅛ yards is required.

TWO separate patterns mailed to any address on receipt of 12c FOR EACH pattern in silver or stamps.

Send 12c in silver or stamps for our UP-TO-DATE SPRING & SUMMER 1924 BOOK OF FASHIONS.

A JAUNTY MODEL

4710. This "costume" is quite up-to-date, and attractive for any of the material now in vogue. The jacket may be omitted, or it may be made of contrasting material.

The Pattern is cut in 4 sizes: 6, 8, 10 and 12 years. A 10 year size requires 2⅛ yards for the dress, and 1 yard for the jacket of 40 inch material. Mustard color linen with stitching in brown floss would be nice for this model or pongee in a natural shade with pipings or bindings of white or green.

Pattern mailed to any address on receipt of 12c in silver or stamps.

Send 12c in silver or stamps for our UP-TO-DATE, SPRING & SUMMER 1924 BOOK OF FASHIONS.

RUTHENBERG APPEAL LAWYER SEES JUDGE ABOUT PROCEEDINGS

Developments in the Ruthenberg Appeal are proceeding rapidly. Briefs were filed on May 10. I. E. Ferguson, one of the defense attorneys, is going to St. Joseph tonight to confer with Judge White relative to the details of the Appeal proceedings before the Michigan Supreme Court. He will also confer with the prosecuting attorneys. The actual hearing of the Appeal will take place in June or July, it is understood.

Pullman Workers Make New Plans For New Battles

Workers in the Pullman shops, recently on strike, and workers in other industries on Chicago's far south side resolved to "carry on" against the big industrial corporations that have their open shop plants in this section of the city, at a spirited mass meeting held at Stancik's Hall, East 115th street.

Nick Leschner, the first strike picket arrested, was chairman of the meeting, that was also addressed by J. Louis Engdahl, editor of the DAILY WORKER, and J. P. McCarthy, its circulation manager.

The men are determined to stick together. If all the strikers are not taken back, without discrimination, a new strike will, no doubt, be called.

"Join your union and get into your political party, the Workers (Communist) Party," urged Engdahl.

"You must get ready for the next struggle," said McCarthy.

Plans were made for building the circulation in Pullman, of the DAILY WORKER, and for winning new members for the Workers Party.

Organizer Fails; Socialists Turn To Communists

DENVER, Colo., May 22.—Socialists who were disappointed in the failure of their national organizer, William H. Henry, to speak on the Farmer-Labor Party issue and the June 17th St. Paul convention have asked permission to attend meetings of the Workers Party for information on these vital subjects.

Henry spoke here to a small audience on the same evening Trachtenberg addressed a crowd of several hundred interested listeners. Henry cut his meeting short at the conclusion of his speech, giving no opportunity for questions. When approached later by some of the Socialists, Henry angrily told them that the Socialist party could not associate with Communists who believed in "the dictatorship" and refused to join the June 17th convention for a mass class party of the farmers and workers.

Remaining Dates, Places, Announced For Trachtenberg

Sunday, May 25—St. Paul, Labor Temple, 416 Franklin St., at 8 p. m.

Monday, May 26—Minneapolis, First Unitarian Church, 8th St. and La Salle Ave., at 8 p. m.

Tuesday, May 27—Superior, Workers' Hall, cor. Tower Ave. and North 5th St., at 8. p. m.

Previous meetings have been enthusiastically attended. Trachtenberg's discussion of the present German situation has never failed to hold his audiences.

NEW YORK CITY Party Activities

Coney Island Forms English Branch.

NEW YORK, May 22.—Coney Island's English branch of the Workers Party is the newest in the city. It was organized recently with promising prospects.

The next meeting of the branch will be Tuesday evening, May 27, in the attractive meeting rooms of the Workmen's Circle, 3109 Surf avenue, Coney Island.

Jeanette D. Pearl is the branch organizer and is urging all English-speaking sympathizers to join the activities of the lusty new branch.

TROTSKY TALKS ON JAPAN, U. S. AND CAPITALISM

Europe Rotting Under Capitalist Rule

(By The Federated Press)

MOSCOW.—So long as the ruling class in the United States is unfriendly or contemptuous in its dealings with the yellow races, it tremendously heightens the dangers to world peace, according to Leon Trotsky who has returned to Moscow after nursing his health for many months.

"War between the United States and Japan is not impossible," says Trotsky, "but it can be avoided if the anti-imperialist groups in both countries assert themselves. "It must be admitted, however, that both these mighty capitalistic states are separated by many hostile interests."

In the opinion of Trotsky, the 1923 earthquake has by no means put an end to Japanese imperialism. "Imperialism depends upon the social structure of a state," observed Trotsky, "and not upon its geological formation."

"As long as the question is one of fighting the despicable and shameful attempt to treat the Japanese people as an inferior race, the Japanese may expect always to find in Russia a true, steadfast and unselfish friend. The concept of 'superior and inferior races' reflects the conceit of the ruling classes of old Europe, which dates back to a time when Asia was still fast asleep. Asia has now awakened. And if Europe continues much longer to rot under the conditions brought about by the peace of Versailles, the center of historical development will definitely be shifted to America and Asia.

"Normal and lasting relations between the Union of Soviet Republics and Japan can and will, sooner or later, be established on the basis of equality and, of course, not at the cost of a third party like China."

The Third Annual Picnic of the Workers Party, Local Chicago, will be held on Friday, July 4, at Stickney's Grove. Speakers, dancing, games, refreshments, etc., are being provided. Sympathetic organizations are requested not to arrange any other affair, but to give all possible support to the July 4th picnic.

TACOMA, Wash., May 22.—A committee from the Building Trades Council has visited the Cushman dam and power plant being built to enlarge the municipal electric system, to see what can be done in getting the standard wage scale paid. The contractors refuse to pay the Tacoma scale, preferring the scale used by lumber camps and logging roads in the vicinity, which is much lower.

The city commissioner in charge of the work frequently has another announcement of how he has saved some more money for the tax payers.

Among other things, he gets all the city printing done by scabs. Yet this same commissioner is supposed to be friendly to the workers and was recently re-elected by a three to one majority at the primaries.

The Building Trades Council and Central Labor Council placed a working class candidate in the field, who fought it out for the other commissionship (there are four, only two elected this year), with a man considered to be a mere rubber stamp for the mayor, an eighty-year-old hot-air artist, who has spent about sixty years in politics. He is a "progressive" old cuss, very fond of mud-slinging, and very popular.

The campaign was marked by an unprecedented amount of slander and lies, mostly whispered. The labor candidate was variously accused of belonging to the K. K. K., to the K. of C. (he is neither) and of helping dynamite the Los Angeles Times (he was never in California). The workers failed to support their candidate, and the business man's friend got in.

Capitol Branch Active.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 22.—At the regular meeting of the English Branch of the Workers' Party here Dr. S. R. Pearlman was elected Secretary-Organizer; Dr. Leon Brodsky was elected recording secretary and H. O. Watt was elected as press agent.

Five new members were admitted to the branch and one member proposed.

Addresses were made by Comrades L. F. Shea; J. H. Brasher and J. Powel. At the next regular meeting on May 29 Comrade Brasher will deliver an address on the mining industry in this country.

THE VIEWS OF OUR READERS ON LIFE, LABOR, INDUSTRY, POLITICS

The La Follette Movement.

To the DAILY WORKER: I am opposed to the La Follette movement. Not because I do not admire and respect the great senator, but because I realize that a political movement must not be based upon great men and leaders, but must be based upon broad fundamental principles and issues.

The able senator from Wisconsin has shown his mettle and caliber during the trying days of the war and since the war. He has stood steadfastly and consistently for the truth and justice; he has fought the battle of the enslaved and the oppressed; he has opposed unflinchingly and intelligently the profiteers and chauvinists, and he has fought for the rights which the constitution of the United States guarantees to all the citizens of this republic. And I greatly admire and respect and revere this noble man for these qualities.

But if there is to be a political movement built around the senator, there will be cliques of men whose interests are not entirely unselfish and altruistic. Some of these men will be extremely wealthy, and some millionaires will join in the movement. A large number of rich people will financially support such a movement. They will do so not because they dominantly believe that the government should be operated for all the people and that justice and equality should be administered to all, but they will support such a movement because some of them desire power and privilege.

It is our duty to form and establish a political party which will be for and in the interest of the great masses, and such a party should be supported, managed and controlled by the working people.

We have seen in our own generation the formation and establishment of progressive and reform political parties, and in every instance such parties were formed around so-called great men and were not based upon fundamental, radical principles, without which no movement can truly represent the great masses of the working people.

We need no great leader; we need no Messiah to lead us out of the wilderness of slavery and exploitation and oppression. We need only ourselves to become active members of a political party which shall have as its basis and platform the complete eradication of all injustice, slavery and oppression of the capitalist system. The workers must learn to unite for their own interests; they must be their own leaders; they must be their own deliverers of the slavery, starvation and abominable evils which flow from the capitalist system.

A great man such as La Follette cannot accomplish the complete change of government and the reform of the industrial system under which we live, but the great mass of wage slaves of whatever description must co-ordinate all their energies, must co-operate together in one political group to battle with the opposing forces. This political party shall have as its platform the elemental principles of a new industrial order and a just government, and then only will we accomplish that happy end, the establishment of the co-operative commonwealth.—SAMUEL RAPPAPORT, Los Angeles, Calif.

Wants "Iron Heel" Serial.

To the DAILY WORKER: Just a line to let you know I am still in the land of the living and am completely recovered from the attack of pleurisy and grippe which seized me in Chicago the latter part of February. I could not get in the County Hospital there. I was "not sick enough," they said, altho I was not able to walk a block... In asking for suggestions for a serial story, why not run Jack London's "Iron Heel." In that story many prophecies are being consummated; many things are occurring now which he describes, as tho he were still alive, watching capitalism rushing to its destruction. Comrade Louis Grass, Gary Ind.

BRITISH COMMUNISTS DENOUNCE BETRAYING 'LABOR' GOVERNMENT

MANCHESTER, Eng., May 22.—The British Communist party now holding its annual congress here, has passed a resolution denouncing the labor government of England. MacDonald and his cohorts were called "handrags" to the king for their vicious reactionary slavishness to the rule of things as they are. The "labor" government was called "the willing tool and accomplice of the capitalist exploiters," and was denounced for its "faithlessness and treachery to the working class."

Russian Imports Won't Unbalance Trade Advantage

(Rosta News Service.)

MOSCOW, May 22.—The active balance of Russian external trade, which insures a successful reform, is to be kept up as firmly as the foreign trade monopoly, according to a statement made at an important party meeting by Mr. Kameneff, Acting President of the Council of People's Commissaries.

At the same time the speaker explained there was a certain possibility of imports being increased, tho in the limits of an active balance, with a view, in particular, to assuring the stabilization of prices in the internal market. This question, Mr. Kameneff stated, was presently under discussion.

Steel Trust Wanted Pittsburgh Bishop's Diocese Eliminated

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., May 22.—Charges that the steel trust had attempted to get rid of Bishop Francis J. McConnell from the Pittsburgh diocese of the Methodist church were made by Rev. William F. Conner in the Methodist general conference progressing here.

"Bishop McConnell was the chairman of the committee that investigated the steel trust and its treatment of employes," said Dr. Conner (referring to the inter-church world movement's investigation of the steel industry about four years ago.) "If we eliminate the Pittsburg residence it will be said that the church has bowed to the capitalists and the money power. I don't charge that, but that will be the result."

The Pittsburg motion was defeated, so that the number of bishops remains intact.

For Labor Regent.

SAN FRANCISCO.—Once more the San Francisco Labor council heads a move to secure a labor regent for the University of California. The board of regents almost exclusively represents the power interests, bankers and their allies, with Mortimer Fleishhacker, owner of the "hell fleet" of the salmon industry, as its grand duke.

Dancer Hurt in Russia.

FROST FREEZES WASHINGTON'S FRUIT HOPES

Farmer-Labor Party Thrives On Blight

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WALLA WALLA, Wash., May 22.—The Farmer-Labor Party in this district is pushing its fight on behalf of the stricken farmers of this state, since the late heavy frost killed from 50 to 80 per cent of the fruit crop, from which so much had been expected.

Population Departs.

Southeastern Washington has seen high costs and low prices for three years now. Some fruit was canned but much could not be, nor could it be sold for enough to pay transportation charges. Wheat costs more to raise than it sold for and thousands of acres of wheat lands have not been planted this year.

Walla Walla had 19,000 population by the 1910 census, only 13,000 in 1920, and since then conditions have grown steadily worse.

"Eight Men Buried Alive."

The leading business of the town is the State Penitentiary, one of the worst prison hells in America, where the victims of the Centralia frameup are held. The state politicians who are running the place are anxious to put in a contract labor system which will increase their loot. The labor movement has so far prevented it. A start was made and then abandoned.

The prisoners are held idle in their cells most of the time, and fed on rotten food. The prison administration has changed four times in four years, and as each new set of officials have been getting their share of what was coming to them, conditions have grown steadily worse. Another riot is not improbable if conditions get much worse and the food much viler. Such a riot occurred some years ago and after three days of it the townspeople interferred. It was caused by rotten conditions, which were then bettered a little.

Methodist Merger Fight Looms.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., May 22.—Five cities today were bidding for the special conference of the Methodist church South, called by the College of bishops for July second to act on the proposal to merge with the northern branch. That the fight against the merger will be bitter, was indicated when the College of bishops vote on the merger, was announced as evenly divided, 7 and 7.

WISCONSIN TO START FARMER-LABOR PARTY

Will Send Delegates To St. Paul

MADISON, Wis., May 22.—Almost unanimous support was given to the movement for the formation of a state Farmer-Labor Party and for the sending of delegates to the national convention in St. Paul June 17 at the state conference for progressive political action held here Sunday. The resolution adopted is being sent out to labor and farmers' organizations thruout the state.

Socialists Want "Detective."

Socialist delegates and other conservatives attempted to put thru a motion to send an "observer" only to St. Paul. F. H. Shoemaker of Green Bay replied in a stirring speech, ridiculing the fears of the Socialists. He called upon the delegates to support the efforts of the farmers and workers to build a real party of their own class and send a bona fide representative to St. Paul, not merely a "detective."

The railway brotherhoods withdrew from the Madison state conference with the clumsy excuse that not all of the railroad organizations had been notified.

Students Fight for Russia.

Wisconsin University students led a splendid fight for the recognition of Soviet Russia, but the reactionaries of the conference defeated the resolution on the flimsy pretext that this meeting had nothing to do with international politics.

John Works, of the Milwaukee "Leader," Socialist paper, was the chief proponent of the motion to send a disruptor to the St. Paul convention.

G. S. Shklar, sub-district organizer of the Workers' Party, answered Works and called upon the delegates to repudiate the Socialist tactics. Shklar urged the conference to send to St. Paul "delegates who are sincere in their desire to build a united front of workers and farmers and who actually want to build a party of workers and farmers on a national scale."

Resolutions Passed.

The resolves of the resolution for the formation of state and national Farmer-Labor Parties are as follows:

"Resolved, that this conference now in session this May 18, 1924, at Madison, Wis., go on record calling upon all branches of the labor movement economic, political, co-operative and fraternal, within the state of Wisconsin, to unite their forces for independent political action thru the formation of a state Farmer-Labor Party, and be it further

"Resolved, that we go on record to give the utmost possible support to the movement for the National Farmer-Labor Convention at St. Paul, Minn., June 17, and that we select one delegate to represent the groups being represented here at this conference."

Much Misery Due To Anti-Soviet Policy, Says Senator Borah

NEW YORK, May 22.—"The unrest of the world, the lack of prosperity in all lands—the many symptoms of uneasiness—all these things are due to a large extent to the refusal of many nations, the United States among them, to recognize Russia as a sister in the family of nations," Senator William E. Borah writes in the New York World.

"The proposition is not a sentimental one. It is a simple economic problem. Something like 150,000,000 human beings dwell in Russia. They need food, clothing, materials, raw stuffs, machinery. In turn they have things to sell which we need. But propaganda, fanatical intolerance and bigotry have said nay to the proposition to accept Russia's promise to remain stable."

Left Wing Only Hope of Needle Trades

By REBECCA GRECHT.

THE 17th bi-annual convention of the International Ladies' Garment Workers Union which came to a close last Saturday, was a clear exhibition of the degeneration of an international union which at one time stood at the very forefront of American labor. At the same time, it was a significant demonstration of the rising tide of progressivism and militancy within the organization which no amount of suppression can stem.

This convention was most unusual in character, unlike any ever held by the International. It was not assembled as might have been expected, to hear reports of past activities and deliberate upon future policies. It was brought together, on the contrary, simply for the purpose of waging a decisive battle against the "lefts" in the union and giving a "democratic" sanction, by a majority vote of the convention, to the policy of coercion and expulsion which the Sigman regime has been pursuing against the militants.

Just a Heresy Trial.

The spirit of the convention, from the very start, was that of preparation for a fight. Battle was in the air. Questions of a constructive nature which came up for consideration were regarded merely as so many unimportant interludes. It was hardly conceivable that this was a trade union convention. The entire proceedings took on the character of a trial for heresy rather than of deliberations upon the problems of a labor body.

When we consider the conditions confronting the workers in the ladies' garment industry at the time the convention met, the absolute incompetency of the present officialdom of the International, their failure as leaders of a working class movement, becomes all the more evident.

Jobbing System Perilous.

The International today is faced with a very critical situation. Thru the development of jobbing a profound change is being wrought in cloak production amounting almost to a revolution. Jobbers, who do not themselves own factories, but supply material and styles to contractors, are rapidly taking the place of the former big manufacturers and are fast becoming the controlling factors in the industry. In their wake has followed a return on a wholesale scale of the sweatshop. Jobbers send their goods to small out-of-town contractors' shops where union control is totally lacking and workers are unorganized.

The result of this extension of the sweat-shop system has been to threaten every labor standard gained by the workers thru bitter sacrifice. Control over the industry is fast slipping out of the union's hands. Unemployment is making alarming headway. Gradually the workers are being forced to yield their hard-won positions in face of the competition rife in the industry.

FACED WITH GENERAL STRIKE

When the convention assembled, it was therefore confronted with problems of vital significance to the organization. The International was on the eve of a general strike in New York. The entire strength of the union had to be mobilized for the struggle. It was necessary to adopt an entirely different program of industrial tactics. Plans for an intensive organization campaign had to be outlined. In short, had the present leadership of the International the interests of the workers really at heart, then the convention in Boston would have been the occasion for a critical analysis of the past tactics and policies of the organization and a careful deliberation over future activity.

The outcome of the convention, however, is proof enough that the present chaos and demoralization in the industry will not be overcome so long as the present leadership rules the organization.

T. U. E. L. Organized Left.

For several years past there has been developing in the International a strong opposition to the methods of struggle pursued by the administration which have been held largely responsible for the condition of the industry. Since the organization of the Trade Union Educational League more than two years ago the opposition has become crystalized and has adopted a definite program which is gaining ground in the union. This has led to bitter persecution of the militants reaching its climax in the expulsion of the most active members of the International. The decision of the convention approving Sigman's expulsion policy marked the culmination of the attempt to drive progressivism out of the union.

9 Days of Machine Hysteria.

For fully seven days the credentials committee reported on objections to regularly elected delegates based on charges of membership in the League and criticism of the officialdom. At least two more days were taken up with the officers' reports on the "left hysteria" and the cases of the expelled members from Chicago and Philadelphia. Thruout that time the convention was the scene of an orgy of persecution by an officialdom drunk with power.

SOME EXPELLED MILITANTS

HYMAN FOGEL, Local 5, Chicago, member of executive board.
DORA LIPSHITZ, Local 100, Chicago, member of executive and joint board.
N. GROSS, Local 26, Cleveland.

CLARA GABIN, Local 100, Chicago, delegate to Chicago Fed. of Labor.
J. LITWINSKY, Local 18, Chicago, member of joint board. Union member for 15 years.

ANNA LITVAKOFF, known as the "Mother" of Local 15, chairlady of Philadelphia waist makers' union, 17 years a union member.
SAM COHEN, Local 104, Chicago, local chairman and member of joint board.

The convention was under their control—they had planned for that before it met. By expulsions from the union, illegal removal from ballots, and other acts of discrimination, they had eliminated from the convention the leaders, the fighting militants of the opposition. They had brought at least 80 delegates from country locals artificially created for that purpose, to offset the votes of any progressives who had not been kept out. By their propaganda and scurrilous attacks before and during the convention they had created a spirit akin to the mob psychology of lynching.

Eject 16—Choke Discussion.

The machine had been well-prepared. Sixteen delegates were ejected from the convention while Sigman's steam roller choked off discussion of the issues involved in their cases. Full leeway was given the officials of the union for the most violent attacks upon them and the principles they advocate, but no answer was permitted. When the case of the Chicago expelled came up, Sigman refused to grant any of the individuals involved a hearing before the convention; and vice president Perlstein went so far as to threaten with similar punishment those delegates that dared defend them. On the question of the League, the center of all attacks, no debate was tolerated. Constitutional amendments practically making illegal any manifestation of progressivism were jammed thru.

IGNORING TRADE PROBLEMS.

This spectacle lasted almost thruout the convention. The trade problems facing the workers in the industry were not taken up until the eleventh day of the sessions, and then, the strongest oppositional elements having been removed, it was all simply a matter of accepting reports of committees with little, if any, discussion.

The convention adopted plans for educational work, for unemployment, sick, and family protective insurance. It enthusiastically authorized the General Executive Board to call a general strike of cloakmakers in New York. It approved the report of the organization committee, which took exactly half an hour, recommending that an intensive campaign of organization be started immediately after the convention. No basis, however, was laid for putting even these measures into effect. On the contrary, the convention decisions have made it impossible for the International to cope with its present industrial problems.

Needed Unity Against Sweatshops.

One of the greatest needs of the organization at this juncture is unity of all factions within it, based upon cessation of persecution of the militants, so that the maximum effort of all members may be directed towards overcoming the dangers which threaten the union thru the return of the sweat-shop system. The convention's approval of Sigman's expulsion policy, however, and the amended constitution have established an inquisition in the International which makes heresy hunting its chief object, thus intensifying the discontent of the membership, and further weakening the union. In addition, the officialdom by driving out the most active members of the union, or eliminating them from participation in the direction of the organization, has greatly diminshed the fighting force of the union.

"LEFTS" THE VANGUARD.

The "lefts" in the International against whom the administration directs its attack are the vanguard of the organization, the shock troops in any battle with the enemy. Each of the members expelled from the union in Philadelphia, and Chicago or unseated at the convention, can point to a long record of achievements for the International, of self-sacrificing devotion to the interests of the workers in their industry. Without these militant elements the union cannot hope to strengthen itself and offer resistance to the onslaught of the employers.

The International stands at a turning point in its history. The proceedings of the convention have given sufficient evidence of the incompetence of the administration. More than that, however, they have proven the failure of the ideology which governs that leadership.

Right Wing Socialist Bankruptcy.

The convention was in reality a test of strength between the "left" militants within the union and the bureaucratic administration with its reactionary following. Tho individuals were involved on both sides, it was in reality a battle of principles. In the final analysis the great significance of the convention lies in this—that it demonstrated the bankruptcy of the socialist ideology and methods of struggle which rule the International and against which the revolutionary elements are battling.

The International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union differs from other international unions in that it has revolutionary traditions, and was regarded as one of the main props in the socialist movement in this country. It was founded by workers imbued with the spirit of class consciousness. It gained strength thru the efforts of men and women whose eyes were turned to the distant goal of a free workers' commonwealth. The preamble to the old constitution stated explicitly that the purpose in organizing the union was "to bring about a system of society wherein the workers shall receive the full value of their product" thru the "abolition of the capitalist system."

Drop Revolutionary Preamble.

Under its social-democratic leadership, however, the International has gradually abandoned the revolutionary principles of class struggle in favor of a policy of class collaboration. The most striking proof of the International's swing to the right is the elimination of the revolutionary preamble from the new constitution adopted by the convention. The object of the organization, as stated in Article I, is now to obtain just and reasonable conditions of work thru collective agreements with the employers. There is no mention of the class struggle, of any aim for a co-operative commonwealth.

"A Fair Day's Wage."

The International has adopted Gompers' goal for trade unionists—a fair day's wage for a fair day's work. It goes Gompers even one better, for the constitution does not even speak of "industrial democracy."

This repudiation of its position as a revolutionary labor organization and its definite alignment with Gompers, this absolute return to the comfortable shelter of safe and sane unionism which was the keynote of the convention, has aroused the opposition of the revolutionary elements within the union. The battle in the International is but a reflection, in a trade union dominated by social democrats, of the bigger struggle going on everywhere between social-democracy with its policy of class collaboration on the one hand and, on the other, the revolutionary forces with the policy of class struggle.

The convention of the International has exposed the incompetency of its bureaucratic officialdom, their ruthlessness in crushing opposition, their failure as leaders of a militant trade union. But on the other hand, it has demonstrated the growing strength and power of the left wing in the union. True, the machine had a big majority at the convention, but this gathering was in no way representative of the membership.

It is indeed the fact that the constructive program advocated by the militants is gaining more and more adherents and that their influence among the membership is rapidly increasing which caused their persecution in the organization. The tactics of the International administration, before and during the convention, indicate a policy of despair on the part of those who see their hold upon the organization gradually slipping, and use all means of suppression in a last desperate effort to maintain their power.

The future belongs to the militants in the International. Theirs is the only constructive program which can lead the union out of the morass into which its leadership has thrown it. The only constructive note sounded at the convention was that contained in a leaflet outlining the program of the left wing distributed among the delegates. This emphasized, among others, (1) consolidation of locals in each branch of the industry, (2) the shop delegate system, (3) economy in the administration of the Union; (4) employment bureaus controlled by the union, (5) the labor party, (6) amalgamation of all needle unions into one powerful organization.

In a courageous struggle for these and other demands the militants will lay the basis for the building of an organization that can become an effective weapon in the battle of the workers for a full, free life in a workers republic

EDITOR OF VOLKSZEITUNG HAILS MEET OF UNITED FARMER-LABOR PARTY OF N. Y. AS HISTORIC EVENT

By LUDWIG LORE
(Editor of Volkszeitung)

NEW YORK.—On Sunday, May 18th, in the Labor Temple of the City of Schenectady, the United Farmer-Labor Party of New York state, which will go into the coming campaign as the spokesman and leader of the workers and farmers of the empire state, was born.

The convention, which had been called by the Farmer-Labor Party of Buffalo, and the Federated Farmer-Labor Party of N. Y. C., for the purpose of bringing into existence in the most wealthy and most powerful state of the union a working class party that will take a determined stand against capitalist reaction and exploitation, as represented by the old parties of the capitalist class, surpassed all expectations.

It was attended by almost one hundred delegates from more than eighty organizations, representing labor unions, local central bodies, fraternal, educational and political organizations of the working class, representing every shade of progressive working class opinion, local Farmer-Labor Party organizations, Workers Party, Left Paole Zion, and the Progressive Party, more commonly known under the name of the Committee of 48 under the leadership of its chairman, J. A. Hopkins, of N. Y. C.

After Comrade Ballam, Buffalo, had opened the convention with a brief address, emphasizing the need of a working class unity for political action, a credential committee was elected, which later reported that there were delegates present from practically every important industrial center in the state, Buffalo, Schenectady, Syracuse, Gloversville, Schuylerville, Peekskill, Binghampton, Albany and Rochester, representing an aggregate membership of more than one hundred thousand.

Comrade Kucher, Amalgamated Metal Workers, N. Y., was then elected permanent chairman, Viatic of the Buffalo Moulders' Union, vice-chairman; Verhagen, Schenectady, and Sand Horowitz, secretaries. The following committees were then elected: Committees on Program and Resolutions (7 members); Constitution and Organization (5); Ways and Means (5); Press-Committee (3).

Greetings from Organizations.

At the beginning of the afternoon session a number of telegrams from various workingmen's organizations were read to the convention. Particularly hearty applause followed the reading of a telegram from Comrade Manley, announcing that a State Farmer-Labor Party has been founded in Kansas. Coming down to actual business, the organization of the United Farmer-Labor Party was decided upon, which shall conduct an active working class campaign, not only in the state of New York, but shall join its efforts with those of the workers of every other part of the country, to achieve the organization of an active and successful workingclass party of the U. S. for the coming campaign.

A recommendation to proceed immediately to the collection of a fund of $100,000 was unanimously adopted. Upon report of the committees on organization and constitution, an organization-plan was decided upon providing for an executive committee, consisting of delegates from all the most important centers, and membership by organization affiliation. The calling of a nominating convention as soon as possible after June 17th was also provided for.

The same harmony and willingness to come to an understanding on the part of all the various elements that made up this convention, characterized the discussion of the proposals made by the Committee on Platform and Resolutions. The platform, consisting of a statement of the position, industrially and socially, of the working class in the U. S., declares itself, in a series of brief, definitely formulated statements, for the nationalization of all public utilities, against child labor, against the use of injunctions in labor struggles, for a system of land tenure based upon working ownership, for a more sensible money and credit system, adapted to the needs of the laboring masses.

It is a working class document from the first to the last line. The resolutions, which were also unanimously adopted, after brief and intelligent discussion, breathed the same uncompromising spirit of the class-conscious determination. A resolution demanding the recognition of Soviet Russia was received with enthusiastic applause, while others demanding the repeal of the espionage act, condemning the imperialist tendencies of America in the South American Republics, in Cuba and in the Philippines and others were adopted without a dissenting vote.

Class Party the First Aim.

Every delegate in the hall looked forward eagerly to the nomination and election of the executive committee that was to close the work of the convention. Out of a large number of nominations, the following delegates were elected to function as the State Executive Committee of the new party. From New York City: Krumbein, Lore, Poyntz, Hopkins, Winestone, Lifshitz, London, Jampolsky and Winitzki; from Buffalo: Campbell, Herzog and Ballam; from Albany: Jones; from Binghampton: Klekunas; from Schenectady: Verhagen; from Rochester: Sussman and Hoesteroy. Comrade Krumbein was unanimously elected as delegate to represent the United Farmer-Labor Party of the state of New York at the June 17th convention in St. Paul and he promised in an enthusiastically received address to do everything in his power to further, there, the organization of a class party of the workers and working farmers of America.

At the same time he explained in a pointed speech the reasons, which prompt the Communists to work with all elements of the producing classes for the formation of national Farmer-Labor Party, tho their final aim is the overthrow of capitalist society and the establishment of a Workers' and Farmers' Republic.

If the firm determination to do something worthwhile, if the readiness of the delegates of the various bodies to meet each other in a spirit of mutual understanding, if the crying need for a party in New York state and in the nation to protect the workers against the betrayal and the industrial and political oppression of the rulers of the country—if these things count for anything, then the United Farmer and Labor Party, that was founded in Schenectady last Sunday, will enter in a few weeks upon an active, strenuous campaign, that will aim to carry with it every labor union, every working class and farmer organization in the state.

Canadian Mine Districts.

MONTREAL, Can. — District 26, United Mine Workers of America, in Nova Scotia, is likely to have its autonomy restored within the present year, according to William Green, secretary of the U. M. W. of A., who is here to attend the executive council of the American Federation of Labor now in session in this city.

Green stated that the U. M. W. A. is behind the strike in District 18, British Columbia and Alberta, and supports the effort to maintain old rates and conditions.

Taking Morgan's Orders

The victors of the "Socialist bloc," who won the recent elections in France, have been notified by the defeated Poincare that the French people do not rule their own country. With the elections over, Herriot and Painleve, leaders of the new majority, have been summoned to the Elysees Palace and told that the real ruler of France is none other than J. Pierpont Morgan, of Wall Street, U. S. A.

The readers of the DAILY WORKER have known this right along. The high sounding phrases uttered by the spokesmen of the French "Socialist bloc" would indicate that they were at least trying to hide this fact, just as the "Socialist" Ebert, in Germany, and the "labor" premier, MacDonald, in England, try to hide the fact that capitalism still rules in these two countries.

The monarchy may have disappeared in France, but the republic that now exists is a capitalist republic of bankers, landlords and big capitalists, not a republic of workers and farmers. And as such it is ruled by the Almighty American Dollar that holds its sway over the enslaved peoples of the world.

The government of the "Socialist bloc" in France will not be able to achieve anything lasting for the workers and farmers of that country. All it can do is to teach the French masses that their only hope lies in their own workers' and farmers' rule. That lesson will drive the millions toward Communism and a labor triumph, the victory that is rapidly approaching in Germany, that has already been won in Soviet Russia. Then Morgan's orders will fall on deaf ears.

An Epoch-making Convention

This is the first convention of the Russian Communists without Lenin. This is the first time that the strongest party of the Communist International is gathering without the presence of its teacher, theoretician and leader. But despite the fact that Lenin will no longer be present in person at this gathering, the spirit and heritage of the leader of the world proletarian revolution will unquestionably be impressively left thruout the sessions.

It was under Lenin's leadership that the Russian Communist Party grew to its present strength and international influence. It was the pursuit of the Lenin policies that enabled the Russian Communist Party to win political power in a country inhabited by 130 million people and covering the largest contiguous area within the realms of one nation in the world.

The working masses of the world, the exploited and dispossessed farmers of every country, have a vital interest in this convention and its decisions. Not only does the Russian Communist Party shape the policies and destinies of the first Workers' and Farmers' Soviet Republic but it is also the leading section of the Communist International in which are found the most aggressive, class-conscious proletarian and peasant masses of every land.

As Communists, as those who have no interests other than those of the working class, we are especially concerned with the deliberations and actions of this Party of the Russian masses.

We have every reason on earth to look forward to this convention proving of as great service to the workers of the world as have all its previous gatherings. Everywhere the class lines are becoming more distinct, everywhere the conflict between the employing class and the working class is taking on increasing intensity, and everywhere the workers and poor farmers will draw inspiring lessons from the congress of the Russian Communist Party which has proved its mettle, weathered the fiercest of storms, and vanquished its enemies on the political, military and economic battlefields.

Harmless Radicals

The overthrow of Poincare in the recent French elections and the probable ascendency of Herriot have occasioned a flood of talk about a swing to the left in European politics. We do not deny that the outcome of the French and German elections indicate a swing to the left. But in so far as there has been any genuine swing to the left it is to be measured solely by the increased strength of the Communists in both countries.

The experience of the working masses of every country with every stripe of capitalist or middle class progressive has brought out one truth that is unchallengeable. Whether these "radicals" be English, French, German, American or Japanese, once they are charged with the state powers they desert their radicalism, they forget about their progressive promises and they loyally do the bidding of the big capitalist interests on all important questions.

Thus the reputed "radical" Socialist leader, Herriot, after a conference with the militarist Poincare has promised to behave. The Morgan-French finance combine now feels relieved because of the assurance it has received from the Herriot-Painleve group that the new government will not disturb the supremacy of the banking interests in France. Even the oft repeated promise of Herriot to work for the recognition of Soviet Russia, an issue which has enabled him to win considerable support among the working masses of France, is now being shoved into the back-ground.

The situation in England is fundamentally similar. The budget proposed by the Socialist, Snowden, has met with extensive approval in the circles of British high finance. It was this budget in particular and the moderate behavior of the Labor government in general that has inspired Sir Guy Granet, senior London partner, of the American banking firm, Lee Higginson & Co., and one of the most powerful rail magnates in England, to praise the Labor government officials for "following the right ideals" and manifesting "firmness and decision" in the treatment of India. This banker accorded special praise to the MacDonald government for having abolished the corporation profit tax. The preceeding two reactionary governments which were openly hostile to labor did not dare take this step.

The moral to be drawn from the above experience of the French and English workers is that the working and farming classes should never put any faith in the numerous capitalist "progressives" who seek political leadership of the laboring masses thru mouthing so-called radical phrases.

Strategy or Stratagem?

The reply of the executive secretary of the Socialist Party to the request addressed it by the Workers Party for its severing all relations with the Cleveland Conference for Progressive Political Action and joining hands with the Farmer-Labor Minnesota Convention of June 17th, purports to inform the reader that "while the National Office of the Socialist Party has had indirect information of the St. Paul convention, it has had no official communication whatever respecting it."

"Then the answer goes on to ask whether the Workers Party has "the authority to invite our participation, and, if so, is the letter which you have submitted to be considered as a formal invitation?"

The above points indicate the use of the poorest sort of strategy or the resort to unvarnished stratagem by the Socialist Party in negotiations over a question which involves the cardinal interests of millions of workers and farmers. The call of the committee charged with organizing the June 17th farmer-labor convention, a call addressed to every labor and farmer organization in the country, was given the widest possible publicity in the general press. In attempting to misrepresent the St. Paul convention and its objectives, the enemies of the working and farming masses gave it some of the publicity it needs.

The Socialist Party cannot seriously ask us to believe that the call which was sent to many hundreds of labor and farmers' organizations thruout the country did not reach it. Certainly the Socialist Party has had ample opportunity to get the Farmer-Labor Minnesota convention call. Surely the Socialist Party does not expect the workers and farmers of the country to accept that as the reason for its having failed to act up to this moment on this momentous question put to the working and farming classes by the conditions at hand.

The fact of the matter is that the Socialist Party has kept a watchful eye on and has been in strict touch with all the developments culminating in the issuance of the St. Paul call.

But from here we go to an even worse attempt on the part of the Socialist Party. The question as to the Workers Party having a right to issue invitations to the farmer labor convention is either wretched strategy or that type of stratagem so oft employed by the high-priced corporation lawyers in expensive court litigation.

The Socialist Party has always known that the Workers Party never had and does not have the power to issue such invitations. The Socialist Party has always known that a special committee consisting of the delegated representatives of various labor-farmer groups having a mass following considerably in excess of the its own was the only body authorized to extend such invitations. This inference on the part of the Socialist Party appears to carry with it a rebuke to the St. Paul convention because of the fact that the Workers (Communist) Party will be represented there. It is precisely such arguments that the open-shoppers, the sworn enemies of the working class are making today against the Minnesota Farmer-Labor Movement and against the discontented agrarian masses of the Northwest.

Indeed, the task of Communist-hunting, red-baiting, is not the best task that an organization announcing its working class character, can assume for itself, particularly at this hour when every ounce of energy and effort should be invested in uniting the workingmen and poor farmers into a virile national class farmer-labor party.

Lewis had his laugh last winter in Indianapolis. Howat came back this week with his laugh at Peoria, Illinois. "He who laughs last, laughs best," is an old saying that is very apropos.

Where Does La Follette Stand?

By ISRAEL AMTER.

"America faces a revolution," declared Magnus Johnson when campaigning for election to the United States Senate. The propaganda was effective among the farmers and workers of Minnesota and Magnus Johnson was elected.

Johnson assured his electors that he would make a great noise at Washington, and that he would roar with the loudest of the progressives. But Johnson's roaring has all been of milk: smooth and sweet, as it comes from the cow. Johnson does not think of the revolution any more—although the situation of the farmers has become worse, with no prospect of betterment.

La Follette, on the other hand, has been roaring in the Senate for many years. He struck a brilliant note when the Teapot Dome scandal was brought on the scene. Here he was able to shine; the republican party was being completely discredited and La Follette could begin to hope that the fragments of the party would be gathered up in a new party with himself as the leader and spokesman. But history is not made up of scandals; it is the product of sterner forces, the scandals merely showing the rottenness of the prevailing system. La Follette has pricked the surface of the powerful forces that run the government and has made attempts to uncover them. Is it because he cannot go any further or that he dare not go too far, for fear that the workers and farmers will learn TOO much of the system and its methods?

Both hypotheses are possible. La Follette has had to deal with the present rulers of society; he has been compelled to take a stand many a time. His refusal to approve the war, his militant defiance of the war mania showed that, at least, he had the backbone of a man with convictions. That was glory enough to carry him along for a long time. His fight against the railway trust was a good one, and perhaps he believed and still believes that he will be able peacefully to conquer that trust and the many others that govern the United States. That is his illusion and the illusion of the many millions of workers and farmers of the United States who understand little of the political forces fighting for control.

The workers of the country have awakened somewhat to the nature of the power that confronts them on every side. Although they may not be able to make a synthesis of events under a democratic (capitalist) regime and succeeding events under a republican (capitalist) regime and thus arrive at the conclusion that something generally is wrong with the whole capitalist regime and system, still for the past five years at least they have begun to believe that the employers, manufacturers and financial magnates have entirely too much control of government. Hence they have begun to think in terms of political action by the workers. Needless to enumerate the trade unions that have gone on record in favor of a labor party—even though such expressions of opinion have been systematically sabotaged by the trade union officialdom. Needless to mention the trade union locals which responded to the referendum of the Trade Union Educational League on the question of a Labor Party, and the great number which never received the referendum because of the opposition of the local secretary of the union. Though the movement for a Labor Party is not universal among the American working class, the more awake, virile sections favor it—despite their knowing that it cannot succeed at the first election, and their wish to have voted for the winning party at each single election.

The farmer, on the other hand, is up against the capitalist on all sides. He is literally crushed by the trusts and the banks, and every attempt to get legislation in his favor has met with a rebuff both from the Democratic and the Republican government. As a consequence, he has naturally turned to politcal action and the many movements in the past thirty years indicate his determination to do some things for himself. Hence we find in the movement throughout the middle and far west that the farmers are going into the movement by the tens of thousands.

But an even more significant phenomenon is manifest today. Whereas in former times, the farmers had their distinct movements and were little inclined to cooperate with the workers, the attacks of the trust and the feeling of common suffering, are uniting them with the workers. Movements like the Non-partisan League are doomed in America. Their place is being taken by the farmer-labor movement—a movement of revolt against the trusts—the enslavers of the workers and the farmers. It is a groping revolt, not the product of consciousness—and surely bereft of all understanding that behind the trust and big capital is the GOVERNMENT, representative of wealth and power. The making and unmaking of laws, the issuing of injunctions, the ignoring of the sufferings of the farmers deliberately and savagely by the government, have fastened the eyes of the workers and farmers on Washington. Senators and representatives have been sent to Congress and presumably have put up a militant fight particularly in behalf of the farmers. They are few in number, and only a fortuitous situation has placed them in the position of power; the balance that they wield thay have exercised with great shrewdness and acumen. The movement, however, that has placed them in Congress, and the sufferings and the movement that they ostensibly represent are far stronger than the group itself. The revolt of the farmer is clear, for it is based on the economic condition of the farmer. The revolt of the worker is more vague, for economically he has not yet felt a great pinch and he feels only the pressure of the law—particularly of the injunction, which he tries to evade.

The movement is just taking form; it is impelled by economic motives and by the fact that this is an election year. At least four million workers and farmers have openly expressed their will to undertake independent political action. These workers and farmers are more or less clear on the proposition. The more militant and nearly class-conscious of them are for the immediate formation of a farmer-labor party; the others express it in a less distinct form.

The petty-bourgeoisie, professionals and liberals, who suffered during the war and have not recovered, are seeking redress in some form or other. They are totally unorganized and filled with the same democratic illusion that a "good" government will give proper attention to their situation.

The Progressive group in Congress are well aware of this situation. They have been the expression of it and have helped to crystallize it. The power they have wielded in Congress has helped to organize it. The politically unconscious and semi-conscious groups have been encouraged in their organization plans and are beginning to seek power. The organized workers have looked to the Progressives to take the lead of the movement; the organized and unorganized farmers have regarded the Progressives as their spokesmen. La Follette knows it; Brookhart knows it; Shipstead and Norris know it. Why have they not acted?

They have not acted because they are too weak, too cowardly to take a definite stand on these burning questions. They are waiting to see what the Republican convention will do; they wish to see what forces they will have behind them before they split. They do not regard themselves as PART of the movement, but merely as its leaders. But they are wary leaders not venturing the fight till the army demonstrates its strength.

This stand is plausible; LaFollette, Johnson, Shipstead, Brookhart, and the others ARE NOT PART OF THE MOVEMENT. Their interests are not bound up with it. They do not share the sufferings of the workers and exploited farmers. They are plain politicians attempting to capitalize these sufferings and build a movement for themselves.

It is highest time to talk to these gentlemen. The workers and exploited farmers must demand to know where these people stand. Are they willing to line up with the workers and poor farmers IRREVOCABLY against the big capitalists? Are they willing to throw in their lot against the government of the capitalists? Are they willing to become a part of the coming Farmer Labor Party, submitting to its control?

They have already clearly demonstrated their stand: THEY REFUSE TO LEAVE THE REPUBLICAN PARTY. They are dickering with the Republican generals about candidates and platform; either a "liberal," "progressive" program to fool the masses, or a "progressive" candidate. This will keep the Republican party intact and ensure victory at the polls.

Is this what the workers and exploited farmers want? Are they not aiming at the formation of a Farmer Labor Party? Can the Republican Party of Wall Street be made an instrument of the workers and poor farmers? THE ANSWER IS CLEARLY AND EMPHATICALLY NO! A farmer Labor Party must be formed, and these would-be leaders must be told to remain where their interests place them, viz., in the ranks of the capitalists. They are betraying the movement now when it is seeking leadership; they will betray it later when it is moving to power. Have the workers and farmers not been sufficiently betrayed in the land of "democracy" for them to have learned that this new movement dare not be trifled with? Or must they pass through one treason after the other before they will wake up?

The answer must be given to the Progressive group—to LaFollette, Shipstead, Brookhart and all others—not after the Republican convention, but NOW. Too much time has already been lost. The workers and poor farmers can organize, build and run their party themselves.

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

An English artist painted a portrait of His Majesty King George, which is not at all flattering to the head of the British Empire. The worst of it is that the portrait can be seen by anybody curious enough to visit the Royal Academy in London, where it is on exhibition. The British Fascisti and the Tories believe it should not be viewed by any loyal subject from the Dominions, tho native Britons could perhaps, look upon it without danger to His Majesty's interests. The trouble is that the painting puts the head of a weakling on the shoulders of the king.

Other admirers of the royal family even go farther and describe the painted head in more severe terms. In justice to the king, it should be stated that George did not sit for the picture, and Sims, the artist, is alleged to have drawn somewhat freely on his imagination while doing the job. What the Tories fear most is, that the rather unnecessary look on His Majesty's face as represented or misrepresented by the artist cannot make a very favorable impression on the thousands of colonials who are in London for the British Empire Exposition. They may get the idea that His Majesty's head is full of emptiness if not worse.

William Gibbs McAdoo is recognized as the favorite son of the Ku Kluz Klan for the presidency on the Democratic ticket. This secret endorsement is not liable to bring Wilson's heir any enthusiastic support from the hard boiled Catholics from New York to San Pedro, Calif. McAdoo, like a good politician, does not want to lose Klan support, neither does he wish to antagonize the Catholic vote which will be cast for him provided he gets out of Madison Square Garden with the nomination. His campaign manager issued a statement on the Klan issue which is a marvel of evasion. He simply declares that he favors free speech, freedom of religious worship and the right of free assembly. Even the Klan claims to believe in the first amendment to the Constitution of the United States, but practice—ah, that's another matter.

When McAdoo had almost entirely recovered from the effects of Doheny's oil treatment, his progress was seriously impaired by the discovery that the secretary to his Illinois campaign manager was one of those arrested in the raid on the Sieben Brewery with Dean O'Bannion, John Torrio and the other alleged leaders of Chicago's beer ring. It is true, however, that so far as the majority of Chicago's voters are concerned, violators of the Volstead Act are liable to be benefitted by an indictment. But the moonshine membership of the Ku Klux Klan away in the fastnesses of Kentucky will not care to support their competitors here in the Windy City.

An Italian paper, by the name of "Ill Sole," commenting on the expulsion of John Giglio, correspondent of the London Daily Herald and the DAILY WORKER, said that the news sent out of Italy by Giglio was injurious to Italian interests. The paper also said that the relations of the correspondent with Italian radicals and Free Masons were calculated to disturb the peace of Italy. English gold was suggested as the motive behind Signor Giglio's activities. We are indebted to a so-called representative of DeValera's Royal Irish Republic for this information. He quotes the above approvingly and hails Mussolini as a great patriot. Ugh!

MUSIC • LITERATURE • DRAMA

By ALFRED V. FRANKENSTEIN.

Bush Conservatory orchestral concerts concluded for this season at Orchestra Hall last Tuesday night. The concert opened with two excerpts from the opera "Der Freischuetz," (The Freeshooter) by Weber. The overture, with its romantic horn solo and its mysterious, magical passages, was followed by an aria that was brilliant and colorful, and excellently sung by Helen Smith of the conservatory.

Olga Eitner, a pupil of Richard Czerwonky, director of the orchestra, played the first movement of the Mendelssohn violin concerto. The tempo direction of the movement, allegro molto appassionato, (fast, and much impassioned) describes the character of the music well. Miss Eitner's first appearance at Orchestra Hall was also with the Buch orchestra, when she played the Chaykovski concerto, a year and a half ago, and she has improved much since then. She has won the most important prize offered violin students in Chicago, the contest of the Society of American Musicians, which brought her a solo appearance with the Chicago Symphony. A beautiful tone, interpretation and technic are hers.

Following the long and religious prelude to Lohengrin, Robert Sanders, a young student of composition at Bush, directed the first performance of two of his works for orchestra, a scherzo and a short tone poem called, "Carneval." Both his directing and his composition showed skill and ingenuity. The "Carneval" especially, in ultra-modern idiom and well orchestrated, won the approval of Sanders' hearers.

Harold Triggs, pianist and cymbal player, played the first movement of the Beethoven "Emperor" concerto for pianoforte. It is a typically classic work, and played with understanding of the classic spirit.

"1812" Overture.

The concert closed with Chaykovski's old warhorse, the overture, "1812," written to celebrate an anniversary of Napoleon's defeat at Moscow in 1812. It was originally written as an open air piece, for symphony orchestra, military band and cannon. When played as a symphonic work the band part is played on an organ, and, as last Tuesday evening, the cannon part is sometimes omitted. The work is a grandiose fabric of Russian folksongs, in which the first few bars of the Marseillaise are constantly repeated, but always drowned out. At the end the Tsarist Russian hymn is solemnly brought in. The work is a pure show-off piece, and not to be compared in musical value with the same composer's symphonies.

So the Bush orchestra season closed in a clamor of much sound.

Making Good a Horrible Threat--Almost

By J. O. BENTALL.

FOR some decades now the Duluth Tribune nas threatened practically the whole world that it would some day say something that had almost a rational idea in it. In this it is not much unlike the Chicago Tribune.

Only, our Duluth Trib has shinned up its threat and almost made good. It is an event in American history, almost epoch marking.

Great movements do not stir small brains, so it was up to George E. Leach, present mayor of Minneapolis, to file for governor of Minnesota and thus inspire the tiny cells in the Trib's cranium to rub their eyes and stretch their legs.

If Leach had kept still or said something worth while, all would have been well. But he comes out on the open prairies of the Mississippi Valley and declares that "It will be my sacred duty to see that every man and woman who works shall not only have a living wage but a saving wage—to that they are entitled."

Can you beat that?

Can you blame the Trib for going into hysterics?

It is almost rank Communism and smells it.

And this from a candidate on the republican ticket, supported by Gabrielic Van Lear who vouches for the orthodoxy of Leach-Van Lear who is one of the prettiest traitors of labor on exhibition in the western hemisphere.

Anybody but a hardened Bolshevik must sympathize with the Tribune. This wholly common and outworn pledge given to labor by every republican candidate since Jonah swallowed that whale of a fake seems to be the only exciting phenomenon in the life of our unworthy contemporary, as Brisbane would say!

Let us be fair, however. There was another stammer of Leach. He added that he would also provide "capital with a fair return."

The two pledges sounded to the ear of the Trib about like the twin howl of a new fog horn that belches forth a respectable opening blair and finishes with the course moaning of a caged lion. To help make things worse the Trib ends its superhuman effort to force posterity to give it a place among the philosophers of the ages, thus:

"... . Just how does he propose to carry out this wholly commendable aim of providing everyone who works with a saving wage, and capital with a fair return? If that could be done by a governor or a supreme dictator, it would end all humanity's economic problems."

Isn't that "almost a rational idea?"

Almost.

Now supposing the Trib continues along that line and finds that when those who work get a living and saving wage—and a living wage is nothing less than all that the worker produces—that there is nothing left for capital to get, leaving capital to starve to death, will the Trib help us bury the old corpse so it may not offend our sensitive smelling apparatus?

Leach may be honest about his endeavor to serve two opposing masters, but both the good communists and the bad book say it can't be done.

The republican party has always been true to its class. It has always promised to serve both the workers and the capitalists but the only way it has served the workers is with injunctions.

If it is fear that Leach might deviate from this time-honored custom that causes the knees of the Tribune to knock together, allow me to smoothe your bobbed hair and calm you. Leach is a good republican who will help capital to "a fair return" and let his other notion go hang.

And if Leach should by any chance get to wabbling, Gabrielic Van Lear will steady him.

MINERS SMASH MACHINE RULE

50,000 N. Y. WORKERS TO STRIKE JUNE 1

Cloakmakers To Smash Scab Contract Evil

By LUDWELL DENNY
(Federated Press)

NEW YORK, May 23.—Strike machinery to tie up the New York women's clothing industry June 1 has been set in motion by officials of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' union following rejection of the union's major demands by the Cloak, Suit and Skirt Manufacturer's Protective Association. The strike was authorized by the recent national convention of the union in Boston.

Fifty thousand workers are affected. Though only one of the three employers' organization's have finally rejected the demands, two months' negotiations with the other two have been fruitless, and the proposed strike will by necessity affect the entire market.

40-Hour Week Issue.

Five union demands turned down follow: Forty-hour week instead of 44; guaranteed period of employment (38 weeks a year has been suggested); unemployment insurance; minimum wages; union label.

The Protective Association consists of the old time manufacturers, who are now both manufatcurers and jobbers. New developments in the industry have taken most of the work out of the hands of manufacturers, who now farm out the jobs to about 3,000 small contractors. The jobbers, who are still the real though indirect manufacturers, refuse responsibility for conditions in the contract shops. Most of the jobbers are in the Merchants Ladies' Garment Assoication. The contractors form the American Cloak and Suit Manufacturers' Association. At no time in the prolonged negotiations have these organizations accepted the union's demand for reforming the industry.

Jobber-Sweat Shops Must Go.

That "each jobber employ only such number of sub-manufacturers or contractors as he can provide with work to their full capacity" is at the heart of the union's demands. "No jobber should engage new contractors as long as those working for him are not fully provided with work." Instead of 3,000 contractors in 3,000 shops, some employing only one or two workers, the union believes that order in the industry and protection of the workers depends upon reducing the number of shops to a responsible 500 or 1,000. Fourteen operators would be the minimum force for a contractor." In slow seasons all available work shall be divided by the jobber equally among all his contractors and by each contractor equally among his workers.

Must Guarantee Union Wages.

"The payment of wages and observance of union conditions of work on the part of the contractor shall be guaranteed by the jobber in the same way as if such workers were employed by him directly," reads the union's demand.

Managerial waste and heavy overcapitalization block reform in the industry, union officials charge.

BOSSES DEMOCRACY IS ALL THE APPLE SAUCE; FOR PETTY DUPES ONLY

The International Association of Garment Manufacturers wants the workers to worry about the problems of running the garment industry as well as worrying about running their families on low wages. So they invited some of their workers to attend the convention with them to learn about the higher "economics" of management. This is a radical step, according to M. F. Jamar Jr., president of the association.

The workers will learn much at these conventions. They will meet "big" men. They will hear "big" problems discussed. It will "broaden" them.

Then it all came out; the "guests" of the bosses were straw bosses and petty foremen, head cutters and shop major domos. The real workers are still in the shops working while their bosses, big and little, are in convention assembled.

EVIDENCE SHOWS BAJUR SLAYING WAS DELIBERATE

Slain Worker Was For Organized Labor

Evidence presented by eye-witnesses yesterday at the coroner's inquest over the body of John Bajur, shot to death last Saturday by Dewey Norman, detective of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad for carrying from the yards at Morgan and Carrol streets a few rotten potatoes, indicates that the slaying was a deliberate murder. In the absence of several witnesses, the inquest was again postponed.

Repeated efforts on the part of Charles R. Fritz, representing the railroad company, to establish by means of leading questions that Norman fired to the ground, were shattered against the wall of evidence built up by reliable witnesses. That three shots were fired from a pistol levelled straight at Bajur by Norman was the testimony of Stanley Pelczarski and John Chrobak, both of whom were on the spot when the killing occurred. Chrobak stated further that he heard Norman give no command and that he saw no sack in which Bajur could have been secreting potatoes.

"He had only a handful," said Chrobak.

HAWAIIANS LOOK FOR FIRE GODDESS PELE TO FLAME FROM VOLCANO

(Special to The Daily Worker)

HILO, T. H., May 23.—All eyes were turned toward the snow-covered peak of Mauna Loa today with prevalence of a belief that the next demonstration of enraged Pele, the Hawaiin Fire Goddess may be staged there.

Kilauea, the volcano which has been in eruption for a week remained "sleeping" most of last night. Earthquakes and rumblings within the mountain continued and there was conviction everywhere that the outbreak was not over.

A lava flow from Mauna Loa is the greatest source of danger to the city of Hilo. The town is almost in a direct path for such a flow should it start on the Hilo side of the crater.

MANUFACTURER BRANDS THOSE WHO KEEP PRODUCTS OF WORKERS' TOIL THIEVES; RETURNS PART OF LOOT

CINCINNATI, O., May 23.—"Golden Rule" Nash saved himself from becoming a millionaire today and answered the question he had asked the world by distributing the 100 per cent dividend his clothing firm declared among the workers.

Thru newspapers and magazines he has asked the world, "What shall I do with my million?" Most of the answers, and there were hundreds of them, he says, advised him to leave at least a portion of the wealth to the writers.

"If I had done that or kept the money for myself," he told the four thousand assembled workers this morning, "I should have been worse than a thief. I should have stolen your work. You earned this money. I am giving it back to you."

COMMUNIST WORKERS OF AMERICA CABLE GREETINGS TO THE RUSSIAN PARTY CONGRESS IN MOSCOW NOW

In the Kremlin in Moscow today before the assembled delegates to the convention of the Russian Communist Party and the thousands of visitors from all over the world, the following cabled greetings from the Workers Party of America will be read:

Chicago, Ill., May 23, 1924.

COMMUNIST PARTY OF RUSSIA,
Kremlin, Moscow.

Workers Communist Party of America extends fraternal greetings. Your great achievements for world Proletarian revolution are our guide and inspiration. These achievements have been gained thru the principles of the old Bolsheviks lead by Lenin. Our Party supports the leadership of the old Bolsheviks and trusts they will continue to guide your work.

C. E. RUTHENBERG.

The great Russian Communist congress, which opened yesterday, is considering important problems which are facing the Soviet Government and the activities of the Communist Party in that government. The decisions reached will have great significance for class conscious workers everywhere who look to Russia as a practical experimental station in the movement for a proletarian government of the world.

ANDY MELLON IS SLATED TO QUIT HIS POST

Bootlegging Secretary Fears Expose

WASHINGTON, May 23.—Andrew Mellon, nicknamed "Whisky" Secretary of the Treasury because of his bootlegging deals is about to resign on the plea that he is "sick." It is quite likely he is. Things have happened recently in Washington that would have made anybody minus a cast iron stomach sick—that is anybody in the position of Andrew Mellon.

Unless all signs fail, the graft investigations which hopeful boodlehounds thought were about to take to the tomb, are only now beginning to produce the juicy scandal morsels that all good Christians like to revel in. The departure of Burns, from the Department of Justice acted like the opening of a particularly filthy sewer. Along with the escaping odor, Burns' sewer rats have come to the surface and, they are itching to squeal. The higher the official to be polluted the better they like it.

These All Getting Sick.

Mellon is a big gun. Not alone does he hold a big position, but he is a multimillionaire. He is rich pickings. His heart and soul were wrapped in his bonus bill. Both houses of congress ripped the belly out of it and Coolidge is afraid to veto it. Therefore, Mellon is going to quit.

There has been talk in the senate cloak rooms for ten days that Mellon is "sick" of politics and his position. Certainly senators who claim to know Mellon's feeling, say that he is anxious to return to his many business interests which have been neglected during his term of office.

The Last Straw.

If the president should choose to sign a bill or if congress should pass over his veto a bill, which departs so far from the Mellon theory of taxation, these senators believe it would be "the last straw" and open the way for Mellon's resignation.

Chairman Smoot of the finance committee, intends to get the conference report before the senate today. If it is adopted the house will pass upon it tomorrow or Monday.

Prince McAdoo Says Elect Those "Not Involved"!

NEW YORK, May 23.— That the crown prince lacks a sense of humor as well as other virtues is the serious charge brought against William Gibbs McAdoo by some persons who heard his make-me-president speech in New York. He asked the people to "put into office those not involved" in the Washington scandals. McAdoo was Doheny's lawyer. He ended his speech by declaring for a "restoration of the high purposes that characterized the Wilson administration," without specifically mentioning the graft under Secretary Baker and terror under Secretary Palmer.

BRITISH LABOR ORGAN SLAPS TORIES' WRIST

Does Not Like Russian Language

LONDON, May 23.—While Ramsay MacDonald makes pretty after-dinner speeches on the pleasant social atmosphere surrounding his relations with the Tories and Liberals, the New Leader, official organ of the Independent Labor Party, of which the premier is a member, in a recent issue attacked the Tory party for its campaign against the Anglo-Russian conference now taking place in London.

The Tory attack centers on the high indemnity demanded by the Russians for British counter-revolutionary activities and the deliberate breach of neutrality committed by England's rulers during the Russian Civil War. "The New Leader" cites the indemnity paid by England for her intervention in the American Civil War as a precedent for a like action in the present case.

"The New Leader" is considered the mouthpiece of the British Labor Party government. however, and with an insane plea of impartiality and liberality takes good care not to compromise itself by a definite stand one way or the other. Conciliatingly it whimpers about the necessity of a "calm and friendly atmosphere" and bemoans the tendency of the naughty rough Russians to use "a proletarian freedom of speech" and a "fury of language" quite foreign to the mild-voiced English intellectual.

These are the "representatives of labor" who coin meaningless phrases and kiss the king's dead hand, who boast of their determination to put thru a liberal measure like the nationalization of railroads, and then dare not even make it a government issue.

The policy of the English premier is to soothe his political allies without ruffling his political opponents too much, and so "The New Leader" enters a mild protest against the bogus Russian "news" with which the capitalist press conducts its anti-Bolshevik campaign.

"Trotsky," says the Labor Party organ, "has spoken in a perfectly friendly way of the British State; it is true, however, that he has carried on the standing controversy between the Bolshevik and our Menshevik reading of Socialist tactics. It was an unfortunate moment to choose for his exercise. Our own good will to Russia is, perhaps, sufficiently well known to justify a word of caution." . . . and so on, and on, and on.

"The New Leader" is conducting a bitter attack on the Tory party—but at its bitterest the British Labor Party is never tactless. It never forgets that the Tories are ladies and gentlemen.

Russian Dance for Strikers.

For the benefit of the striking garment workers, a Russian concert and dance will be given at the Division Ball Room, 2441 W. Division street, this evening at 8 o'clock by the Russian Circle—Zvuki Rodini. Admission is 50 cents.

Y. W. L. TO FLY FLAGS ALONG BOUL MICH

Big Mass Meeting In the Open Air

Boys' Week ends to-day with the flourish of a grand parade down Michigan Blvd. and thru the city.

The Young Workers League is participating in this procession with its banners flying for a Workers' and Farmers' government.

Teach New Civics.

After the march the Young Workers are holding a mass meeting at which their best speakers will tell the boys and girls of this city just who runs Boys' Week and every other week in the year under the present system of government.

The Young Workers have determined to teach their school fellows a new lesson in civics which the bosses never let them hear before.

Distribute Dodgers.

The Young Workers will distribute thousands of leaflets as they march and a special group of the league will give out the DAILY WORKER to bystanders. The Young Workers expect a great crowd at their meeting.

The leaflet reads as follows:

Who Runs Boys' Week?

What is boys' week?

Boys' week is a week that should be run by boys, for boys and especially in the interest of the boys!

BOYS' WEEK, 1924! Why is the week not run by the boys and in the interest of the boys?

Who is running Boys' Week, 1924, and what are their aims?

Every boy partaking in this year's program should feel responsible in answering these questions. If instead of helping the boys of Chicago, Boys' Week this year is working against their interests, the boys of Chicago must fight against this danger.

The majority of the boys in Chicago are children of workers—almost every boy taking part in the week's program will soon be working himself. But BOYS' WEEK, 1924, is being run by the bosses and in the interest of the bosses only!

BIG PROFITTERS AND LABOR HATERS—CHAIRMAN.

When we study the people running boys week this year, we find among them no representatives of labor; no representatives of any workers' organization.

Who are some of the Chairmen of various days thruout the week?

Superintendent Moderwell, the coal profiteer is Chairman of Boys' Day in the schools.

For Boys' Day in Industry, the chairman does not represent an organization of industrial workers, but is Thos. E. Wilson, the wealthy packinghouse boss.

Republican Toughs Leave As Blackmail Of Wheeler Exposed

WASHINGTON, May 23—Sen. Glass of Virginia, former secretary of the treasury, entering into the Borah-Sterling debate on the vindication of Sen. Wheeler, said that the department of justice had been "charged with undertaking to blackmail the Senate to cause it to terminate its investigation of rascality by involving one of its own members in a serious charge." He called attention to the fact that under these grave circumstances every reactionary Republican had left the senate chamber rather than hear Borah's discussion of evidence which proved Wheeler a victim of blackmail.

N. Y. JUDGE WANTS IMMIGRANTS WITHOUT U. S. PAPERS DEPORTED

Victory! and Again Victory

The words "defeat" and "Farrington" have become synonymous at the Illinois Miners' Convention at Peoria. They mean exactly the same thing.

At the same time the words "Victory" and "Rank and File" become identical. They also mean the same thing.

Farrington showed he was a beaten and discredited man when he drove the reporter of the DAILY WORKER out of the convention, allowing the reporters of the yellow capitalist press to remain.

Farrington was completely routed when his appointive power was taken away from him; when his "plum tree" was cut down.

But that isn't all.

When Farrington goes down to defeat that means that reaction thruout the whole of the United Mine Workers' Union has suffered a mortal blow.

A defeat for Frank Farrington, president of the Illinois Coal Miners, is a defeat for International President John L. Lewis. It is a defeat for the crucifying yoke of standpatism thruout the entire organization. It is a smash at the mouldy policies of Sam Gompers in the American Federation of Labor.

The defeat of Farrington is the victory of the rank and file, the masses of the miners' union membership who bear the heavy burdens of the struggle in the mining industry.

The victory of the rank and file at Peoria, is a victory for the rank and file of the whole miners' union. It is also a triumph for the masses of organized workers thruout the nation, and an encouragement to the backward, unorganized workers to get into the trade union movement.

When the rank and file delegates at Peoria struck at the appointive power of President Farrington, they cut the roots of the most criminal practice in the American trade union movement.

Thru the appointive power, thru the shaking down of plums off the official plum tree, the reactionary regimes in the various international unions, not only the United Mine Workers of America, have been able to build up and perpetuate their official machines and maintain themselves in well-nigh perpetual power.

It is a practice that has held all progress in the American labor movement in a strangle grip.

It is a practice that the Illinois miners have valiantly decided to put to an end. They have decided to take power into their own hands. They have decided to rule in their own organization.

The Illinois miners have again smashed the plea of the reactionaries that they cannot move faster than the rank and file, that the masses are slow to act.

Farrington and Lewis have found out at Peoria, and Fitzpatrick, in Chicago, and Gompers, in Washington, will hear about it, that the Illinois miners are miles ahead of their officials.

Victory! And Again Victory! Perches on the standards of the Illinois miners. They are conquering the problems confronting them within their organization. They will conquer the big problems confronting them in their struggles with the mine owners. They will conquer the baffling problems arising thruout the whole mining industry.

MINERS VOTE TO ELECT ALL ORGANIZERS

Strip Appointive Power From Illinois Machine

By KARL REEVE.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

PEORIA, Ill., May 23.—The rank and file of the Illinois miners, fresh from the great victory over the Farrington-Lewis machine on the Howat resolution, broke the backbone of the Farrington district machine by stripping it of the appointive power—the power to hand out jobs.

The wily Farrington, his futile substitute Vice-President Fishwick, his chairman of the resolution committee George Mercer, and his stolid Secretary of district 12 Walter Nesbit, who counts two for Farrington and one for the opposition, who for days have been sitting on the elevated platform vainly endeavoring to hold back the rank and file sentiment against them, were completely overwhelmed when the rank and file voted down the part of Farrington's report in which he pleads for the retention of his appointive power.

The victory is all the more significant in view of the fact that Farrington, realizing that at least 90 per cent of the membership were out to break his machine, had called in the international officials of the union and many others, using every trick and argument at his command to avert defeat. Farrington's tyrannical expulsion of the DAILY WORKER reporter has reacted to his undoing.

District Workers to Be Elected.

After half an hour of bickering an admission was finally forced from Vice-President Fishwick, in the chair, that if that section of Farrington's report dealing with "appointive power" was voted down it would mean that Farrington's right to appoint district workers would be taken from him, and the committee on constitution must have provision for the election of these workers.

Urged Violation of Instructions.

Farrington admitted in his report, that "many of you have come to this

FARRINGTON STILL BUYS INDEXED "DAILY", SO DO THE RANK AND FILERS

Natalie Gomez sells DAILY WORKERS to coal miners' delegates at Peoria.

The delegates at the miners' convention in Peoria still buy the DAILY WORKER. Natalie Gomez is still kept busy selling it. The militants want to know what we have to say even if the labor skates managed to bar our reporter from the press table. More copies of the DAILY WORKER are sold to the delegates in Peoria than of any other paper, labor or capitalist. Farrington is a regular (cash) customer of Natalie.

LAKE COUNTY LABOR VOTES FOR JUNE 17

Orphaned F.-L. P. May Follow Suit

At its last meeting the Central Labor Union of Lake County, Ind., decided to support the Farmer-Labor convention called by the arrangements committee for June 17th at St. Paul, Minn. By a resolution adopted, it went on record to urge the State Farmer-Labor Party of Indiana to be represented at this convention.

This state party was affiliated to the National Farmer-Labor Party, of which Jay Brown was the secretary, and which has now been dissolved and its scheduled convention for Cleveland, Ohio, July 4th, called off by official act of its executive committee. It is therefore, expected that the Indiana Farmer-Labor Party will line up for the June 17th convention, particularly in view of the fact that some of the active trade unionists of Lake County and leading elements of the Central Labor Union are also the leading elements in the State Farmer-Labor Party.

The resolution adopted reads as follows:

Whereas, Local and State Farmer-Labor Parties have been organized thruout the country and in several instances obtained some considerable success, notably in the state of Minnesota, and

Whereas, an effort is now being made to link all these local and State Farmer-Labor Parties together for a united presidential campaign in November, 1924, thru the Farmer-Labor Convention called to convene at St. Paul, Minn., June 17th, and

Whereas, the recent exposures of corruption within the old parties as exemplified by the Teapot Dome, Aircraft, and Veteran Bureau Scandals, points to the pressing need to unify all these local and State Farmer-Labor Party forces for independent political action on a national scale, in order to remedy conditions which now prevail, therefore, be it convention under instructions from your local unions to vote in favor of so amending our constitution as to divest your president of the power to appoint the workers needed to carry on the work of our union." Farrington pleaded with the delegates to break faith with those who elected them delegates, and vote to keep his machine intact.

RESOLVED, That the Central Labor Council of Lake County, Indiana, go on record requesting the Farmer-Labor Party of the State of Indiana, to lend its assistance to this attempt for unity and select delegates to be represented at the June 17th convention at St. Paul, Minnesota.

Farrington's Argument.

Farrington compared the United Mine Workers' Union to a business institution. "The miners' union is a business institution," Farrington said, "engaged in the sale of the labor power of its members," he declared. "The employes of the Standard Oil Company and of the Steel Trust and of thousands of other successful business institutions are not elected by stockholders. For years you have elected your executive board and vested the members thereof with the authority to direct the affairs of your union and you have held them accountable. That is as it should be.

Crash in Pork Barrel.

But the delegates, by a three to one majority, voted to take Farrington's power from him and dealt a death blow to his machine. True, the Farrington machine tellers tried their best to rob the vote, as they had done when they had the DAILY WORKER representative expelled from the hall. The vote to sustain President Farrington in his appointive power was announced at 229 to sustain and 265 not to sustain. Many observers told the DAILY WORKER reporter that the vote was at least three to one against Farrington.

One delegate belonging to the Farrington machine called a roll call, but Vice-President Fishwick evidently realized that the extent of the vote-stealing would be revealed, for he adjourned the convention without taking a vote on a roll call.

"Business" Unionism Hit.

The part of Farrington's report claiming the union to be a business institution came in for severe criticism from many of the delegates. "We are more than a business institution," said delegate John Hindmarsh, "we are much more. The purpose of the union is to win for the workers a wider and a fuller life. And we have to battle with the Standard Oil, the very organization Farrington holds up to us as a model, in order to do this."

Tells of Payroll Army.

Hindmarsh reminded the delegates that Farrington himself had talked against the appointive power when in the same hall, at the district 12 convention two years ago. Farrington said, "I would recommend that the appointive power be abolished in this district when it is abolished in the international union. Lewis has an army at his disposal thru his appointive power. Disarm Lewis and I will disarm." "I agree with Farrington," said Hindmarsh, "He does have an army, and no matter who the president may be, he will use this army to entrench himself.

"This army was used against me in my local union, when one of Farrington's appointees went among the young members and tried to keep me from being elected, while I was away in Florida attending to my duties as a member of the wage scale committee."

Hindmarsh Blasts Frame-up.

Excitement was added to the debate when Farrington accused Hindmarsh of going around the state two years ago, offering jobs in case he was elected president of the district, and one hireling of Farrington got up and said that Hindmarsh had offered him a job. Hindmarsh soon blasted this frame-up, when he challenged Farrington to give proof, and gave the lie to Farrington's henchman. Farrington could offer no evidence against Hindmarsh.

The delegates resented Farrington's open plea to them to disregard the instructions of their members. He lost many friends by his selfish disregard for the wishes of the membership.

Must Obey Instructions.

"As the sub-district 5 president, and as a delegate who was instructed to vote against Farrington's power of appointment, knowing that at least 90 per cent of the delegates want this done, even if I was against the abolition of the appointive power, I would feel it my duty to vote as I have been instructed," said delegate Deach, head of the Taylorsville sub-district.

"Farrington led the fight against the appointive power in the international convention two years ago, and if it was bad then, it is bad now. If the appointive power was necessary to the welfare of the union, surely, the international union needed it much more than the district. Farrington stated that he needed his army when he was fighting Lewis, but the records will show that in the last international convention Farrington voted to retain the appointive power for Lewis."

Payroll Gang Tamed.

As the convention has progressed, the section of delegates who vote for Farrington, no matter what the issue, because Farrington controls their payroll, have been less blatant and sneering toward the insurgents. The insurgents have been gathering strength. Farrington has gone the way of all tyrants, and he is a poor loser. Keeping his hold on the convention so far by talking at least three hours each day by excessive use of his gavel in calling the rank and file delegates out of order, by the loud-mouthed support of his payroll henchmen, and by his bare-faced statements, that "whether you like it or not, there is nothing you can do about it," Farrington is a changed man tonight.

One of the delegates was heard to say, by the DAILY WORKER reporter: "Farrington looks like a sick cat that has been ducked in a pail of icy water." Farrington is a poor loser. He has acted the tyrant once too often. He has expelled his last reporter from a convention—and he knows it.

Too Kind to Operators.

Farrington fell because he tried to play an impossible role. He has tried to be "kind and considerate" to the operators, he has spoken for cheapening of the production of coal. He has derided those who are fighting for the six-hour day and deserted Howat in his fight for re-instatement.

But tonight the rank and file have taught Frank a lesson. They have shown that his bunk about running the union on the same basis as the Standard Oil does not please them. They have shown Farrington that leadership does not consist in pessimistically lying down before the coal operators.

Delegate Hindmarsh expressed the sentiments of the insurgents when he said, "It is impossible to have worse politics in the union than we have now. It is an insult to the intelligence of our membership for Farrington to say that we have the intelligence to elect a president, a secretary, executive board, sub-district officials, and others, but that the membership has not enough intelligence to instruct their delegates to vote against the appointive power, or to elect field workers.

Hindmarsh Wouldn't "Cat-Fight"

Pursuing his former tactics, Farrington continually tried to goad the insurgent delegates to throw the convention into turmoil by hurling bitter personal attacks at them, especially at Delegate Hindmarsh. Hindmarsh, while answering these attacks to the satisfaction of the convention, refused to let Farrington make a "cat-fight" out of the convention.

Altho some of the delegates think Farrington will make one last effort to escape defeat by the use of his constitution committee, by inserting a joker in one of the resolutions yet to come up on the floor, it is hardly expected that he will try Lewis' stunt of speedily adjourning the convention.

WANDA'S SMILE RILES TAYLOR ALMOST TO FITS

Striker Tried For Contempt of Dudley

Wanda Kolletta had to answer to a charge of contempt of court yesterday morning. The charge was complicated because she was also on trial for contempt of Dudley Taylor.

The charge of contempt against Taylor did not appear in the court records, but was there nevertheless.

Early in the week, Wanda, was arrested for assault and when she appeared in court she had a little fun at the expense of Dud.

So yesterday, when she appeared before Judge Foell to answer the contempt charge, Dudley was in a mood uglier than is usual with him. That may seem impossible, but Dudley seems to have a store of rottenness that is inexhaustible.

Dudley was well supplied with affidavits against Wanda. He read them off in a monotonous voice. He even included one by himself. In his affidavit, he said that he had prosecuted dozens of strikers for contempt and had gotten convictions in all cases. He went on to say that in April his friend "Dennie" Sullivan had fined Wanda $350 and sentenced her to 15 days in jail. This seemed to interest Judge Foell. He asked that it be repeated and got the dates straight after several repetitions.

The basis of the charge of contempt in this case was the allegation that Wanda had assaulted a scab. This Wanda denied. Since courts cannot enjoin things which are in themselves crimes, it is difficult to see why Taylor attempted to have Wanda punished for contempt when she is already awaiting trial for assault. Unless the contempt charged in the attachment on which Wanda was being tried was contempt for Dudley himself.

If it had been contempt for Dud Taylor, she was charged with, Wanda said that there was only one thing she could do and that was plead guilty and ask that the sentence be very severe in order to be adequate for the amount of contempt she felt.

Wanda sat in the jury box by herself all during the hearing and smiled at Dud. This got Dud riled. When Dud saw the DAILY WORKER reporter in court, he tried to give him a hard stare. If there had been a looking glass around and Dud had seen himself, he would probably have frightened himself into fits. Luckily for the garment bosses, there was no mirror in court. The frightful face Dud made failed to affect the reporter who tried to grin at Dud.

Vinegar Face Sore.

Vinegar faced Taylor was not pleased when Judge Foell fined Wanda $150. If Dudley had had his way she would have been hung.

"Well, old monkey face," Wanda whispered to Taylor, "You thought you would have me sent to jail, didn't you?" Taylor stared and said nothing.

In Judge Sullivan's court the honorable took a look at the strikers and decided to delay the ordeal of hearing their cases till Tuseday at 10:00 a.-m. Some of the girls who are waiting to be tried have jobs and are anxious to get thru with the court. That seems to make no difference to "Dennie." In fact, he seems to relish the idea that he is bothering the girls. The fact that the girls want to get their cases over with has been called to the attention of the court, but "Dennie" still postpones them.

The Chinese have a culinary custom of keeping eggs wrapped in mud for ten or twenty years and then eating them raw. Yesterday, when "Dennie" saw the strikers, he looked exactly like an interpretive picture of one of those Chinese eggs with the mud wrapper still on.

Sullivan has not announced his decision in the case of Meyer Barkan, whose case was heard Thursday.

Harry Thaw Misses Saloons In N. Y. As Bail Is Arranged

NEW YORK, May 23.—Harry Thaw, after one fleeting look at the city that knew him a generation ago as a gay-hearted spendthrift from Pittsburgh, commented:

"There aren't as many saloons now as there used to be."

Then, after arranging $10,000 bail for two indictments that have been held against him for the seven years of his incarceration in a madhouse, Thaw left town.

Judge Olvaney, who admitted Thaw to bail, was to decide whether it would be necessary for the slayer of Stanford White, to return here today.

PEORIA, Ill., May 23.

The hopelessness of getting any results for the workers by electing "friends of labor" on a capitalist party ticket was forced on the attention of the miners' delegates during the discussion of the unemployment issue at Friday morning's session.

President Frank Farrington and his aides had been protesting that "nothing can be done" for the unemployed now. Progressives insisted that the state must be made to bear the expenses of unemployment relief.

How About Those "Friends"?

Delegate Freeman Thompson demanded to know why "nothing" could be done with all the "friends of labor" that Farrington, Walker and other had boasted were nominated in the last primaries. If these "friends of labor" can do nothing, Thompson asked, "what is the use of electing them."

Independent political action was defeated at the convention, continued Thompson on the administration's promise that the old party "friends of labor" would do something for the workers. Now that the administration has carried its political point it admits that they can do "nothing."

Pointing out that unemployment was getting worse and that soon 60 per cent of the Illinois miners would be idle, Thompson cried:

"Workers of World, Unite!"

"Why not raise the slogan: 'Workers of the world, unite industrially and politically?' "

A motion that the miners, along with other unionists, demand unemployment benefits from the state was resisted by the chair and a substitute eventually went thru, declaring that the miners' union was unable to give any employment benefits itself. The substitute resolution was silent on the matter of state aid.

For Workers' Government.

Delegate John Watts made some effective points against the administration's failure to offer any unemployment program while the discussion was on. He pointed out that a workers' government was the only final solution of the problem, but that state benefits would give temporary relief.

Vice-president Harry Fishwick, Farrington's side-arm, called Watts out of order. Watts rallied the administration for disliking to hear of any solution for the miners' ills.

Farrington Confesses Inability.

Farrington's plea that "We would like to help the unemployed, but it can't be done," was riddled by Watts. He showed the absurdity of Farrington demanding autocratic power and then admitting that he couldn't do anything for the workers.

The district president's confession that he could do nothing for the workers in the present crisis was the keynote of his talk during the unemployment discussion. That and his constant attacks on the progressives who insisted that something should be done.

DELEGATE MILLER OF LEWIS' LOCAL FLAYS REACTIONARY POLICIES

PEORIA, Ill., May 23.—That John L. Lewis, member of the Panama, Ill., local of the United Mine Workers of America does not reflect the sentiments of the workers there, was shown in a vigorous indictment of the Illinois district machine made by Delegate Miller of that local at the Peoria convention today. Miller assailed the Farrington machine's part in the—

1. Failure fully to recognize the only working-class government (Soviet Russia) in the world.
2. Removal of the only reporter representing a working-class daily.
3. Failure to support a class labor party.
4. Failure to provide for unemployment relief.

Miller's four points were loudly applauded by the delegates who in the last three days have defeated the administration's policies on Howat and the appointive power.

And so it is with the other chairmen and the members of committees. Either they are big bosses or the obedient servants of the bosses. The list even includes the infamous labor-hating Judge Landis.

A small number of people in the country, the bosses, because they own all the natural resources, all the factories and machines are able to make the large majority of the population—the workers, slave for them at the lowest wages.

BOSSES AND TEAPOTS.

These same bosses because of their wealth control the schools, the Y. M. C. A., the Boy Scouts and all institutions that fight against the workers even up to the Teapot Government which they want you to believe is the only kind of government for the country.

When this tiny minority because they own all the property and wealth of the country, try to use Boys' Week for a huge propaganda drive to make better slaves and soldiers out of them, the boys of Chicago must not let them accomplish their aims without a fight for their own interests.

FIGHT FOR YOUR INTERESTS.

The interests of the boys of Chicago lie with the workers, not with the bosses, and the boys must organize by themselves to fight for their own interests; just as their fathers and brothers organize into unions to fight for theirs.

They must not themselves be led by the bosses into fighting against their own interests and those of their families. When instead of discussing any of the important issues before the boys of America today, such as the problems of millions of child slaves who works ten and twelve hours a day in factory and home—the bosses use Boys' Week to "make" obedient workers and future soldiers for the bosses' next war; the boys must fight against this vile propaganda and not let them have free sway.

ON THE REVERSE SIDE OF THIS LEAFLET YOU WILL NOTICE THAT THE YOUNG WORKERS' LEAGUE OF AMERICA IS HOLDING A MASS MEETING IMMEDIATELY AFTER THE LOYALTY PARADE.

The Young Workers League is an organization of boys and young workers. It is run by the boys and young workers themselves: not by the bosses. Come to our meeting and hear what we are doing to fight the propaganda of the bosses and to protect the interest of the boys of Chicago.

Free State Ruler Dissolves Historic Dublin Political Body

DUBLIN, May 23.—Incensed because the Dublin corporation refused to bow down, roll over and kiss the imperial foot of the Free State government, President Cosgrove issued an edict dissolving that body and appointing three commissioners to perform the duties of the corporation.

The mayor of Dublin refused to obey the order of the president, declaring he had no legal right to dissolve the corporation. This body has long been a thorn in the side of the Free State government, but it is not likely that in the present state of political tension prevailing in Ireland Cosgrove will have an easy job in getting rid of the historic institution.

The continued imprisonment of Eamon DeValera and Austin Stack and other republican leaders is adding to the bitterness of the masses against the Free State government. From a military viewpoint all republican resistance has long since disappeared. There is no excuse for holding the political enemies of the Free State government any longer in confinement except on the ground that their freedom might endanger the continuance of the present autocracy.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., May 23.—Several more local unions have accepted the call for the local Farmer-Labor Party meet to be held May 27 in Machinist's Temple and elected delegates. Two delegates were elected by the American Express Employes local union No. 623. The Waiters and Bartenders' local union No. 279, and Painters' local No. 1039, elected three delegates each.

GERMAN RIGHT PARTIES BALK AT DAWES PLAN

Berlin Experts Working On Experts Scheme

BERLIN, May 23.—Leaders of the nationalist parties today refused to accept the Dawes plan as a basis for the party's participation in the new cabinet. They may experience a change of heart and again they may not. Party leaders will continue negotiations, however, until Saturday.

The optimistic hopes expressed when the Dawes plan was first made public are now admitted to have been premature. The conflicting interests of the capitalist groups is the obstacle to the scheme. The intense nationalism of the extreme reactionaries rebel against turning Germany over body and soul to J. P. Morgan. The industrialists are for it, but owing to the multiciplity of political parties which is sympathetic of the chaotic condition of capitalism, it is extremely difficult to get anything done.

Shutting Down Plants.

The big Ruhr strike is still causing nervousness thruout the country. Over 600,000 workers are now locked out or on strike and the number is increasingly daily. The Stinnes-Krupp works are closing and the Thyssen works have announced their intention to lay off 10,000 more men during the coming week.

The Catholic party of the Rhineland warned Berlin that unless the Dawes plan was accepted, the Rhineland would go to the extreme of seeking a separate agreement with France.

Meanwhile, so desperately are the industrialists committed to the Dawes scheme that two German government experts are already in Paris working up a plan to turn the German railways over to Morgan in return for his cash. cash.

in his neck give further proof that Norman's pistol was deliberately pointed at Bajur. The pistol, picked up a short while after the shooting by Richard Barry, detective bureau police officer, contained three empty shells.

While plans of the American Legion for the defense of Norman go merrily ahead, Bajur's widow and his two children are preparing to leave their three small, dark rooms at 836 N. Racine avenue and seek a single room—"probably in a basement somewhere," as Helen, Bajur's 15-year-old daughter, put it.

Victim's Family in Misery.

Over the weak tea and the bit of stale bread which made up her noon meal, Helen spoke, with tired resignation, of what the family was to do next. Questions about the source of their future income brought only a discouraged shake of the head and a muttered "don't know." "We got nothing from the Mill and Lumber Co., altho father worked there for eight years. Mother's too sick to work, and my brother has been hunting a job for weeks. I want to work—I'm old enough, but you have to weigh 90 pounds to get a working certificate."

"And you?"

"I weigh only 72."

Legionaire's Reason.

That he knows nothing about the case does not seem to worry Lawrence Packwood, the law-student and representative of the American Legion, who is undertaking to save Norman. "I am with him simply because he is an ex-service man," was his statement.

Altho Bajur was prevented from belonging to a union by the hawk-like watchfulness of labor-baiting officers in the American Mill and Lumber Co., where he sawed wood as a $24 a week slave, he was in sympathy with the struggles of union men of other branches of the company. The series of lay-offs from which he suffered began shortly after he had refused to work during the strike of the Chicago box-makers in the summer of 1921.

BUFFALO, N. Y., May 23.—Harry Whitney, 4½ years old, holds the local velocipede record today. A police radio message was broadcast describing Harry as a missing child. A Tonawanda motorcycle cop picked the boy and his velocipede up, eight miles from the Whitney home.

800,000 GERMAN MINERS LOCKED OUT; NEED HELP

N. Y. Confers Sunday For Workers Aid

NEW YORK, May 22.—Eight hundred thousand miners locked out in Germany, states a cable from the Berlin office of the International Workers' Relief just received by the Committee for International Workers' Aid. The cable contains an urgent appeal—aid is needed immediately, money must be rushed.

The first answer in this country to this call from the embattled workers of Germany is the calling of the New York Conference of the Committee for International Workers' Aid to take place Sunday, May 25th, at the Labor Temple, 243 East 84th street, at which about 300 delegates are expected, representing trade unions, fraternal organizations and workers' political organizations, principally the Workers' Party.

Bedacht Tells of Work.

Max Bedacht will come from Chicago to report for the national office of the Committee for International Workers' Aid on German relief activities. He will give detailed data on how many American soup kitchens have been contributed by the Committee, how many children have been cared for, what has been accomplished directly thru the relief work of the Committee for International Workers' Aid.

The Conference will take up the new situation developed in Germany as a result of the locking out of the miners, and the terrible plight of the working class of Germany fighting against the great host of enemies. Ways and means will be devised for carrying on the work so that it will not lag in the summer, for the workers of Germany must eat in summer, too.

Aid All Class War Prisoners.

The Committee for International Workers' Aid is about to broaden its activities to include Red Aid. Thousands of fighters in the class war are kept in dark prisons by the terrorist regime of capitalist dictatorships all over the world. Workers of all shades of political opinion are thrown into these dungeons the moment they show any sign of revolt against the tyranny and cruelty of the ruling class. The wives and children of these class war prisoners are in dire need, and the Committee for International Workers' Aid will exert itself in their behalf.

NOVA SCOTIA MINERS DEMAND PROBE OF MACHINE FINANCES; FIGHT FOR DISTRICT AUTONOMY

By TOM BELL.

NEW GLASGOW, N. S., May 23.—The rank and file convention of the miners of Nova Scotia which met here for three days carried the fight against the reactionary Lewis machine in the United Mine Workers of America a step further by unanimously demanding the restoration of the autonomy of the district, elections to be held immediately in the district, and the establishment of a Committee of Action composed of two miners from each sub-district.

It was also decided that the miners would insist upon an audit of the accounts for relief, given out during the last strike in January of this year, which was handled by the provisional officers.

While the miners are willing to pay the $111,000 owing for relief they insist upon a strict accounting for the money expended. The convention was unanimous in the decision to stay inside the United Mine Workers of America while at the same time, continuing the fight against the Lewis machine.

Lewis Betrayal.

This convention, convened by the rank and file of the miners' union, is the outcome of the traitorous actions of Lewis last July when he cancelled the district charter and deposed the district officers because the miners had struck as a protest against use of troops by the Canadian government against the striking steel workers of Sydney. Since last July the district had been under the dictatorship of Lewis appointees. Last February these appointees signed a new wage contract with the British Empire Steel Corporation which was rejected by the miners in a referendum vote because of the slavish terms with which the corporation sought to shackle them.

Time and again the miners of Nova Scotia have demanded the restoration of their autonomy with no result. At the convention of the United Mine Workers of America, held last January, Lewis was upheld in his policy toward District 26 after he had lied about the situation and slandered the leaders of the miners. The recent convention was called by the rank and file to discuss the situation.

12,000 Miners Represented.

Forty-seven delegates attended, representing the 12,000 miners in the district. The most important matter discussed was the question of autonomy for the district. Every delegate took part in the discussion, and the discussion showed how solid is the opposition to Lewis and his machine among the miners here. While denouncing Lewis and his actions against the district no one advocated breaking away from the United Mine Workers of America. The statement made by the former president of the district, Dan Livingstone, summed up the matter.

Stay and Fight Machine.

"I am not in favor of breaking away from the United Mine Workers, but I am in favor of breaking the damned administration which at present controls it." The following resolution was carried unanimously:

Whereas, the miners of District 26, United Mine Workers, have been without duly elected officers since last year, when the then officers were deposed, and

Whereas, the present appointees of John L. Lewis are men whom the rank and file have absolutely no confidence in whatever, and were put into the chief district offices at the suggestion of the officials of the British Empire Steel Corporation, and with the aid of the Provincial Police, and whereas the Lewis appointees went into the court, and were told by Mr. Justice Chrisholm that John L. Lewis had no right to make these appointments, and these appointees cling to office in contradiction to the judgment of the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia, and

Whereas, the old officers were deposed for their own sins and have made no attempt to get back into office and if John L. Lewis desires to be fair to the miners of Nova Scotia, he will no longer deny these miners the right to elect men to fill district offices of their own choice,

Therefore, be it Resolved, that this convention demand the restoration of complete district autonomy, so that they may carry thru a district election at once, otherwise this convention must conclude that John L. Lewis is staying in Nova Scotia for the special benefit of the foes of District 26, United Mine Workers of America.

False Financial Statement.

A discussion which consumed a lot of time of the convention took place on the question of the payment of the debts contracted during the strike last January by the provisional officers. Some delegates were opposed to the miners having to pay the debts, claiming that the International Union alone was responsible for them. Others advocated that the miners should pay but objected to the method of collecting it. But all of the delegates agreed that the store keepers who had extended the relief should not suffer, particularly the co-operative stores.

Finally a resolution was carried unanimously pointing out that the provisional officers had issued a false financial statement, and that an itemized statement of the debts contracted be secured before the levy be deducted from the wages of the miners.

The contract signed between the British Empire Steel Corporation and the Lewis appointees last February was condemned by the convention and a resolution passed placing the miners of Nova Scotia on record against the contract being enforced since it had been rejected by the miners in a referendum vote. The 1921 rates of wages were demanded as being the objective of the miners on the wage question.

Unity of Purpose Established.

Before adjourning, the convention appointed a Committee of Action, composed of two delegates from each sub-district, which is empowered to call another convention if it appears necessary. The convention has established unity of purpose among the miners of the district, and welded the rank and file closer together in their fight against the Lewis machine then ever before. That the miners of Nova Scotia are avoiding the mistakes of the past is shown in their determination not to break away from the United Mine Workers, but to remain inside and conduct the fight against Lewis and his reactionary clique. The Nova Scotia miners have given the workers of the rest of the country another object lesson on how to conduct the fight of the rank and file against the dictatorship of reactionary leaders.

Did Not Defend Flock From Monkey Charge; Bishops May Lose Pay

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif., May 23.—The book committee of the Methodist church has been sued for not defending the church against the spread of "strange and erroneous doctrines." The suit would prevent the payment by the book committee of salaries and traveling expenses of the bishops who are charged with permitting the devil to get a foothold. The people bringing the suit particularly object to H. G. Wells' "Outline of History," because it alleges that Methodists are descended from ground apes. This is "erroneous and strange and contrary to the word of God."

LABOR JOURNAL RIVALS C. OF C. IN SOUTH WEST

Militant Paper Loses Pep; Pays Debts

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PHOENIX, Ariz.—So completely has labor been ignored in the eleventh anniversary and the Arizona development edition of the Arizona Labor Journal that were the union label and the word "Labor" omitted it could easily pass for a publication of the Chamber of Commerce. From it the reader might imagine that labor played no part in the development of the state or its industries.

Among the leading contributors to this edition of the Labor Journal which is attractive both in make-up and material, is the president of the Arizona Industrial Congress, the big business organization which made an attack on the state constitution two years ago intending in the name of "economy" to strip it of every vestige of liberalism which had been written into it largely thru the efforts of organized labor.

Black Bisbee Gets Praise.

Bisbee, the black scar on labor's map, the town from which 1,200 men, mostly members of the A. F. of L., were herded together into cattle cars and deported into the desert in July, 1917, by a "vigilance committee" composed of business men. Of Bisbee we are told by the secretary of the Chamber of Commerce of that city, "One would have to look for a long time to find such a rare combination of living and working conditions as are found in the Bisbee district. . . Working conditions in the mines here are the envy of other districts. . . . Over 90 per cent of the workmen are American citizens."

What the writer does not tell us is that Bisbee is still a scar, that its wonderfully rich mines are operated by scab labor and that the working conditions which are the envy of other districts are envied most by mine owners.

So completely has the Chamber of Commerce and allied organizations of business men triumphed in Bisbee that efforts to reorganize the district have been unsuccessful.

Another contributor is the secretary of the Phoenix Chamber of Commerce, the organization which sponsored the open shop movement in Arizona. In a referendum recently the members of this organization voted to promote and sustain the open shop movement in Phoenix.

Nor are our friends, the bankers, overlooked in this issue. They are represented by the president of the Arizona Bankers' Association and others.

Sammy vs. Soviet.

In order that business may see just how safe the labor movement is, there are such articles as "Labor Hostile to Radicalism," by J. A. Sisson, and "Why Labor Opposes Soviet Recognition," by Samuel Gompers.

From a progressive labor paper supported by the labor unions and the Socialist party ten years ago, the Labor Journal has today become ultra-conservative and is supported only by the most conservative unions. The Journal supplies little news of interest to the labor movement, it condemns everything that Gompers condemns and it is gradually wiping out its debts thru advertising which it is able to secure from the business men on account of its conservative stand.

Party Branches Stage Popular Finnish Play

By J. MAATTA.

MARENGO, Wis., May 23.—A big crowd attended the combined program and social held here under the auspices of the Workers Party Branches of this city and of Ironwood, Mich.

The main feature of the program was a one-act Finnish show, "Puhalnen Kenraali," which was loudly applauded and brought tears to the eyes of many of the audience.

Ed. Jarvi talked for an hour explaining to the audience about the working class movement of the world.

The program went smoothly altho some young hoodlums tried to disturb.

Party Activities Of Local Chicago

Forward for June 17th!

On Monday, May 26, 8 p. m. at the Workers Lyceum, 2733 Hirsch Blvd. there will be a special meeting of all union members and Workmen's Circle members of the Party. The purpose of the meeting will be to intensity the drive in the Chicago unions and fraternal and other workers organizations to get delegates to the June 17th Farmer-Labor Convention at St. Paul. Further plans will be explained to co-ordinate this work and campaign.

The June 17th Convention will be a success chiefly if the local unions all over the country send delegates to St. Paul to aid in forming a class Farmer-Labor Party. Chicago Party members must be alert in their unions or wherever the Convention call comes up and try to get a delegate sent to June 17th.

Live Party comrades will get to this meeting on Monday, May 26.

Farmer-Labor Assessment.

A compulsory assessment of 50 cents has been levied upon all Party members by the Central Executive Committee. This assessment must be paid within a month. The assessment is a small one which can easily be paid. The National Office must have more funds if they are to carry on the campaign successfully for the June 17th Convention. The Party needs the money now—at once. Let every member show that he is behind the campaign to form a class Farmer-Labor Party in America or at least paying his assessment immediately.

Branches should not wait for the members to pay their assessment. Branches can take the money out of the treasury and can then get it from the members afterwards. Branch secretaries shall send in their quota at the earliest date to the City Secretary. Stamps have been forwarded to all branches.

Ex-War Prisoner Tours Country For Centralia Loggers

(By Defense News Service.)

CHICAGO, Ill., May 23.—James P. Thompson, ex-war-opinion prisoner, who is making a speaking tour to the Atlantic Coast under the auspices of the General Defense Committee of Chicago beginning May 30, is scheduled to deliver addresses as follows:

Butte, Mont.—May 30.
Boise, Idaho—June 1.
Salt Lake City—June 3.
Bingham Canyon, Utah—June 4.
Denver, Colo.—June 6.
Omaha, Neb.—June 8.
Minneapolis—June 14 and 15.
Iron River, Mich.—June 17.
Virginia, Minn.—June 22.
Duluth, Minn.—June 29.
Milwaukee, Wis.—July 1.
Chicago—July 4.

Thompson's subject will be, "The Prison Shadow on Labor." He will discuss both the Centralia Armistice Day tragedy for which eight lumber jacks are serving 25 to 40 years' time in Walla Walla and the long series of prosecutions of members of the Industrial Workers of the World under the California criminal syndicalism law. One hundred and seven union men are now serving one to fourteen year sentences in California under this law.

THOMPSONVILLE, Conn.—Approximately 4,000 employes are affected by the closing of all departments of the Bigelow-Hartford Carpet Co. for an indefinite period. The company contends poor business conditions forced this action. Recently wages were reduced 10 per cent.

New York Teachers' Union To Establish Experimental School

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK, May 23.—An opportunity for boys and girls to live their own natural lives thru initiating and executing their own purposes and evaluating their own endeavors according to their own standards, rather than according to the standards of adults." That is what a public school should be says the New York Teachers' Union. A plan for such an experimental school was submitted to the New York board of education by the eighth annual meeting, American Federation of Teachers, local 5, New York.

The school will be housed in an existing school building, and supported by the board for a five-year experiment subject to renewal, if the board accepts the union's plan. Classes are to be limited to 20 pupils with six classes the first year and ten the second. Only children from 4 to 6 years old are to be taken in at first.

Instead of supervision by a principal or district superintendent, a qualified board of visitors of the public school system is to observe and report upon the work, according to the proposal.

"Failure of the present traditional curriculum and method of education" is responsible for the proposal, the report states. "The individual is made a receptacle for information and an automaton by the artificial discipline of drill as an end in itself. . . the school itself discourages the growth of individual and social standards of sincerity and honesty." The report goes on to attack the speeding-up system, a rigid curriculum, and the emphasis on discipline and regimentalized procedure.

Teachers And Labor Unions Get Hearing On Junior Highs

Organized labor joined with the Chicago Teacher's Federation in demanding that both be given a hearing on the subject of junior high schools before the school administration committee of the board of education. June 3 has been set for the hearing.

Victor Olander, secretary of the Illinois Federation of Labor, appeared to protest for organized labor. His chief grievance was that the junior high system will bring children out of school at the age of 15 instead of 16, as at present. The objection to this is that the youngsters cannot go to work until 16 and would be unable to do anything in high school in one year.

The teachers' councils will send speakers to the committee of the board on June 3 to give their report on the adoption of the junior high system. The board of education has been seriously criticised for passing the measure establishing junior highs without discussion between board members and the teachers' councils.

More About Progressives

In an attempt to explain the why and wherefore of the American Federation of Labor becoming more of a subsidiary of the American Defense Society than a trade union body fighting for the workers. "Public Affairs," a somewhat liberal Washington monthly. offers a clarification which has a most unclean covert thrust in it.

This "non-partisan" magazine attributes labor bureaucracy's fear of the Communists to the belief "that the Communist Party in this country is subsidized, promoted and maintained by Wall Street thru provocatory agents." In discussing the financing of 'Labor" and the DAILY WORKER, the editor tells the readers that union members support the first publication, it keeps mum on the source of the DAILY WORKER'S support, and then goes on to emit an impotent wail about the "undoubted sincerity of the Communist outfit and the frequently useful contributions of the paper itself." But—and here is the big "b" in nine of every ten so-called liberal lamentations—the fair-minded journal concludes with the statement that the effect of the DAILY WORKER "can only be to retard any progressive movement in America, or perhaps to destroy it utterly."

This is insolence with a vengance for a spokesman of the self-styled progressives who still hand out thrash about the magnanimous role that a Ralston can play in the life of the country, in the everyday events of the working and farming masses.

While Wall Street was banqueting Mr. Gompers, its government was hounding and persecuting the Communists. There has never been launched a campaign against the Communists of this country that has not been inspired and financed by Wall Street. While Mr. Gompers, who is a constructive progressive in the eyes of the excited liberal editor, was joining hands with the strike-breaking United States Chamber of Commerce, which is the recognized mouthpiece of finance capital in this country. The DAILY WORKER, brought into life by the contributions of the poor workingmen and farmers, was under fire from the Farringtons and the Leweses for its serving the demand that the United Mine Workers of Illinois be returned to the hundred thousand miners of the state.

The Communists and their press and propaganda are the most constructive forces in the labor movement today. In every recent big strike, in every bitter struggle of the workers against the exploiters, it has been the Communists who have been in the front ranks. The Communists are the dynamic force in the whole Farmer-Labor political movement. The DAILY WORKER, as the organ of the Communists, has never failed the workers. It would be useless to ask where "Public Affairs" and the so-called progressives were in the recent struggles of the workers. The answer to this question would tell us where this group stands today, where it will be found tomorrow, and would settle the dispute as to who is who in the class conflict between the exploiters and the working and farming masses.

In Wall Street's Grip

Slowly the whole truth is leaking out. J. Pierpont Morgan is now giving his orders openly to the proposed Herriot "socialist bloc" government in France. "Morgan Warns Paris Radicals to Cut no Taxes," is the outspoken headline in the Chicago Tribune over a London despatch from its British correspondent, John Steele, May 22.

One of the big promises of the "socialist bloc" during the recent campaign that put it in power, was the reduction of taxes, a bait that caught many workers and farmers. But the "socialist bloc" accepts the capitalist system as the basis of its rule, and its orders from Morgan are that it must continue the heavy taxes of the imperialist Poincare government, that rest most heavily upon the broad masses of the people.

It doesn't help the next premier, Herriot, to proclaim he has made no pledges to Morgan. He may try to blackmail the Wall Street financier by threatening an investigation of the recent smashing of the price of the franc, and its later spectacular rise, out of which Mr. Morgan is reputed to have reaped a golden harvest of about $100,000,000.

But the threats and blackmail do not bother Mr. Morgan. He knows that the "socialist bloc" has accepted his social system, the capitalist system, as its own. There is only one government that will not take orders from Morgan and his Wall Street pals. That will be the French Soviet government and that must rise on the abject failure of Herriot's "socialist bloc" to solve the problems of the French workers and farmers.

The injunction judges don't like us. Neither does Frank Farrington, the henchmen of the republican party, who still hangs on to the labor movement. There must be a reason. It shouldn't be difficult for an intelligent worker to find it.

Watch Your Wages!

It appears as if the expected business slump has arrived somewhat sooner than many high-priced economic experts prophesied it would. A perusal of the leading financial and industrial journals reveals unanimity about the sharp fall in business.

The Magazine of Wall Street in summing up the present dark economic outlook soundly declared: "The fact is that for several years we have been going along smoothly filling out the post-war demands for sundries, such as new housing, railroad equipment, automobiles to ride around in, and many other essentials and non-essentials. That demand has to an appreciable extent been satisfied." Of course, the disturbed world conditions and the increasing competition confronting the United States, particularly in the market for agricultural products, have only aggravated the tendency towards a decline in production and business.

As usual, it is the workers and poor farmers who suffer first and most in all economic crises. Not only is the air thick with plans to slash the workingmen's wages, but recent weeks have seen substantial wage cuts come with increasing frequency. Steel, cotton, shoe, and carpet manufacturers are cutting wages and reducing their operating forces.

New York rug and knitting mills have just reduced the wages of their workers by ten per cent. At Worcester, Massachusetts, the Whittall Mills, making carpets, have ordered a similar wage reduction to take immediate effect. In Lynn, Massachusetts, thirty-nine shoe factories have reduced wages by twenty per cent. In New Jersey and Pennsylvania wages have declined last month. The Woonsocket Rubber Company, as subsidiary of the United States Rubber Company, has just shut down. Leading locomotive and cap shops are going on a five day week. In the Birmingham district the Republic Iron and Steel Company is putting in force lower wages. Financial circles are expecting an early announcement of a general wage cut in the steel industry. Steel is the barometer of the wage trend in industry.

It is now obvious that the summer will see the tendency towards wage cuts become more pronounced. What are the workers going to do about it? Preparedness is the best policy in the class war. If the working class is to maintain even the meagre advantages it has won thru the bitterest of struggles over long years, it should forthwith take steps to put an end to the new wage-cutting campaign before it gets beyond control and visits untold difficulties and suffering amongst great masses.

Every trade union, every organization of the working class is vitally concerned with this new menace and cannot act too quickly to take effective steps to meet the danger to the workers' homes and lives.

The Filipino Strike

A serious revolt by a great mass of Filipino tenant farmers has broken out against the sugar barons. The present strike, declared to secure better payment for the sugar workers is of more deep-going significance than surface indications would tend to indicate.

The struggle of the Filipino tenants is primarily a fight against a vicious system of petty bossism, known as caciqueism. The strike is a mass protest against social and political oppression as well as against economic exploitation. The outcome of the conflict will have far-reaching effects on the political and economic life of the Philippine Islands. The vicious system of caciqueism under which the sub-lieutenants of the powerful sugar barons rule over the tenant farmers working the fields with an iron, ruthless hand is fighting for its very existence in this strike. Should these dauntless workers win, the victory would undoubtedly prove a signal for a general onslaught against the whole tyrannical order, an attack which could result only in a successful ending for the working and farming masses.

The American working and farming classes are interested in this strike especially at this time. The unrest among the tenant farmers is merely a phase of the general unrest and dissatisfaction that is gripping the entire Filipino people. The fight now being waged by the twenty thousand Filipino sugar workers in Hawaii against the inhumane working conditions and the starvation wages forced upon them by the sugar capitalists under the leadership of the American Governor General is more evidence of the rebellious temper of the Filipino people at this date. And the increasing demand being made by the Filipino masses for complete national freedom from the imperialist Washington government is, today, the dynamic force of the widespread discontent that has seized the Islands.

These events show the mood in which the Philippine nation in general, and the Filipino working and farming masses in particular, are at this moment. Since it is our capitalist government, our own exploiting class, that is today the principal oppressor of the Filipinos, the working and farming classes of the United States should take full heed of the developments in the Philippines. We should do everything in our power to hasten the evacuation of the Islands by the American military and naval officers and by the Yankee exploiters. The achievement of national freedom will be of tremendous aid to the Filipino working masses towards their establishment of complete working class freedom in the Islands, towards ridding the Philippines of all exploiters, native as well as foreign.

THE DAILY WORKER not only believes in the six-hour workday, but it believes, with the late Charles P. Steinmetz, that all the necessary work in the world could be done with a four-hour workday. Workers! Demand the shortening of the workday.

UNITE WORKERS TO SAFEGUARD HEALTH, LIFE

Conference Demands Preventive Action

By LUDWELL DENNY.
(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK, May 23.—A 40-hour week in all dangerous trades is the demand of over 50 labor organizations in the Workers' Health bureau, which has completed its second national conference in New York. Painters and hatters who told how they had won the 40-hour week in parts of New York and Connecticut, inspired the conference to launch the new campaign.

Methods for combatting lead poisoning and other diseases were outlined by Prof. Yandell Henderson, Yale university, Emery Hayhurst, Ohio State university, and Joseph Renikoff, Harvard.

Direct Action for Health.

"Direct action by the workers in the field of health is more effective than anything legislation can do for them," said Dr. James P. Warbasse, Co-operative League of America, in describing the co-operative health organizations in Europe. "The death rate in Milan is 21 per 1000, but is only 9 per 1000 among members of the workers' health co-operative.

Plans adopted by the conference for reducing "sickness, disability and premature death" among workers, include the following: organize the unorganized on the health field, health safeguards in union contracts especially on state and municipal jobs, eliminate dangerous devices like paint spraying machines, better law enforcement and uniform and adequate compensation laws in all states, eliminate harmful materials like white lead wherever satisfactory substitutes have been found.

Forty per cent of the hatters are victims of mecury poisoning according to an investigation among Danbury workers made by Harvard doctors, delegates reported. "Lung diseases have increased 144 per cent in the granite stone industry due to siliceous dust," Director Harriet Silverman, Workers' Health bureau, told the conference.

A trade union advisory health council to the bureau was formed by labor delegates from New York, Pa., Conn., Mass., N. J., and Wis. The bureau, which co-operates with unions all over the country, is located at 799 Broadway, New York.

MANUFACTURERS' ASSOCIATION BOOSTS SOVIET RUSSIA; MAY FORCE GOVERNMENT RECOGNITION

By LUDWELL DENNY
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

NEW YORK, May 23.—Despite Hughes' anti-Russian policy, Russia is recognized by the United States business men to the extent that the National Association of Manufacturers devoted an entire session of its annual convention, New York, to "The Truth About Russia."

There is a stable government in Russia and economic conditions are improving. These truths supported by facts and figures were brought out by the speakers, who refused to deal in discredited propaganda tales about nationalization of women, economic chaos, and the imminent fall of the government.

Isaac J. Sherman, president of Arcos-American Inc., Russian co-operative organization, was more enthusiastic than E. Dana Durand, U. S. department of commerce, who said Russia's trade importance is over-estimated, and Irving T. Bush, Bush Terminal Co., the remaining speaker. But all of them dealt with Soviet Russia as a reality that has to be reckoned with.

Soviets To Stay.

"There is no question but that the present government is going to last," said Bush. "I didn't find one person (in Russia) who thought it would fall." But he expects it to change its methods and enlarge the Communist party. Russia is destined in the end to be a conservative country like France because 85 per cent of its population is peasantry, owning land, he added. He "saw no disorder of any kind," "leaders of the revolution are sincere," "second strata of government officials are about like those in U. S. A." He praised Russia's educational system compared with the Czar's. He disagreed with Hughes' statements regarding Russian propaganda in this and other countries. Many things for the betterment of Russia and mankind have come out of the communist experiment, Bush admitted.

"The Soviet government has shown no disposition to abandon its fundamental policy of state operation of industry and trade," was the worst Hoover's assistant, Durand could report. His figures for Russia in 1923 showed crop acreage increase of 17 per cent over 1922, grain exports 1-5 of pre-war, and major manufacturing and mining production 1-3 of pre-war.

Bolsheviks Keep Their Word.

"Prejudice and lack of knowledge" only stand between the U. S. and Russia, said Sherman. "There does not exist in Russia any party or group of importance which would desire or pretend to desire to overthrow the government. First, the regime is too well intrenched; second, all factions pin their hopes on peaceful evolution and gradual adjustment. Still another bogey is the widespread belief that the Bolsheviki do not keep their word. I challenge anybody to present a single case where the soviet government disregarded its obligations, has not fulfilled its contracts or failed to keep its word."

"Russia's trade grows, her production increases, her political prestige steadily gains, and her economic strength begins to influence the world markets," he said. Measured in gold rubles her imports rose from 29,055,000 in 1920 to 144,059,000 in 1923, exports from 1,397,000 to 205,747,000, and total turnover from 30,452,000 to 349,804,000. Her present favorable trade balance is 10,000,000 a month. The currency has been stabilized and put on a gold basis. Agriculture is 75 per cent of pre-war average. Since 1920 coal industry has increased 59 per cent, oil 25 per cent, metal 186 per cent, textile 223 per cent.

"Four firms in New York during the first four months of this year did with the Soviet Union a business exceeding $20,000,000. If Russian trade has taken such a spontaneous development, in spite of many obstacles, what wonderful results could one not expect if the relations between these countries were placed on a normal basis." He said 20 countries had recognized Russia. "The Soviet Union is a fact whether you recognize it or ignore it. It is also a fact that it controls territory representing 1-6 of the earth, with 150,000,000 inhabitants, with enormous riches undeveloped and with wealth beyond estimation," Sherman concluded.

Russia Needed for World Health.

NEW YORK, May 23.—"The unrest of the world, the lack of prosperity in all lands—the many symptoms of uneasiness—all these things are due to a large extent to the refusal of many nations, the United States among them, to recognize Russia as a sister in the family of nations," Senator William E. Borah writes in the New York World.

ENRICO CLAUSI

MARIO CARBONI

Mario Carboni, baritone, and Enrico Clausi, tenor, stars of the Italian Grand Opera, entertained the striking ladies' garment workers recently with a well-chosen program. Miss Reed accompanied the singers. Jack Pfeiffer was responsible for the splendid concert, which was the fifth one he has provided for the strikers' pleasure.

The music was much enjoyed by the strikers, as their applause indicated. The garment workers thanked the singers heartily for their generosity.

High Accident Rate Due To Employment Of Strikebreakers

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK, May 23.—One-third more industrial accidents in the country are reported by the American Association for Labor Legislation in its survey for the year. The increase ranged from 13.4 per cent in New York to 53.1 per cent and 52.2 per cent in Utah and Montana, where mine accidents were common. Employment of inexperienced workers as strikebreakers, is given as one of the chief reasons for the high accident rate.

Mellon Will Go.

WASHINGTON, May 23.—Passage of the soldier bonus bill by the senate, over the veto of the president, did not lead to the resignation of Secretary Mellon or any other member of the cabinet. Mellon's resignation will come later—and for quite another reason—after Francis Heney and Sen. Couzens start the official investigation into his administration of the internal revenue bureau.

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

Chicago Tribune scribblers, in Rig Berlin and London, are drawing liber ally on their imaginations to keep th Americans, who believe what they se in the World's Greatest Liar, poste on what is not happening in Sovie Russia. There are almost as man innocent bystanders murdered eac day in that country, according to th uninspired correspondents as the English used to wipe out in France i the early days of the world war, whe several German armies were annihilated weekly, by the British propagandists.

It is not surprising that the capitalist correspondents should wor overtime, now that the Communis International is about to go into session. We will surely hear of larg appropriations of Russian chervone to support the candidacy of Rober LaFollette for the presidency, an perhaps to help finance the Teapo Dome investigation. There will b plots to start another civil war i Ireland, another political party i Germany and dual Ku Klux Klan organizations in America.

The only possible excuse that could be offered for the appointment of William J. Burns to the position he held as chief of the investigation bureau o the Department of Justice, would b that "it takes a crook to catch a crook." Instead of catching crooks, however, Burns proved to be the greatest crook in America, with the possible exception of Harry Daugherty, who seems to hold the lead over them all. Since the graft investigations opened in Washington, it is reported the "forty thieves" have gone out of business.

Edouard Herriot, the so-called radical socialist and probably the next premier of France, is assuring the bankers and big business that they need not fear his "radicalism." They need not. He is quit esafe. So are the socialists who are a little more to the left than he is. The socialists protest that they will not accept portfolios in the new government. But we fear they protest too much. Some people are of the opinion that their protests serve the purpose of enabling them to strike a better bargain. They are itching for office and having no principles to lose, we cannot see how collaborating with the bourgeois left bloc in the government can pollute them.

Ramsay MacDonald is assuring the Tories and Liberals in England tha if they have patience he will prov that big business has nothing to fea from the so-called Labor governmen At that he declares that the Tories are easier to get along with than the liberals. Yes. Sometime the liberals vote against war credits and larger navies. But the Tories never do. MacDonald fears only one element in England and that is the working class.

If all the patriotic ladies who profess a willingness to die for the country should jump into the lake, the pictorial supplements of the Sunday papers would be easier to look at. So far as we are aware nobody is offering any serious objection to the sacrifice of our patriots for what they think is patriotism with the least possible delay. What we object to is to have space which could be devoted to legimitate murders and bootlegging feuds taken up with the pictures and statements issued by maids of ancient vintage.

The Poor Fish Says: John D. Rockfeller gave over one million dollars to the Union Theological Seminary. This generosity shows the advantages of an economic system which places great wealth in the hands of those who know where to expend it. It is true that Rockfeller stole this money from the workers, but it is better it should be devoted to Godly work than be wasted buying food, clothing and amusement for the workers. The more miserable they are on this earth, the happier they'll be in the next.

Unions In Czecho-Slovakia

the Union of Chemical Workers, which subsequently became the organizational center of the revolutionary labor movement. Even before its expulsion from the General Federation of Labor, this union had grouped around itself the various minorities expelled by the reformists, and organized them into sections. Thus was laid the beginning of the future One Big Union. It is hardly necessary to mention that most of the trade unionists remained with the reformists, so that the young revolutionary labor movement was very short of both agitational and material resources.

This situation, which demanded the greatest economy and efficiency, was also largely instrumental in the adoption of the organizational form of the One Big Union, whose financial and other advantages are beyond any doubt. The October (1922) congress of the revolutionary minorities expelled by the reformists, therefore, approved by a considerable majority (only the above mentioned revolutionary unions being in opposition) the adoption of the One Big Union with 17 industrial sections, as the new form of organization.

The independent unions were given a years' time to call congresses for the purpose of deciding the question of their affiliation in the form of sections to the One Big Union. During 1923 the unions of land-workers, leather and shoe workers, clerical workers and miners affiliated, so that the O. B. U. has, at present, 300,000 members distributed among eleven industrial sections while the four independent unions have a membership not exceeding 60,000.

Structure.

Organizationally, the O. B. U. is built on the principle of "One enterprise, one union;" this principle, however, is not always applied, owing to the scatteredness of the movement so that it will be more correct to consider the local organization as the basic organizational nucleus of the O. B. U. The local organizations are united by joint district councils with a presidium of 12, elected at district conferences to which every 100 members of the union send one delegate.

The secretary of the district counoil is appointed by the presidium of the O. B. U. by agreement with the district council and is usually selected from among the workers of the largest industry of the district. In the vertical direction, the section conferences elect a presidium of the section consisting of nine members. The work of the section presidium consists largely of directing the economic struggle, negotiating collective agreements and carrying on propaganda and agitation in coordination with the presidium of the O. B. U.

General congresses as well as section conferences, are held once in three years. At these meetings one delegate represents two thousand good standing members. The congress elects the presidium of the O. B. U., each section being entitled to proportional representation in the presidium.

Financial Arrangement.

The central place of the organizational schemes of the O. B. U., belongs to the financial question. But membership dues collected by the local organizations go directly to the central treasury of the O. B. U., where the entire accountancy and allocation of the funds is centered. The presidium of the section, which has in this central treasury its current account, recording all the deposits and expenditures of the section, receives from the central treasury all the funds necessary for its activities.

This financial structure has the advantages of freeing the separate sections from all cares of a financial character, and in case of great stringency, as for instance, in case of long strikes which exhaust the funds of the section, the latter is enabled to borrow from the general treasury.

Equally centralized is the work of agitation and propaganda. All agitators and lecturers are paid by the central treasury of the O. B. U. and their engagement by the various sections is regulated by the O. B. U. presidium. The union press has also been decentralized, and the O. B. U. is publishing a general organ with sectional supplements.

The most serious criticism levelled against the O. B. U. and its leaders by their opponents, consists of the claim that the organizational centralism of the O. B. U. prevents the separate sections from showing sufficient initiative, and deprives them of the measure of independence necessary in Czecho-Slovakia, considering the general development of the labor movement.

Craft Spirit Still Strong.

Inasmuch as the craft spirit is still deeply rooted in the Czecho-Slovakian labor movement, and the principle of industrial unionism is still far from realization, the application of the strictly centralized form of the O. B. U. must be considered premature. This was approximately the stand taken by the second congress of the R. I. L. U. in its attitude towards the One Big Union of Czecho-Slovakia, the congress, howoever, decided to let the Czecho-Slovakian comrades become convinced in practice of the justice of its doubts.

We are convinced that with the further growth and consolidation of the One Big Union of Czecho-Slovakia, it will modify its organizational forms so as to satisfy both sides. At present the Presidium of the One Big Union of Czecho-Slovakia, together with representatives of the independent revolutionary unions mentioned above, are the provisional representatives of the Red International of labor unions in Czecho-Slovakia. This state of affairs cannot, however, be considered permanent. The next congress of the Czecho-Slovakian revolutionary unions will have to tackle this question and find the final forms for the settlement of the organizational question in Czecho-Slovakia.

Dinner Pail Epics
by Bill Lloyd

It ain't as easy as can be, a-making citizens to see that we should have a reign of peace and make all war and strife to cease.

Now in Chicago they is seating a lotta women in a meeting; to teach the ways of peace on earth and act as midwife at the birth of that forthcoming glorious day when pacifists will have their way. The child without a bit of pain, shall spring in peace from out the brain, of folks who have a kindly heart, without disturbing the world's mart.

But men who live to buy and sell have very different tales to tell. At the same time these women met, a navy man told us to get a fleet of aircraft for the sky as we could fight lots by and by. And business men who filled the hall let out a most unanimous call, to get behind the airplane guy till on the tip-top cloud we fly.

And Legion men, who otta know, some lies were told to make 'em go (to France to save democracy), now get a lotta rough-neck glee in slamming all the folks who'd make our Woodrow's promise less a fake—the promise that it was the last of wars in which our youth we'll cast.

Peace advocates may know some things, but financiers they pull the strings. They own the papers, radio, schools, the colleges are made their tools. Boy Scouts are trained to think their way, the editors are in their pay. In fact, they own all in the town, that radicals have not nailed down.

The clock will strike the peacetime hour when we have licked the money power. When we make things to use, not sell, then we can route Mars thru to hell. Until that time, this peacetalk stuff is mostly kind but harmles guff.

IN THE LAND OF GLOOM - -

By M. J. OLGIN

WHEN a man has spent in a foreign country a little over four days, one cannot expect him to have a clear view on every phase of its life. The press correspondent who says "he knows it all," is fooling himself or his readers. I would not claim to give here an adequate account of the German economic and political situation. I will only confine myself to a few indisputable facts which force themselves upon every observer as soon as he begins to orientate himself on German soil.

Low Wages, Unemployment, Starvation.

FACT number one is the miserable situation of the German working class. With the stabilization of the mark, prices in Germany, excepting rents, are on the same general level as are the prices in the United States. The average wage of a German working man is somewhere in the vicinity of twenty marks a week. Peak wages for the highest skilled workers (such as the members of the printers' union) do not exceed thirty-six marks; after deducting taxes, sick benefit dues and other obligatory payments, the highest paid worker brings home no more than thirty marks. The dollar buys now a little over four marks. Those of the German workers who are happy enough to have full-time continuous employment, earn as much as $5 to $7.50 a week. The number of such fortunates, however, is not very large. There are four million of unemployed in Germany today. There are twelve million who work part of the time.

"How can you make both ends meet?" I asked a cabinet maker in a suburb of Berlin.

"One must," was all he said.

I HAD soon a vivid illustration of how "one must." The man had come home after eight hours of work. He was a sturdy fellow of about thirty, tho of middle height. The meal his wife put before him on the table consisted of a soup-plate of mashed potatoes with gravy and a piece of bread. That was all. Later in the evening he would drink a pint of beer in his union hall, or maybe he would even abstain from this.

THE man lived in one small room with his wife and a three-year-old child. He could not allow himself the luxury of decent clothes. He could not allow himself the luxury of a theatre, or a concert. He could not allow himself the luxury of an "ausflug" (holiday trip) out of town on a Sunday. He could not allow himself anything. And he still belonged to the aristocracy of labor. His wife told me that, as a rule, the German worker eats meat only once a week. The life of the unskilled laborers is still worse. The life of the unemployed is hell. There is a movement afoot to change the eight-hour day for ten. In some cases it has been accomplished. That there must be dissatisfaction among the workers under conditions like these, is easy to imagine.

The Revolt of the Workers.

FACT number two is this bitter revolutionary dissatisfaction of the laboring masses. The wave of resentment is growing. The readiness to fight becomes more manifest every day. The masses have come to after the defeat of last October. In reality, the masses had never been subdued. It is true that long years of hopelessness under the treaty of Versailles, long years of underfeeding and actual starvation have sapped the vitality of the German working class as a whole and have thrown a portion of the workers into a state of nerveless stupor. But even among the most devitalized elements smoulders the fire of revolt. Under the ashes of despair there is so much hatred for the ruling classes and so much contempt for capitalist law and order that any shock is capable to provoke an explosion. "We have reached the end of the rope." "We have nothing to lose." Where this sentiment is widespread, a revolution is abroad.

THE first manifestation of the strengthening will to struggle among the working masses is the wave of strikes. When I arrived in Hamburg, baggage had to be carried by the passengers themselves (to the great and bitter resentment of the paunch-carrying German "buergers") because the porters had gone on strike. This was the first skirmish of an impending all-German railroad strike. The strike has been averted by the compromise of the union bureaucrats, but the workers are not content with the results. There has been a partial strike of the printers. There is a miners' strike impending. There is a strike fermentation among millions. This in spite of the A. D. G. B. (Allgemeiner Deutscher Gewerkschafts-Bund—the German A. F. of L.) which tries to smother the movement.

A second manifestation of the German workers' revolt is their switching over to the Left. The Communist movement is growing by leaps and bounds. A situation has been created where, when a worker says "fight," he must say "Communism." Just when I was in Berlin, the most amazing and most encouraging victory was won by our comrades in Bavaria at the election. This country, famous by its fascism, by the Hitler counter-revolution, by the shame of the Hitler-Ludendorff trial, by assaults on the Communist workers, by imprisonment of Communist leaders and shutting down of Communist papers, had, at the April landtag election, cast over 200,000 votes for the Communist ticket, four times as much as on the previous election. It should be noted that an open election campaign could not be carried on by our Bavarian comrades, and that literature could not be distributed freely. It should also be remembered that Bavaria is a predominently agricultural state and that the bulwarks of Communism are the central, northern and northwestern industrial regions.

THE Bavarian vote shows the trend of the revolutionary sentiment among the German workers. Other signs of the same revolutionary character are not lacking. The labor movement in Germany has reached a state where, either it is Communism, that is to say class-struggle and revolution, or it is nothing at all.

Social Democracy Is No More.

FACT number three is the collapse of the center. By the same token by which the workers rally to the extreme Left, the bourgeois elements rally to the extreme Right, i. e. to fascism. The pacifyers, the compromisers, the preachers of social collaboration the prophets of all-healing bourgeois democracy are simply melting away. The decay of the Social-Democracy is, perhaps, even a quicker process than the disintegration of purely bourgeois liberalism. The Social-Democracy, by becoming an appendix to the capitalist state and by defending private property against the revolutionary workers, has become historically useless. Comrade Trotzky, recently provoked great merriment all over Russia by the following remark: "The English worker," he said, "will ask himself: 'why should I scratch behind my right ear with my left hand? Why should I support McDonald who takes orders from the liberal bourgeoisie, when I can meet the same bourgeoisie myself face to face?'" This is still more true about the German Social-Democracy. Those of the American comrades who still remember the Bebel-Kautsky-Ledebur Social-Democracy of pre-war times and who have not seen it in action (for reaction) afterwards, should keep in mind that there is practically no difference between the German Social-Democracy of the present and a liberal bourgeois party of the pre-war epoch, such as, for instance, the Russian Kadets. The German Social-Democracy is not even using a socialist phraseology any longer. (It has substituted "social conscience" for class consciousness and class-struggle.) The German "Vorwaerts" is no more liberal than used to be the "Berliner Tageblatt" in 1912. I have personally read the following classic remark in the "Vorwaerts" of April 8: "The Russian Communists denounce bourgeois class justice in the capitalist countries, while they themselves practice proletarian class justice in the Russian Soviet states." Proletarian class justice is equally inacceptable to the German "Vorwaerts" as is capitalist justice. This illustration alone may suffice.

IN practice the German Social-Democracy offers nothing to the working class which could not be and is not being offered by the liberal portion of the bourgeoisie. Fighting against capitalism is criminal because it undermines the economic foundation of the fatherland. Demands presented to the bosses must be mild or else capitalism will not be able to get its due dividends. Reparation bills must be acknowledged and paid because the German army is not strong enough to fight the French. Communists must be downed and smashed because they voice the hatreds of the masses and lead in revolutionary fights, against the only order which is possible at present, namely the capitalist order. This is, roughly, the ideology of the once famous Social-Democratic party. This is the tone and the trend of everyday actions. When I was in Germany, the Dawes committee published its report. The Social-Democratic press was more docile and more crestfallen as regards the crazy bill than was the liberal press. In the strike wave, the Social-Democratic union bureaucrats try to compromise as quietly as is desirable for the bosses and on terms as mild as would only keep the workers from striking. When it comes, however, to persecuting the Communists in the "Gewerkschaften" (unions) or even outlawing entire red sections of the unions, the same Social-Democrats manifest unusual initiative and vigor.

The natural result is a catastrophal loss of Social-Democratic prestige among the mass of the workers, the collapse of Social-Democracy as a political factor, a rush of the workers of any degree of class-consciousness to the sphere of the revolutionary Communist influence and revolutionary action. "German Social-Democracy is no more;" this is a remark repeated in Germany with the same certainly as we, in America, speak of the disappearance of the S. P.

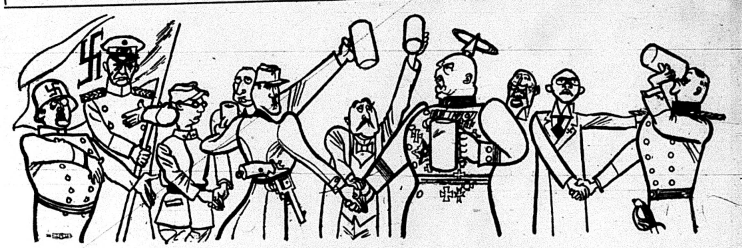
TO THE GOOD, OLD TIMES!



THE CAPITALIST-MONARCHIST UNITED FRONT IN GERMANY.

Rural Child Labor in the United States

By LOUIS ZOOBOCK

THE agricultural revolution which is spreading thru the rural regions of the United States has led to many unfortunate results. Large capitalistic corporations have invaded the country and are at present controlling huge estates operated by managers with hired labor on what may properly be called a "factory system." The farmers, under the pressure of the monopolists and other exploiters, are sinking to greater and greater poverty and are forced into the class of landless agricultural wage slaves; rural slums are developing, some of them under a tenancy system which does not allow graduation into ownership and holds thousands of families in a state of virtual serfdom; but the most tragic result of the agricultural revolution is the exploitation of the country child, who is chained hopelessly to the drudgery of the farm. Instead of children working side by side with the father and mother on the farm, we find them in many places in gangs of 25, 50 and 100, working under supervision of what is virtually a slave driver, whose chief interest is in the amount of money the children can earn for a financial corporation. It is the condition of these juvenile rural laborers that this article will attempt to ascertain.

Extent of Rural Child Labor.

The number of children engaged in agricultural pursuits has been steadily on the increase. Between the years 1880 and 1900 the number very nearly doubled, and between 1900 and 1910 it increased by approximately one-half. Of the total number of children 10 to 15 years of age reported by the 1910 census as bread winners, 1,431,254, or 71.9 per cent, were engaged in agriculture; of this number 260,195 were reported as "farm laborers working out," that is, on farms away from home. The 1920 census shows a great decrease in the number of rural child workers, but it should be noticed that the census was taken in January, when agricultural operations are practically at a standstill. Besides, it must be remembered that children under 10 years of age, who by the hundreds work in various agricultural operations, are not included in the census occupational returns. However, the findings of the children's bureau disclose the true facts of the extent of child labor on farms; not only was there a decrease in the number of children employed in agriculture, but, on the opposite, there was a considerable increase: at present 2,000,000 children are working on the farms to their injury.

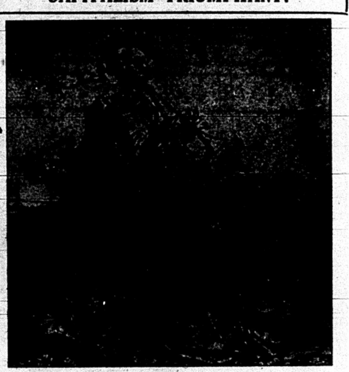
According to Edward N. Clopper, the enjoyment of the following rights is essential to a normal childhood:

1. The right to be born in honor and sound in body and mind; to protection from disease, and to the promotion of health.
2. The right to care, food, shelter, and clothing.
3. The right to education and training sufficient to develop fully his capacity for knowledge and achievement.
4. The right to play and recreation, and to the companionship of his fellows.
5. The right to be safeguarded from neglect, abuse, exploitation and other injustice.

All these fundamental rights are being denied to the child of the landless farmer. The exploitation of the farmers by the capitalists and absentee owners has led to a condition where the farmers must depend upon the work of their families in order to make ends meet on most farms. Even on the home farms operated by the family, a premium is put upon the labor of children. It often happens that the larger the farm the more work for the children. Likewise the larger the family, the larger the farm that is operated. This is particularly true of tenant farms, especially in one-crop sections, where the size of the farm granted to the tenant is based on the size of the family. Where families are hired for farm labor under contract—as in the beet fields of Colorado, Michigan, Nebraska, Kansas and Iowa, in the truck gardens all along the Atlantic coast, or in the great onion fields of Ohio—the acreage to be cultivated is allotted on the same basis. The landlords, employers and other exploiters of the agricultural wage earners devise such contractual conditions which mean a greater demand for tenants and laborers with larger families, and consequently greater exploitation of rural child laborers.

Many reformists and philanthropists, who interest themselves in child labor problems, have tried to show that the work of children in the open air is not injurious; that "the fact that farm children work does not make them child laborers; that the child with a home in the country, where he lives under the care of his parents, is ideally situated," etc. All these assumptions are false, baseless and do not stand any criticism. Poor housing conditions, lack of the simplest sanitary devices, failure to observe even elementary health precautions, lack of recreational life, wretched schooling facilities and poor quality of teachers, burdens prematurely placed upon children in farm and housework, these are the drawbacks of country life under the system of wage slavery. A description of specific facts will help to make this clearer.

CAPITALISM TRIUMPHANT!



PEACE.

Findings in Southern States.

In West Virginia, children are carrying burdens that properly belong to grown-ups. Walter W. Armentrout, who investigated conditions there, found the following examples:

A 12-year-old boy and his mother cultivated six acres of corn and raised and marketed 200 bushels of tomatoes.

Two boys, 12 and 14 years old, operated a 140-acre farm, while the father worked in a sand mine.

A boy, 15 years old, does all the work on a 150-acre farm, his father being away at the mines.

One boy, 12 years old, was found operating a tractor, disking a 20-acre field, unaided.

A girl, 15 years old, and her two brothers, 13 and 14 years old, hoed 15 acres of corn three times, cut corn one week, bound oats by hand 3 days, raked hay with a hand rake 18 days, picked up potatoes for three days, 25 bushels each, per day, etc.

The worst phases of rural child labor are found in the one-crop sections of the South, where cropper tenancy prevails. Here the greedy landlords have developed a system of peonage which guarantees the rent to the landlord and insures poverty to the tenant. The landlord furnishes the land, work, stock, implements, seed, half the fertilizer, etc. The tenant supplies nothing except his labor and that of his wife and children. When the crop is gathered he gets half, and with deductions made for the advances, the landlord gets the rest. The number of acres granted for cultivation depends upon the number of children of the tenant, and as the machinery provided by the landlord is usually old and outworn, the tenant needs a great amount of labor in order to be able to eke out a "living." As a result, thruout the south children of both sexes and all ages from 5 to 15 years are being employed as cotton pickers. The work is very fatiguing; there is exposure to the sun and heat in every part of the season; and because of the monotony of keeping the same position, the shoulders and arms ache from the muscular exertion, and the hands become cramped from holding the hoe. Besides, where the children are working out for some one else the pay is at piece rates, 50 cents for 100 pounds; this encourages speeding, and the pickers are under a nervous strain. It also encourages longer hours of work; in cotton picking the working day is from 7 or earlier until sundown, with almost no time off for dinner; many families take their dinners to the field and eat as they go up and down the rows.

On the truck farms of Maryland and Virginia, children as young as 5 years of age are being mercilessly exploited by the landlords. Here they work from 9 to 13 hours a day; Negro children working much longer hours. In addition to the time spent working on the field most of the children are compelled to do housework and tend to the chores, which makes their total "day's" work unusually long.

The earnings of the children are very small. On the Norfolk truck farms, the hourly rates range from less than 5 cents up to 40 cents and over. In Maryland, children usually get the prevailing rate for piecework by the basket or by the row, as, for example, 4 cents for a five-eighths bushel of tomatoes. In other cases they are paid by the hour, from 10 to 30 cents. One child of 5 was given 10 cents a day for dropping sweet potatoes.

Conditions in Other States.

In states other than the south the conditons are not any better. In North Dakota, investigations of the children's bureau revealed shocking conditions. Children between 6 and 17 years of age are performing every variety of work on the farms. Many heavy and more or less hazardous farm processes involving special physical strain, the handling of machinery or dangerous implements, or the driving of four-horse or five-horse teams are commonly performed by children from the ages of 10 and up. "Boys as young as 7 years of age and girls as young as 10 are commonly found driving stackers and hay forks, harrowing and raking hay, etc."

Of 845 children included in one study, 104 while engaged in farm work had had an accident resulting in some injury. Twelve of them had broken their arms or legs, or had broken bones in other parts of the body; others had dislocations, sprains or had been crushed or badly bruised, or had bad cuts or lacerations. Permanent injuries, such as loss of an arm or leg, and even deaths, are a common occurrence.

In the sugar beet fields of Colorado, Michigan, Kansas, etc., tens of thousands of children between the ages of 3 and 16 are being utilized in the work of taking care of the sugar beets. Some work in gangs under slave drivers, others merely as members of the laboring family, which often is a migratory family following the crops from locality to locality.

At least 50 per cent of the hired workers on the beet fields are children who work 14 hours a day under a speeding system. The work is very hard and exhaustive; the continued stooping in kneeling and crouching positions when "thinning," and the lifting and handling of heavy weights in "pulling" and "topping," affect the posture and outline of the growing child's body. Seventy per cent or more of the children employed in the sugar beet industry have postural deformities and malpositions apparently due to strain. "A total of 676 cases of winged scapulae were found among the 1,022 children, 661 of the entire group having this defect; hence two children in three were taxing the muscles of an undeveloped shoulder girdle in this period of growth."

Similar conditions exist in other places. In Ohio, several departments of the state government have been aroused over child labor conditions in the onion fields, one official declaring them to be "outrageous and unbelievable." He estimated that more than 4,000 children between the ages of 6 and 16 are working in the marshes weeding and topping onions. A Cleveland newspaper man reported them as working 10 hours a day, "crawling on hands and knees thru mucky soil," and that the children became completely exhausted by the work.

In the Imperial Valley of California children as young as 3 years of age pick cotton from sunrise to sunset in the extreme shadeless heat of the valley. The work is very hard and taxes the strength of the undeveloped children. The cotton pickers usually have a long, loose strap of material at the opening of the bag which is slipped over the child's head. The child picks the cotton, puts it in the bag, which he drags behind him. One boy stated to an investigator: "I sometimes pick till I have over 100 pounds. I pick as long as I can pull the bag, and until it gets so heavy that I can't walk straight." Another boy said: "Us kids most always drag from 40 to 50 pounds of cotton before we take it to be weighed. Three of us pick. I am 12 years old and my bag is 12 feet long. I can drag nearly 100 pounds."

This in brief describes the condition of the rural child laborers. They are forced to perform the hardest tasks on the farms; they are compelled to work long hours for the poorest pay; they are virtually denied an education, as they must work in order to supplement the meager earnings of the parents; they are deprived of proper amusements and social and intellectual opportunities to a most undesirable degree; they are forced to live in the cheapest and most unsanitary quarters; they are badly fed and undernourished, and as a result cases of malnutrition, pellagra, and tuberculosis are very common, etc. To put it in a single sentence, under the system of wage slavery, the children of the tenant farmers and agricultural laborers have no opportunities for education, health, recreation and the enjoyment of a normal childhood.

The Chase in the Night

By FRED. ANDERSON

(A Memory of John Reed "Underground")

JIM and I were sitting in an ordinary little room of a worker's dwelling on the outskirts of a small coast town. We were waiting for Bob, the third comrade of our trio, who had gone out in the winternight to meet an oversea steamer. There was always a job for us with the steamer. Always the mail—the red or "fist" mail, as we called it—and often a fellow stowaway.

Our little room, which we wished to look as ordinary and unnoticeable as possible, was a station on the only line of communication between two worlds. And what a line! Through the blockade of the Allies and the Border States, through White Armies and fronts, through barriers of police, customs and detectives massed up against Red Russia in 1918-20, thru all this our line was cut, known to few, used by many. White Terror reigned in the Border States and many a brave comrade was killed or tortured, or still sits in jail for the running of that line. Nevertheless, it never closed; men and mail kept going from Russia to the Western World and from the Western World to Russia.

BOB returned. He had the mail, mostly letters and reports from all over the world, forwarded from hand to hand and addressed to the leaders of the World Revolution. There were other things, too, and amongst them, in the back of a certain book, a thin slip, intelligible to Jim alone. Off he went to decipher it, and this was the result: "in same steamer american eastward pass wilson. American Wilson—a passenger, h'm, that was my part of the work so I put on my coat and went out.

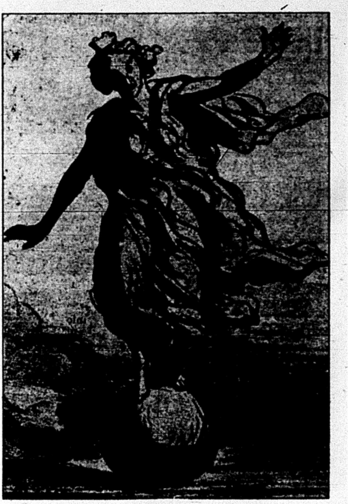
IT was about half-past ten when I came down to the deserted harbour. The quays, covered with streaks of thin snow, looked unpleasantly white and lit under the swinging arc lights. Down below the icy black water swished faintly against the concrete work. It was not a good night: too clear, too still—one could see and hear too far. At the end of the pier lay the steamer, sending down a smell of oil and fried potatoes with the wind. Slowly I approached, trying to look as much like a whisky smuggler as possible, for that was the most innocent and natural mask for a "political" in these days. The railing on the pier between the steamer and the customs' shanty was already removed and all officials had apparently gone, but some dog of a 'tec might still be nosing round. . . . Voices and the clatter of messtins could be heard from the forecastle but the rest of the ship seemed lifeless, except for the fizzing steam somewhere up round the funnel, and the regular tapping of a piece of loose rope against the mast. Presently a fellow in a stoker's shirt and trousers came scampering up. I hailed him from my observation point on the pier: "Gothenburgh-Bill aboard?" He stopped, stared at me for a second, then with "All right, wait a mo'" turned down again. Bill came up and ashore and we talked in the shadow of a magazine. Yes, there had been a fellow this trip; but Bill was astonished. Hadn't I been down once before, earlier—no—anyway, he had put his passenger on shore and told him to follow two fellows one of whom he had supposed to be me. I cursed him for his carelessness. "Well, anyway, what was he like?" "Tall, strong fellow, darkish in a big green ulster" "Well, I'm off to find him. Good night." Bill returned to the steamer.

UP town the streets were empty. I walked round and round on the lookout, but in vain. After one o'clock, I went home full of apprehension. Damn Bill! He had been nervous and wanted to get rid of his dangerous passenger too quickly. The American might have been caught already. But in that case there would be word waiting at home for me from the charwoman of a certain institution. However, Jim and Bob had no news for me, so we looked forward to the morning.

orning came. We had mobilised four comrades and sent each to his part of the town to watch for a green ulster on a swarthy, probably dirty fellow, who would harken to a casually uttered "Wilson," the password. Right enough, before long one of the boys returned with the green ulster trailling behind. He looked the things we were after, so I who was supposed to know a little English said: "How do!" He certainly looked tired, unshaven and black with coal dust in the wrinkles of his face and neck, but he smiled and said, "Hope I'n right this time!" . . . "Sure, as the fourteen points of . . . "Wilson" he echoed with a laugh.

WE seated him in a corner of our wooden sofa and gave him cigarettes. How he smoked! Must have been one hundred a day. We didn't ask him questions, for we were trained not to, but he told us his name was John Reed. "Oh, is that him," Jim said, and stopped the rocking chair in which he sat to show his deferance. Jim was a lover of literature and knew "Ten Days" in translation. Granny who kept house for us, and who never "knew" or asked anything—at any rate never told anything, even ultimately in court—good old red granny gave us breakfast of fresh herring and coffee. While Jack ate, he told us his story, then he went to sleep, while one of us went to buy him clean clothes, for Jack, like everybody "underground" traveled light; a toothbrush in the ulster pocket.

ON THE EVE OF THE REVOLUTION



EUROPE.

THIS was his story. On the other side, Jack had been put in charge of Gothenburgh-Bill and stowed away in the coal bunker where he remained for two days. Of course it was pitch dark, almost airless, with bare sharp coal lumps to lie upon. And it wasn't too safe either, a new trimmer had been taken on board who knew nothing about the stowaway and his work sometimes brought him quite near to where Jack lay. Jack could hear the clinking sound of glass bottles—smuggled whisky, hastily being buried by the trimmer. Twice Bill managed to sneak in and bring him some water and sandwiches, and report how the journey progressed. Then the steamer came to port. Customs officials and police began their search, so Jack crawled into the remotest corner of the coal bunker, jamming himself between the coal and the ceiling, until Bill came to his release. Taking him above, Bill pointed to two figures lolling under a lamp-post on the pier, and shoved him ashore. Jack understood he was to follow these two at some distance until he was spoken to. He stepped forward, rejoicing to breathe air again, and with a handful of cotton-waste rubbed the coal dust out of his eyes. Presently, the two fellows started moving. Jack followed 30 paces behind. The three sauntered up town and loafed round an open square. Now and then the two would glance back uneasily at Jack, but nothing was said, so he kept faithfully trotting after them. They turned right, turned left, walked on and on and finally entered a veritable labyrinth of lanes and alleyways between small, straggling houses and dingy back yards in the suburb of the town. In order not to lose his guides, Jack had come up much closer, and then the men after a moment's hesitation in front of a certain house, turned quickly on to the open highroad and set straight out to the country, with their pursuer in grim determination after them. Here street lamps ceased; Only snow and woods were visible. It was growing very late. The two ahead walked faster and faster. Jack was puzzled. He thought of hailing them but he knew the country was dangerous and unconditional discipline necessary. Clearly they were nervous and afraid of something. Thus on and on, until, suddenly, both fellows bolted at full speed off the road, up a wooded hill and disappeared . . . Jack stopped . . . wiped his brow. Two hours and a half—more—this chase had lasted and here he was in the middle of the night absolutely at a loss. Slowly he turned and tramped back to town.

THE only explanation I could offer was that the fellows had been smugglers, unarmed and frightened, thinking themselves shadowed by a detective. Jack laughed heartily at the funny chase, which, however, had cost him a whole winter night's terribly wearisome and risky watch in the streets. Goodness only knows how he kept on his feet, frozen, hungry and tired as he was, and afraid of attracting the attention of the patrolling police constables. But the longest night comes to an end. With the morning, people began moving in the streets. He had already decided to return to ship when he found himself being shyly observed by an idle fellow. Passing near he heard him mutter: "Vilson, Vilson" so he replied and was taken to our quarters.

IN the afternoon, when Jack had rested, we went to have a bath in one of the small steam baths which was kept by the widow of a worker, lying now with many other proletarians in the "doggraves" dug by themselves before execution, outside the town. She had a son, though, who was alive; he had escaped to Russia and was fighting with the reds. When we entered the bathhouse, I thought I had better give an explanation as to why my comrade didn't speak the local tongue. So I told her he was a Swedish sailor. She looked at him rather curiously, but said nothing. They have a wonderful scent on some matters, these widows and mothers, know. How she guessed I do not know, but she somehow felt I was not quite "straight"—had something to do with that "underground traffic." When, however, according to the custom of the place, she same in to wash us, and saw the scar on Jack's back (he had had an operation down in Salonika, he told me) she turned to me and said in my ear; "You dont need to fool me; he aint no Swede, a Russian he is, swarthy fellow, and wounded too—a red guard he is . . . But don't be 'fraid—I never tell. Our Charlie too, you know . . .

SO I let it pass, and when I saw the tenderness with which the old soul washed and massaged Jack—without her usual chatter, though—I realised that it was better to let it pass. A great honour had befallen Jack. "Russian" and "Red" in those days and in that land meant to the bourgeoisie, to the capitalists and to all respectable people the things most feared, detested, hated on earth and hell. It spelled death to the man charged with it. But to the workingclass—then bleeding and silent under the iron heel of White Terror—it meant hope in a hopeless night, it meant daring and revolt—something to love and cheer in the secret of your heart when everything else seemed lost. And so this old proletarian woman bathed and washed John Reed as thought he had been her own son, "The Russian Redguard."

NEXT morning then we saw Jack off eastward along the "line" and we heard soon after that he had arrived safely in Russia.

HERRIOT EXPECTING SOCIALISTS TO HELP HIM FORM CABINET

PARIS, May 22.—It is now definitely established that Edouard Herriot is to be the next Premier of France, provided he can form a cabinet.

The leader of the radical socialists today said he would offer ministerial portfolios to certain socialists, but that their acceptance depended largely upon whether the socialist congress voted in favor of participation in a coalition government.

Herriot expected to confer with Aristide Briand, former premier, today and to arrange to carry on with the formation of a cabinet single handed, if the socialists refused participation.

A NEGLECTED FIELD

By MARTIN ABERN

THE Workers Party is today engaged in a campaign to form a class Farmer-Labor Party in the United States, an effort worthy of the full energies of every Party member. In noting the excellent development of our Party, it is well to state that the Workers Party really began to grow and assume influence when it started seriously and earnestly to work within the unions, and when it, at the same time, freed itself from the separatist or dual notions held by some members. It is imperative that we always call upon our membership to get more and more into the general work of the trade unions in order to carry on the work of transforming the existing trade unions into organizations of the class struggle and into revolutionary unions. Because of old dual union conceptions, not by any means yet entirely removed; because of strong opposition against those carrying out the T. U. E. L. program by the reactionary union leaders, lending false strength to dual union thought; and because of Party activity in other fields, we are always in danger of losing sight of or neglecting trade union work.

OUR Labor Party campaign is the Party's biggest campaign today. We are "in politics" with a vengeance. Anti-parliamentary notions are obviously removed as a whole from Party thought. One form of Leftism is evidently corrected. It cannot by any means be said that there is too much emphasis on parliamentary activity or general political activity, such as the Labor Party campaign. Yet it may be said that there is neglect on the part of many of our members in trade union fields. If our members are not opposed to trade union activity in theory, and we do not believe they are, they are opposed, some of them, in practice. They either do not attend their union meetings, or, when they do attend, they do nothing there. A Labor Party, unless made and supported by the trade unions, would have no permanent basis. It would be no real Labor Party. It would not be able to withstand the organizational or propagandistic opposition of the capitalist parties.

IN reference to the Labor Party question, Comrade Foster in his Party convention industrial report declared, "Inasmuch as the Labor Party, in so far as it represents the industrial workers, rests directly upon the trade unions and draws its conventions and other legislative bodies out of their ranks, the extent to which we will have power and influence in the growing Labor Party movement will depend entirely upon the strength and grip we have in the trade unions." As in the case of the Labor Party, so in the rest of the trade union work. Hence, in our campaign for a class Farmer-Labor Party, to insure its success, our members must take a far greater part in union work than even before.

THE economic problems, trade union agreements, strengthening of the unions, amalgamation, all these and more, must be taken up actively by the militant unionist and Party members, and explained in the unions. If we would win the leadership of the masses in the trade unions from the fake labor leaders, and those labelling themselves progressives, our members must be in the trade unions fighting on every issue affecting trade union work and development and thus proving our right to leadership of the trade union movement. In Minneapolis, for instance, the trade union movement is progressive or perhaps even radical. The normal leadership of the trade unions is regarded as progressive and radical. It is doubly necessary that there our Party members shall be active in the trade unions to make clear our stand and differences between the Communist and the progressive unionists. Yet the T. U. E. L. has no organization, unless perhaps it be a very small one and in this very city the T. U. E. L. logically should be strong.

OUR members must not only be for T. U. E. L. and Party union policy in words; they must not sit within the trade unions in theory, and outside of them in practice. If trade union activity means anything at all, it means, first, being present at all meetings. It means being alive to all wage and strike issues. It means combatting class collaboration policies being put over very cleverly by shyster labor leaders.

Leadership in the trade unions is not only won by political agitation; it is won by contesting every issue before the unions with the reactionary leadership. Trade union agreements are presented which are wrong and bad for the unionists. We must be in a position to expose the fakers proposing them. In his article on the 5th Congress of the Communist International, Comrade Zinoviev says:

"THE question of the Trade Unions once again occupies an important place in the work of the 5th Congress. The more the influence of the Communists in the Trade Union movement grows, the more furious do the leaders of the Social Democracy become in their effort to hasten the split in the Trade Unions. The provocative tactics of the Social Democratic leaders in certain places are very successful. Among the German Left Wing, there is developing a wrong and extremely dangerous attitude towards the question of the future work in the reactionary Trade Unions. The 5th Congress will have to speak with all its authority and determination against the policy of leaving the Social Democratic unions, and at the time it will have to find a practical solution of how to organize those workers whom the Social Democratic leaders have succeeded in expelling from the Trade Unions."

IF the Communist International speaks so strongly in the case of the German Trade unions, it can speak a thousand times more strongly in the case of America and demonstrate the need of greater trade union activity and against dual union ideas.

"Great masses have turned their backs on the trade unions. In the opinion of the Communist Party of Germany, neither abandoning the trade unions nor hastily founding new unions is the right way to overcome the yellow trade union bureaucracy," says the thesis of the Center Group in the German Party, "or to create a broad revolutionary trade union movement. Such modes of procedure only have the effect of aiding the yellow trade union bureaucracy in their purpose of converting the trade unions into blackleg (scab) organizations in the service of capital. In spite of the treachery of their leaders, the trade unions still contain great masses who would be delivered over defenseless into the hands of the yellow bureaucrats if the Communists left the unions. . . . . . The Communists must organize from below the resistance against the mass expulsion of the whole opposition on the broadest basis in the trade unions."

IT is as if this were being written especially for the American militants and Communists, so aptly does it fit the needs for our Party members and militants continuing and increasing trade union work and carrying on the battle against Gompers, Sigman, Lewis and the rest of the degenerate crew.

RESULTS more than justify the Party and T. U. E. L. industrial policy in the unions. In the recent Pullman strike, great strides were made by the Party because of the intense activity of the Party and the DAILY WORKER in the immediate issues of the strike. The Party established itself among the Pullman workers and strikers. At that, the Pullman Party members were far from taking full advantage of the situation.

THRU the activity of the militants in the trade unions, limited even as it was, there are now in many unions being waged struggles for a better leadership, especially so in the needle trades.

STRUGGLE against the reactionary opposition brings its fruits, however slow. Expulsions, etc., are the proof of the effectiveness of militant and revolutionary work within the unions. The future holds no doubt even worse than individual expulsions—perhaps whole union locals and International expulsions and yet the Party policy is proved thereby still proper. We are winning the masses in the unions.

IN his pamphlet, "Bankruptcy of the American Labor Movement," Comrade Foster declares, "A disastrous effect of the systematic demoralization and drawing away of the militants is that it has thrown the trade unions almost entirely into the control of the organized reactionaires. In all labor movements the unions can prosper and grow only if the progressive elements within them organize closely and wage a vigorous battle all along the line against the conservative bureaucracy. Militants must build machines to fight those of the reactionaries."

OUR Party must enforce the rule of every member joining a union. Union comrades shall be active in the Trade Union Educational League or they cannot be said to be fulfilling the Party requirements. Thru actual and continued systematic work in the trade unions, we can win over the majority of the trade unionists to Communism. Without doing that we cannot succeed to the revolution. The thesis of the 3rd C. I. Congress states:

"THE real test of the strength of every Communist Party is the actual influence it has on the workers in the labor unions. The Party must learn how to influence the unions without attempting to keep them in leading strings. If the Communist fractions perserve, if the activity is devoted and intelligent, the Party will reach a position where its advice will be accepted gladly and readily by the unions."

REACTION in the labor union movement is not something which can be overcome over night and without the most difficult of work and opposition and hard knocks. The whole thing must be considered practically and historically. In his book "Leftism, an Infantile Disease," Comrade Lenin states:

"But the development of the proletariat did not and could not anywhere in the world proceed by any other road than that of trade unions with their mutual activity with the working class Party." Further on, referring to the Left German Communists he says:

"They refuse to work in them! They invent new workingmen's unions! This is an unpardonable blunder, one by which the Communists render the greatest services to the bourgeoisie. . . . . . . Not to work within the reactionary Trade Unions means to leave the insufficiently developed or backward working masses to the influence of reactionary leaders, agents of the bourgeoisie, labor aristocrats—bourgeoisfied workers."

BUILD the Party by working as Communists should in the trade union movement. In the metal trades, needle trades, building trades, everywhere, get into the work of the T. U. E. L. which is the work of the Party. Our Party has got on the right basis by declaring for trade union work and we must not and can not tolerate for a moment any inactivity in industrial and trade union work. Not out of the unions, but into the unions; don't just accept the program of the T. U. E. L., but get into the unions, get into the work.

IT is to be seen that the problems of the Communist in the trade unions are fundamentally the same all over the world. To become the vanguard of the proletariat, the Communists must attain the leadership of the trade union movement. Despite expulsions and splits, whether engineered by Amsterdam, Gompers, Sigman, or anybody else, our task is to fight for unity in the trade union movement. If our comrades have not been as active as they ought to be in the unions in Chicago, New York, Minneapolis and the hundreds of other cities, let them get more firmly into the work. By fighting all along the line on every issue before the union from wage cuts, strikes, amalgamation, Fascism, Ku Klux Klan, shop delegate system, the Labor Party, to Communism, we can win the fight against the yellow union leadership. In Southern Illinois, for instance, we know that we have the problem of the Ku Klux Klan in the unions and the only way to meet it is for our comrades to be inside of the unions fighting the Klan on all issues.

IF the Revolution is to be conquered, we must conquer the organized Labor movement for this will be the basis of the future economic and social order. Comrade Losovsky says in his book, "The International Labor Movement":

"But one thing is clear: the stronger, the more united, the more elastic and aggressive the revolutionary wing of the Labor movement will be, the more objectively we, the Communists, estimate the relation of forces outside and inside the working class—the more correct will be our conduct, the sooner will humanity arrive at the developed form of a Communist Society."

Membership of the Leningrad Unions.

THE increase in the number of employed union members in the city of Leningrad, during 1922-23, is one of the best indicators of the economic regeneration of that city. Owing to the concentration of industry and drastic reduction of the staffs by the Soviet institutions, the trade unions had lived thru some perturbations in 1922. By October 1922 the total number of employed union members decreased by 14.6 per cent as compared with January. 299,531 union members in January and 255,832 in October 1922, due chiefly to the great cut (29.8 per cent) in the membership of the unions catering for the government and public institutions (the unions of Soviet Employes, of Educational Workers, of Art, and of Medical and Public Health Workers). The drop in membership of the industrial unions amounted only to 2.4 per cent.

On October 1st, 1923, the working membership of the Leningrad unions amounted to 315,571. This figure represents an increase of 5.5 per cent against January 1922, the industrial unions having raised their membership by fully 32 per cent.

The growth of the membership of the unions of industrial workers is the more significant since the unions of government and public employes lost 11.2 per cent of their membership during the same period.

Unemployed In Detroit.

DETROIT.—Reduction in employment in Detroit was general during the week ended May 10. The number employed by members of the employers' association dropped for the first time this year below last year's peak of 229,971 which was reached May 26. The reduction during the week amounted to 4,054, bringing the total number laid off since Feb. 2, 1924, to 17,005. It is reported that the Ford Motor Co. may drop one night shift or rearrange working hours to reduce output.

A Little May Day Experience

By ARNE SWABECK.

DOWN in Franklin County the Ku Klux Klan is flourishing like toad stools. The Invisible Empire has full sway. It is a league of petty bourgeois storekeepers, reinforced by the appointed henchmen of the coal operators and the well-known steam roller of the United Mine Workers Union. They are the servile tools of the masters. Of course, any expression of solidarity by the workers is both detested and feared by this gang.

THIS county is bordering on the south to Williamson County, made famous two years ago when the striking coal miners taught a bloody lesson to professional scabbing, and made notorious recently thru the hard boiled exploits of "Grand Kleagle" (or something like that) Glenn Young. It is located right in the heart of the Illinois coal fields. Thousands of miners have been compelled to accept a status of more or less permanent idleness. At present over half of the mines are shut down tight. However, most of these coal miners own a little shack, and the storekeepers, in the hope of some day taking over the deed to such property, are quite willing to grant credit for the most essential necessaries, while meanwhile nothing will be left over for clothing. It seems like the coal barons cherish the hope that some day these valiant miners will be starved into submission.

LAST year the little city of Christopher, in Franklin County, put on a grand May Day Celebration. Under the auspices of the two mine workers' local unions a great parade thru the town was staged, winding up in a mass meeting over which the Mayor presided while Comrades Earl Browder and Mother Bloor spoke. Now matters have changed somewhat. The Ku Kluxers, the local operators, and I suppose, also the lieutenants of Frank Farrington, have had an opportunity to inform the Mayor that he made a mistake. This year nothing like that was going to happen.

ON Thursday morning, May First, after having been pulled thru the muddy road from Benton by a horse team, I arrived in Christopher for the scheduled May Day celebration. A mass meeting had been advertised at the tiny city park. Some of us boarded a Ford and came to the park at the appointed hour. Several hundred coal miners lined the streets. None had been permitted to enter the park. Immediately the Mayor stepped up and told us curtly that "no bolshevik speeches or May Day celebrations would be allowed anywhere in Christopher," and "no arguments about it," echoed the sheriffs and deputy sheriffs while a gang of the Ku Klu Klan sent us some rather hostile looks.

"What were you going to speak about," one little storekeeper asked me. "Well, give me a chance to get it off my chest," I replied, "and you may listen." But, nothing doing. We were pushed back into the Ford and compelled to leave.

WE next made for the miners' hall, followed by part of the audience, determined to use our "constitutional right" to free assemblage. Comrade Barney Mass, organizer of the Young Workers League, opened the meeting with a few appropriate remarks on the "rights and guarantees" set forth in the United States Constitution. However, the sheriffs, deputies and Ku Kluxers thought otherwise. No sooner had Comrade Mass started than in rushed a big organized gang of this tribe, again laying down the law: "No May Day celebration anywhere in Christopher." Arguments availed nothing. Comrade Mass was placed under arrest and the meeting broke up.

THE excitement became transferred to the streets; the crowd increased expecting something to happen. While we paced the walk on the one side, awaiting an opportunity to place bonds for Comrade Mass, the Ku Kluxers, growing in numbers, watched our moves from the other side.

I HAD a meeting scheduled at Ziegler, for that same afternoon, and the comrades reminded me that we had better start to reach it in time, leaving others to take care of Barney Mass. Of course, it could hardly be expected that I should be permitted to get away that easy, at least such were not the intentions of those watching us from the other side. When about ready to go, I was also placed under arrest and taken to a place they called the City Hall. "You dirty little rat, did you write that article?" I heard the captain of the Ku Klux Klan shout to Barney Mass, when I arrived there, as he tried to fit his fist to Barney's jaw. He referred to an article on the American Legion which he discovered in an old copy of the Young Worker, confiscated from our belongings. But no reply was needed, the sheriff intervened, saying that he could not stand for anyone taking the law into their own hands, as we were going to have a fair and "partial" trial (he meant impartial).

THIS particular part of the country has witnessed many bitter fights between the "upholders of the law" and those who want to administer speedy "justice" with the help of a gun or a piece of rope, in line with the traditions of the "good old days." So, while the city authorities, evidently moved by the fact that a couple of dangerous reds had been caught, decided that we were to be transferred to the county seat, Benton, Ill., the Ku Kluxers made ready for a "Necktie Party." They filled two big Buick cars with gun totters and set out at a speed of about 60 miles an hour determined to catch up with us while we were yet on the hard road to Benton and where they would have a better chance to overpower our sheriff guardians.

HEAVILY guarded by a total of eight sheriffs and deputy sheriffs, Comrade Mass and myself traveled along, our party divided into two Fords, with Benton as our goal. Just before the entrance to that city travelers were compelled to switch off from the hard road, which is not quite completed there, and take another road, muddy, about two feet deep. We got stuck and sheriffs had to pull the cars out. Just then the two cars loaded with Ku Kluxers arrived on the scene and got stuck too; they failed to reach us on the hard road. Up came the Klan captain, owner of a little hardware store in Christopher, armed with a gun in one hand and a nice slender rope in the other, ready to administer "justice." Furious that we had slipped away, he commanded, "stick 'em up," and continued, "these are my prisoners, I claim these men and we'll fix 'em." One deputy sheriff, daunted at the gall, stuck 'em up. A minute's hesitation, at which many thoughts ran rapidly thru our minds. Was this a frame-up? Were the sheriffs going to turn us over to that mob? But no—the fellow had overreached himself. The sheriff in command, noting that only one man had come forward while pointing his gun at him, retorted, "these are my prisoners, they are going to have a fair and "partial" trial (again meaning impartial) and if you make another move this gun is going to come off." One sheriff quickly snatched the gun out of the hand of the Klan leader. He turned around and found himself starring into the gaps of seven other guns. Like a whipped cur, the would-be hero waded back thru the mud to his followers, and we felt perfectly at ease in the care of our brave sheriffs, who stepped on the gas and we soon arrived at Benton.

WHEN brought to the States Attorney's office, the frozen attitude of the sheriffs melted away and they discussed the incident with us in a jolly, good humored manner. "One more move by that fellow and I would have let loose," said the head sheriff. "They have tried that stunt on me before but never succeeded. Once in a while, however, they have their necktie parties, that seems to be a sort of costume here."

THE States Attorney delved into our literature supply without finding anything of an incriminating nature. He informed us that we would be held until further notice, rather as a matter of protection against any possible snipers. When we asked what specific charges had been submitted, he replied: "Well, if all those guns you saw had been discharged you wouldn't have asked for any charges. He was quite a jovial fellow, did not know that this state had a criminal syndicalist law, he had heard some rumblings about a Third Party and a Labor Party, and wished them all kinds of success, but was rather keenly interested in local politics and the candidacy of Governor Small. He agreed that the attempts of the Klan to hold up the sheriffs was a "grave offense." A little later, in a phone conversation with the Mayor of Christopher, he informed him that it would be of no use trying to make a case against us unless he, the Mayor, had some specific evidence to the effect that we had been advocating the overthrow of the government by force and violence, and he added, "these fellows seem to be advocating a Labor Party."

At 6:30 the same evening we were released, and made our way to Ziegler, Ill. There we were informed that the Klan were organizing to get some speakers who had arrived in town. Twice they came to the hall where the miners had a dance. But it was late for any May Day celebration.

This incident with the Klan is helping to clear the class lines. It is gradually hammering the mine workers into one solid front against their enemies.

"Go, thought, upon the Golden wing."

Fly, my thought thru the living, flaming atmosphere of this spring morning. Fly to the hearts of my comrades, and voice to them my message which can be felt tho it cannot be said.

What if I have loved Freedom too much? What if the world has revolved four times around the Fatherly Sun since I was put behind prison bars, and deprived of all that makes the travail of life worth living? No reflection of blue sky nor heavenly flame reach the prison built for men, by men. The People are prostrate under the ferocious folly of the Tyrants, Lords of the Land, and the violence of their ruffian soldiers, children of the poor. Is then all in vain? Is all vanity?

No, not all is in vain, not all is vanity. The sacrifice of women is not in vain if they give birth to real men. And the real, the immense generosity of the universe is in us if the love of freedom still warms the human heart.

Spring approaches, Resurrection is at hand! All the living creatures freed from the yoke of the criminal authority, renew themselves, rejoice and sing. This is the force that will free the souls from darkness and cowardly captivity and lead the human family to the shores and summits of infinite freedom.

Resurrection! Vain were the chains and the gallows, vain the pyres, the crosses and the arenas where martyrs have been flung to wild beasts. Vain are the ukases of those who rule the earth. There is a cosmic virtue that transcends the power of all tyrants. For this I bear manly my cross, I know not to have suffered in vain, Oh, my friends.

Fascisti.

FACT number four is the growing militancy and the growing number of the extreme Right which in Germany is called the "Voelkischer" and which we may name with the old familiar Fascisti. The program of the Right is very simple: abolition of the constitution, establishment of a monarchy, dissolution of all Socialist parties, annihilation of the Communists, a ten or twelve hour labor day, organization of a strong national army under a great national dictator, fight to the finish against the French. The Fascisti are militant not only in words but also in action. They make riots. They appear in workers' quarters and attack workers' gatherings. They do scab work in strikes. They organize anti-Jewish pogroms. For a radical or a person with an intellectual or a semitic appearance to come to a meeting of the Voelkische is to risk a couple of ribs. I was told by an eyewitness that at one of their meetings the younger members formed a line near the door asking the comers for donations and thereby singing a song which had the refrain:

"Give, give, give,
That we may kill off
The Messopotamian flatfoots.'

It is quite obvious that a movement of this kind, appealing to the patriotism of the German philistine, appealing to the class interests of the German industrialist, appealing to the group interests of the military caste, appealing to the consciousness of power and supremacy which is inherent in the German bourgeosie, appearing to offer a quick and glorious solution of the present crisis, must attract a great number of disgruntled elements in the unhappy German empire. The weakness of the movement is in its inability to offer any real solution. It is childish to imagine that the Germans could wage a successful war against the French in the near future.

Among these forces the Communist party of Germany must steer its way and lead the masses towards a revolution. When I was in Berlin the Communist national congress was still in progress. It ended on the eve of my departure from Germany. The story of my meetings and conversations with the German comrades must be postponed to a later correspondence.

Walsh Wants Senate Consideration Of Child Labor Bill

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, May 23.—Senator Walsh of Montana, has served notice that he will move within a few days that the Senate take up the child-labor resolution already passed by the House. Unanimous consent that the resolution be considered on May 22 was blocked by Sen. King of Utah.

Sen. Norris served notice, at the same time, that he would take similar action to secure consideration of the McNary-Haugen and Norris-Sinclair farmer relief bills. He said he had waited long enough, and would not hesitate to seek to set aside current business in order that farmer relief might get a hearing before adjournment.

A NEGLECTED FIELD

By MARTIN ABERN

THE Workers Party is today engaged in a campaign to form a class Farmer-Labor Party in the United States, an effort worthy of the full energies of every Party member. In noting the excellent development of our Party, it is well to state that the Workers Party really began to grow and assume influence when it started seriously and earnestly to work within the unions, and when it, at the same time, freed itself from the separatist or dual notions held by some members. It is imperative that we always call upon our membership to get more and more into the general work of the trade unions in order to carry on the work of transforming the existing trade unions into organizations of the class struggle and into revolutionary unions. Because of old dual union conceptions, not by any means yet entirely removed; because of strong opposition against those carrying out the T. U. E. L. program by the reactionary union leaders, lending false strength to dual union thought; and because of Party activity in other fields, we are always in danger of losing sight of or neglecting trade union work.

OUR Labor Party campaign is the Party's biggest campaign today. We are "in politics" with a vengeance. Anti-parliamentary notions are obviously removed as a whole from Party thought. One form of Leftism is evidently corrected. It cannot by any means be said that there is too much emphasis on parliamentary activity or general political activity, such as the Labor Party campaign. Yet it may be said that there is neglect on the part of many of our members in trade union fields. If our members are not opposed to trade union activity in theory, and we do not believe they are, they are opposed, some of them, in practice. They either do not attend their union meetings, or, when they do attend, they do nothing there. A Labor Party, unless made and supported by the trade unions, would have no permanent basis. It would be no real Labor Party. It would not be able to withstand the organizational or propagandistic opposition of the capitalist parties.

IN reference to the Labor Party question, Comrade Foster in his Party convention industrial report declared, "Inasmuch as the Labor Party, in so far as it represents the industrial workers, rests directly upon the trade unions and draws its conventions and other legislative bodies out of their ranks, the extent to which we will have power and influence in the growing Labor Party movement will depend entirely upon the strength and grip we have in the trade unions." As in the case of the Labor Party, so in the rest of the trade union work. Hence, in our campaign for a class Farmer-Labor Party, to insure its success, our members must take a far greater part in union work than even before.

THE economic problems, trade union agreements, strengthening of the unions, amalgamation, all these and more, must be taken up actively by the militant unionist and Party members, and explained in the unions. If we would win the leadership of the masses in the trade unions from the fake labor leaders, and those labelling themselves progressives, our members must be in the trade unions fighting on every issue affecting trade union work and development and thus proving our right to leadership of the trade union movement. In Minneapolis, for instance, the trade union movement is progressive or perhaps even radical. The normal leadership of the trade unions is regarded as progressive and radical. It is doubly necessary that there our Party members shall be active in the trade unions to make clear our stand and differences between the Communist and the progressive unionists. Yet the T. U. E. L. has no organization, unless perhaps it be a very small one and in this very city the T. U. E. L. logically should be strong.

OUR members must not only be for T. U. E. L. and Party union policy in words; they must not sit within the trade unions in theory, and outside of them in practice. If trade union activity means anything at all, it means, first, being present at all meetings. It means being alive to all wage and strike issues. It means combatting class collaboration policies being put over very cleverly by shyster labor leaders.

Leadership in the trade unions is not only won by political agitation; it is won by contesting every issue before the unions with the reactionary leadership. Trade union agreements are presented which are wrong and bad for the unionists. We must be in a position to expose the fakers proposing them. In his article on the 5th Congress of the Communist International, Comrade Zinoviev says:

"THE question of the Trade Unions once again occupies an important place in the work of the 5th Congress. The more the influence of the Communists in the Trade Union movement grows, the more furious do the leaders of the Social Democracy become in their effort to hasten the split in the Trade Unions. The provocative tactics of the Social Democratic leaders in certain places are very successful. Among the German Left Wing, there is developing a wrong and extremely dangerous attitude towards the question of the future work in the reactionary Trade Unions. The 5th Congress will have to speak with all its authority and determination against the policy of leaving the Social Democratic unions, and at the time it will have to find a practical solution of how to organize those workers whom the Social Democratic leaders have succeeded in expelling from the Trade Unions."

IF the Communist International speaks so strongly in the case of the German Trade unions, it can speak a thousand times more strongly in the case of America and demonstrate the need of greater trade union activity and against dual union ideas.

"Great masses have turned their backs on the trade unions. In the opinion of the Communist Party of Germany, neither abandoning the trade unions nor hastily founding new unions is the right way to overcome the yellow trade union bureaucracy," says the thesis of the Center Group in the German Party, "or to create a broad revolutionary trade union movement. Such modes of procedure only have the effect of aiding the yellow trade union bureaucracy in their purpose of converting the trade unions into blackleg (scab) organizations in the service of capital. In spite of the treachery of their leaders, the trade unions still contain great masses who would be delivered over defenseless into the hands of the yellow bureaucrats if the Communists left the unions. . . . . . The Communists must organize from below the resistance against the mass expulsion of the whole opposition on the broadest basis in the trade unions."

IT is as if this were being written especially for the American militants and Communists, so aptly does it fit the needs for our Party members and militants continuing and increasing trade union work and carrying on the battle against Gompers, Sigman, Lewis and the rest of the degenerate crew.

RESULTS more than justify the Party and T. U. E. L. industrial policy in the unions. In the recent Pullman strike, great strides were made by the Party because of the intense activity of the Party and the DAILY WORKER in the immediate issues of the strike. The Party established itself among the Pullman workers and strikers. At that, the Pullman Party members were far from taking full advantage of the situation.

THRU the activity of the militants in the trade unions, limited even as it was, there are now in many unions being waged struggles for a better leadership, especially so in the needle trades.

STRUGGLE against the reactionary opposition brings its fruits, however slow. Expulsions, etc., are the proof of the effectiveness of militant and revolutionary work within the unions. The future holds no doubt even worse than individual expulsions—perhaps whole union locals and International expulsions and yet the Party policy is proved thereby still proper. We are winning the masses in the unions.

IN his pamphlet, "Bankruptcy of the American Labor Movement," Comrade Foster declares, "A disastrous effect of the systematic demoralization and drawing away of the militants is that it has thrown the trade unions almost entirely into the control of the organized reactionaires. In all labor movements the unions can prosper and grow only if the progressive elements within them organize closely and wage a vigorous battle all along the line against the conservative bureaucracy. Militants must build machines to fight those of the reactionaries."

OUR Party must enforce the rule of every member joining a union. Union comrades shall be active in the Trade Union Educational League or they cannot be said to be fulfilling the Party requirements. Thru actual and continued systematic work in the trade unions, we can win over the majority of the trade unionists to Communism. Without doing that we cannot succeed to the revolution. The thesis of the 3rd C. I. Congress states:

"THE real test of the strength of every Communist Party is the actual influence it has on the workers in the labor unions. The Party must learn how to influence the unions without attempting to keep them in leading strings. If the Communist fractions perserve, if the activity is devoted and intelligent, the Party will reach a position where its advice will be accepted gladly and readily by the unions."

REACTION in the labor union movement is not something which can be overcome over night and without the most difficult of work and opposition and hard knocks. The whole thing must be considered practically and historically. In his book "Leftism, an Infantile Disease," Comrade Lenin states:

"But the development of the proletariat did not and could not anywhere in the world proceed by any other road than that of trade unions with their mutual activity with the working class Party." Further on, referring to the Left German Communists he says:

"They refuse to work in them! They invent new workingmen's unions! This is an unpardonable blunder, one by which the Communists render the greatest services to the bourgeoisie. . . . . . . Not to work within the reactionary Trade Unions means to leave the insufficiently developed or backward working masses to the influence of reactionary leaders, agents of the bourgeoisie, labor aristocrats—bourgeoisfied workers."

BUILD the Party by working as Communists should in the trade union movement. In the metal trades, needle trades, building trades, everywhere, get into the work of the T. U. E. L. which is the work of the Party. Our Party has got on the right basis by declaring for trade union work and we must not and can not tolerate for a moment any inactivity in industrial and trade union work. Not out of the unions, but into the unions; don't just accept the program of the T. U. E. L., but get into the unions, get into the work.

IT is to be seen that the problems of the Communist in the trade unions are fundamentally the same all over the world. To become the vanguard of the proletariat, the Communists must attain the leadership of the trade union movement. Despite expulsions and splits, whether engineered by Amsterdam, Gompers, Sigman, or anybody else, our task is to fight for unity in the trade union movement. If our comrades have not been as active as they ought to be in the unions in Chicago, New York, Minneapolis and the hundreds of other cities, let them get more firmly into the work. By fighting all along the line on every issue before the union from wage cuts, strikes, amalgamation, Fascism, Ku Klux Klan, shop delegate system, the Labor Party, to Communism, we can win the fight against the yellow union leadership. In Southern Illinois, for instance, we know that we have the problem of the Ku Klux Klan in the unions and the only way to meet it is for our comrades to be inside of the unions fighting the Klan on all issues.

IF the Revolution is to be conquered, we must conquer the organized Labor movement for this will be the basis of the future economic and social order. Comrade Losovsky says in his book, "The International Labor Movement":

"But one thing is clear: the stronger, the more united, the more elastic and aggressive the revolutionary wing of the Labor movement will be, the more objectively we, the Communists, estimate the relation of forces outside and inside the working class—the more correct will be our conduct, the sooner will humanity arrive at the developed form of a Communist Society."

Membership of the Leningrad Unions.

THE increase in the number of employed union members in the city of Leningrad, during 1922-23, is one of the best indicators of the economic regeneration of that city. Owing to the concentration of industry and drastic reduction of the staffs by the Soviet institutions, the trade unions had lived thru some perturbations in 1922. By October 1922 the total number of employed union members decreased by 14.6 per cent as compared with January. 299,531 union members in January and 255,832 in October 1922, due chiefly to the great cut (29.8 per cent) in the membership of the unions catering for the government and public institutions (the unions of Soviet Employes, of Educational Workers, of Art, and of Medical and Public Health Workers). The drop in membership of the industrial unions amounted only to 2.4 per cent.

On October 1st, 1923, the working membership of the Leningrad unions amounted to 315,571. This figure represents an increase of 5.5 per cent against January 1922, the industrial unions having raised their membership by fully 32 per cent.

The growth of the membership of the unions of industrial workers is the more significant since the unions of government and public employes lost 11.2 per cent of their membership during the same period.

Unemployed In Detroit.

DETROIT.—Reduction in employment in Detroit was general during the week ended May 10. The number employed by members of the employers' association dropped for the first time this year below last year's peak of 229,971 which was reached May 26. The reduction during the week amounted to 4,054, bringing the total number laid off since Feb. 2, 1924, to 17,005. It is reported that the Ford Motor Co. may drop one night shift or rearrange working hours to reduce output.

A Little May Day Experience

By ARNE SWABECK.

DOWN in Franklin County the Ku Klux Klan is flourishing like toad stools. The Invisible Empire has full sway. It is a league of petty bourgeois storekeepers, reinforced by the appointed henchmen of the coal operators and the well-known steam roller of the United Mine Workers Union. They are the servile tools of the masters. Of course, any expression of solidarity by the workers is both detested and feared by this gang.

THIS county is bordering on the south to Williamson County, made famous two years ago when the striking coal miners taught a bloody lesson to professional scabbing, and made notorious recently thru the hard boiled exploits of "Grand Kleagle" (or something like that) Glenn Young. It is located right in the heart of the Illinois coal fields. Thousands of miners have been compelled to accept a status of more or less permanent idleness. At present over half of the mines are shut down tight. However, most of these coal miners own a little shack, and the storekeepers, in the hope of some day taking over the deed to such property, are quite willing to grant credit for the most essential necessaries, while meanwhile nothing will be left over for clothing. It seems like the coal barons cherish the hope that some day these valiant miners will be starved into submission.

LAST year the little city of Christopher, in Franklin County, put on a grand May Day Celebration. Under the auspices of the two mine workers' local unions a great parade thru the town was staged, winding up in a mass meeting over which the Mayor presided while Comrades Earl Browder and Mother Bloor spoke. The People are prostrate under the ferocious folly of the Tyrants, Lords of the Land, and the violence of their ruffian soldiers, children of the poor. Is then all in vain? Is all vanity?

No, not all is in vain, not all is vanity. The sacrifice of women is not in vain if they give birth to real men. And the real, the immense generosity of the universe is in us if the love of freedom still warms the human heart.

Spring approaches, Resurrection is at hand! All the living creatures freed from the yoke of the criminal authority, renew themselves, rejoice and sing. This is the force that will free the souls from darkness and cowardly captivity and lead the human family to the shores and summits of infinite freedom.

Resurrection! Vain were the chains and the gallows, vain the pyres, the crosses and the arenas where martyrs have been flung to wild beasts. Vain are the ukases of those who rule the earth. There is a cosmic virtue that transcends the power of all tyrants. For this I bear manly my cross, I know not to have suffered in vain, Oh, my friends.

Fascisti.

FACT number four is the growing militancy and the growing number of the extreme Right which in Germany is called the "Voelkischer" and which we may name with the old familiar Fascisti. The program of the Right is very simple: abolition of the constitution, establishment of a monarchy, dissolution of all Socialist parties, annihilation of the Communists, a ten or twelve hour labor day, organization of a strong national army under a great national dictator, fight to the finish against the French. The Fascisti are militant not only in words but also in action. They make riots. They appear in workers' quarters and attack workers' gatherings. They do scab work in strikes. They organize anti-Jewish pogroms. For a radical or a person with an intellectual or a semitic appearance to come to a meeting of the Voelkische is to risk a couple of ribs. I was told by an eyewitness that at one of their meetings the younger members formed a line near the door asking the comers for donations and thereby singing a song which had the refrain:

"Give, give, give,
That we may kill off
The Messopotamian flatfoots.'

It is quite obvious that a movement of this kind, appealing to the patriotism of the German philistine, appealing to the class interests of the German industrialist, appealing to the group interests of the military caste, appealing to the consciousness of power and supremacy which is inherent in the German bourgeosie, appearing to offer a quick and glorious solution of the present crisis, must attract a great number of disgruntled elements in the unhappy German empire. The weakness of the movement is in its inability to offer any real solution. It is childish to imagine that the Germans could wage a successful war against the French in the near future.

Among these forces the Communist party of Germany must steer its way and lead the masses towards a revolution. When I was in Berlin the Communist national congress was still in progress. It ended on the eve of my departure from Germany. The story of my meetings and conversations with the German comrades must be postponed to a later correspondence.

Walsh Wants Senate Consideration Of Child Labor Bill

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, May 23.—Senator Walsh of Montana, has served notice that he will move within a few days that the Senate take up the child-labor resolution already passed by the House. Unanimous consent that the resolution be considered on May 22 was blocked by Sen. King of Utah.

Sen. Norris served notice, at the same time, that he would take similar action to secure consideration of the McNary-Haugen and Norris-Sinclair farmer relief bills. He said he had waited long enough, and would not hesitate to seek to set aside current business in order that farmer relief might get a hearing before adjournment.

The Needle Trades Conventions

By Alexander Bittelman

BETWEEN the dates of May 5th and 17th, national conventions have been held by three unions in the needle trades. The International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union (I. L. G. W. U.) held its convention in Boston, May 5th to 17th. It was the seventeenth convention of the union coinciding with the 25th anniversary of that organization. The Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America (A. C. W. of A.) held its sixth biennial convention in Philadelphia, May 12th to 17th. And the International Fur Workers Union (I. F. W. U.) held its sixth convention in Chicago, May 12th to 17th.

Three national conventions of the three most important unions in the garment industry of the United States. An important event in the lives not only of the workers of that industry but of the American labor movement as a whole. For the result of these conventions mark an epoch in the development of the Left Wing in the needle trades section of our labor movement and opens up a new chapter in the struggle for revolutionary unionism in the United States.

From Abstract Propaganda to Leadership in the Struggle.

THE above describes the path of development of the Left Wing in the needle trades unions from its inception up to today. It started out some six or seven years ago in a small, unassuming and modest way. Here and there an individual or two were preaching industrial unionism to little groups of garment workers, creating converts to the idea and instilling a spirit of general restlessness among the more advanced workers of that industry. It was a slow process. It altogether escaped the masses.

Soon afterwards came the Russian Revolution, and immediately the whole thing became prevaded with a new spirit and a stronger vitality. The idea of Industrial Unionism preached to the garment workers so consistently and patiently by the few isolated left wingers—this idea took on new flesh and appeared in a more concrete and practical form. Larger groups of garment workers have begun to lend sympathetic ears to the left wing propaganda, this fact marking the beginning of a real broad movement against the old antiquated form of trade union organization.

But it was only after the formation of the Workers (Communist) Party of America and the Trade Union Educational League that the Left Wing in the needle trades unions began to function—at first, slowly and clumsily—as a living, creating force in the everyday lives of the garment workers. It was no longer abstract propaganda of the abstract ideal of industrial unionism, nor was it mere agitation in favor of the Shop Delegates System. These larger organizational aims of the Left Wing became linked up with the concrete, day-by-day affairs of the union. The very term Left-Winger has assumed a new meaning. A Left Winger is not merely an idealist or a dreamer of rosy dreams, but a practical active trade unionist who knows better than the Right Winger how to run a union in the interests of the rank and file.

During the last two years the Left Wing in the needle trades has definitely established itself as a positive, creative force in the class-struggle and in the unions of the industry. It not only raised the banner of revolutionary unionism and of the Red Labor Union International, but it has also challenged in a practical and immediate fashion the Right Wing leadership of the union. The three needle trades conventions just held offer sufficient proof that the Left Wing is well on its road toward final victory.

The Convention of the I. L. G. W. U.

PRACTICALLY and morally the Left Wing had scored at this convention a hundred per cent victory. It has established itself beyond the shadow of a doubt as the only force capable of saving the union from decay and demoralization. In comparison with this the organizational victories of the Right Wing fade away into total insignificance.

The Right Wing had control of the convention. The "Forward"-Sigman machine was in the majority. But what does this realy mean as far as the state of mind of the rank and file is concerned? Nothing, absolutely nothing. It was a machine-made majority, arrived at by previous expulsion of Left Wingers, their disfranchisement, by removing left wing candidates from the ballots, by unseating left wing delegates from the convention, by packing it with delegates of practically non-existing locals, and by every other dirty trick known in the game of capitalist politics. The majority that ruled the last convention of the I. L. G. W. U. is as much representative of the rank and file of the union as is the American Congress of the oppressed masses of the country.

What had this majority to offer to the union? What plans and proposals did this majority submit to the convention to strengthen the union, to make more effective its control of the industry, to combat unemployment, and in general to make the union a better instrument for the struggle against capitalist exploitation?

The answer is: Nothing. On all these matters the Right Wing, the controlling power of the convention had nothing to say. Why? Because this Right Wing in the needle trades, the same as the whole Gompers outfit, is politically and morally bankrupt. They have sold their souls (some of them their bodies too) to the devil of capitalism and can do nothing else but pretend and deceive. They are compelled to shift and blunder along from one crisis in the industry to another, pretending to lead the struggle of the workers while in reality selling them out to the bosses at every opportune moment.

On the other hand, the Left Wing. Continuing in the line of policy that was pursued by it during the last two years, the Left Wing came to the convention fully prepared to tackle every problem confronting the union and the industry. The Left Wing program to the convention is a deadly challenge for leadership thrown in the teeth of the Forward-Sigman machine. It is also a brilliant indication of the claim of the Left Wing that it and not the reactionaries are capable of building the union and leading the struggle of the workers.

THE Right Wing in the I. G. W. U. is preparing for war. There can be no doubt about that. The only use the Right Wing made of the convention, which cost the rank and file tens of thousands of dollars, was to strengthen its machine and facilitate its fight against the Left Wing. The reactionaries seem to be determined to get rid of the Left Wing even at the price of breaking the union.

From this it follows: First, that the Left Wing in the I. L. G. W. U. must under no circumstances permit itself to be provoked into action which will isolate it from the rank and file by the union. The old tactical maxim still holds good: Stay within the union and fight for leadership in the name and in the interests of the revolutionary class struggle.

And secondly, continue the policy pf active, constructive participation in the everyday life of the organization. By your daily deeds let every member of the organization know that it is you, the Left Wing, and not the Forward-Sigman machine that is willing and capable of building a strong, powerful union to fight the battles of the masses.

And, thirdly, strengthen the Workers Party among the membership of the I. L. G. W. U. It should be clear by this time to every progressive trade unionist that the real backbone and only source of inspiration for every progressive move in the unions is the organized Communist movement of America. Hence, the best immediate answer to the attacks of Gompers and his crew in the I. L. G. W. U. is to double and triple the membership of the Workers Party from among the workers of the needle trades workers.

The Convention of the Furriers.

THE convention of the International Fur Workers' Union was held up Chicago, a city which has only one small local of the union. The center of the industry is in the East. But the Forward-Kaufman machine, whose bloody hand rules the Furriers' union, did not dare to hold the convention among the workers of the industry. It feared "excesses" and perhaps bodily harm. It removed itself, therefore, to Chicago.

In the Furriers' Union, fascism holds full sway. This union is ruled by a gang of renegades and betrayers whose bloody methods of suppression of the Left Wing were not surpassed even by Mussolini. It was by these methods that the machine managed completely to exclude the Left Wing from representation at the convention.

And as to the rank and file, why, Kaufman himself could tell us an interesting story. He could remind us of the famous Olgin-Kaufman incident when the membership of the Furriers' Union in New York City almost to a man stood up in support of Olgin (former editor of the "Freiheit") and the Left Wing and against Kaufman and the "Forward." Kaufman could tell us many more similar truth-revealing stories. But he wouldn't. For, if he did, his whole seemingly, powerful machine would instantly crumble to pieces. The Left Wing in the Furriers' union has the majority of the membersip behind it. It has also developed a strong and capab'e leadership. And were the Left Wing in the other needle trades unions somewhat more advanced, the Furriers' union would have been by this day already in the hands of a revolutionary leadership. The Fascist-rule in the Furriers' union merely indicates the fact that the Left Wing is already on the verge of securing control of the union.

Difficulties and Temptations of the Left Wing.

ONE cannot minimize the difficulties under which the Left Wing in the Furriers' union is working. It is common knowledge that merely to criticize actions of the machine is to take one's life into one's hands. Couple with this the fact that the Left Wing enjoys the confidence of the majority of the union, and you have a first class case for sending the reactionaries to H . . . . and forming a new union.

We are certain, however, that this will not be done. The leadership of the Left Wing in the Furriers' union is brave, courageous and capable. It realizes that it is holding a key-position in the general strategy of the Left Wing. It is merely a case of holding on until the rescuers will reach the field of battle. And, meanwhile, increase your ranks and strengthen the Workers Party.

The Convention of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers.

FOR the first time the Left Wing in the A. C. W. has come to a convention of the union, 89 strong, with a clear-cut, definite program of action. This program was of such a nature as to establish the Left Wing as a definite leading force in the organization which cannot be confused neither with the Right Wing nor with the Center. For there are in the A. C. W. three groupings: Right Wing (Forward machine), Center, (the administration) and the Left Wing. The last convention was dominated by the forces of the Center.

Because of the domination of the Center, generally in the union and also at the convention, the Left Wing in the A. C. W. had a complicated problem to solve. On the one hand, it had to support the Center as against the Right. It goes without saying that whenever it is a case of either Right or Center, the Left Wing will support the Center, at the same time criticizing all its defects and shortcomings.

In the past the Left Wing in the A. C. W. did not always manage, because of the difficult situation, to combine the support of the Center with the always necessary political independence, which at times militated very strongly against the successful establishment of the separate identity of the Left Wing.

We are glad to say, however, that in the months prior to and at the convention itself the Left Wing succeeded in solving its tactical problems beyond all expectations. And if these policies and tactics are consistently carried on in the future, the A. C. W. will very soon become a better, stronger and more revolutionary union than it has ever been before.

ABROAD WITH LENIN

I DECIDED to put the shoes on the first time that night for the opera. On the way there everything was all right. But in the theater I already began to feel that something was wrong. Perhaps this is the reason why I do not remember the impression which the opera made on Lenin and on myself. I remember only that he was in a very good mood, he jested and laughed. On the way back I suffered terribly and Lenin mercilessly mocked me all the way home. However, under his jests there was hidden a sympathy born of experience; he himself, he said, had suffered several hours from those same shoes.

THE first delegates to the coming second convention were arriving in Geneva and ceaseless conferences with them were going on. In this preparatory work Lenin unquestionably was the leader, although it was not always noticeable. Altogether, three workingmen arrived for the convention. Lenin spoke at great length with each of them and won all the three over.

THE most acute question for Lenin was the organization later of a central organ, which was practically to play simultaneously the role of a central committee. Lenin considered it impossible to maintain further the old board of six. Zasulich and Axelrod unfailingly took the side of Plekhanov in every dispute. And then it was at best three against three. Neither the one nor the other side agreed to have one member leave the board.

THERE remained the opposite direction—enlargement. Lenin wanted to introduce me as the seventh member, so as to later form a narrower editorial group consisting of Lenin, Plekhanov and Martov. I was gradually drawn into this scheme by Lenin who, however, did not intimate even by a single word that he proposed to have me as the seventh member of the board, that this proposal was accepted by everybody but Plekhanov, who resolutely opposed the plan.

AT one of the conferences, which shortly afterwards took place with the newly-arrived delegates, Lenin, taking me aside, said: "Let Martov argue against Plekhanov on the subject of the popular organ. Martov oils and you hack away. It is better to let him oil." I clearly remember this expression "to hack and to oil."

AND now I want to set down the reasons why, in my opinion, the decisive change in the political consciousness and self-estimation of Lenin must have taken place in the days of the old "Spark," and why this change became necessary and inevitable.

LENIN arrived abroad from Russia already a mature person of thirty. In Russia, in the student circles, in the first Social-Democratic groups and in exile, he had occupied the first place. He could not help feeling his power, for the reason that everybody whom he had met and worked with recognized it. He left for abroad with a load of theoretical knowledge, with a considerable supply of political experience and permeated thru and thru with that tension toward a goal which formed his spiritual nature.

COLLABORATION with the "group of labor emancipation," and first of all with Plekhanov, the profound and brilliant exponent of Marx, a teacher of several generations—a theorist, statesman, publicist and orator of European connections—awaited Lenin abroad. With Plekhanov were two of the most authoritative names: Zusulich and Axelrod.

DURING the second convention and immediately after it the indignation of Axelrod and the other members of the staff against Lenin's conduct was mixed with perplexity: "How did he dare to do it?" The perplexity increased soon after the convention, following the break between Lenin and Plekhanov, when Lenin nevertheless pursued the fight.

BACK TO WORK

TROTZKY ON A STEAMER

THE attitude of Axelrod and the others might have been expressed in these words: "What bit him? He but recently came abroad as a scholar and behaved like a scholar. Whence this sudden self-confidence? How could he have dared?" These were the judgments of the old leaders.

Then there was another puzzle. He had prepared his soil in Russia. It was not in vain that all communications were in the hands of Madame Lenin. Quietly there was being carried on a process of conversions of the comrades in Russia against the "Group of Labor Emancipation." Zasulich was not less indignant than the others, but she perhaps understood him better. It was not for nothing that she told Lenin, long before the split, that he, as distinguished from Plekhanov, had "a deadly grip."

"Lenin always prepared for tomorrow, strengthening the current day. His creative tho never stopped, his watchfulness never rested. And when he convinced himself that the "Group of Labor Emancipation" was not fit to take in its hands the immediate leadership of a fighting organization of the proletarian vanguard, in preparation for an approaching revolution, he deduced for himself all the practical conclusions.

THE old leaders were in error, and not only the old ones. He was no longer merely a young, promising revolutionary worker, he was a leader, thoroly pervaded with a tension toward a goal, and, I think, completely conscious of himself as the leader, after his collaboration with the older men, with the masters, and his perception that he was stronger and more needed than they.

LENIN arrived abroad not as a Marxian "generally," not for literary revolutionary activity "generally," not merely to continue the activity of the "Group of Labor Emancipation," which had been carried on for twenty years. No, he came as a potential leader—the leader of the revolution which was ripening, which he sensed and felt. He came to create in the briefest possible time the ideological rigging and the organized machine which the revolution demanded.

AND when I spoke of his furious and yet disciplined tension towards a goal, I did not mean that he, Lenin, strove to aid in the triumph of "the final goal." No, this is too generalized and empty. I meant it in a concrete, direct, immediate sense; that he put before himself a practical goal; to hasten the arrival of the revolution and to secure its victory.

Union Centralization In Czecho-Slovakia

By I. GRASHE

FOR nearly two years the problem of organizational centralism, which in Czecho-Slovakia is represented by a departmentalized One Big Union, has held the attention of the entire revolutionary labor movement of that country, causing various misunderstanding and preventing a more rapid development of the movement.

The point is that part of the revolutionary trade unions of Czecho-Slovakia—the greater part—are organized in the One Big Union known as the International General Workers' Union, while the minority, the revolutionary unions of building workers, woodworkers, railwaymen, transport workers, and commercial employes; and the German Section of the revolutinary textile workers is still definitely opposed to this form of organization and strives to retain its autonomy, advocating at the same time the principle of the federative form of organization of the revolutionary unions.

Objective Reasons.

While in other countries the creation of the One Big Union was a result of Anarcho-Syndicalist tendencies, in Czecho-Slovakia this form of organization arose in consequence of a number of special circumstances of an objective character.

Just as in other countries, when the post-war revolutionary wave subsided we saw in Czecho-Slovakia, spontaneous tendencies towards organization among the masses, anxious to resist the concentrated attack of capital. And it must be stated that Czecho-Slovakian capitalism, in spite of its national varieties, prosecuted this campaign against labor in an unusually organized, systematic manner, attacking with all its strength some of the most important sections of the labor front.

Thanks to this tactic, and even more to the scattered state of the Czecho-Slovakian labor movement, capitalism in Czecho-Slovakia has been marching for nearly three years from victory to victory. The disruption of Czecho-Slovakian labor is evident on every side, political, national and religious, and as a result, the 1,600,000 organized workers of Czecho-Slovakia, out of more than three million industrial workers are divided into 465 national unions of which about 340 are affiliated to 11 national federations, while the remaining 125 unions are altogether unaffiliated.

Weakness and Disruption.

This weakness of the Czecho-Slovakian labor movement was aggravated three years ago, during the rise and organization of the revolutionary labor movement, by the disruptive tactics of the Czecho-Slovakian reformists and by the general industrial stagnation which drove more than half a million workers into the camp of the unemployed. On the whole, the situation under which the Czecho-Slovakian revolutionary movement was born in the middle of 1922, was entirely unfavorable to it. The very fact of its birth was a result of the enforcement of the disruptive policy by the reformists, who had good grounds to fear the complete entrenchment of the Communists in their unions and therefore hastened, through splits, to save as far as possible their positions in the labor movement.

They were enabled to do so thanks to both the crisis and unemployment, and to their support by the capitalists, government machine which helped them capture all the material resources of the trade unions. They acted mainly through expulsions of the most militant revolutionary elements, including both individuals and organizations and they did not even hesitate to expel entire national unions when the latter were completely in the hands of the militants.

Mass Expulsion.

They thus expelled more than ten (out of 54) national unions. The largest and best organized of these was

RED PLOT BUNK EXPOSED

HUGHES AIDS GRAFTERS TO ROB RUSSIA

Wants Millions Given To Bakhmetiev Attache

By LUDWELL DENNY
(Federated Press)

NEW YORK, May 23—Several million dollars belonging to the Russian people may fall into the outstretched hands of the white counter-revolutionists, thanks to Secretary of State Hughes and his insistance that the brief Lyov-Kerensky regime which fell in 1917 still represents Russia.

The federal district court in New York on the basis of Hughes' policy has ruled that Serge Ughet, formerly financial attache to Boris Bakhmetiev, counter-revolutionary agent in Washington, is the proper person if any to receive compensation from the Lehigh Valley railroad for munitions lost in a 1916 explosion near New York.

The amount involved is between two and three million dollars or more than a million and a half with accrued interest. Since the court awarded full damages for other property loss in the same explosion, payment for the Russian munitions is assured. Indeed, the railroad does not contest that point.

Soviet Attorney Protests.

Whether Ughet represents Russia is the point raised by the Lehigh Valley. Charles Recht, attorney for the Soviet government in New York, while awaiting instructions from Moscow, is arranging conferences with the railroad attorneys. Delay of the final court decision until after the summer vacation is anticipated.

Not only the money involved in this case but perhaps other cases, over the issue of legal ownership of Russian claims in the United States, hang upon this decision, which will serve as a precedent.

Bought During Czar's Time.

Ughet first sued the road in the name of "The Russian Government," but later changed it to "The State of Russia." The munitions had been purchased by the czar's government, with money belonging to the Russian people. The Lehigh Valley applied to the U. S. supreme court to prohibit the lower court from acting on the ground that Ughet had no legal status and no Russian government was at present entitled to recover this property. The supreme court denied the plea. And the lower court (Jan. 9, 1924) ruled that "Serge Ughet has been recognized as financial attache to the Russian embassy in the United States by the government of the United States continuously from April 7, 1917, until the present date . . ." and that the Soviet regime has not been recognized. "The plaintiff, the State of Russia, still lives and is a continuing entity in the contemplation of the law and is the real party in interest in this action."

Hughes Aids White Forces

When congressional and press criticism forced out Bakhmetiev in the spring of 1922, Hughes arranged for the counter-revolutionists to continue their financial pickings. He wrote Bakhmetiev (April, 1922): "Mr. Ughet's diplomatic status with this government will not be altered by the termination of your duties and he will continue to enjoy the usual diplomatic privileges and immunities." Hughes later confirmed Ughet's status in a letter of February, 1923, to Wilson's secretary of war, Lindley M. Garrison, now Lehigh Valley attorney.

COMMUNISTS FORCE FEEDING OF RUHR WORKERS DURING LOCKOUT

BERLIN, May 25.—Communists today forced merchants of the Ruhr to grant food credits at their stores.

The militants are likewise forcing city councils in the occupied areas to give doles and community dinners and causing outbursts where these are denied them.

Over 1,200,000 workers and families are being fed daily at a cost of some $200,000 a day. The lockout which hitherto has cost $50,000,000 now threatens quickly to bankrupt the Ruhr unless negotiations for a settlement are successful immediately.

CONQUEST OF CANTON PLOTTED BY WESTERN IMPERIALIST POWERS

(By The Federated Press)

HONG-KONG, China., May 25.—Rumors are current here that the powers are planning to seize Canton from China and convert it into an international port like Shanghai. The powers are maintaing a fleet in the Canton river.

It seems Canton is beginning to be a menace to the powers, who do not like the idea of a radical government there.

Canton is a natural port for southern China, and were Sun Yat Sen's scheme for extensive harbor improvements brought to fruition, Hongkong would slide back to a port of secondary importance. This would not suit Great Britain.

The trade of Canton, which in 1900 was only a couple of million dollars, now, under Sun Yat Sen's government is $200,000,000. Canton is a prize worth snatching.

RADICAL ISSUE IN COMING CAMPAIGN SEEN BY BOSSES

Natl. Assn. Moves Like A Crab: Backwards

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK, May 25.—"Whether our nation shall continue its headlong plunge toward death over the precipice of experiments in radicalism, or whether like the Prodical Son, it will return to the house of its fathers," is the issue in the coming political campaign, "the most important that America ever faced." Thus spake President John E. Edgerton to the factory owners' one big union, the National Association of Manufacturers' annual convention in New York. "The only organization qualified to speak for the 290,000 manufacturers in the United States," is its claim.

God and Cal.

But take heart, brethren, he continued, "God's in his heaven and Calvin Coolidge" is in the White House. The difficulty is in keeping them there—at least in keeping Cal in his chair," said Edgerton.

The open shop committee reported that the closed shop is a menace to law and order. Strikes last year cost the public $580,000,000 and in the last eight years $10,303,000,000, the committee said.

No Changes Wanted.

A platform was adopted without discussion opposing high surtaxes, publicity of tax returns, unrestricted immigration, supreme court reform, membership of public employes in labor unions, government ownership, federal reserve bank reform. The child labor amendment to the constitution was attacked by President Edgerton.

"There are more coal mines and coal mining companies today on the verge of bankruptcy than there have been organizations on the verge of bankruptcy in any industry in this country," President John C. Bradley, West Virginia Coal Operators' Association, told the convention. He attacked the present hard coal contract between the union and operators and dubbed Governor Pinchot of Pennsylvania a "political coward" for helping to put it across.

For Public Ownership.

ST. LOUIS, May 25.—The St. Louis Trades and Labor union unanimously favors municipal ownership of street railways. "Municipal ownership has proved successful wherever it has ben fairly and honestly tried," the resolution declares.

MINERS HOLD VICTORY OVER FARRINGTON

Watch Tricks To Regain Appointive Power

By KARL REEVE.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

PEORIA, Illinois, May 25.—The progressive anti-Farrington delegates have tightened their lines in order to keep possession of the gains they made over the Farrington machine last week, by stripping President Frank Farrington of the appointive power, and demanding a special international convention to give Howat a fair trial.

Some of the delegates told the DAILY WORKER that much money has changed hands in the last three days in an effort to get the delegates instructed to take the appointive power away from Farrington to disobey their instructions.

One of the local newspaper men was heard by the DAILY WORKER reporter to offer a bet of ten dollars that when the committee on constitutional resolutions reports, an effort will be made by Farrington to regain the appointive power taken from him last week.

Progressives Watch For Trick.

There are sixty-three resolutions demanding the abolition of the appointive power, many of them indorsed by several local unions. Farrington is expected to try to insert a joker in one of these resolutions, which would enable him to at least retain power to appoint some of the field workers. The progressives are prepared to expose any such move on Farrington's part.

The entire 100,000 mine workers, members of the Illinois miners' union, will soon be given the opportunity to vote in referendum on the union's old age pension, which has created a longer discussion than any other subject before the convention. Today will mark the third day that provision for the care of aged and disabled members of the Illinois miners' union has been the exclusive topic of the convention.

The pensioning of the aged Illinois miners will be one of the most important matters to be decided on at the elections next December, when the referendum will be taken, as there are 4,301 men over 60 years old who have continuous membership in the Illinois miners' union for 15 years or over.

Amend Farrington Report.

After consideration of the report of the committee on old age pensions, appointed by President Frank Farrington two years ago, the delegates either struck out or amended almost everything suggested by the Farrington appointees, altho their investigations have cost the miners' union $30,000.

The section of the committee's report which stated, "The district president shall appoint a sufficient number of clerks to properly handle the clerical work of the pension department," was amended and the secretary-treasurer was empowered to hire the clerks.

$25 To Men Aged 65.

Another section of the committee's report which was stricken out was the section declaring that "The Pension department shall consist of a

GOVERNMENT FUNDS BROKE 1919 STRIKE OF SHIPPING WORKERS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, May 25.— The United States Shipping Board gave the Pacific ship companies $175,000 to break the strike of the seamen and longshoremen in 1919, testified Thomas F. Rice, special assistant attorney general, before the house committee investigating shipping board activities. Rice has spent thirteen months investigating anti-trust cases.

NEW ZEALAND RAILWAY WORKERS IN GENERAL STRIKE FOR WAGE RAISE

(By The Federated Press)

WELLINGTON, New Zealand, May 25.—Railwaymen thruout the dominion of New Zealand are on strike because of the government's refusal to grant an increase in wages in accordance with the rise in the cost of living. The strike is 100 per cent solid.

Owing to the early warnings of the railwaymen's executive, there are plenty of foodstuffs, coal, and household supplies in the towns and at convenient points. The government has organized temporary motor transit and motor services to carry the mails.

FRENCH PLUTE PARTIES BARK WORSE THAN BITE

Poincare Shows Herriot How To Handle Ship

PARIS, May 25.—A new precedent in relations between outgoing and incoming French governments was established today when Edouard Herriot, at Premier Poincare's invitation, visited the Quai D'Orsay, and was informed in detail by the retiring premier regarding the status of this country's foreign relations.

Altho there is certainly no love lost between Poincare and the left wing, the Premier took the usual step of offering to inform his successor personally on such matters as the present stage of negotiations with Great Britain over the experts reports.

The Ere Nouvelle, an organ of the left, says today that Herriot has decided to accept the premiership and to occupy the berth of Foreign Minister as well.

Despite a pledge of financial stability by Eduard Herriot, the French franc was wobbly at the opening, dropping to 18.17, nearly one franc to the dollar lower than yesterday's official closing.

Sham "Anti-Trust" Battle Waging Over New York Central

(Special to The Daily Worker)

CLEVELAND, May 25.—Dissolution of the dominion of the N. Y. Central railway company, over the Big Four, Michigan Central, and all subsidiary lines covering half the United States was asked in a suit filed in Federal court here today.

The suit, which charged the combination, is a violation of the Sherman anti-trust act and also unconstitutional, asked that a receiver be named to take charge of the holdings of the New York Central and the Big Four.

Syndicalism Laws Increase Congestion At San Quentin Prison

SAN QUENTIN, Cal., May 25.—So crowded has San Quentin prison become that beds are being installed in hallways to accommodate newcomers. The prison population is 3,005. The buildings were constructed to hold 2,000 prisoners. About 100 of those in San Quentin are victims of the California criminal syndicalism law, and other industrial prisoners.

War Is Hell For The Workers So To Hell With War

SYDNEY, N. S. W., May 25.—The Australian Labor party intends to make disarmament a paramount policy. Labor's anti-militaristic attitude is the outcome of the Labor congresses held in 1921 and 1922, when it was laid down that Labor's policy must be "not one man, not one gun, not one penny" for foreign wars.

KICKED OUT CARPENTERS WILL APPEAL

Expelled Locals Go To The International

Representatives of the nine suspended local unions of the Carpenters' District Council of Chicago will appeal their case directly to the president of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, it was decided at a meeting of representatives of the suspended locals held yesterday in Machinists Hall, 113 S. Ashland Blvd.

The representatives of the expelled unionists were all of the opinion that their locals had been kicked from the District Council in order to make certain the re-election of Harry Jensen, the present president of the District Council.

Oust 8,000 Members.

The suspensions put more than 8,000 carpenters out of the Chicago Carpenters' District council and leaves the ticket of Harry Jensen almost unopposed. By a co-incidence all the candidates running against the Jensen slate are in the locals suspended.

The locals suspended are Nos. 13, 1, 80, 416, 250, 1128, 2200 and 1693. The excuse used by Jensen in suspending these locals was that they failed to pay their assessment for the District Council building fund. Some time ago the District Council decided to build a building in which the council and some locals could be housed. Every member was to be assessed $10.

A special committee was to be elected to handle the money which would amount to about $250,000.

Committee Never Elected.

The full committee which was to have consisted of one member from each local in the District Council has never met. Some locals refused to turn the money they had collected over to the District Council officials saying they were not bonded for a sufficient amount to cover the building fund.

All of the other locals have collected the assessment from their members and are holding it in their treasury pending proper meeting of the special building committee.

At Friday night's meeting of the District Council when the nominations for the various offices were read off, Jensen announced that most of the men who had been nominated by various locals to run against his administration were disqualified because their locals had been suspended. They were suspended, Jensen said, because they were in arrears in payment of the special building fund assessment.

Jensen's expulsions automatically ruled Frank Stahl of Local 13 out of the race as the progressive opponent of Jensen for the District Council presidency. The only opponent to the Jensen gang for an important office who was not ruled out was Pierce D. Anderson of Local 62, who is a candidate for business agent.

Roofers Win Strike.

ST. LOUIS, May 25.—Union roof workers here have secured an increase of 10 cents an hour. The new rate is 60 cents. The men went on strike March 25. The union has 300 members.

GOOD INVESTMENT FOR WORKERS; PAYS 900 PCT. ONLY, STOCK ALL GONE

NEW YORK, May 25.—Profits of $247.92 on each $100 share of stock are reported by the Duluth Missabe & Northern railway (U. S. Steel) for 1923. The profit of this 336 mile road was $10,195,983 on $4,112,500 outstanding capital stock. During the last five years the profit after all charges, taxes, etc., amounted to $37,329,029—more than 900 per cent return on the investment.

DAUGHERTY AID ADMITS WALL ST. BLAST MIGHT BE WORK OF DETECTIVES

By LAURENCE TODD.
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, May 25.—Confession that the "red plots" and "red peril" propaganda in which Attorneys General J. Mitchell Palmer and Harry M. Daugherty engaged, was all manufactured, and that there was not a bit of evidence against the radicals in the possession of the department of justice, was made before the Wheeler-Brookhart committee by John W. H. Crim of New York, who served Daugherty as his chief assistant until a few months ago. Crim was at Daugherty's right hand when Daugherty was issuing almost daily press proclamations of red activity in the railroad shop strike. Now he dismisses the whole thing as bunk.

NEVER GOT REAL EVIDENCE.

"Back in 1921," Crim testified, "there were some of these fellows interested in 'reds' who talked to me for a week or ten days. It would come up again every once a while, but in all the 'red' agitation they never brought me any evidence."

He explained that the complainants were societies and institutions of various kinds that "would bring me a report of some wild talk of individuals whom they wanted arrested."

Crim said the Bureau of Investigations ought to be abolished, except for a small group of lawyers. If detectives were wanted in any government case, they should come from the force employed by the department involved—the treasury, postoffice, war department or whatever interest was affected by the trial.

His Private Detectives.

Chairman Brookhart asked what Crim knew about the Wall Street "bomb" explosion of 1920—whether it were not an accident. Crim replied that it might have been, as Brookhart intimated, a case of private detectives wanting to scare the bankers into giving them jobs.

"Anyway," he added, "I was never ~~able to locate this "red" army, led by~~ Senator Borah and former Senator France, that was supposed to be marching on to Washington. So far as I know, the department never did anything about it."

He made no mention of the fact that during nearly three years he has refrained from letting the country know that the $2,250,000 a year consumed by Burns' bureau in harrassing labor unions and economic radicals has been obtained and wasted under false pretense of public necessity.

Radicals Were Persecuted.

The reason for Brookhart's questions concerning the Wall Street "bomb" explosion is that one of Burns' men has threatened to tell the story of that conspiracy—involving J. P. Morgan and Burns as chief plotters.

This detective's version of the affair is that Morgan, impatient at the delay of construction of the Stock Exchange addition building, telephoned an order that a large amount of high explosives for blasting for the foundations be brought to the spot, in violation of a city ordinance; that when the wagon was accidentally struck and the explosion took place Morgan and Burns agreed to make it appear as a "red" bomb outrage, in order that Morgan might avoid damage suits involving a million dollars or more; that Burns' men were then employed in large numbers, at high rates of pay, as guards for all the prominent bankers and business magnates in the east; that Burns caused a score of innocent men—radicals in most instances—to be arrested at different times, charged with having had a part in the "bomb plot." All were finally released.

This story has not been told on the stand, and without other proof than the word of a detective will not be presented to the Senate committee. It follows, however, the theory outlined, on evidence available at the time, by The Federated Press and the labor press in general.

"D. of J." Breaks Down.

Crim admitted that there had been a general breakdown of efficiency in the department of justice, and he had quit because he could not get things done; too many interests had to be considered. Smith had helped to pick the staff, and the staff was not of a quality of handling big cases in court. He urged that special assistant attorney generals and special agents be dropped, and the regular staff be given more encouragement in their work.

Senator Jones, of Washington, asked a series of questions tending to lead Crim to give a good character to Daugherty. However, when Jones asked whether Crim did not favor a consolidation of the secret service in government employ under one control, Crim answered emphatically "no."

RICH WOMAN'S REWARD WON'T HELP HONESTY

Worker Finds Pearls, Must Work Still

A $75 reward for the return of a $90,000 pearl necklace and no inquiry into the difficulties of his efforts to make a living made Mrs. R. M. McCormick appear quite ungrateful for honesty, Louis Post, finder of the necklace, claims.

Mrs. McCormick told Post that her husband was president of the Chicago "Tribune" company.

Post is employed on a meagre wage by a printing concern.

Diamond Catches Eye.

Post was attracted by a diamond sparkling in the gutter on Michigan boulevard in front of the University Club one day last week, and stooped to pick up the jewel. He found it was only the clasp of an exquisite pearl necklace with two other diamonds on either side of the clasp. He picked up the strand, put it in his pocket, and went on his way quietly, expecting to watch for ads for the gems.

Mrs. McCormick alleges that she saw him pick up the necklace and walk on. She followed him and asked him if he hadn't just picked up a pearl strand. He admitted he had, but would not accept the identification offered by the highly nervous woman, who would not tell who she was at that time.

The woman proposed that Post give the necklace to a policeman if she identified it before him. Post agreed and Officer Edward Redd was called over but would not accept the excited woman's identification.

The men were then taken by the woman to a French automobile and driven to the insurance firm of Rollins, Burdick, and Hunter, 175 West Jackson boulevard, where Burdick himself greeted Mrs. McCormick anxiously by name and asked what he could do for her.

Both Mrs. McCormick and Burdick promised Post "big rewards" for returning the necklace.

Honesty For Workers Only.

In a few days Post received a notice from the firm of Toplis and Harding, adjusters, at 172 West Jackson blvd., telling him to call for his reward. There he signed for $75 cash, which ended the interest of the other side in the matter.

Post wondered a little about the ungracious treatment he received and told the reporter that he considered $75 for a $90,000 necklace a poor enough stimulant to honesty. Mrs. McCormick would undoubtedly tell him "Honesty is its own reward."

Amazing Story Exposes Final Plot of Burns-Daugherty Regime

LONG HOURS AND POOR PAY IS LOT OF FOOD SLAVES

Work From Sun To Sun And Then Some

Restaurant workers work "from sun to sun,—and then some." Their work is never done. When one rush is over the restaurant worker prepares for the next rush.

His hours are long, his pay poor and the conditions under which he works worse. That is why the workers in the Greek restaurants in Chicago are joining the Amalgamated Food workers Union. They want an organization that can negotiate with the bosses.

The bosses have an organization. They use it to fight the workers with. They went into court 170 strong and asked for an injunction. The injunction was an attempt to frighten the union into abandoning their plans for the benefit of the workers. So far it hasn't worked. The workers see the need of a strong labor union to deal with the union of the Greek bosses and are signing up with the union.

The prayer the Greek restaurant keepers submitted to the judge asking that the injunction be issued alledged that conditions in their places were ideal. The workers were happy and contented, said the bosses. Reading the prayer one would imagine that the workers spent considerable time every day in singing and dancing their thanks to the bosses for the fine conditions under which they work.

Unionists Know Truth

The members of the union however know the truth. They get it not from the bosses' lawyer's "prayers" but from the workers in the restaurants themselves.

Long hours are the first grievence the workers have. The bosses in the Greek restaurants usually work themselves. They work long irregular hours and expect their workers to do the same. The working day is supposed to be twelve hours. It is always longer. The boss asks his slaves to stay to help him over the supper rush if he is a day worker and asks his help over the breakfast rush if he is a night worker.

Greeks Overwork Slaves

The workers in Greek restaurants are always overworked. The bosses try to run with short crews and make up the lack of workers by slave driving methods.

The wages are poor. Always the bosses make a great point of the fact that workers in restaurants can work for less because they get their meals. But the restaurant workers must eat in such a rush that they soon feel the effects.

Working with the smell of food constantly in their noses the workers conceive a disgust at the mere sight or smell of it. All of them are victims of nausea.

Bootleggers Get Injunction

The injunction issued by Hugo Friend reminds Chicago workers of the fact that in New York Judge Delahanty issued an injunction forbidding the New York branch of the Amalgamated Food Workers from interfering with the "lawful business" of the Salvin-Thompson Corporation restaurants and cabarets. Just a few days after the injunction was issued the U. S. District Attorney had all this corporation's places closed for bootlegging.

The workers in Chicago point to the Delehanty injunction as proof of the fact that capitalist judges will issue injunctions as long as they protect property without caring if it belongs to bootleggers or princes.

But, "Injunctions don't cook soup."

Scab Manufacturer Brings Strikebreakers To Boss Convention

Prominent in the 30th anual meeting of the International Association of Garment Manufacturers in Chicago is its president, Mitchell F. Jamar, of the anti-labor clothing firm of F. Patrick & Co., Duluth. Jamar has a new plan for strikebreakers. The Amalgamated Clothing Workers are conducting a longdrawn out strike against him because of his dismissal of union workers without cause. He brings to the convention as his guests a number of employes who betrayed their fellow workers by remainin at work when the strike was called. "There is much that a worker may learn at a convention of this sort", Jamar says. "He will learn things about the intricacy of the business he would never learn in the shop."

One of the intricacies is perhaps the method of fighting against your employes when they go on strike. Jamar in his Duluth trouble tried to incite public opinion against the workers by stating they went on strike following instructions from Moscow. The entire city laughed and the Duluth central labor body indorsed the Amalgamated strike. Almost every striker is American born.

SECRET AGENTS CONFESS PLOT TO STRANGLE INVESTIGATION OF BURNS, DAUGHERTY AND McLEAN

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, May 25.—Amazing enough is the story of the final plot of Daugherty and Burns, frightened by the first sensational testimony secured by Senator Wheeler in his investigation of the corruption in the department of justice, to strike back at the Montana senator and to stop the work of his committee. This story has been told, at last, by two of the same persons who appeared before the oil scandals investigating committee, two months ago, in defense of F. B. McLean, of the Washington Post.

Either they have broken with McLean and Burns and Daugherty, or that precious trio have decided to "tell," now that they have been eliminated by Coolidge. For the fight against each of these investigating committees has been, essentially, a fight to save the political neck of Coolidge.

Spy On Probers.

W. O. Duckstein, confidential "secretary" to McLean, came before the Wheeler-Brookhart committee and testified that Hiram C. Todd, special assistant attorney general and close associate of Daugherty, organized and directed a big espionage campaign against Wheeler, Brookhart and Ashurst, the aggressive members of that committee, and against Gaston B. Means, the former Burns agent who testified to the payment of big sums of graft to Jesse Smith, Daugherty's personal guard.

Duckstein did not appear as a witness until, as he said, Means had secured evidence which drove him to admit what he knew. He said he and his wife, a special agent under Burns and formerly confidential secretary to Burns, had been shown the papers and diaries stolen from Means on March 30, by two of this espionage staff—Petitt and O'Brien. Three suitcases full of papers and books were shown them, in an automobile which was driven to a secluded spot in the park for the purpose. The papers have not been recovered.

Burns Uses Wiretappers.

Duckstein said these spies against the committee included wiretappers in the Senate office building, and even a woman placed in the women's rest room. An agent was sent to Montana to get data against Wheeler, and another went to Iowa to look up Brookhart's past. O'Brien and Petitt showed him a letter, signed by Todd, he said and addressed to Daugherty, outlining the plan to be followed in watching the committee and Means. His wife had a telephone message from the department, notifying her that "two men from New York" were to see her, and these were the men.

Women "Shadowers" Confess.

Mrs. Duckstein confirmed her husband's statements, while Mrs. Alaska P. Davidson, another agent of Burns, admitted that she was one of the "shadow group" who drove an automobile used in the trailing of the committeemen. R. P. Burrus, another detective in the bureau, said there were five men in the squad that followed Means. Every visitor to his home was followed. This espionage ceased on April 1, when it was known that Means had lost the records with which he was to help the committee.

Spies Watch Spy.

The chief of the bureau force for the District of Columbia, one Bohner, testified that on March 6—just after Wheeler began his exposure of Daugherty—Burns ordered him to watch Means "as to his health," because he had secured postponement of his trial on the ground of being under care of a physician. On March 18, Burns ordered him to see Clifford Burns, attached to Todd's office, and he was instructed to have men follow all persons who called on Means. On April 1 he was directed to stop this espionage. No reason was given for either action, except that Todd wanted the thing done. Bohner denied that anyone connected with the bureau had tapped any wires since he had been in the service—two years. He claimed that Mrs. Duckstein violated the rules, if she knew of the theft of Means' documents and failed to report the fact. She had never reported to him anything of the sort, and he was not convinced that the papers were ever stolen.

HOLD VICTORY OVER FARRINGTON

board of five members who shall investigate and pass on all applications for pensions." All mention of the pension board was erased from the report. As submitted to the referendum, the pension will call for monthly payments of $25 per month to miners over 65 years old who have been in the miners' union for twenty years.

Says Industry Should Pay.

Delegate Freeman Thompson, the Springfield sub-district president, declared that the discussion on the committee's report showed how the hands of the miners are tied. "Of course, we must do something for the men when they get old," Thompson told the delegates. "Everyone is for an old age pension. But the distributing of old age pensions by the miners is not a cure. Something else should go along with the giving out of the old age pension. In the future we will have to consider unloading this burden on the coal mining industry where it belongs."

Referendum Forced.

The first amendment to the report of the committee on old age pensions provided for referring the report to a referendum. The committee opposed this, but after delegate Henry Corbishley pointed out that the rank and file, who must pay for the pension, do not, as yet, know anything about it, and that there was no known reason for the committee to be afraid of submitting it to the rank and file, the referendum amendment carried.

A motion by Delegate Gus Fritz that the report be amended to read that the miners over 65 years of age be paid not more than twenty-five dollars a month carried.

As the plan worked out by the convention goes to the rank and file referendum, it is not a complete pension plan, as only those miners above 65 who have been in the Illinois miners' union for twenty years, the last ten years being continuous membership, are entitled to a pension.

O'Connor Got $6,097.

It was disclosed Saturday that Thomas O'Connor of the old age pensions committee, and one of Farrington's appointees, has drawn since the last convention, salary and expenses amounting to $6,097.89. O'Connor, earlier in the convention, asserted that he was one of the men referred to when Farrington accused John Hindmarsh of offering jobs in return for support of his campaign for president when Hindmarsh was running against Farrington. After Hindmarsh gave O'Connor the lie and challenged Farrington for proof of his statements, Farrington could make no reply.

Parry Demands Resolutions.

Delegate Thomas Parry again made a vigorous complaint against the arbitrary manner in which the officials have been withholding the resolutions on constitutional changes from the delegates. "Jack Hunter, of one of the Peoria papers, has had these resolutions in his possession for the past week," said Parry. "There are sixty-three resolutions declaring for the abolition of the appointive power. There is also a resolution on the abolishment of sub-districts, and other important changes in the constitution."

Fishwick Doesn't Know.

Vice-President Harry Fishwick, who was substituting in the chair for Farrington, replied that he did not know what has become of these resolutions. They have been printed in pamphlet form for ten days, and a few of the favored Farrington men have obtained copies of them. But they have not yet been distributed to the delegates.

One of those most keenly interested in the disposition of Farrington's appointive power has been Oscar Ameringer, erstwhile humorist for the Socialists, and now a Farrington appointee and editor of the "Illinois Miner," official organ of District 12.

8-Hour Day in Sweden.

STOCKHOLM, Sweden.—Since the introduction of the eight hour day in Sweden, there has been a great increase in educational work among the workers. A government commission on social questions, which investigated educational work in 95 localities reports that in 1916-17, only 138 classes were held by the people's colleges. By 1920-21 this number had risen to 615, and by 1922-23 to 845.

FOUR LABORERS KILLED WHEN GREEDY BOSS' BUILDING FALLS

NEW YORK, May 25.—Four of the fifteen to twenty men buried in the collapse of a new building at 46th street are dead and at least ten of the others are seriously injured. The men were buried under a mass of rock, masonry and girders when the supports of the foundation of the building under construction gave way. Tons of debris fell upon the workers.

This is another instance of the expensive haste of the building contractors in pushing work faster than the strength of temporary foundation supports permit. The bosses risk the lives of their workmen in their reckless efforts to get up the building as quickly as possible and with as cheap material as they can get away with.

WORKER SLAIN IN REPRISAL FOR YOUNG SHOOTING

Skelcher Assassinated To Revenge Kleagle

HERRIN, Ill., May 25.—Following closely upon the shooting near Belleville of S. Glenn Young, ex-"Czar" of Williamson County, in the war upon the miners' union, and now Kleagle of the Ku Klux Klan in East St. Louis, members of Young's so-called constabulary shot and killed Jack Skelcher, who was riding in a car on the road between Marion and Herrin.

Skelcher, who was riding with Carl and Earl Shelton, was not quick enough in obeying an order to stop, according to the explanation of his slayers. A previous attempt to "get" Skelcher had been made by legal means, when he was indicted after Young's seizure of the Herrin government, which resulted in military rule in Williamson County for several weeks.

Klan Gunman Shot.

BELLEVILLE, Ill., May 25th.—S. Glenn Young, notorious leader in the war against Williamson County workers, fake prohibition officer, and Ku Klux Klan leader, was shot and injured while driving his big sedan car, a reward for his services to reaction, on a road about 30 miles east of here last evening.

Four men are reported to have driven alongside Young's car and opened fire, wounding him in the leg. Mrs. Young, who accompanied him, is reported slightly wounded. The Catholic hospital here, to which they were brought, refused to allow them to be seen, but reported that their condition was not serious.

Chicago Machinists Sign Agreements With Bosses; Get Wage Raise

District No. 8, of the International Association of Machinists of Chicago, has signed an agreement with the employing machinists association which fixes the wages of more than 2,000 machinists at 95 cents an hour. This is 2 cents an hour more than the old wage.

More important than the wage raise is the stipulation in the new agreement that men can be hired only thru the district office of the machinist's union. This does away with the hiring of men at the shop doors or thru employment offices.

Negotiations are still in progress with some bosses who are not members of the association. The new contract runs two years with the question of wages left open for sixty days after its expiration.

The machinists' union is the only metal trades organization that has secured an increase for its members. The machinists are a little behind other metal trades in wages but the new agreement gives them excellent protection as far as hours and working conditions are concerned.

Mine Operator Tries Evicting Union Head

By MARY WATKIVICH.

LOWSVILLE, W. Va., May 25.—Brady is a small mining town, which has not been working since the first of April, when Sam Brady wanted the men to go back to work on the 1917 scale. But so far, they have no scabs. Sam Brady has also given the men notice to move out, altho the notice is not due yet.

When the miners of Brady were not expecting any trouble, Sam Brady demanded them to move on a certain day and anywhere they wanted to go he would move them free. As the people were not ready to move out, he demanded that Mr. J. H. Morten, the secretary of local 4040 of District 17, get out. But as Mr. J. H. Morten had no place to go, he stayed in the house. He locked the door to keep out the gunmen.

When Sam Brady could not talk him out, he got one of the gunmen to break in and the gunman split the door and moved him to the Union Hall. That took them all day.

In the afternoon several of the board members from Fairmont came down and settled the dispute.

Corporation Profits, Tax Secrecy, Are Rescued By Senate

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 25.—Continued secrecy on income tax matters and elimination of the proposed tax on undistributed earnings of corporations, which takes away some of the loot from business organizations possessed of the lion's share of the spoils, are both provided for in the compromise tax reduction bill reported to the Senate. This dilution of the Mellon bill makes it acceptable to the Senate, which today approved it by an overwhelming majority.

That the bill in its present form is supposed to aid the farmers, seems to be a fact totally unappreciated by farmers' representatives in the Senate. Brookhart, Frazier, Norris and Magnus Johnson all voted against the bill

Illinois Coal Miners Want Sub-District Organization

With the Convention of District 12 almost over, one big question remains to be decided. That is the conflict between District Executive Board members and the sub-districts. The machine officials want to abolish the sub-districts, while the demand from the rank and file is, that the sub-districts be preserved and that the District Executive members be brought into organic relation with them.

Bitter experience has proved to the miners that the sub-district organizations are closest to their needs, most responsive to their current grievances, and the most to be relied upon to fight for a remedy. To abolish the sub-districts as some officials want to do, would weaken the entire District organization, and remove one of the best weapons of protection against discrimination.

The militant rank and file delegates are demanding that the sub-districts be retained and strengthened, and that the executive of the District shall work thru the sub-district machinery in adjusting local grievances.

Russia—Germany Film In New York Shows This Week

NEW YORK, May 25.—Those who did not have the privilege of seeing "Russia and Germany"—A Tale of Two Republics" when it was played at the Opera House will have the opportunity to see this wonder film downtown at the Labor Temple, 14th street and Second avenue, on Tuesday, Wednesday or Thursday of this week.

Everywhere this picture has been shown it has been well commented upon. In view of the critical events now transpiring in Germany the scenes of the proletarian demonstrations in that suffering country are particularly interesting.

Russia is shown as a contrast to Germany. Incidents of the reconstruction work going on in the Soviet Republic in schools and industries, and in the development of natural resources are flashed vividly before the audience.

The picture is released by the International Workers Aid, and proceed go to the benefit of the struggling German workers.

Wheeler Cleared By Senate Of William Burns' Oil Charge

WASHINGTON, May 25.—The senate today expressed its belief that Senator Wheeler of Montana, is not guilty of charges of misusing his office, made in an indictment by a Montana grand jury.

Adopting a motion of Senator Borah, Chairman of the Committee, that investigated Wheeler's indictment, the senate accepted the committee's report "wholly exonerating Wheeler as its own view of the case."

Senator Sterling's minority report, leaving the case entirely to the courts, was rejected 58 to 5.

Wheeler was indicted by a grand jury at Great Falls, Montana, for alleged acceptance of a retaining fee from Gordon Campbell, a Montana oil man, to appear for him before the interior department, in connection with issuance of oil land permits.

Wheeler charged that he was "framed" by agents of the Republican national committee.

Western Employers Meet In Conference For Open Shop Drive

PORTLAND, Ore., May 25.— The western openshop conference in Portland determined on renewed activity to enforce the open shop. One plan is not to give work to men from outside communities unless they have permission from open shop employers in the places the men come from. Another is a rule forbidding employment of union men as foremen.

A scheme of "education" and "labor information," with a clearing house at Salt Lake City, was also adopted by the Portland conference.

There was dissatisfaction among the employers with the trade schools opened by anti-union organizations, chiefly by the Industrial Association of San Francisco.

British Flyer Sore At Weather; May Quit Round World Flight

LONDON, May 25.—A Central News dispatch from Rangoon says that Major McClaren, British round-the-world flyer, may abandon his attempt unless favored with a spell of good weather. McClaren still is at Akyab, prevented from flying by terrific rain squalls and strong winds. At present, the dispatch says, there is no sign of the weather improving.

COFFEYVILLE, Kansas, May 25.—Kansas' biggest oil well, with estimated flow of 2,000 barrels a day, was brought in southwest of this city, by "Wildcat Wizard" Lamb. The well is just a short distance from the Oklahoma line and is the sixteenth brought in since January first, by "Lucky" Lamb.

MUSIC.

By ALFRED V. FRANKENSTEIN.

The sixteenth annual North Shore music festival opens tonight at Patten gymnasium of Northwestern university, Evanston. The North Shore festival is the biggest thing of its kind in the west. For it soloists and directors of international fame are engaged, and several choruses and the Chicago Symphony orchestra take part. The festival is a week in duration.

Tonight the oratorio "Elijah" by Mendelssohn, will be given. The soloists are Monica Graham-Stults, soprano; Merle Alcock, contralto; Richard Crooks, tenor, and Louise Graveure, baritone. The chorus will be a thousand in number with the Chicago Symphony orchestra accompanying and Peter C. Lutkin, of the Northwestern faculty, conducting.

The program of Tuesday night is called a "Jenny Lind Concert," with Frieda Hempel impersonating the famous soprano. She will sing an aria from Mozart's "Marriage of Figaro," the "Shadow Song" from Meyerbeer's "Dinorah," and the waltz song, "The Kiss," by Arditi. Deems Taylor, music critic of the New York "World" will direct a performance of his suite, "Thru the Looking Glass," and Mr. Stock will round out the program with symphonic works by Brahms, Strauss, and Liszt. Further programs will be announced later.

Negroes May Turn To Third Party In Protest Over Klan

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK, May 25.—The slump tion in Indiana is such that officials of the National Association for Advancement of Colored People, New York, recognize that negroes are ready for a strong bid from La Follette or a third party. Reports indicate that otherwise they will vote the Democratic ticket, in protest against Ku Klux Klan domination of the Republican party in the persons of candidate for governor, Ed. Jackson, and Senator James E. Watson.

POPE ANXIOUS OVER POLITICAL TREND IN EUROPE

Fears Possible Break With France

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ROME, May 25.—A dark cloud has uddenly appeared on the Vatican orizon. For the first time since the nd of the world war, the tide of political good fortune that steadily flowed in the direction of the Catholic temporal power, has suddenly begun o ebb.

Perhaps the most serious danger confronting the Papacy is the probability of a break with France over the avowed intention of the victorious lefts to withdraw the ambassador from the Vatican. The French left parties are bitterly anti-Catholic. Indeed, their principal claim to radicalism rests mainly on anti-clericalism which in France, means anti-Catholicism.

Poincare is a Catholic and his defeat is as much a setback to the grandiose plans of the Papacy as it was to the heavy industrialists. In fact, the latter two worked hand in hand.

Edouard Herriot is noted for his anti-clericalism. The Vatican hopes that the new French government will be so engrossed in its domestic problems that it will not have time to devote to its anti-Catholic difficulties.

The relations between Checko-Slovakia and the Pope are also strained. There is a movement in that country among the Catholics to permit the marriage of priests.

The German elections brought no solace to His Holiness, neither the extreme nationalists nor the communists being warm friends of the alleged successor of St. Peter.

Renew Industrial Activities In All Branches Of Party

At its last meeting the city Central Committee approved the City Industrial Committee chosen by the industrial organizers of the various branches at their last meeting and composed of Nels Kjar, E. Ettlinger, Walt Carmon, J. Maki, E. Girsch, A. Garrafolo and V. Zokaitis.

Meeting for the first time, the City Industrial Committee in preparation for its activities, decided to issue a letter to all branches (now being mailed) advising of the coming visit of a speaker to outline in a short talk the immediate necessity of stressing industrial work, the greater need of participation in the unions on the part of the party membership and our immediate problems on the industrial field.

Today when political activities of the party are absorbing the bulk of our time and energy the need for greater industrial activities becomes more apparent and all branches are urged to give not only a part of their meeting time to visiting speakers, as well as their co-operation, but also to give a part of each meeting to a discussion of industrial problems.

The success of the left wing groups in the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, Miners' and Peoria conventions, should prove an additional stimulant to further effort.

Every available speaker is being marshalled to cover in the shortest time possible all party branches as the first measure in the plan of work outlined by the City Industrial Committee.

Feeding Of Strikers Is Program Of The Australian Co-ops

SYDNEY, N. S. W., May 25.—Starving out of strikers in Australia will be impossible if the unions accept the proposal of the consumers' cooperative congress held in Sydney April 5. The unions are invited to invest their surplus funds in the New South Wales Wholesale Cooperative society. In addition to the usual interest the entire funds would become available in time of strike in the shape of credits for food and other supplies.

The purpose is to prevent the starving of the workers back to their jobs by the big supply corporations who refuse to supply retailers in the industrial fields where men are on strike. This cuts off the food supply but the huge cooperative wholesale cannot be affected in that way.

LETTER SHOWS FARRINGTON ONCE DAMNED AS SPY SUSPECT THE HENCHMAN HE USES AT PEORIA

Proof that the attacks which Frank Farrington, president of the Illinois miners, is making on the progressives are thoroly insincere is contained in the following letter he dispatched to James Mason, then secretary of Sub-District No. 6, of the Illinois District, Dec. 6, sometime before he split with Alex Howat and took up with John L. Lewis.

The Farrington letter, which the DAILY WORKER is making public, defends Tom Meyerscough of the Pittsburgh district of the slanders Lewis' men were heaping upon him and assails a certain Ed. Wieck as one who worked along the same lines as a labor spy. This Ed. Wieck—a Lewis man—worked hand in hand with Farrington at the Peoria convention in villifying the DAILY WORKER. Farrington said in this letter, that Wieck was unworthy of belief. What must have been his private opinion of Wieck's statement at Peoria that the DAILY WORKER was just a "mass of lies."

The letter follows:

"I am informed that at your last monthly meeting, Ed. Wieck introduced a letter alleged to have been signed by Thomas Myerscough and others in the Pittsburgh District and in which the mine workers in District No. 5 were urged to attend the meeting to be held in Bentley's Theatre, Monongahela City, December 4, 1921, to give consideration to the advisability of accepting the 1917 wage scale.

"Obviously, Wieck's purpose in introducing this letter at your meeting was to make it appear that the President of District No. 12 was consorting with men who favor a wage reduction, also to descredit Myerscough and Guilor who were responsible for giving publicity to certain documents exposing the fraud and corruption that took place in the Pittsburgh District during the last international election.

Calls Him "Blatherskite."

"I am also informed that Wieck stated to the meeting that he was honor bound not to reveal the name of the person from whom he secured said letter. This fact in itself would, among thoughtful men, brand Wieck as being one who is totally unworthy of the confidence of men. It is indeed a strange state of affairs when Wieck assumes to give publicity to the contents of a letter and yet declares that he cannot reveal the source from which he received the letter. Why the necessity for any secrecy about the letter if everything is open and above board? If Wieck is honest and is trying to protect the interests of the mine workers, why should there be any necessity for him concealing the names of those who are helping him in his work of protection? His act in reading the letter referred to and then declaring that he could not reveal the source from which he received it, thoroly indicates that there is something wrong and that Wieck is not acting in good faith and that he is no more than a blatherskite and an imposter who is resorting to deception in order to weedle his way back into the confidence of the mine workers in the Belleville district.

Has the Goods On Wieck.

"Unfortunately for Mr. Wieck's plan to discredit me, but fortunately for me, I happen to have some correspondence concerning the same letter read by Mr. Wieck at your meeting and for the information of your next meeting, I am enclosing herewith copies of correspondence marked Exhibits A, B, C, D, E, and F. Exhibit A is a copy of a letter which accompanied Indof's letter and which is a copy of the same letter that was read to your meeting by Wieck. Exhibit C is a copy of a letter I wrote to Frank J. Indof. Exhibit D is a copy of a letter I wrote to Myerscough. Exhibit E is a copy of Myerscough's answer to my letter and Exhibit F is a copy of a letter addressed to the President and Secretary of District No. 5, by Myerscough. All of these communications are self explanatory and go to prove that Wieck is a party to a conspiracy to discredit the enemies of John L. Lewis.

A Lewis Conspiracy.

"If you will examine the enclosed exhibits, you will notice that all of them are dated previous to the time Wieck brought the matter to the attention of your monthly meeting and they should prove to the satisfaction of any thoughtful man that Wieck's great revelation of the plan that is afoot to force a reduction in the miners' wages, is no more than a deliberate conspiracy to discredit those who are opposed to John L. Lewis and Wieck should be made to tell the delegates who attend your next meeting, the source from which he received the letter, which he read to your last meeting and refusing to do so, he should be banished from your meeting as one who is unworthy of the confidence of honest men.

Acts Like A Spy.

"I cannot prove that Wieck is a spy in the employ of some one of the many labor destroying agencies, but experience enables me to know that his activities in our union are exactly along the same lines that those who have investigated such matters, tell us labor destroying agencies employ when they plant spies in the ranks of labor to destroy the organized labor movement, but I personally know that Wieck is nothing more than a dishonest, lying, hypocritical blatherskite who does not hesitate to resort to falsehood and deception in order to try to work himself into the confidence of his fellow men.

Praise For Myerscough.

"Myerscough's letter to me clearly shows that instead of encouraging a reduction in wages, he was really acting to prevent the success of those who favor accepting a wage reduction and his letter to the President and Secretary of District No. 5, telling them of the meeting that was to be held on December 4th and notifying them, yes, urging them, to be present at this meeting proves that he was acting in good faith and that he was not consorting or conniving with anyone to bring about a reduction in wages.

"I most respectfully and earnestly request that you bring this subject matter to the attention of your next monthly meeting."

Convention Delegates to Report at T. U. E. L. Meeting

Delegates from the I. L. G. W. U., the Amalgamated, Peoria and the Miners' conventions will report to the T. U. E. L. membership at what will surely prove to be one of the most important meetings of the year, on Wednesday, May 28, at Northwest Hall, corner North and Western Aves.

The splendid fight put up in each convention by the left wing groups, the victories gained and the lessons of each should prove a most interesting story to every worker in Chicago.

The reports of Jack Johnstone, Arne Swabeck, J. L. Davidson and others will be supplemented by that of Earl Browder, whose monthly summary of the most important developments in the world of labor have become a feature of the league meetings.

LABOR MEN OF ALL SHADES INTERESTED IN DAILY WORKER

By A. JAKIRA

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ALLENTOWN, Pa., May 23.—Fifty copies of the DAILY WORKER were sold every day during the conventions of the State Farmer Labor Party and State Federation of Labor held here. The DAILY WORKER was read with great interest by both the followers and opponents of the Communist movement.' During one of the sessions the DAILY WORKER received a boost when one of delegates displayed a copy, to show that the communist movement is growing all over the world.

While the Convention of the State Federation of Labor was marking time listening to various speakers one of the delegates, a colored young worker, was soliciting the rest of the delegates for subs. Thirteen new subscription to the DAILY WORKER was the result of his efforts.

It is a good example to be followed by all militants who have an opportunity to be delegates to labor conventions.

Shoeworkers Elect Kruse Delegate To St. Paul Convention

At a record attendance joint meeting of Locals 22 and 23 of the Amalgamated Shoe Workers, the St. Paul Farmer-Labor Party convention was endorsed. William F. Kruse was elected delegate and J. Louis Engdahl, editor of the DAILY WORKER, alternate. Twenty-five dollars were voted toward expenses and another joint meeting will be called after the convention to hear a report on the proceedings. The combined locals have a membership of over 500 and are known thruout the industry as leaders in every fight for better conditions.

The action followed a lecture delivered by the delegate-elect on conditions in the labor movement the world over. During the slump in the industry interest in union matters fell off and the Joint Council, managing the affairs of both locals, tried many ways of getting the crowd to meetings. Even prize-fights failed to draw. The decision to go back to lectures, so successful several years ago, brought a response that was a surprise to the officers themselves.

The Chairman, Bert Thompson, called upon members who were known to be active in Republican and Democratic politics, to state their views before the vote was taken, but all expressed themselves in favor of independent working class action, and the motion, made by Business Agent, Richie O'Brien, carried unanimously.

STINK OF GRAFT OVER MEMORIAL PERVADES COURT

Centralia Paytriots' Scandal Reopened

(Special to The Daily Worker)

CENTRALIA, Wash., May 25.—Some time after the attack on the Wobblies at Centralia by American Legion thugs, leading paytriots of Centralia proposed to erect a memorial to the thugs killed in the battles. For two or three years nothing has been heard of the matter, until now, when it has appeared before the courts.

Manager Wants His.

The Memorial Association raised about $16,500 from local paytriots, cockroach capitalists, legionaires, etc. Over $10,000 of this went to pay the salaries of the paytriots who organized the graft. The rest has disappeared. This is brot out in a state supreme court decision concerning the matter; dealing with a suit by Frank Jackson of Seattle, hired to manage the drive at $500 a week. He wants the rest of his share of the graft and the Centralia Memorial Association, Inc., can't pay it. It has spent every cent it raised on salaries.

Want to Forget Walla Walla.

The present attitude of business men of Centralia concerning the battle, the trial, the murder of Everest, the memorial, etc., is "shut up, we don't want anything about the matter even mentioned." They regard it as they might a cat dead for a week or so, the stench is too rank for them. They want to forget the eight men buried alive in Walla Walla penitentiary.

Attempts have been made to have Elmer Emith disbarred from the practice of law, nominally on technical grounds, but in reality because he might get elected district attorney of Lewis county on the Farmer-Labor Ticket this fall, as he nearly did in 1920. Should that happen he will try to bring the parties guilty of the murder of Everest and of starting the riot to trial.

Washington County Pushes Farm-Labor Work For June 17

SEDRO-WOOLLEY, Wash., May 25.—The Farmer-Labor party held its second preparatory meeting in Bingham Park, Sedro-Woolley, with a basket picnic and Mrs. Jessica B. Kastner of Tacoma, Farmer-Labor representative in the last legislature, made an address. She brought home the need of a third party and set forth the five cardinal points insisted on by the Farmer-Laborites: Public ownership of railroads; control of money and credit by the government; curbing the growing usurped power of the courts; restoration of civil liberties; and conservation of the remaining hydro-electric power for the people. The speaker was cheered repeatedly, many signed party cards. A final rally will be held at Bay View June 8, when Joel Shoemaker will make an address and a delegate will be elected to St. Paul for June 17.

Coolidge Thinks Up His Excuses For Insulting Japanese

WASHINGTON, May 25.—President Coolidge, instead of signing the immigration bill without comment, will take some final step designed to mitigate the affront to Japan in the proposed law.

Meanwhile, the two countries are facing a situation where neither may be represented by an ambassador in the other's capital. The resignation of Cyrus Woods, American ambassador to Tokio, having been accepted by the president, no official and diplomatic explanations seem able to down the impression that one of the causes of Woods' retirement is the proposed exclusion law.

Ambassador Hanihara, the Japanese envoy here, reported to be on the verge of resignation, said he could not comment on the subject.

The name of John Hays Hammond, noted mining engineer, and chairman of the coal commission during its brief life, is being mentioned as Woods' successor. Hammond at one time was offered the Tokio post by President Harding.

Gaily Attired Ethiopian Prince Feted For Favors

(Crusader Service)

PARIS, May 25.— The grandest collection of male clothing that ever struck gay Paris is being worn by Ras Taffari, Prince Regtn of Ethiopia and his suite, who are the royal guests of Republican France.

The Ras and his suite all wore dark green cloaks lined with pink, forming a vivid background for their tight, vividly embroidered vestsk, enormous white silk trousers, pale green socks and patent leather shoes. This represents the traditional court dress of Ethiopia.

In the Foreign Office the Ras Taffari occupies the suite recently vacated by the King and Queen of Roumania. Every attention is being shown them by the French Government, which has an eye on concessions in Ethiopia.

COAL MINERS' WAGES DISGRACE CIVILIZATION CLAIMS BRITISH MINERS' FEDERATION PRESIDENT

By LELAND OLDS

(Federated Press)

Wages paid thousands of British coal miners are characterized as a disgrace to a civilized community before the government's court of inquiry following the miners' rejection of the final offer of the mineowners. According to Herbert Smith, president British Miners' Federation, if the industry cannot pay a living wage under private ownership the alternative is nationalization of the entire industry. The British miners ballot May 29 on new proposals.

Thousands of adult workers, Smith said, receive only 5 to 6 shillings (less than $1,50) per day. At the same time profits on coal run as high as 2 shillings 6 pence (62 cents) a ton while the average profit for the entire country during 1923 was nearly 2 shillings (50 cents) a ton after paying millions to the owners of the land in royalties.

The miners contend that any national agreement which gives the owners such profits while the wages of miners are equivalent to less than the inadequate prewar earnings is unjust. Coal which miners produce for 87 cents a ton including all labor to the mouth of the mine is selling to consumers in London at $14.40 a ton.

British Barely Hold Market.

Competition of American coal is depressing the wages of British miners, according to David R. Llewellyn, a Welsh operator. He says the British are hanging on to their European market by a margin which has narrowed down to a few pennies. Any increase in cost of production will result in loss of foreign markets and resulting loss of working time in collieries on forsign trade. He points out that the American industry has reached a point where export is a necessity to the life of many companies.

The sharp international competition for coal markets is shown in a U. S. department of commerce statement on coal exports. American coal has lost the price advantage in the Italian market by further reduction in British prices. Between February and March U. S. monthly exports to Italy declined from 58,407 to 43,702 tons while British exports to Italy rose from 470,942 to 591,971 tons.

Americans Underbid British.

On the other hand American coal is underselling British in Brazil. American exports to Brazil increased from 38,568 tons in February to 43,113 in March while British exports declined from 80,023 to 73,009 tons. March total coal exports from the United States compared with February decreased while total exports from Great Britain increased slightly. The fact that nearly 25 per cent of the British production must find an export market to keep the mines busy shows the importance to that country of its ability to undersell the United States.

Meanwhile German reparations coal is steadily weakening the European market for the product of other nations. German shipments to Belgium are forcing unemployment on Belgium miners.

The question raised by this situation is, how long will the miners of these countries be content with a situation in which gain of employment to one group will mean loss of employment to another and in which the gains will be secured by sacrifice to living standards? The situation is like that of unorganized workers who undersell each other in an overstocked labor market. That always results in the slow depression of wages to the lowest level of subsistence.

Victim Of Boss' Law Violation Is Given Life Sentence

DEER LODGE, Mont., May 25.—Thomas J. Riley, victim of a law-breaking millionaire mine owner whom he shot and killed, is seeking aid in getting out of prison after 25 years behind the bars. Riley lost a leg and sustained other severe injuries when 20 tons of giant powder exploded at Butte in 1895, killing 59 persons and injuring 300 more.

Unable to get a job after his injury or to obtain damages, Riley killed P. A. Largey, the banking and mining magnate who had stored the powder in violation of both city and state law. Instead of being tried in Butte, Riley was spirited to Helena on the false pretence by the prosecution that Riley had himself asked a change of venue. A life sentence was imposed.

Riley now looks for purchasers to buy the bead necklaces he makes in prison. From the proceeds he hopes to hire an attorney to secure a pardon. The Largey interests had denied him work and had thrown him into jail when he sought to collect damages. His record had been without stain before his injuries and wrongs drove him to seek revenge on the lawless millionaire responsible for his condition. Riley's address is Box 7, Deer Lodge, Mont.

Public Soaked $100,000 For Coal Operators' Noise

CINCINNATI, May 25.—Coal consumers have had a bill of more than $100,000 for publicity work on behalf of the operators slipped over on them, according to a report to the annual convention of the National Coal Association. This represents the cost of a speakers bureau, a motion picture program and hundreds of thousands of pamphlets to swing public opinion in favor of the profiteering mine owners.

Publicity for the bituminous operators' case before the United States coal commission cost $80,000. Among other things 429,190 copies of 61 pamphlets and briefs were distributed.

Following the coal commission the work was continued on a more modest basis with $32,561 spent during the last fiscal year and 98,500 pamphlets distributed. The report adds that access to the daily press of the country spread the propaganda far mode widely than these figures would indicate.

Key Pounders Meet; 'Point With Pride' To Their National Bank

CLEVELAND.— Almost 700 delegates and officials of the Order of Railroad Telegraphers are attending the triennial convention at Cleveland. President E. J. Manion pointed with pride to the Telegraphers' Co-operative National bank which has over $5,000,000 in resources tho it is less than a year old. The bank is at St. Louis where the order headquarters are. Divisions from all parts of the United States, Canada and the Canal Zone are represented at the convention, which is the first since the Savannah convention of 1921 but the 24th since the founding of the union 38 years ago.

'GIVE LABOR GOV'T GATE' CRIES STAN BALDWIN IN HOUSE OF COMMONS

LONDON, May 22.—"We have got to break this government," ex-Premier Stanley Baldwin declared in a speech here today in which he severely criticised the Labor government's policies.

He admitted it was difficult to see how the breaking of the MacDonald regime was to be accomplished, but expressed belief that the Labor government's early popularity was waning.

"The government's position is impossible," Baldwin, one of the leaders of the Conservative party and premier of the Tory goverenment that met defeat in the last elections, declared. "The Laborites have made promises to their constituents which they cannot fulfill."

"No one knows," he continued, "whether the present government will come to an end thru defeat in the House of Commons or will fall asunder internally."

He advised his audience to "get ready," saying, "you may be certain the end will come."

Logging Company Must Fork Up For Burning Workers

VANCOUVER, B. C., May 25.—Negligence on the part of the Comox Logging and Railway Co., which caused a fire at Merville last summer in which 51 settlers were burned out has resulted in three verdicts against the company as a starter:

Francis Fenwick, who was forced to remain in a river all night while the fire was raging about him and had his hair burned off him as well as receiving severe burns upon his body was awarded $10,000 damages. John Clifford was given $25,000 for the loss of his son and Andrew Barr was paid $500 for injuries. The company had ignored all fire regulations and had subjected the Merville settlers to fire hazards for several years.

"LAFOLLETTE AND WHEELER" TALK GAINING GROUND

Oil Prober May Refuse To Play Second Fiddle

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, May 25.—"Robert M. La Follette (Republican) for president and Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat) for vice-president."

That bi-partisan ticket may enter the field in the political sweepstakes if a movement started by a group of insurgent old party politicians, is successful in persuading the Montana senator to take second place on the ticket, it was said by friends close to both senators.

The movement has been balked temporarily by the refusal of the Montana senator to accept the place picked for him, but those behind it have not abandoned hope of a final decision by Wheeler to run.

Senator La Follette has regained his health but if for any reason he decides not to take the race at the head of a ticket, Wheeler has been offered the place. La Follette is now in Atlantic City resting, after recuperating from a severe attack of pneumonia.

Wheeler's Watchful Waiting.

Wheeler today refused to discuss his possible candidacy in any way but close friends confirmed the offer made to the Montana senator. Explaining Wheeler's reticence, it was said that he was awaiting the outcome of the Democratic convention before making a final decision.

Should the Democrats nominate a man whom Wheeler regarded as a reactionary, his friends said that he would seriously consider running.

Senator Shipstead, Farmer-Laborite of Minnesota, has been mentioned as a vice-presidential running mate in the event La Follette finds himself unable to enter the presidential contest and Wheeler heads the ticket.

Negro Elevator Operator Saves Frenzied Whites

(Crusader Service)

NEW YORK, May 25.— Fourteen passengers, all of them white, were saved from death yesterday morning by the heroism of Ernest Noble, colored operator in the Loft building, No. 43 West 4th Street, who, when his car tore loose from its cables at the tenth floor, kept his head, labored frantically at a broken brake mechanism until he brought it into operation only a few feet from the bottom of the shaft.

Eight girls, a boy and four men, in addition to Noble, many of them crying hysterically and some suffering from strained backs and other injuries, were taken to St. Vincent's Hospital in a moving van commandeered by the police.

Noble accomplished his heroic act of life saving in the face of the hysteria of the girls and the frantic efforts of the men, completely demoralized by fear to get at the elevator lever. Noble shook them off and kept cooly at his brakes, spinning the lever, working another back and forth, while the velocity of the hurtling car swiftly increased. Just as it was passing the third floor, however, there was a grinding and screeching as the brakes at last took hold, ripping teeth from rails at the sides of the shaft.

Almost on a level with the first floor the steel car, twisted from the strain, was stopped.

COMMUNISTS IN SO. AFRICA WORK AMONG NATIVES

Young Negro Workers Organize Groups

(Grusader Service)

RIGA, May 25.— Agents of the imperialist Powers are greatly alarmed at the spread of revolutionary propaganda among the colored races of the world, and regard the Communist International with bitter hatred and resentment for its work in this field.

Africans Come to Moscow.

Especially are they stirred up with the news that a conference has been held in Moscow at which many Africans and Asiatics were present, and at which the question of African activity was intensively discussed. Reports say that emphasis was laid on the importance of work among "Colored youths being exploited in Africa's mines and on plantations," etc., among whom agents of the Third International have distributed literature and placards in the native dialects, calling for a united front of all Labor, black and white.

Y. W. L. In South Africa

The International recently established two new organizations of young workers in South Africa. The South African Communists are in bad favor with the white bourgeoisie because of their friendly attitude towards the native workers.

The Communist International is also declared to have "considerably extended its activity in the U. S., especially, among youths employed in mines and factories." Communist manifestos stress the fact that the white workers can only conquer political power with the friendly co-operation of the colored workers of the home lands and colonies, and call upon the white workers to support the liberation struggles of the colonials.

Young Workers Need League In Hartford Town

By JOHN A. KLUCKEN.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

HARTFORD, Conn., May 25.—On Thursday eve., May 29, at 8 p. m., Sam Darcy will speak at the Labor Educational Alliance, 287 Windsor avenue. Subject: "The Labor Movement in America," under the auspices of the Young People's Educational League.

This group of young comrades have been active in the past, having arranged a few entertainments and educational classes, but being a local organization, work cannot be effective.

It would be advisable for these young comrades to organize a Young Workers' League and become a part of the international working' class youth.

CHICAGO, May 25.—Helmouth Mischel sought to open a school of fencing here, but because he never explained what he did with money collected for German war orphans, police have him studying the peculiar brand of fencing that encircles the private rooms in the city hall.

The Workers Party in Action

Party Activities Of Local Chicago

The C. C. C. Meeting

The C. C. C. meeting of May 20 was a most interesting one. Reports indicated excellent progress in the work of Chicago. The Peoria Convention on May 18 at which the Labor Party of Illinois was formed was reported upon by Comrade Arne Swabeck and Martin Abern who were delegates from the Workers Party to the Convention. They informed the C. C. C. that the Convention was an excellent one, much work accomplished and that a real basis had been laid for a strong class Labor Party in Illinois. The 95 delegates present at the Convention, a large number of them from Miners locals, were wide awake to the situation and participated in a lively way thruout the proceedings.

The work of the Workers Party of Chicago in the Pullman strike was reported by comrade Manuel Gomez. A strong English branch was formed from among the best elements of the striking Pullman carmen. The Workers Party has established itself strongly among the Pullman workers.

A Speakers' Class will be started soon in an attempt to develop more Party speakers. Branches are requested to send in at once recomendations from their branch to the City Secretary for the speakers class which will be acted upon by the City Executive Committee. The Class will probably consist of 15 members.

A class on Trade Union Conduct and Tactics will be conducted by Arne Swabeck. This will start at the earliest moment and is open to all interested. This class will be a way for union Party members to learn better how to carry on their industrial work and activity in the unions. The date of the opening class will be shortly announced.

The question of unemployment was brought up thru resolutions by Simon Felshin and J. Jesmer, calling for the immediate formation of Unemployed Councils. The matter was referred to the City Executive Committee and will be taken up at the next C. C. C. meeting, June 3rd.

Needle Trades members of the Young Workers League have been drawn more closely into the work of the T. U. E. L. Needle Trades Section when comrade Phil. Aronberg talked to a very well attended Y. W. L. meeting. A number of comrades were gotten to join the Cap Makers Union.

The work of Local Chicago is going on in very good fashion. Branches are being visited regularly by speakers discussing various problems of the Party, such as the Labor Party campaign, industrial work, etc. New members are being brought into the Party in greater number than ever, with the further encouraging sign that English-speaking members are coming in in greater proportion.

Max Salzman reported on the work of the Junior Section of the Young Workers League and asked for greater co-operation from Party members.

The Open Letter to the Socialist Party issued by the C. E. C. of the Party on June 17th Convention will be distributed to Socialist Party members.

Machinists are instructed to be on the job, in attendance at all union meetings, especially during the next couple of months during which time there will be election of delegates to the Machinists Convention in Detroit on Sept. 10. Metal Trades Party members are requested to get in touch with comrade Paul Simonson at 1113 West Washington Blvd.

MARTIN ABERN, Secretary.

Do Your Part

TO ALL MEMBERS OF THE WORKERS PARTY:

During the past two months our Party has been trying to raise a Farmer-Labor Campaign Fund of $15,000. This was to be used for organizational work in support of the June 17th Convention.

The Central Executive Committee of the Party is of the opinion that the campaign in which our Party is involved at the present time represents a great and unusual opportunity to drive forward the workers and farmers of this country to class action against the capitalist government and the capitalist system. It is the view of the Central Executive Committee that if there can be built in the United States a mass movement of a million organized workers and farmers who sever their connections with the capitalist parties and enter into the political arena for a class political struggle in support of their own political demands, that the American labor movement will have made the greatest stride forward in the history of this country. If our Party deserves the name of the Advance Guard, of the leader of the revolutionary struggle against capitalism, then it cannot remain indifferent to such a movement. It must not only play a part, but it must play a leading part to achieve the end of mobilizing the workers and farmers for class political action.

FARMER-LABOR ASSESSMENT

- - 50c - -

For two years our Party has persistently carried on a campaign for the formation of the class Farmer-Labor Party. A great mass movement such as the class Farmer-Labor Party must be, does not come into existence as a result of one bold stroke or one organizing effort. Rather, the movement grows in rising waves, each one of which reaches a little farther. Between these rising waves there are recessions. Such has been our experience in this campaign. Last year we made a great step forward in the formation of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party by the delegates who came to the Chicago convention. This year the wave promises to rise even higher and enable us to reach the end at which we are aiming, the formation of a mass class Farmer-Labor Party.

The Central Executive committee of the Paty felt that it was only necessary to call this situation to the attention of the membership in order to receive the fullest and most enthusiastic support for the campaign and that a voluntarily paid Farmer-Labor campaign fund would easily bring the necessary funds for this fight.

This view, however, has been disappointed. The response by the Party membership which was asked to raise $10 in each Party branch has been poor. As a result, the Party finds itself unable to mobilize all of its potential strength in the great struggle which we are fighting.

The Central Executive Committee of the Party feels that it would be derelict in its duty did it not act to meet this situation. It has, therefore, resorted to the authority given it by the Party and levied an assessment of 50 cents per member for the purpose of raising the Farmer-Labor Party fund.

Special stamps have been sent to each Party branch either thru their Federation or thru the District Office in the case of branches not affiliated with any Federation. Party branches must immediately collect from each member 50 cents for the Farmer-Labor Party assessment stamps. The assessment must be completed by June 10th. No member of the Party will be a member in good standing unless he pays this assessment.

Is a payment of 50 cents per member too much to expect from the members of a Communist Party toward a struggle of such great importance as that which we are fighting? We would indeed have a poor Party if that were true. It could hardly be called a Party with a Communist spirit.

The collection of the Farmer-Labor assessment will be carried out thru the official Party machinery. The purpose of making this statement to the membership is to secure the assistance of every member of the Party in making the collection quickly. Every branch has been instructed to elect a special committee which must visit every member at once and collect this assessment. The members of the Party can make it easy for the branch officials to collect this fund if they will go to their next branch meeting and call for the Farmer-Labor Party assessment stamp.

The Central Executive Committee has done its duty in an effort to meet the Party need in levying this assessment. It is now for every member of the Party to do his part quickly.

Go to your branch meeting, get your Farmer-Labor assessment stamps into your dues book. Help win the struggle for a mass class Farmer-Labor Party.

Fraternally yours,
C. E. RUTHENBERG, Executive Secretary.

NEW YORK CITY Party Activities

CONEY ISLAND CAMPAIGN.

Jeannette Pearl, well-known lecturer, will speak Tuesday evening, May 27 at 3109 Surf Avenue before the newly organized branch of the Coney Island English branch of the Workers Party.

Much propaganda work can be done in this section of Brooklyn. Its close proximity to New York makes it a famous summer resort for hundreds of thousands of workers.

All comrades and sympathizers living in Coney Island are urged to attend this meeting.

New York Reaffirms Support Of Party On Farm-Labor Work

NEW YORK, May 25.—At a well-attended membership meeting held at Stuyvesant Casino, James P. Cannon reported on the Labor Party policy. After his report, and the asking and answering of questions, a lively discussion took place, many comrades participating. During the discussion a resolution was introduced, supporting the C. E. C. in its policy, but criticising it on some details. Amendment was offered to the following effect: "That we reaffirm our approval of the Party's Labor Party policy, and pledge our whole hearted support for its furtherance." The vote, which was called for at about 12:30 was 181 for the above quoted amendment, and 21 for the resolution of criticism.

There is no doubt but that the report at this meeting, and the discussion that followed did much to clarify the Party's Labor Party policy in the minds of the membership and it is certain that as a result of the meeting, the campaign to apply the party's Labor Party policy will be greatly intensified by the membership of New York.

Proletarian Pupils Favored As Soviets Restrict Schools

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LENINGRAD, May 25.—Proletarian students at the colleges, technical schools, and universities will be given first preference under the new decree issued by Rykov, Commissar of Education. Financial considerations make a reduction in the number of students at the institutions of higher learning an absolute necessity and it has been decided by the Soviet authorities that the bourgeois students must be restricted before all others.

la: as- .o a. vas s. or shret

It is expected that 40,000 students will be prevented from registering, 8,000 in Leningrad alone, under the new decree. During the last year 34,265 students were sent to the highest schools from 72 special workers' faculties.

School equipment and books are scarce and classes are held under difficulties of unsufficient space and too few teachers.

House Of Masses Benefit Program May 31, Detroit

DETROIT, Mich., May 23.—On Saturday evening, May 31st, friends of the House of the Masses will stage a "get-together" in the form of a Concert and Dance, which will be held in the auditorium of the House.

An exceptional program of vocal and instrumental music has been arranged, and the committee in charge has let to be known aht they have a dramatic offering that they guarantee will please.

This affair is being given for the benefit of the House of Masses. There are some pressing financial obligations to meet June 1st, which a successful entertainment will assist materially in liquidating.

Frieds of the House are urged to give their full support to the May 31st Affair. Tickets are 50 cents.

OTTAWA, Can., May 25.—The employes of the Ottawa street railway have signed a two-year agreement with the company with wages at 49c to 50c an hour.

SOVIETS ALLOW TREASON CASES TO BE APPEALED

French Prompted Polish Spying In Ukraine

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, April 12 (By Mail).—The execution of the verdict passed in the Kiev espionage trial of the so-called "Regional Centre of Action," has been suspended and the case has been referred to the supreme court. The charge brought against the accused was that of high treason and espionage for the Polish general staff.

Allowed Amnesty Plea.

The accused Czebankoff, Yakovleff, Edinovsky, Vinogradova have been sentenced to capital punishment; Onistshenko, Smirnoff and Tolpyga, to ten years in prison; Anna Kapucinskaya. to seven years; Leonida and Vengeroff, to five years conditionally (the sentence has been suspended); Maria Kapusinskaya, to one year, also conditionally; Yaslovsky has been acquitted. The accused were allowed to appeal within forty-eight hours and ask the Central Ukrainian Central Committee for amnesty.

Interest Thruout Union.

The public thruout the Union of Soviet Republics have been closely following the case, which has amply evidenced that the activities of the Kiev "Centre" were directed from Paris, the espionage being organized in the interest of the Polish general staff. The spying activities of some of the professors now sentenced have aroused the greatest indignation among the intellectual circles.

Under such conditions, Mr. Poincare's telegram, addressed to— Mr. Chicherin and received before the sentence was passed, was most unexpected. The French Premier, on behalf of the French professors and in the name of civilization and humanity, requested that the Kiev professors—members of the said spying organization—be not liable to be punished.

Paincare Telegraphs.

Writing in the Izvestia, Mr. Stekloff calls this telegram of Mr. Poincare's an act of direct interference with Russian internal affairs, and a tactless step, revealing in its full light how greatly the French premier is concerned with supporting the White Guardist elements and espionage in the Soviet Republics. The author derides the "humanitarian" feelings iof the late interventionists.

It should further be noted that not a single one of the professors, members of the "Centre," has been sentenced to capital punishment—not even Smirnoff, who confessed that he transmitted espionage reports.

Condemned Deplore French Action.

A group of the condemned issued the following statement in the local press: "Whereas, we have learned of the telegram sent by Mr. Poincare, requesting that the sentence passed on some of us be commuted and whereas, we are depressed by the heavy sentence—we consider as quite inadmissible any interference of a foreign government with the internal affairs of the Republic. Looking upon our trial as a matter purely of the internal life of the Soviet Union—we are waiting for the supreme organs of our Republic to ultimately decide on our fate." This statement is signed by twelve of the accused.

One of the principal figures in the trial, the accused Onistehenke adds to the foregoing resolution: "The heavy sentence passed on us shall weigh on the conscience of those who drew us into a political work, directed against the workers and peasants and made us bad criminals in the eyes of all the toilers and in our own conscience."

Seattle Wants More Speakers Like Trachtenberg

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SEATTLE, Wash., May 23.—Altho the Labor Temple was closed to him because he was speaking under the auspices of the Workers' Party, Alexander Trachtenberg held a well attended meeting here and helped dispel many doubts as to the present policy of his party.

The audience asked questions eagerly and seemed especially interested in determining what position to take in the coming elections on the matter of the Farmer-Labor Party.

Members of the Industrial Workers of the World, who attended, seemed well impressed by Trachtenberg's method and fairness in answering queries. Many of the members of the audience, of various views, expressed the hope that more clear speakers like Trachtenberg would be sent to the Pacific coast for organization work.

Monday, May 26—Minneapolis, First Unitarian Church, 8th St. and La Salle Ave., at 8 p. m.

Tuesday, May 27—Superior, Workers' Hall, cor. Tower Ave. and North 5th St., at 8. p. m.

Previous meetings have been enthusiastically attended. Trachtenberg's discussion of the present German situation has never failed to hold his audiences.

SCIENTIFIC STUDY OF STRIKE STRATEGY PLEA TO WORKERS BY RED INTERNATIONAL OF UNIO

The difficult question of Strike Strategy has never been gi adequate scientific study by the workers of the world, accord to the Executive Bureau of the Red International of Labor Unio Thru the guidance of this organization an effort is now be made to collect the data upon this subject from year to year. T
Red International plans to develop a science of strike tact which will rival the highly complex science of military tact which the militarists and capitalists have evolved for their protection, maintenance, and aggression.

Because of the great interest of the workers of this country and others where the DAILY WORKER is read. we are reprinting here the stimulating letter sent out by the Red International of Labor Unions to all its affiliated organizations on the subject of Strike Strategy.

To All the Organizations Affiliated to the R. I. L. U.

Moscow, April 1, 1924.

The Agenda of the Third Congress of the R. I. L. U. contains the question of strike strategy.

This question was considered by a Committee during the Third Session of the Central Council last summer. However, owing to the intricacy of the question and the insufficient clarity of the materials, the question of strike strategy was not decided at the Third Session. The Plenum of the Central Council of the R. I. L. U. decided to defer the final settlement of this question till the next congress of the R. I. L. U. This was agreed upon in order that sufficient material might be collected, thoroly discussed and systematized, and that during the coming R. I. L. U. Congress a decision covering the entire scope of the question might be adopted.

The Central Council made this quite clear in its circular letter of July 19th, addressed to all the R. I. L. U. organizations. In conformity with the above, the Executive Bureau of the R. I. L. U. has decided at its meeting of March 25. 1924, to ask you to speed up the compilation of the material which has been gathered by you since the Second Congress.

In addition to the questions already mentioned in the above circular letter, it is desired that the material also deal with the following aspects of the strike movement:

(1) The total number of strikes divided by industries and trades.

(2) The total number of strikers; their percentage to the total number of organized workers in the industry.

(3) Industrial conflicts (whether resulting in strikes or not).

(4) The number of work days lost (during each strike separately).

(5) Organized strike breaking (Technical Aid, etc.)

(6) The intensity of the strikes (were there any conflicts with the strike-breakers. did they take the form of workers' self-defense and of armed collision).

(7) The general causes of the strikes (economic: wage cuts, lengthening of working hours, violation or change of collective agreements, etc., etc.)

(8) Spontaneous strikes: their causes, provocation on the part of the employers, sabotage of the reformist leaders, etc.; initiative and leadership of spontaneous strikes; by the Reformists, Anarchists, or Communists; the part played by the spontaneous strikes in the general labor struggle: the break-up of the united front, strengthening of the revolutionary elements, etc.

(9) Were there any solidarity strikes; their volume, scale (national and international), character of the demands: economic or political, for instance. "Hands off Soviet Russia," against the occupation of the Ruhr, etc.

(10) Did the strikes cause lockouts or vice versa.

(11) The organization and development of union strikes (the industry, where and how many), was the strike restricted to its own trade or did it spread to other trades as well (territorial localisation of strikes); describe the forms of material aid given to the strikers.

(1) The role and influence of the Factory and Shop Committees in the outbreak, development and completion of strike struggles.

(1) The role of the unemployed in the strike movement (positive, support of the strikes; negative, strike breaking).

(14) The general results of the strike (what real economic advantages or losses were caused by them to the particular industry or country; did they strengthen or weaken the idea of the United Front both on a national or international scale).

Besides these questions, please give particular attention to the character, methods and forms of the strikes of seamen (in foreign ports) and of agricultural workers.

The above questions on the strike struggle are not intended in any way to limit the scope of your report, but merely to give a general outline of the materials desired.

We expect that upon the receipt of the above mentioned circular letter, you will take steps to gather and elaborate your materials in a most exhaustive manner.

Hoping that you will send in all your materials without delay,

Executive Bureau of the R. I. L. U.,
(Signed) A. Kalnin.

FITZPATRICK'S FARMER-LABOR PARTY QUITS

June 17 Convention Only Hope Of Workers

In a signed statement, issued at its offices in the Loop district, the John Fitzpatrick "Farmer-Labor Party of the United States" has officially declared it will hold no national convention this year and will take no organized part in the coming national campaign.

This statement, signed by John Fitzpatrick, member of the national committee; David A. McVey, secretary of the Illinois branch and chairman of the Cook county branch; Charles F. Wills, vice chairman, Illinois branch and Robert M. Buck, editor of the party's official organ, follows the Chicago Federation of Labor's decision to return to the nonpartisan political policy of the Gompers' officialdom.

June 17th the Only Hope.

The great June 17th convention at St. Paul, where thousands of delegates will gather from farmers' organizations labor political organizations and local unions, now remains the only possible machinery for organizing a political battle front of the expropriated workers and farmers of America.

Lack of response from the labor movement is given by the Fitzpatrick organization as the reason for calling off their own national convention, which had been scheduled for July 4th at Cleveland. Lack of funds followed the lack of response.

June 17th Attacked.

The usual attack on the Communists was utilized in order to assail the June 17th convention of workers and farmers. The abdicating political group complains that the Communists want to "kidnap" the St. Paul movement. A general attack on the June 17th movement is made. The C. P. P. A. is also attacked. It offers no "hope" they say.

Their own complete bankruptcy is shown in the apology that they are giving up their convention in order not to further "confuse the situation."

LaFollette, Perhaps.

They intend, they say, to "endorse the independent political policy of LaFollette, should that candidacy develop."

The "Farmer-Labor Party of the United States" will not disband, the statement adds, but will bide its time for the future.

A similar statement is made by the Cook county branch of the organization.

Want More Machines And Less Workers Says Senator Neely

WASHINGTON, May 25.—Sen. Neely of West Virginia, Democrat, in a speech on the immigration bill, declared that, "At the present moment there are at least 1,500,000 workingmen and women in the United States who are idle, for the sole reason that there is no demand for their labor. There have been times in the past 3 years when 5,000,000 of our toilers could find no employment, and when 2,000,000 of them in desperation were forced to beg or starve.

"In our steel industry, for example, with all mills modernized and running at capacity, it would be possible for two-thirds of those now on the payroll to produce all of the iron and steel for which we have a market. The iron and steel workers are under the constant apprehension of unemployment for approximately five months per year.

"The bituminous coal industry affords a most impressive example of overmanning and overdevelopment. As now equipped, our mines, working full time, can produce a billion tons of coal a year, while there is a demand for only half a billion tons. Four hundred thousand men, out of the 650,000 now engaged in mining coal, could produce all that it is possible for us to consume.

"The boot and shoe industry capable of producing 758,000,000 pairs of boots and shoes a year, has a demand for only 325,000,000 pair; it is more than 50 per cent overmanned. The brick making industry has 29,000 workers, when our annual demand could be supplied by 5,000 men, using modern machinery.

KANSAS FARMERS AND WORKERS FORM INDEPENDENT PARTY; SEND TEN DELEGATES TO ST. PAUL MEET

By JOSEPH MANLEY.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

SALINA, Kansas, May 25.—This state in years gone by occupied a foremost position, in all popular political movements such as the old Peoples Party of the eighties and again the Union Labor Party of the nineties, and still later the Socialist Party of Kansas with the old "Appeal to Reason" published at Girard.

All these movements did their part to put Kansas, and especially its "grass roots" farmers, in the forefront of every major political revolt. The old Townley Nonpartisan League made great headway in Kansas, but of late, with its nonpartisan program, it has fallen by the wayside as a serious political factor.

It was the remains of this latter organization which met at Salina on May 17 and decided to abandon its non-partisan policy, and organize in place of the loosely formed league, a closely knit Farmer-Labor Party, in line with its sister grain growing states of the west and northwest.

150 Delegates.

The gathering at Salina convened with 150 delegates, the vast majority of whom were farmers. Some of them were among the worst exploited in the world, typical American peasants, renters from the 50,000-acre tract owned by Fred Scully, whose treatment of his tenants compares very well with that of former Czarist Russian landowners is.

The convention was given a distinct "labor" complexion by the fact that its permanent chairman was W. E. Freeman, president of the State Federation of Labor. At the outset I was called upon to address the convention. I advised the necessity of organizing a class Farmer-Labor Party, upon the basis of a genuine workers' and farmers' platform, and in support of the St. Paul convention. Judging from the favorable reception accorded my remarks on the banking crisis and the wheat situation, both of which indicate a basic breakdown of the capitalist sytsem of agriculture, this gathering of Kansas farmers are not so apt to be satisfied with the various nostrums being peddled by certain "progressive" republicans and Democrats, among the least of whom is the doughty Senator Capper.

Have to Use "Liberal" Name.

In the discussion on a possible name for the proposed party, it developed that Farmer-Labor would not get on the ballot, because of a state law limiting the use of words in the official name to two. Consequently the organization was formed as the Liberal Party of Kansas; this name is more or less tentative pending the name to be adopted by the St. Paul convention. The platform adopted was of a distinctly class character, in contradistinction to a LaFollette platform proposed by one of the delegates. The platform adopted contained among other measures a demand for a referendum on war; reduction of armaments; the abolition of the industrial court law; protection for farm tenants.

A state executive committee was elected, composed of sixteen members, men and women, two from each congressional district. Gus Eckwald was selected as chairman; Ulysses Regnier, vice-chairman, and M. L. Amos, secretary-treasurer. Fred J. Fraley, editor of the Kansas Leader, (the official organ of the Nonpartisian League, publlshed at Salina), was nominated for U. S. Senator, to run against Capper. Ten husky farmers were elected as delegates to the St. Paul convention on June 17.

Brotherhoods Endorse New Party.

On the following day at Wichita the trade unionists both of the A. F. of L. and the Brotherhoods who are organized in a state non-partisian political organization, met and after much discussion and debate endorsed by a majority vote the party organized at Salina.

The railroad Brotherhood made a bitter attack upon the newly organized party taking upon itself the right to endorse a presidential candidate. They upheld the possible selection of McAdoo and protested that it would be making a split and incurring a serious mistake to nominate a presidential candidate before seeing what the Republican or Democratic conventions would do.

A vote was taken on this proposition and it virtually amounted to a vote for or against McAdoo, it stood 12 for and 16 against. William Mahoney of St. Paul and J. E. Snyder from Oklahoma, were present at this conference and it was largely due to the arguments of Mahoney based upon his experience in Minnesota that a favorable result was brought on, tho the conference insisted on retaining its state nonpartisan policy for the coming campaign.

Old Timers.

From this it can be plainly seen that it is the farmers especially who in the light of their former experiences first as "Pops," then as Socialists and again as "Leaguers," who, in the West and Northwest are the backbone of the present trend toward a real party of workers and farmers.

There are few among the farming masses and especially the renters who exercise the bureaucratic control of Gompers and Stone, and as a consequence they are more susceptible to line up on basic economic grievances, which in a measure affect them more directly, and more flagrantly, than the aristocratic Brotherhoods.

The party born at Salina will have a large delegation at the St. Paul convention, it will enter the coming campaign in Kansas and attract large masses of both farmers and workers to its standard. Tho its name may belie its persent nature the following two resolutions which were unanimously adopted will indicate its sentiment both on matters industrial and international:

Resolution on Alexander Howat.

"WHEREAS, Kansas has been the scene of an attempt to force upon the farmers and workers, not alone of this state but of the nation, a system of modern economic slavery embodied in the so-called Kansas Industrial Court Law; and inasmuch as the United States Supreme Court has recently declared this Industrial Court Law to be unconstitutional; therefore, be it

"RESOLVED, that we greet with pleasure and recognition the services of Alexander Howat and his brave associates in the United Mine Workers of America, who fought against it—even to the length of submitting to confinement in jail—so that the rights of the workers and farmers of Kansas and the nation would not be restricted by the Industrial Court Law, which is now a dead issue."

Resolution on Soviet Russia.

"WHEREAS, the persent policy on the part of the Federal Government in refusing recognition to Soviet Russia, is not in accord with the true principles of human solidarity; and in addition is causing great injury to the interests of the farmers and workers of America; and the cotton growers of Texas could not complete large contracts for the exportation of cotton to Russia, because of the existing restrictions and difficulties; and

"WHEREAS, immense shipments of Russian wheat and other grains are now on the world market and are being purchased by fifteen European countries, thereby entering into competition with the wheat growers of America and the world; and because the present non-recognition of Soviet Rusia aggravates this planless, unsystematic competition; therefore, be it

"RESOLVED, that we, Kansas farmers and workers in convention assembled, call upon the so-called farm bloc in Congress to make renewed efforts to the end that the Government of Soviet Russia be recognized at the earliest possible moment, and that suitable negotiations by the respective governments be entered into that will accrue to the interests of the producing farmers and workers of both countries."

Union President Bounced When He Bags The Boodle

(Special to The Daily Worker)

CINCINNATI, Ohio, May 25.—The former president of the Theatrical Stage Employes and Moving Picture Machine Operators' alliance got the gate from the members of his union, when he failed to explain satisfactorily the absence of $79,000 of the organization's funds. Charles C. Shay is the lucky man.

He said that he had spent the money to prevent attacks on the organization, but insisted that the nature of the expenditures could not be made known.

Only 2 out of 700 votes in the convention of the organization were given for Shay, altho he has held his presidency for ten years.

Swiss Insure School Children.

BERNE, May 25.— Switzerland is the first country to inaugurate government insurance of school children. In some cantons it is voluntary and in some compulsory. The canton Vaud was first to insure its children. The government of the Canton Basel recently insured against sickness and accident all pupils in the public schools, from the kindergartens to the higher grades of the industrial schools. Other cantons and municipalities have taken steps in the same direction. In this, as in the other forms of government insurance, the premiums are paid jointly by the children and the government. It is reported that a bill for insurance of school children against sickness has been introduced in the Portuguese Senate.

Labor Wins Another Seat.

LIVERPOOL, May 25.—Joseph Gibbons, a labor candidate, has just won a seat in Parliament by 2000 votes over his Conservative opponent in the West Toxteth bye-election.

FOOD WORKERS SEND MORE MEN TO GREEK FRONT

Injunction Spurs Union To Hot Campaign

Two new organizers are at work this morning trying to organize the workers in the Greek restaurants of Chicago. They are James Manus and Nick Athens, both Greeks. They were elected organizers at the mass meeting of the members of Amalgamated Food Workers.

Wednesday Night.

This is the reply of the Food Workers to the injunction obtained by 170 Greek restaurant owners. At the meeting, the Greek workers were most insistent on carrying on the organization plans and meeting the injunction of the bosses with effective work.

First Greek Food Drive.

Until the organization campaign of the Food Workers was undertaken, it had been thought impossible to organize Greek workers. The cooks and waiters' union never attempted the job. So now, when an industrial union comes along and does the work they are met with the charge they are not a bona fide labor union.

At the membership mass meeting which elected the two new organizers more than $80 was contributed by the members to carry on the organization campaign.

Injunctions Can't Cook.

"Injunctions are not making dresses for the garment bosses," Manus said yesterday. "The restaurant bosses will learn that they can't cook meals, altho they might be used to wash wishes with."

Oregon F.-L. P. Petition.

PORTLAND, Oregon.—Ten thousand signatures are being collected for a petition to place the Oregon Farmer-Labor party on the official ballot for the general election in November. Party headquarters are at 515 Worcester bldg., Portland.

TIME FOR U. S. WORKERS TO BEGIN TIGHTENING BELT AND DRAWING ON PATRIOTISM FOR NOURISHMENT

By LELAND OLDS
(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

Recurrent unemployment will be the lot of workers in this country unless large foreign markets can be captured. But the ability of the United States to expand its markets sufficiently is doubtful in the face of competition from other nations in the same fix. By treating capital too generously and the workers too stingily the country has decreased its capacity to produce without a corresponding increase in the demand for production.

These are conclusions drawn from E. D. King's analysis of the present business depression published in The Magazine of Wall Street. He pictures the situation in the major industries briefly as follows:

Steel Declines.

Steel—output tending to decrease, demand less than a year ago, will continue to decline gradually. (Since this was written the drop in production from over 90 per cent to less than 65 per cent of capacity is regarded as the most rapid and spectacular in the history of the industry). Coal—output about 50 per cent of a year ago, demand poor but likely to increase. Other mining—output unchanged, demand slightly less, continued decline in demand expected. Rubber goods—slight decrease in production, demand considerably less, will decline further. Shoes—output unchanged, hand to mouth buying, should increase. Automobile—sharp decrease in output, slow buying, future demand below 1923. Textiles—sharp decrease in output, demand less, future unsatisfactory. Construction materials—output same, decrease in demand, likely to decrease further. Electrical equipment—output same, output same, demand slightly less, will decrease. Furniture — output same, demand same, will decrease. Typewriters—output slightly less, demand same, will decrease.

High Productivity.

Petroleum and sugar are the only products for which King predicts an increase in demand before autumn. Analyzing the way in which abnormal conditions blinded us to the situation, he says in part:

"The fact is that for several years we have been going along smoothly filling out the post-war demand for sundries such as new housing, railroad equipment, automobiles and many other essentials and non-essentials. That demand has to an appreciable extent been satisfied.

"The first point to consider is our manufacturing equipment. In this score there can be no question that in many lines we have too much capacity of production for the demand at hand. Ever since the war it has been a great problem to keep our plants fully and profitably occupied."

Lacking a large foreign market, he says, our highly geared plant productivity becomes at least temporarily a sort of incubus.

Under-Consumption.

This article reveals tardy recognition in the business world of a situation which The Federated Press has been emphasizing for more than a year. No analysis of industrial future is—worthy of serious attention which disregards the fact that we have expanded our productive capacity without a corresponding increase in the ability of consumers to absorb its products. As a result the point has been reached where prosperity in this country has no secure foundation without a larger foreign market than we have been able to secure during a period when the competing industrial nations were seriously handicapped.

The industrial system which turns over the entire increment in production resulting from modern technology to the absentee owners is evidently approaching a deadlock. There must be a big increase in consumption or a decrease in production either thru periodic shutdowns or reduction in working hours. If recurrent depressions are to be avoided there must be less emphasis on returns to capital and more on returns to the millions of producer consumers.

UNEMPLOYMENT STATISTICS SHOW INDUSTRIAL CRISIS NOT THE RESULT OF TEAPOT DOME SCANDAL PROBES

By LELAND OLDS
(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

Steady increase in the number of workers out of a job is indicated by news from various sections of the country. Altho April and May are reckoned months of business expansion, establishments in the majority of industries are laying off employes or closing down for an indefinite period. Others, as in the case of the U. S. Rubber subsidiary with plants at Woonsocket, R. I., and Millville, Mass., announce long vacations in the summer.

Such items as those below prove that the depression is more serious than would appear from financial publicists who attribute slack business either to the weather or congressional investigations.

Railroads Cut Staffs.

Railroads with shops in Chicago, have taken steps to cut either their forces or the work week of their shop employes. One railroad official estimates that fully 30,000 men have been effected either by the lay offs or the cutting of hours during the last week.

The eastern roads have nearly all cut the work week in preference to laying off workers. The Pennsylvania and the New York Central lines have put the five-day week in force. The Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul has cut its shop force 20 per cent.

Railroad officials blame the cuts on Washington.

PHILADELPHIA.—A drop in employment and wages in shown in the April report of the federal reserve bank of Philadelphia covering nearly 1,000 manufacturing establishments in Pennsylvania and New Jersey. Employment and total weekly wages fell about 1 per cent in Pennsylvania while in New Jersey employment fell nearly 2 per cent and total wages nearly 3 per cent.

In Pennsylvania industries making heavy cuts were reported as electrical machinery and apparatus, 8.9 per cent; iron and steel blast furnaces, 1.4; carpets and rugs, 1.9; clothing, 4.8; silk goods, 8.5; woolen and worsted goods, 8.8; knit goods and hosiery, 3.9; furniture, 10.4; leather products, 12.6, and rubber tires and goods, 8 per cent. Increases of importance were 3.9 per cent in automobiles, 3.6 in car construction and repair, 4 in iron and steel forgings, and increases of from 1½ to 6 per cent in building material industries.

In New Jersey the textile group, including clothing, reported a reduction of 3.3 per cent in number employed; metal manufacturers, 1.4; miscellaneous industries, including musical instruments, boots and shoes, paper, printing and rubber goods, 4 per cent. Outstanding gains appeared chiefly in the building material group.

SAN FRANCISCO.—Unemployment is prevalent in California as a result of the failure of the spring boom to materialize. Surplus labor is reported by practically every industry in the state. The lumber industry is curtailing activity and railroad shops are laying off workers. Shoe factories are reported on half time, while printing and paper plants and knitting mills are operating below normal. An excess of stevedores and longshoremen at Los Angeles is reported.

BALTIMORE. — An unemployment crisis in Baltimore is imminent, according to the director of the municipal bureau. His report to the supervisors of city charities urges expansion of the bureau and relief work to meet or stave off the unemployment threatened.

Newfoundland Union Fishermen Dropping Politics As Protest

ST. JOHNS, Newfoundland, May 23.—The Fishermen's Union party has withdrawn from Newfoundland politics, W. F. Coaker, leader of the party and president and leader of the whole political and economic movement centering around the Fishermen's Protective union, all of which 15 years ago he founded, retired in disgust from the legislature and took the 11 Fishermen's party members with him.

Henceforth Coaker will devote himself to the management of the gigantic industrial and commercial wing of the fishermen's enterpirse.

Union May Disappear.

No longer in the northern bays and harbors of the island where the Union party in former days swept the districts, will the battle-cry rally the the fishermen of the coasts to surge up to the polling booths. Even the union itself may in a short time disappear from the field, leaving the commercial and industrial wing as the only representative of what was the greatest old fire-eating workers' movement ever known in Newfoundland.

This withdrawal of the Union party from politics followed after the prime minister of the party with which the fishermen were in coalition had been found guilty of huge grafting. The man kept his seat in parliament just the same and the fishermen thought it time to clear out of the stinking corruption of Newfoundland politics.

But meanwhile the interests of the fishermen and the workers are unrepresented in the political arena, now that the Union party has dropped out. Last year the Union Trading company handled 16,000,000 lbs. of codfish. This year it will handle 30,000,000 lbs., an increase of nearly 100 per cent. The entire situation, on account of its great dependence on its founder, is in the hands of that one man.

FARRELL STEEL WORKERS' TRIALS RESUME JUNE 23

Organizers Face Steel Trust's Hirelings

MERCER, Pa., May 25.—The Farrell sedition trials will resume at the June term of court, starting June 23rd. The Commonwealth of Steel and Coal is making ready to satisfy the lust of the coal and steel barons for the scalps of more militant steel workers who have DARED tell the steel slaves to organize.

The next steel slave to be placed on the block will be Andy Kovacovich, a countryman of the convicted steel work, Tony Kovacovich.

Will Pinchot Speak?

Is the American labor movement prepared to see these steel workers sacrificed for believing that workers could organize in the Commonwealth of the U. S. Steel Corporation? Will Gov. Pinchot stand by with folded arms and let the constitutional rights of these hardworking steel workers be trampled in the dust by the barons who rule his state.

This is a LESSON for those in the American labor movement who believe in the quack remedy of Gompers of electing to office the "friends" of labor. The trials of the Farrell steel workers charged with sedition for wanting to organize the steel workers charged with sedition for wanting to organize the steel slaves demonstrates the weakness, politically speaking, of the Gompers' left hand squeeze to the "friends" of labor.

Defendants Blacklisted.

John Radias, Tony Mirich, Andy Dugan, John Sarich and Andy Kovacovich, the steel workers yet to be tried cannot secure employment in Farrell. Blacklisted, indicted and hounded by the police is the lot of these rebels and it's only the help coming in from the outside world that gives them the courage to wait their turn in the masters' court.

Serbian stool pigeons who testified against Tony Kovacovich spend their spare time trying to incite the defendant steel workers and their sympathizers into committing acts of violence against them. One of the stools boasts that he soon will be wearing a police uniform. It is alleged that only good bootleggers can apply for a position on the Farrell police force.

Chief Leyshock's unhorsed Cossacks invaded a dance held under the auspices of the National Croation Society recently in Farrell looking for "reds." Leyshock continues his methods of terrorizing the workers. This keeper of the "Red Trunk" where all the alleged "seditious" literature is stored is a half-baked individual who cannot be held entirely responsible for his many childish pranks. The steel workers view Leyshock with much amusement. Many patronized the jitney he drove before he was elevated to the office of the W. J. Burns of Farrell.

Publicity Forces Fine Of Ku Kluxer After Sedition Trial

MERCER, Pa., May 25.—The jury who convicted Tony Kovacovich of Sedition for daring to talk organization of the steel slaves were deadlocked for six hours before arriving at their verdict and had it not been for community prejudice aroused by the Ku Klux Klan and the steel and coal barons Tony Kovacovich would have been acquited.

It is alleged by the steelworkers in Farrel that all but one of the seven Serbian stool pigeons who testified against Kovacovich have been arrested in the past for bootlegging and gambling. The Commonwealth certainly picks strange bedfellows when its 'honor' is at stake.

Due to the publicity given by the defense and thru the DAILY WORKER, the Kleagle of the K. K. K. in Mercer county, who decorated the roads leading into Mercer with large KKK letters when the Kovacovich trial was on, was arrested and fined $15.00 for violating the state highway law. The Kleagle was arrested AFTER the jury was thru its work. The signs were on the highway all during the trial yet the 'law and order' brigade made no effort to arrest this hooded patriot.

Crisis in Garment Industry

Why has it been possible for the officials of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union to get away with their disgraceful expulsion of rank and file leaders, which culminated in the Boston convention, while the great bulk of the membership stands unalterably opposed? One of the principal explanations is found in the news from New York on Saturday that a general strike is looming, due to the refusal of the Manufacturers' Association to consider the union's basic demands. The 40-hour week, guaranteed period of employment, unemployment insurance, and a minimum wage, are the outstanding demands formulated by the union. For several years the left wing has been agitating for these things; now they have finally been incorporated in the union program.

But it is no accident that this occurs at the very time when the left wingers are being expelled. The reactionary officials did not dare carry thru the expulsions and at the same time reject these demands. The rank and file will do well to watch their officials closely in this strike situation. The deliberate provocation of the membership, by the outrageous expulsions, was evidently intended to stir up a revolt against the union office-holders, that could be made an excuse for accepting defeat, and for bowing to the bosses' terms.

The militants in the I. L. G. W. U., however, are keeping their heads cool. This strike situation is in the hands of the reactionaries, and the responsibility for its successful issue is theirs. The left wing, under the leadership of the Trade Union Educational League, has already shown by its services in the Chicago and Boston strikes, that even when it is expelled and disfranchised, it is the only dependable fighting force in the I. L. G. W. U. It will continue to fight for the protection of the union and its demands, and will not allow the reactionaries to succeed with their disruption. If the strike facing the 50,000 New York garment workers is won, it will be by the fighting spirit and courageous self-sacrifice of the membership with the left wing in the front lines. If it is not won—and won fully—the responsibility will be on the heads of the mad men at the top, who have done their utmost to demoralize and defeat the union just before it goes into battle.

The militant garment workers will not allow their solidarity to be broken. They will defeat the autocratic officials and at the same time they will defeat the clothing bosses, winning the union demands.

"Cal" Coolidge Squirms

"Cautious Cal" Coolidge has been forced to come to the defense of the remaining political bandits that he harbors in his "cabinet of crooks." He announces that neither Secretary of State Hughes, nor Secretary of the Treasury Mellon is going to resign. And the president adds that he has no intention of quitting himself. These are brave words. But brave words are often spoken immediately before a downfall.

If Coolidge were head of any government in Europe, and reversed on any one of the many issues on which his administration has been repudiated, he would have been kicked out long ago. How different in the United States! In Europe, when a government loses the confidence of parliament, it sends in its resignation and a new election is ordered. Here the president just issues a statement that he has no intention of resigning.

But it is significant that "Silent Cal" has been forced into the open. Hughes was repudiated by congress on the question of Japanese exclusion. But this is only mild zephyr compared to the storm that has been howling about the head of the secretary of state, especially since it has been shown that he is only a spokesman of Standard Oil in governmental high places.

Coolidge also states that Mellon will remain even if he doesn't like the tax reduction bill. But how about Mellon's bootlegging activities, his aid in many forms to millionaire tax dodgers, and numerous other high crimes and misdemeanors?

But Coolidge was not in any great hurry to put either Denby or Daugherty out of his cabinet. But they had to go.

The fight will go on to drive Hughes, Mellon, Hoover, Davis, Wallace and the other Wall Street agents out of Coolidge's cabinet. The demand to "Impeach Coolidge" himself will gain in strength. Capitalist rule in Washington will be exposed, condemned and finally thrown into the discard by the nation's awakened workers and farmers.

Illinois has gone for Alex Howat. Which is the next district organization of the United Mine Workers Union to take its stand with the courageous fighter from the Kansas coal fields.

"We Were All Stealing"

The old Biblical saying that honest confession is good for the soul is today truer than ever. This truth is particularly timely in the present graft, corruption, and thievery crimes being revealed in the Klan investigation now proceeding in Washington.

One of the star witnesses before the Senate Committee looking into the election of Mayfield from Texas frankly confessed, as a Klan member of the innermost ring, that "we were all stealing." The witness declared under oath that the Imperial Wizard Evans had his little graft also. At least $25,000 were spent in "educating" the Texas voters to write in the name of Mayfield in the last Senatorial contest. Representative Upshau, one of the self-appointed guardians of the morals of the House, was shown to have been in the pay of the nation and one of the ardent prohibitionists of the Klan for Congressional services rendered.

We welcome the evidence adduced which substantiates the estimate we have been making of the Klan. The Communists have never for a moment seen in the Klan, as an organization, anything but an extra-legal agency of the reactionary interests, an integral part of the vast and complicated strike-breaking machinery of the capitalist class having its ramifications in the government, in the church, in the press, in the schools. All the noise made by the cyclopes, wizards, emperors, kleagles and ambassadors has never deceived. We have always viewed the excitement about honesty, pure Americanism, unadulterated womanhood, and other impotent abstractions and vagaries peddled by the masked gangman as merely smoke screen behind which the vilest of crimes against the best working class fighters were hidden, as an organized effort to mislead and divide the masses of this country in their struggle for better working and living conditions.

Yes, "we were all stealing," is a timely confession for the Klan authority to make when caught red-handed. When hooded honesty confesses about stealing a little it is as clear as broad daylight that only a fraction of the truth has been allowed to escape, and that stealing has been going on wholesale by the Klan the country over.

Especially instructive to the workers and farmers is the outright refusal of the Senatorial Committee to delve into the connections between the Klan and Congressman Upshaw. There is no mystery about the fact that no official body, no Congressional sub-committee has ever dared examine the relations between government officials and the Klan. Neither capitalist party dares make an honest, fearless investigation of the Klan, because the democratic and republican parties are both closely tied up with the Klan in many states. Is any better proof needed to show that the government secretly is aiding and abetting the Klan outrages while it pretends to oppose it?

The Cost of Profits

Millions of workers are crippled every year while at work grinding out profits for their employers. Thousands are killed producing dividends for the capitalist class. Recently a survey was made of the number of workers wounded and killed annually in the wealthiest state of the country, New York. It was then found that the totals were ghastly enough to compare with the casualties suffered in major military operations of big wars.

Capitalist industry not only robs the workers of a large portion of their product, but in its effort to pile up huge profits the employing class has very little regard for the life and limb of the workingman. The latest investigation made by the American Association for Labor Legislation of the extent of industrial accidents in the United States sheds illuminating information on the price paid by the working class in producing fabulous dividends for the ruling class.

During the last year industrial accidents have increased on the average at least 30 per cent. In more than half of the states having compensation laws the increase of industrial accidents ranged from six to fifty-three per cent.

We can account for some of the increase perhaps by the fact that industry has developed in the past year. Then there are also certain unavoidable accidents incurred in the operation of machinery. But it has never been denied that a great number of accidents can be prevented thru the installation of safety appliances, thru a more scientific organization of production, thru the abolition of speeding up systems, and other measures of this character. All of these measures are taboo to the bosses because they tend to lower the immediate profits, the garnering of which alone serve as the basis of capitalist production. Hence, the working class pays.

Another and even more significant phase of this problem is the fact that in a large measure the number of accidents is swelled thru the employment of inefficient, untrained workers during strikes. The hiring of strikebreakers not only tends to cripple and kill the misled workingmen but also makes for a deterioration of the machinery which has a disastrous effect on the normally employed workers. This practice of the masses takes root in the same profit system responsible for the losses of workers in many other ways.

The cost to the workers of piling up the gigantic profits for the bosses is terrific. The price the working class is paying for the maintenance of capitalism is increasing. It is time to stop paying.

A Senate investigating committee heard the other day that an Alabama miss tried to buy the support of Senator Norris, Nebraska, for the Muscle Shoals delivery to Henry Ford with a kiss. But the senator insisted that wasn't his price. Still it is an indication of the methods that are used to get some of the sedate solons on senate hill.

The World Trade Union Movement

By JAY LOVESTONE.

THE yellow Amsterdam International of Trade Unions has just issued a Year Book which contains a good deal of valuable information about various international workers' organizations.

One of the most instructive sections of this book is the part dealing with the present strength of the trade union movement in different countries. According to the findings of the Amsterdam International, there were organized in sundry trade unions thruout the world, at the end of 1922, approximately 41,000,000 workers.

In every country of the world, with the exception of Hungary, Germany, Poland and Soviet Russia, the tendency has been for a decrease in trade union membership. The greatest gain was made by the trade union movement in Soviet Russia.

On the basis of the findings of the Amsterdam International the strength of the national organizations at the close of 1922 were as fololws:

Austria—The tyear 1922 saw a loss of 29,828 members by the General Federation of Trade Unions, or a total number of 1,049,949 members. In the period 1919 to 1923 there was an intensification in the tendency towards amalgamatiog various crafts.

Belgium—The Trade Union oCmmittee of Belgium reported a membership of 618,871 on January 1, 1923. This was a decrease of 79,000 from the preceding year. The heaviest losers were the building trades, the miners, the metal workers, railway men and the textile workers. It is interesting to note that even the almost complete trade union centralization could not counteract the disastrous effects of the severe economic depression and the reactionary leadership on the Belgian trade union movement.

Canada—In Canada the number of affiliated organizations remained stationary. At the same time the membership of the Trades and Labor Congress declined from 164,333, in 1921 to 117,814 on the last day of December, 1922.

Czecho-Slovakia—On January 1, 1923, there were 388,294 members in the Federation of Czechoslovakian trade unions. In 1923 ten powerful trade unions totaling a membership of 167,078 iwthdrew from the Amsterdam Federation and affiliated themselves with the Red Labor International.

Denmark—At the close of 1922 the Federation of Trade Unions had a total membership of 232,574. This was 9,971 less than in the preceding year. There are 52 separate unions affiliated with the Danish Federation.

France—The membership of the General Confederation of Labor remained practically stationary during the year. On December 31, 1922, its membership was 757,847. In the same year there were several amalgamations. The General Confederation of Labor Unified, which is the Communist Federation, affiliated with the Profintern, showed increased strength, according to the last convention.

Germany—In 1922 the General Federation of Trade Unions increased its membership by 150,000, rising to a total of 7,908,516. In the same period the Federation of Unions of salaried employees increased its membership by 25,000 to a total of 667,898. In 1923 the Communists made marked advances in the German trade union movement, particularly amongst the metal workers and coal miners.

Great Britain—Compared with 1921 the membership of the Trade Union Congress dropped from 6,59,9-3 to 4,369,268. The economic crisis, the severe unemployment, made heavy inroads on the trade union membership. Strong efforts were made in this period to secure amalgamation of several organizations dealing with the same branches of industry. Towards this end, national federations were formed in industries dealing with printing and allied trades, textiles machinery and ship building, transport, building and also technical employees and unskilled workers. There is also a notable tendency towards standardization union dues and rules.

Hungary—At the close of 1922 the Council of Trade Unions had a total membership of 202,956. This was an increase of 50,000 and indicates the fact that the trade union movement is beginning to recover from the heavy assaults launched against it by the Horthy government. The union showing the greatest increases were those of the building trade, metal workers, tural workers.

Italy—The membership of the General Confederation of Labor fell from 1,200,000 in 1921 to 401,054 on December 31, 1922. This collapse was due to the ravages of the Fascisti. The latter now have their own organizations for labor, their own so-called unions which have an approximate membership of 2,000,000, according to Fascisti claims.

Latvia—The Latvian Federation of Trade Unions lost 10,000 members in 1922. On January 1, 1923, its total membership was only 12,350.

Luxemburg—Here the Trade Unions lost 8,000 members in 1922. On January 1, 1923, its total membership was 12,100.

Netherlands—The membership of the Netherlands Federation of Trade Unions declined from 223,718 on January 1, 1922, to 201,045 on January 1, 1923. Here unemployment was one of the principal causes making for the fall in membership. The clothing trades, the agricultural workers, the metal and transport workers were the principal sufferers in this respect.

Poland—The Central Trade Union Federation membership rose from 365,190 on January 1, 1922, to 411,056 on January 1, 1923. The Communists made considerable headway in the ranks of the trade unions during this period.

Serb-Croat-Slovene Kingdom—The membership of the General Federation of Labor remained practically stationary during the year. On January 1, 1923, its total was 66,166.

Spain—Despite the establishment of a Fascist government, the membership of the Federation of Trade Unions remained practically the same as in the preceding year. On December 31, 1922, the total members was 238,861.

Sweden—The Federation of Trade Unions showed a decline in its membership from 313,208 in 1921 to 292,917 at the close of December, 1922.

Switzerland—The Swiss Federation of Trade Unions lost almost 60,000 members in 1921. The total membership fell from 225,822 to 162,192 on January 1, 1923. The heaviest losers were the banking employes who lost 41 per cent of their total membership; the leather workers who lost 28 per cent; the textile workers with a loss of 25 per cent; the metal workers and clock makers with a loss of 24 per cent; the building workers, 17 per cent; employes of the postal telegraph and telephone service, 16 per cent, and the embroiderers, 15 per cent.

Soviet Russia—For the fiscal years 1922-1923 Soviet Russia shows the greatest increase in membership. This is especially noteworthy because the famine and the severe economic crisis of the preceding year made heavy inroads on the trade union organizations of Soviet Russia. According to the last census there were 5,541,000 members in Soviet Russia trade unions on October 1, 1923. This compares with 4,546,000 on October 1, 1922; a gain of nearly a million members in one year. The extremely favorable policy pursued by the Soviet Government is principally responsible for the great increase in membership.

Amongst the organizations showing the greatest gains the following may be mentioned: the sugar workers, the lumber workers, the food workers, the building trades, the transport workers, government employes, metal workers, mining and textile workers. In industry the average increase in membership was 34.3 per cent. The greatest increase occurred in North Russia, the Ukraine and the Ural district. The workers in Lenirgrad and in the Donetz Basin showed great increase in trade union membership.

The World Situation.

The Amsterdam International Federation admits heavy losses for the last-mentioned period. On January 1, 1922, it claimed a total affiliated membership of 20,290,182. One year later—its last official figures—it reported a membership of 18,174373. The greatest losses suffered by the yellow Amsterdam International were amongst the unskilled workers and factory workers. Nearly 25 per cent of the miners affiliated with the Amsterdam Federation in 1921 deserted it in 1922, mainly for the Red Labor Union International. Amongst the skilled workers of the building and printing industries, the Amsterdam International showed substantial increases for the period. These increases, however, were in most cases "due to fusions which took place in 1922."

Summing up, it is safe to conclude, on the basis of the data in the year book of the Amsterdam International, that the total membership of the trade unions of all descriptions thruout the world was 40,928,610 on January 1, 1923. This figure is inclusive of the strength of the American Federation of Labor.

The Poor Fish Says: It is no wonder our harassed president is taking to gas. I am surprised he has not taken nitroglycerine. After being handed the presidential nomination on the G. O. P. ticket, to have his vetos treated with no more respect than a poor rendering of "Yes, We Have No Bananas," would almost drive a man to moonshine. (Ed.—The Poor Fish has reference to Coolidge's chlorine gas treatments for sore throat.)

Food Workers' Great Fight

It was a great tribute to the Amalgamated Food Workers in Chicago, when Judge Hugo Friend issued an injunction covering 170 Greek restaurants, prohibiting that organization from organizing the exploited workers in those places. And it was not a score against this independent union, when the lawyers for the bosses pointed out that it is not connected with the American Federation of Labor. Rather should it make all members of the greater body of organized labor ask themselves, why should the relief of the Greek workers, among the most exploited in the city, have been left to a small, independent body, rather than having been undertaken by those who have the big treasuries and powerful connections. That the Amalgamated Food Workers should enter the struggle for the eight-hour day, and decent wages, in the Greek restaurants, throwing all their energies into the fight, is proof that it is animated by real working class consciousness.

When workers are in battle against the bosses, no real union man will quibble about technicalities of affiliations. Rather every union man in Chicago, American Federation of Labor or otherwise, will cheer on the campaign among the Greek restaurant workers, and will render every assistance possible. Organize the restaurants of Chicago, the Greeks now and then the others. Abolish the 10 and 12-hour day. Establish a decent wage. These are the immediate problems in the hotel and restaurant industry. The Amalgamated Food Workers are making a good start. More power to these efforts.

LaFollette Is Trimming

Persistent statements come from friends of Senator LaFollette to the effect that he is not going to make the break from the republican party. Perhaps, they say, he will run independently, asking for support from the republican party in some states, from democrats in others, from the Farmer-Labor Party in others, and pledging himself to no organized party as a whole. He will not, they predict, even go so far as did Roosevelt in 1912, characterizing such a break as a "great mistake."

This must give food for serious thought to all the LaFollette enthusiasts in the Farmer-Labor Party movement. Such clinging to "regularity" and respectability, such evasion and cowardice, is not the stuff upon which a Farmer-Labor Party can be built.

It is not the spirit that can go with the workers and oppressed farmers in their present struggle against the domination of the Wall Street bloodsuckers. It does not fit into the picture of a stern and earnest effort to establish the political power of the conscious workers and farmers. LaFollette seems to be allowing his "friends" to sever, as rapidly as they find it possible to do so, even those sentimental connections that have existed between him and the growing movement for a class party of the producers in the coming presidential election.

Preparing For Revolution

If the workers of Germany wish to struggle against slavery and starvation they must go side by side with the Communists. That is the great lesson that events teach, day by day, to the working masses of that unhappy country. Dispatches from Berlin on May 24th, tell of the Communists in the Ruhr forcing merchants to grant food credits for relief of the starving. The strike now going on is led by the Communists. In the elections of May 4th, the Communists carried the Ruhr district over all other parties combined, in addition to multiplying their vote ten-fold in the country at large. This enormous increase in power of the German Communist Party, its growing leadership of ever greater masses of workers, is the inevitable consequence of this fact—that the Communist Party is the only Party that is fighting against the crushing of Germany, against the enslavement of the German working class, against starvation and unemployment. The German workers, faced with the alternative which will soon present itself to the entire working class—the dictatorship of the proletariat or submission, starvation and death—is finally breaking the chains of the treacherous Social-Democracy completely. The German revolution cannot be much longer delayed.

Klan Wars Again

Jack Skelcher, anti-Klansman, was killed at Herrin, Ill., Saturday, "on suspicion" that he was implicated in the shooting of Glenn Young, Kleagle of the Ku Klux Klan, ex-prohibition agent, and the Mussolini of Williamson County, who took over the government there some months ago by force and violence. Thus does the struggle, which has been going on openly and secretly since the Illinois Chamber of Commerce began pouring money into Williamson County to revenge themselves for the loss of their scabs in 1922, again break out into open warfare.

When Young was attacked Friday night, the news reports say that he was riding in a big sedan car, presented to him for "cleaning up" Williamson County. This sufficiently characterizes the forces behind the gang of desperados who masquerade at one time as prohibition law enforcers (the Volstead Fascisti, as they have been well characterized), and at another as Ku Klux Klansmen. Their tools may be blindly ignorant and fanatical countryfolk, but their leadership and the money that pays for their wild adventures of murder and arson comes from the organized capitalists of the state.

The killing of Skelcher has all the appearance of another application of the notorious "fugitive law," long popular among bandit gangs like those of Glenn Young. He was "suspected," and did not stop quickly enough when ordered to do so, and therefore was shot down. Southern Illinois seems destined to have more bitter struggles consequent upon the declaration of war made by the Chamber of Commerce.

Another Injunction Judge

Let all workers know that one of the most sweeping injunctions ever issued against organized labor has just been handed down in the war on the Amalgamated Food Workers by Judge Hugo Freund.

The big significance of this event is not that Judge Freund has come to the aid of 170 Greek restaurant bosses. That was expected of him. He is an elected republican judge and that is what he was elected to do. He lived up to the bosses' expectations.

But the thing for the workers of Chicago to remember is that their officials, 15 of them, "The Labor Committee of 15 on Injunctions," openly and actively advocated the election of Judge Hugo Freund at the elections last fall.

The officials of labor, headed by John Fitzpatrick, president of the Chicago Federation of Labor, urged the workers to elect this judge who is now hitting them over the head with an injunction, after these same officials had righteously declared that, "Government by injunction has become a menace to free citizenship."

Fitzpatrick and the other members of the "Injunction Committee of 15," helped elect Judge Foell, the foe of the garment strikers. They helped elect Judge Freund, the foe of the food strikers. And any one of the other 19 judicial candidates endorsed by the "Committee of 15," at the Nov. 6, 1923, elections, will follow in the footsteps of Foell and Pam when they are called upon to serve their masters, the bosses in some labor struggle. Watch out for the leaders of labor who ask you, the workers, to vote for such old party, bosses' candidates on election day.

SHOW UNCLE SAM STRIKEBREAKER

U.S. FINANCED SCAB HERDING ON THE SEAS

Marine Strikebreaking Fund Admitted

By LAURENCE TODD
(Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, May 26.—Uncle Sam, strikebreaker, was disclosed to the House committee investigating the waste of funds by the Shipping Board, on May 21, when Thomas J. Rice, special assistant attorney general, testified that $163,00 had been paid by the Shipping Board to the shipowners' strike fund during the 1919 maritime strike on the Pacific Coast.

As the outcome of this struggle, the "closed shop of the owners—closed against union labor," with its industrial passport and anti-union pledge system, was established in every port southward from Portland.

Representative Cooper of Wisconsin, presiding, and Representative Davis of Tennessee, in a series of questions to the witness brot out the fact that the policy of the shipping board had been to assist the private ship owners and the operators of government ships in their attempt to smash the unions. Admiral Renson had been chairman of the board at the time of this contribution of public money to the class war, but the defeat suffered by the seamen and longshoremen had never been retrieved, even to the present hour.

Scab $1,200,000 Fund.

Moreover, the companies operating government ships out of San Francisco and Los Angeles had contributed to the fund of $1,200,000 used by the Industrial Association in San Francisco to crush the building trades unions thru an illegal combination of contractors and building material concerns. This combination was dissolved by the federal court, last year, as being in violation of the anti-trust laws. The steamship combine, which went to the aid of the building combine in what was described by Rice as "a general assault upon all organized labor," is itself now under investigation as being equally in violation of the laws.

"This combination consists of the Shipowners' Association of the Pacific Coast and the Pacific-American Steamship Association," said Rice. "Complaint was made to the department of justice by labor leaders on the coast, that they have violated the Sherman law. I made the first of my reports to Attorney General Daugherty last January, and have made

Coolidge To Open Substitute For Green House On K. Street

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, May 26.—President Coolidge, cabinet members, lobbyists of all kinds and influential politicians, are to foregather at the opening of the million-dollar Congressional Country Club, ten miles out of town, to inaugurate the most palatial of golf-tea-political rallying places that the capital has yet produced. Memberships come at $1,000 each, and corporation lawyers, bankers, stockbrokers and industrial magnates have flocked in. The idea is that this club will afford discreet means of getting acquainted, in an innocent social way, with the leaders in Congress. When a quiet talk is needed, out to the Congressional Country Club!

600,000 Miners Are Locked Out In Germany

Six hundred thousand miners are locked out in Germany!

These miners have wives and children. The state refuses to give them any help. These miners have been locked out as a result of the fight they put up against the abolition of the seven hour day. They are waging a battle for the preservation of the seven hour day. The Coal Barons of Germany want to make big profits, and they want to take these big profits out of the German miners.

SIX HUNDRED THOUSAND GERMAN MINERS LOCKED OUT!

Wives and children without food.

These miners are fighting not merely for themselves. They are fighting in the interest of miners the world over. If the German miners are defeated, the miners of America are defeated. Coal barons are quick to learn from each other.

Miners of America! You have little yourselves. But you have more than the miners of Germany who have gone thru a period of starvation already. These Six Hundred Thousand miners in Germany are fighting your battle. They are fighting the battle of the miners the world over. Help them and you will help yourselves.

Help them win their battle and your next battle, here in America, will be that much easier to win. Let them lose their battle, and your battle, here in America will be that much easier to lose.

Miners of America! Come to the assistance of these German brothers. Help feed their wives and children so the workers may be better fit to continue their fight. The International Workers' Aid is the only agency which is feeding the striking and locked out workers. They are feeding fifty thousand workers daily.

Send in your contribution to-day to the American committee at 19 South Lincoln St., Chicago.

"He who helps quickly, helps doubly."

INTERNATIONAL WORKERS' AID,
Rose Karsner, National Secretary.

U. S. LABOR THRU INTERNATIONAL WORKERS' AID CABLES $4,000 TO THE STRIKING MINERS IN GERMAN RUHR

The International Workers' Aid yesterday cabled $4,000 to the striking miners of the Ruhr in response to the appeal sent to the workers of America for help to the starving wives and children of the heroic workers who are fighting against the atrocious conditions the coal barons and industrialists of Germany, aided by the International bankers, are trying to force upon them.

The American workers true to their traditions of answering the call for assistance from their fellow workers in distress, in no matter what country, along with the $4,000 sent, thru the International Workers' Aid, notified their embattled comrades of the Ruhr that this was only the first installment; that they would continue to support them in their fight as they did the workers and peasants of Soviet Russia when afflicted with the famine scourge and the results of the allied blockade.

The latest reports from Germany indicate that the conditions in the Ruhr are growing worse. The capitalists are hoping they may be able to starve the miners into surrender and their principal weapon is hunger.

The miners have appealed to the workers of the world for assistance, pointing out that a defeat for them in the Ruhr would be a defeat for the miners in every country.

CONDITION OF STRIKING RUHR MINERS GROWING MORE DESPERATE DAILY

BERLIN, May 26.—All efforts to compel the 600,000 striking Ruhr miners to go back to work under the terms imposed on them by the arbitration committee appointed by the capitalist government have failed. The men refuse to accept the longer work day.

Attempts to work the mines with scabs have proved abortive. The workers are in an angry mood and violence is rampant. The police, who were provocative in the early days of the struggle, are now fearful of the mighty masses of workers who are being rapidly driven to desperation.

Police in the city of Stoppenberg, who fired on the miners, had their station dynamited. The miners hurled hand grenades into the smoking ruins to complete the destruction.

The capitalist government is unable to cope with the Ruhr situation. Interest in the Dawes report no longer holds the center of the stage.

More Churches to Unite?

Senator Walsh Will Defend Wheeler On Oil Graft Charge

WASHINGTON, May 26.—Defense of Senator Wheeler at his trial on the frameup charge in Montana will be conducted by Senator Walsh of Montana, probably assisted by Senator Borah, chairman of the Senate committee, which found him innocent. Borah is assailed by the National Republican, Coolidge organ.

DAILY WORKER STRIKE EDITION HITS BOSSES OF SCAB RESTAURANTS

A special "Food Workers' Strike Edition" of the DAILY WORKER, was distributed by the strikers in front of the struck restaurants yesterday. The Amalgamated Food Workers' Union handled thousands of copies of this special edition of the DAILY WORKER, letting the public know that there is a strike on among the Greek restaurant workers, giving the history of the Amalgamated Food Workers' Union, and describing the conditions under which the men have been forced to work.

The strike edition made the scab bosses wince and put more vigor into the cooks, waiters, dishwashers and other restaurant workers who are conducting this war against the 12-hour day.

Rapid Growth Is Aid To Soviet Russia

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, May 26.—Reporting for the Central Executive Committee to the Thirteenth Congress of the Russian Communist Party, Comrade Stalin declared that the membership of the organization had risen to over 600,000. This number is inclusive of the 125,000 workingmen admitted to the Communist Party in the drive for members inaugurated after the death of Nicolai Lenin.

About 50 per cent of the entire membership consists of industrial workers and 25 per cent of poor peasants. Women workers and peasants, clerks, and employes engaged in the service of the Soviet government make up the rest of the membership.

Of the membership of the Young Communist organization which has risen to more than 570,000, more than forty per cent are industrial workers. The pioneer organizations of the Red Youth, the young children, now have a total membership of between 150,000 and 200,000.

According to the last census, there are now in Soviet Russia 5,541,000 trade union members. This is a gain of almost a million over the preceding year and is especially significant in view of the fact that almost every national section of the Amsterdam International has shown a loss for the same period.

Zinoviev On Foreign Policy.

Comrade Gregori Zinoviev made a complete and thorogoing review of the present economic situation of Soviet Russia, particularly in the light of the foreign economic relations and policies of the Soviet Republic.

In discussing the conditions under which Soviet Russia might be ready to assume some of the obligations incurred by the preceding capitalist and czarist governments, Comrade Zinoviev emphatically declared: "One should never lose sight of the fact that while we refuse to pay the old czarist debts, we shall gladly meet and fully observe all obligations involved in our own debts."

Zinoviev indicated that Soviet Russia was planning to narrow and limit the concessions field. For instance, the Soviet Government will grant no more concessions aiming at the exploitation of the Baku and Grosnyi oil fields.

This is of international importance in the light of the recent declaration made by the Royal Dutch Shell interests in disposing of some of their American oil holdings that they were henceforth going to concentrate on Russian developments.

Today, fifty-five concessions have been granted by the Soviet Government to Dutch, German, Norwegian, British and mixed companies. In these concessions the Soviet Government and the private companies participate jointly.

The policy that the Communists propose for Soviet Russia on this field aims towards limiting the activities of the private capitalists to a minimum and towards rendering the maximum government help to the state and co-operative organizations. Zinoviev made it very clear that the Soviet Government would increase its vigilance over the bourgeois elements that might tend to develop thru the granting of certain concessions to private interests having large amounts of capital.

General Meeting T. U. E. L. Members Wednesday Night

Reports from the great conventions of the needle trades unions, in Boston and Philadelphia, of the Illinois miners and the Labor Party in Peoria, will feature the regular monthly meeting of the Trade Union Educational League, Chicago group, Wednesday evening at 8 p. m., Northwest Hall, corner of North and Western avenues. All members desiring to keep informed up-to-the-minute will be in attendance.

STUBBORN POINCARE CAN'T SEE ELECTION SMASHED HIS POLICY

BAR LE DUC., France, May 26.—In a speech to the General Council of the Meuse, Premier Poincare announced that he is not retiring from political life when he resigns the premiership next week.

Declaring he is convinced the recent national elections did not disavow his foreign policy, "and am convinced that policy cannot be changed," Poincare warned the incoming regime that he and his followers will "watch events with vigilant attention and defend whenever necessary" the ideas they always have professed.

"We will demand that the general lines of our foreign policy be conserved without alteration," the premier said, concluding:

"I will remain to the last breath a good republican and a fervent patriot."

GARY BOASTS STEEL TRUST DEFIED DRAFT

Resisted Nationalization Of Industry In Wartime

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK, May 26.—Open defiance of the government in war time put many workers in jail, but Judge Gary and the steel trust did this and got away with it, according to Gary's boastful account to the American Iron and Steel Institute convention, New York.

"You'll have to use force to take us," was the ultimatum of the munition makers in 1917 and 1918 when the government proposed to nationalize the iron and steel industry. Not willing to jail Gary for resisting the draft of industry, the Wilson administration pulled in its horns and the capitalists continued to run the basic industries and the country.

Tells About It.

Gary, in order to get the record straight, says this is the way the steel committee chairman answered the war industries board:

"If you think, under government management, better service will be rendered and you believe you can legally do it, you may undertake to forcibly secure the management of the steel business. You will never do it with the consent or approval of the owners of these properties and you will be held responsible, morally at least."

"Get Behind Coolidge."

Cal Coolidge has graduated from the Rock of Gibraltar, the title given him by Gary last month. Coolidge is no longer honored by being president. Cal is honoring the United States by being president, according to Gary. In calling upon the steel and iron barons to get behind the Coolidge boom, Gary spoke of him as "that great and good man who at the present time honors us by being president of the United States."

RICH, PRETTY DAMSEL CAN'T GO FREE; IRATE N. Y. PUBLIC PROTESTS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, May 26.—Miss Abbey Rockefeller, granddaughter of John D., found herself in the center of a lively little muss involving a police judge, Mayor Hylan, taxi drivers and indignant representatives of equal rights for rich and poor.

Miss Rockefeller started something when she speeded her roadster down Tenth avenue and was served with her second ticket for the offense. And Magistrate Norman E. March completed it when he gave the oil king's granddaughter a suspended sentence.

Stirred by scores of letters demanding to know if New York has "one law for the rich and another for the poor," Mayor Hylan has ordered the papers in the case sent to his office.

CZAR FARRINGTON, BACK TO WALL, FIGHTS DESPERATELY TO SAVE TYRANNICAL RULE

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PEORIA, Ill., May 26.—The progressive delegates in the Illinois Mine Workers' Convention today resisted another tyrannical onslaught by President Frank Farrington who, evidently bent on following the lead of John L. Lewis, upset the order of business, and announced that the delegates must finish the convention by Tuesday night.

Farrington, with his back to the wall, hitting below the belt in last efforts to regain his lost appointive power, called for the report of the committee on appeals and grievances, instead of the report of the committee on constitutional resolutions, which, according to the order of business laid down by the committee on rules and order, should have been taken up today.

Nesbit Doesn't Know.

Another demand was made by the progressive delegates that the resolutions on constitutional changes, which have been printed in pamphlet form for ten days, be distributed to the delegates. Delegate Freman Thompson, pointed out that some of the favored reporters had been given these resolutions a week ago. There are 63 resolutions in the pamphlet demanding that the power to appoint the district employes of the union be taken away from Farrington and that they be elected instead. Walter Nesbit, who is in charge of the resolutions, said he doesn't know how the reporters got them.

Farrington Dies Hard.

Farrington lost the appointive power when that matter came on the floor of the convention under the discussion of Farrington's report.

The progressives see in the announcement of Farrington that the convention must adjourn by Tuesday night an attempt to get the appointive power before the delegates a second time.

Vice-President Fishwick ruled last week that the appointive power had definitely been stripped from Farrington, and the report of the committee on constitutional resolutions must report on the details of the election of state employes.

Appeals Committee Reports.

The committee on appeals and grievances reported on 47 resolutions relating to old and disabled men. The convention voted that 36 of these should be paid $25 apiece.

Eleven resolutions considered by the convention, dealt with the violations of the agreement by the coal operators, the men demanding strike benefits when locked out. The resolutions covered cases of individual members of the union who have appealed from the decision of the district executive board upon their grievance with the coal operators.

S. Berkowich appealed from the decision of the Illinois Joint Group Board No. 3. Berkowich, who is a well-known syndicalist, was blacklisted by the Southern Gem Coal Co., and this blacklist was carried by all the southern coal operators. At the international convention at Indianapolis, an unsuccessful attempt was made by the Lewis machine to unseat Berkowich.

Farrington Aids Blacklist.

Berkowich tried to get the case reopened before the convention today, but Farrington would not give Berkowich the floor.

In spite of the fact that the majority of the delegates wanted to give Berkowich the right to state his case, Farrington arbitrarily ruled against them.

The Illinois convention, under the constitution, is the highest body of appeal in the state, but Farrington who, when it suits his purpose, is anxious to abide by the constitution, played the tyrant once more and refused Berkowich his constitutional right.

Farrington Rebuked.

The convention administered a rebuke to Farrington by ruling that the case should be re-opened by the district board, with instructions that Berkowich is to be paid for the time he has lost because of the blacklist.

RUSSIA BUYS $25,000,000 U. S. COTTON

Congress Gets Facts Of Soviet Purchases

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, May 26.—Representative Frear of Wisconsin, discussing the McNary-Haugen bill in the House, called attention to the fact that $25,000,000 had been paid by the Russian government for American cotton during the present year, to supply the 400 mills of its textile industry.

He quoted Alexander Gomberg, representative in this country of the Russian textile industries, as saying that an equal amount of cotton would be bought in the south during the remainder of the year and shipped to Russia.

Mentioning the death in Moscow, on May 21, of Victor Nogin, president of the Russian cotton syndicate, who was here in January, Frear recalled that Nogan told him at that time that Russia would want to buy $40,000,000 worth of American cotton this year, and that when he repeated this in the House, many members doubted it. Yet 130,000 bales of cotton have already been shipped in accordance with Nogin's plans.

"If normal trade relations were possible," said Frear, "thereby extending means of business credit thru agencies in this country, and direct dealings with the Russian people, the cotton purchasing would be much larger and the purchases of agricultural machinery from the International Harvester Co. and other products of this country would be greatly increased. This trade is a life-saver at the present time for the cotton growers of the south, and it is a legitimate trade that comes direct from the Soviet government which finances these purchases."

Frear paid a tribute also to the Russian co-operatives—the Selskosoyus and the Centrosoyus, whose combined trade last year, he was informed, was $50,000,000.

CAN'T DO WITHOUT DAILY WORKER, SAYS FRIEND, RENEWING

Dear Friend: I don't want to miss the paper. I can't get along without it. It is the best working class paper ever had in this country. I have been reading radical papers for the last 15 years, so I ought to know. Please keep on sending it. Your comrade, J. Hesselsohn, Duluth, Minn.

POISON GAS EXPERTS EAGER FOR WAR; PROMISE WHOLESALE DEATH

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, May 26.—Officers of the chemical warfare section here say that the United States has solved the problem of winning a war by poison, as has been intimated in European military circles. American chemical warfare preparations, conducted on a basis of wholesale experimentation for the past six years, they declare, justify the belief that an adversary can be wiped out within a few days or weeks.

Other and higher-salaried officers announce that the defense of the country requires an immediate appropriation of a billion dollars.

CHURCH REBEL, OPPOSES GOD, GOES TO TRIAL

Bishop Brown in Court; Wrote Communist Book

(Special to The Daily Worker)

CLEVELAND, O. May 26.—Bishop William Montgomery Brown will go on trial here tomorrow before a court of nine bishops of the Episcopal Church charged with heresy. This is the first heresy trial in the Episcopal Church since the days of the Reformation. The trial will take place in Trinity Cathedral here. All the 23 charges against Brown are based on utterances in his book, "Communism and Christianism," which he published in 1920 and which has had a circulation reaching well over a hundred thousand.

The trial, a "Modernist-Fundamentalist" case, has attracted the attention of the entire religious world. Hundreds of church leaders are expected to attend.

These are two passages from his book:

"The Divinity is at best a fiction and at worst a superstition."

"There is no rational doubt about the fictitious character of the Divine Jesus."

Trial procedure will ante-date modern law, and will be conducted according to the ancient canons of the Episcopal Church handed down since the Reformation.

"The prosecutor," or church advocate, is Attorney Charles Lemuel Dibble, Kalmazoo. Dibble said today the trial of Bishop Brown is an attempt to prove him guilty not only of heresy, but atheism.

Bishop Brown will defend himself with an attempt to prove none of the members of the House of Bishops accepts all of the Bible literal and are therefore each as guilty of heresy as himself.

A half dozen prominent "Modernists" will "testify" in Bishop Brown's behalf, Brown's counsel said today. Among them are: Dr. Percy Stickney Grant, Rev. Norman Guthrie, Rev. Dr. Leighton Parks; Rev. Dr. Karl Reiland, all of New York; Dr. Elwood Worcester, Boston, and Rev. Truman Heminway, Providence, R. I.

Carpenters Out But Not Suspended Says Jensen, Head of D. C.

Harry Jenson, president of the Chicago District Council of the Carpenters' Union, denies that any locals affiliated with that body were either expelled or suspended by the District Council. Jensen told the DAILY WORKER yesterday that the locals which are in arrears on payments into the special building fund were not suspended but their delegates to the District Council would not have either a voice or a vote there till their locals paid up and again got in good standing with the District Council.

The locals which were in arrears would not have the right to submit nominations for officers which are to be elected soon, Jensen said. Neither would they have the right to vote in the District Council election.

Jensen did not make plain the difference between suspending locals from the District Council for non-payment of the building assessments and depriving them of their right to take part in the deliberations and elections of the District Council.

Jensen said that the locals involved had a right to appeal their case to the international officers and the general executive board of the carpenter's union in Indianapolis, but that he felt the international officers would sustain him in his stand.

Strikers Who Face Contempt Charges Are Angry At Delays

More than fifty striking garment workers will face Judges Sullivan and Foell this morning to answer to contempt charges. This makes the second week the strikers have been forced to go into court only to find that the judges were unwilling to hear their cases "yet." Delay after delay has been forced on the defendants, many of whom are workers in settled shops. These workers are anxious to be tried so that they can go back to work.

There is no reason to believe they will be tried today. The probabilities are they will be asked to come back later for their trials. The workers' patience has been worn to a frazzle loafing in the corridors of the courts waiting the judges' pleasure. They want the farce that will be their trial over and done with.

If there is any hurry about the trials this week it will be because Dudley Taylor and his helpers want to relieve the police and bosses' witnesses of the trouble of waiting and returning to court every day.

SIDELIGHTS ON THE CONVENTION WHERE MINERS MADE HISTORY

By NATALIA GOMEZ and KITTY HARRIS.

After the DAILY WORKER reporter was removed from the convention, the sales of the WORKER increased 50 per cent. Sympathizers wish we had another reporter who could be kicked out; it would increase our sales another 50 per cent.

We offer Farrington a rubber gavel for a prize if any of the delegates can solve the great mystery: how does the DAILY WORKER get its news after the reporter has been put out of the convention?????

The convention stenographer came over to the press table, to Jack Johnstone, reporter for the Farmer-Labor Voice, and said, "So you're reading the DAILY WORKER. Is that your favorite paper? It seems to be the favorite paper of most of the delegates."

Farrington holds the record for speaking in the convention. His time, according to a stop watch, up to date has been 20 hours, 39 minutes and 42 seconds. Most of this time was used in explaining that "I do not know"; "It is against the constitution"; "It is contrary to the three-year contract"; "I have great responsibility"; "Some people are trying to place this responsibility upon me, but I won't allow it"; "I want exceptional powers"; "I have not the power to do it"; "We can get anything we demand within reason at the next legislature"; "I don't expect very much from the next legislature"; "I don't expect anything from the next legislature"; "We must cheapen production in order for the operators to find markets"; "We must be able to compete with the non-union fields"; "There is no relief in sight as long as the non-union fields that Illinois has to compete with agrees to the Jacksonville contract"; "Don't antagonize the employers"; "Be on the square"; "Do an honest day's work"; "Co-operate with the boss"; "We cannot do anything that is not in the agreement"; "I am in favor of taking the appointive power away from Lewis"; "I am opposed to taking the appointive power away from myself"; "I have a machine and a good one, too"; "I do not have a machine," etc., etc., etc.

Vice-president Arry Fishwick says that he is on the square with everybody, wants everybody to get fair play. The proof is that he admits it. That is to say, "Arry will go just as far in this direction as anybody as long as it won't take away Frank's power—and that would not be fair.

If the loss of the appointive power takes George Mercer's meal ticket away, he can start out as an evangelist. George is known as the statistician, but all the scribes at the press table had him doped out as a Presbyterian minister.

Delegate William Hartness of Bartonville, chairman of the committee on officers' reports, asked this question a few years ago, "Can Farrington endure?" He answered it in presenting Farrington's report to the convention by saying that neither Farrington nor Democracy would endure if the appointive power were destroyed.

"Where is the line of demarcation?" Hartness repeatedly asked. He found it between the S. L. P. and Farrington's sinking ship.

Secretary Walter Nesbit, the official announcer and mail distributor, is getting some of the delegates sore. They say he only gives mail to his friends instead of distributing it equally among the delegates no matter what their political views may be. They also say Walter is an expert on figures; either he or the tellers told a whopper when they announced the vote against the appointive power and the vote on the expulsion of the DAILY WORKER reporter. He evidently goes on the basis of two for Frank and one for the other fellow.

McAdooites Worrying About Votes; Not About Principles

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, May 26.—McAdoo supporters have revived the discussion of Senator Thomas J. Walsh of Montana, director of the Teapot Dome inquiry, as a dark horse candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination.

They argue: That McAdoo will have half the delegates in the convention, but presumably will not get the necessary two-thirds; that he is very friendly to Walsh, and that Gov. Al Smith is equally friendly to the Montanan. McAdoo is a dry: Smith is wet and a Catholic: Walsh is dry and a Catholic, and has managed the Chicago headquarters for the Democrats in past campaigns. What more logical than that Walsh, who might break the LaFollette vote in some of the western states, should be the second choice of McAdoo and Smith?

When asked to forecast the platform which the Democratic bosses—Brennan, Taggart and Tammany's new leader—will give the candidate, the McAdoo-Walsh men admit that there is where the difficulty lies. They are not at all sure that the platform will be one which the west will approve.

MORE OIL MUCK COMING, SENATE PROBERS PROMISE

D. of J. In For Hotter Time Yet, They Say

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 26.—There will be a lot more dirt uncovered by the Brookhart committee investigating Daugherty's administration of the department of justice, Senator Brookhart announced when asked if there was any prospect of the committee's quitting.

"I will not quit," he said, "while we are under fire in the courts. There are things in prospect that may surpass in importance anything that has yet been heard in the way of evidence. We are going thru with this thing until we have accomplished a real reform."

Senator Wheeler says that the U. S. district attorney at Butte, Mont., is trying to delay his trial in order to have the indictment recently returned against him hanging over his head during the fall campaign.

The prosecution of Howard Mannington depends on how much time the Senator from Montana will have to prepare a partial report of the work of the committee. If he is tried as quickly as he wants to be on his own indictment he will have little time to try to send Mannington to the can.

Electricity To Bring Economic Revolution —Governor Pinchot

(By The Federated Press)

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., May 26.—"We stand at the beginning of an economic revolution that will be brought about by universal electric service, made possible by long-distance electric transmission. . . . No such profound changes in economic life are possible without profound changes in law and government," Governor Gifford Pinchot of Pennsylvania, told the National Electric Light Association convention in Atlantic City. "While the 19th century saw a centralization of industry on a vast scale, a decline in country life, the decay of many small communities and the weakening of family ties, the age of electricity may bring about the decentralization of industry, the restoration of country life."

Lovestone To Speak On Changes Wrought At European Polls

"The Significance of the Recent Elections in Germany and France," will be the subject of Jay Lovestone's lecture at the Workers' Lyceum, 2733 Hirsh boulevard, on Tuesday, May 27, at 8 p. m. Lovestone, well-known Communist leader, will give an analysis of what the recent change in the political leadership in Germany and France will mean to the workers of these two countries.

Poles Are Optimistic.

WARSAW, May 26.— The Polish bourgeoisie are slapping themselves on the back. They have stabilized the mark. You can now get one American dollar for 9,300,000 Polish marks. One of the measures proposed by Prime Minister Grabski, is to charge $100 for every passport issued to a Pole. Young men of military age are not eligible to passports. They must serve in the army.

FARRINGTON IN NEW FRONT AS TIMES DEMAND

Now It's Dual; Now It's Not Dual, He Says

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PEORIA, Ill., May 26.—In trying to discredit Alexander Howat, the day the fighting Kansan spoke before the Illinois Miners' convention, Farrington declared he drew out of the fight for Howat because Howat associated with the agitators for dual unionism. Farrington, as reported by the stenographic record, stated:

"We have a dual movement in the miners' organization now known as the Miners' National Progressive Committe. It is headed by William Z. Foster, who has openly declared he is going to destroy the trade union movement if he can. Alex went down there (to the Progressive Miners' Conference) against our advice and he identified himself with that gang. When he did that I wrote him a letter and told him I did not propose to align myself with Foster and a lot of other I. W. W.'s and Communists who were trying to destroy the United Mine Workers of America."

But in writing the letter printed in full below, Farrington declared he DID NOT think the progressive miners a dual organization. Farrington seems to form his opinions as they suit his political ambitions. Farrington in direct contradiction of his recent public statements, in his letter says that Howat is not identified with dual unionists. Take your choice.

Farrington's Tell-Tale Letter.

Springfield, Ill.

"Mr. Hugh Kennedy, Secretary,
"Local Union No. 52,
"Centralia, Ill.

"Dear Sir and Brother:

"I am returning herewith the circular letter which accompanied your letter of May 3. I do not think the men who are behind the so-called progressive movement have any intentions, whatever, of establishing a dual organization of mine workers, instead their activities, I think, are due entirely to their determination to clean up some of the corruption that is going on in our international union.

"I think they are making a mistake by terming themselves the progressive members of the United Mine Workers of America, but I am quite certain they have no intention of trying to establish a dual organization. Instead of trying to establish a dual organization I think they are trying to mobilize those who are opposed to the corruption in the U. M. W. A. so that an effective protest may be made.

"Alex Howat has repeatedly declared that he will have nothing to do with the establishment of a dual organization of mine workers and I am satisfied that he meant just what he said. I do think, however, that Howat has much reason for complaint and he will no doubt identify himself with this element in our union because he believes that this is the only way he can secure justice, for himself and the Kansas mine workers.

Yours truly,
(Signed). FRANK FARRINGTON,
President.

She-Woman Cleans Up On Pacifist From Milwaukee

NEW YORK, May 26.—Brooklyn police were after a new bobbed hair bandit today.

Louis Saxt, recently from Milwaukee, described her as a determined, two-gun girl who walked into his shop, jerked a pair of wicked blue automatic pistols from her handbag, backed him to the wall, and took $60 from his pockets.

"She gave me back $5," Saxt said, "when I pleaded I must have something to send my wife and babies in Russia."

The girl then walked leisurely from his shop, Saxt said, after warning him not to move for five minutes. She took the key and locked the door as she departed.

600 GIRLS' LIVES IN PERIL; INJUNCTION STOPS INSPECTION

Peril of immediate death confronts 600 telephone girls during every moment of the working day, because a gasoline company prevailed upon Circuit Judge Ira Ryner to issue an injunction relieving them of the necessity of complying with ordinary fire regulations in the construction of a a storage tank in the United Tailors' and Cleaners' Building at 3525 N. Clark street. Leakage of the gasoline into the Lake View Exchange of the Illinois Bell Telephone Company makes the possibility of explosion imminent.

Efforts to save the lives of these girls by an inspection of the new building and tank by the fire prevention bureau were stopped under the protection of Judge Ryner's injunction, by which city officials are barred from carrying out an ordinary public duty. The tank was constructed without the knowledge of the bureau.

Upon complaint of the telephone company of the seepage of gasoline into cellar catch-basins in their building, the tank was ordered drained.

Methodists Call World Conference To Cry About War

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., May 26.—A special anti-war resolution calling for a conference of all religious workers to fight the evils of war, was adopted unanimously by the Methodist General Conference today. The resolution adopted today urged America's entrance into a world court of international justice, favors President Coolidge's calling another disarmament conference and implies faith in the league of nations.

This resolution was drafted after a resolution condemning war had been defeated after bitter arguments on the floor of the convention.

TEXTILE WORKERS NEED JUST ENOUGH TO LIVE AND LABOR, IS ANNOUNCEMENT OF EMPLOYERS

By LELAND OLDS
(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

Wages should be no higher than necessary to maintain the wage earner as an efficient producing machine. Until the workers of the country allow wages to be shaken down to the point, where they give up comforts not necessary to keep them in a proper state of productivity, unemployment is likely to continue.

This is the capitalist theory of wages expressed without a quibble in the April issue of the Stone & Webster journal, the official organ of the huge public utility trust of that name.

It is their comment on the report from Lawrence, Mass., that "the textile industry is in such a state that thousands of people who depend upon that industry for a livelihood are now out of employment. Many families and persons are now in dire want and the outlook is not encouraging."

Live On Hay.

Lawrence textile workers, says the rich corporation, like millions of other persons, have consumed a gread deal more than was necessary to keep them in the highest stage of production. (These workers have an average wage of $20.53 a week.) These textile workers can't extricate themselves except by their willingness to forego that amount of consumption which is above the amount necessary to keep them in the highest efficiency as workers. (There once was a big French employer who put this more briefly by suggesting that the people eat hay. He ended his career swinging from a lamp post with a wisp of hay in his mouth.)

Just Labor Machines.

These employers hold that workers should share in the increased productivity of modern machine industry only to make them more efficient machines.

"Productive consumption ceases and unproductive consumption begins," they say "at a point beyond which things are consumed that are not necessary to keep a producer in the best condition to produce. Up to 1923 the 100,000,000 inhabitants of the United States paid for this overconsumption by the Lawrence textile operatives. In recent months the 100,000,000 have refused to pay the bill. They have stopped buying as much in the way of clothes as formerly. Consequently a great unemployment problem was raised at Lawrence. One is not necessarily heartless in saying that the Lawrence textile workers have no one to blame but themselves and the whole body of labor."

Stone & Webster feel that the country is approaching the end of the economic situation created by the war. It is hardly thinkable, they say, that we shall regain a fairly normal state of affairs without considerable hardship here and there. But the public utilities operated by Stone & Webster during 1923 made a profit of $17,155,956 on a gross business of $42,468,428.

Bosses' Cold-Blooded Viewpoint.

Labor faced with a new period of unemployment and wage-cutting recognize that this will be the viewpoint of employers as long as industry is operated for private profits, however much it is disguised by experiments in class collaboration. Management is bound to seek in one way or another to take for the absentee owners the largest possible share of production, leaving the workers the smallest possible share commensurate with their continued functioning as efficient machines.

STRIKEBREAKING PROVIDED FOR IN NEW RAIL BILL

Bad 'Emergency' Clause In Howell-Barkley Law

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, May 26.— Shall railroad strikes be settled by means of federal receiverships? If so, which way will the settlements go?

These questions are worrying railroad labor men as they study the amendment to the Howell-Barkley railroad labor bill, approved by their friends in the Senate interstate commerce committee. It reads:

"Sec. 8. Receivership in emergency: If, notwithstanding the provisions of this act, any lockout or strike or other dispute between a carrier and the employes should interrupt the operation of any carrier to such an extent as in the opinion of the President to constitute an emergency, involving a serious interference with or obstruction of interstate commerce and (or) the transportation of the mails, he is hereby authorized to direct the attorney general to apply for the appointment by a court of competent jurisdiction of a receiver to control and direct the operation of such a carrier and to manage its properties during the continuance of such an emergency. Any district court of the United States within whose jurisdiction is located the principal office of such a carrier shall be authorized in a suit so instituted by the attorney general, under the direction of the President, and in the name of the United States, to appoint a receiver as above provided, which receiver shall be a person or persons neither financially nor otherwise associated in interest with the management or employes of said carrier, but each such receiver shall be an impartially disinterested individual. The President is hereby authorized to make one or several recommendations of a person or persons whom he deems competent and suitable for such an appointment as such a receiver or receivers."

Desperate Boss Bakers Grasp At Injunction Weapon

NEW YORK, May 26.—Unable to defeat the union in any other way, six remaining bakery shops are using the injunction weapon against Bakery and Confectionery Workers' International union, New York locals. The employers refuse to renew the union agreement. A temporary injunction against the strikers has been secured. The legal fight is now over a permanent injunction.

YOUNG WORKERS START BIG PUSH FOR PAPER SUBS

Prizes To Young Worker "Go-Getters"

The Young Workers' League is inaugurating an energetic campaign for subs to their paper, the Young Worker. They have sent out the following message:

To All Young Workers.

The revolutionary youth movement is becoming more important every day. Thousands of young workers are realizing that they are being miserably exploited and oppressed, used as cannon fodder in capitalist wars, and compelled to do the dirtiest work in order to make a bare living. They are revolting against a system which permits such a state of affairs to exist—they are determined to change it.

The Young Workers' League is endeavoring to guide these young workers along Communist lines, to lead them out of the desert into the future society.

In this work our greatest aid is our newspaper, the Young Worker. It is only thru the Young Worker that we can reach all these thousands of exploited young workers with our message, give them our leadership. The Young Worker is an organ of which we, as well as every other young worker who ever read it, are proud. We must aid the Young Worker to reach these thousands of working class youth, to draw them into the fighting ranks.

Every member and sympathizer of the Young Workers' League should become a subscriber.

Every young worker should become a sub-getter.

Let us line up behind the Young Worker for the revolutionary working class movement.

Books for Subs.

To stimulate interest in the sub drive, the following prizes are offered:

1. Every subscriber, whether new or renewal, will receive his choice of one of the following books:

State and Revolution, by N. Lenin; Program of the Communists, by Bucharin; Life of Lenin, by Zinoviev; Communism and Christianism, by Bishop Brown.

2. Each comrade securing at least five subs from non-members of the Y. W. L. will receive the following set of books:

Program of the Communists, by Bucharin; Left Communists, by Lenin; State and Revolution, by Lenin; Life of Labor Party, by John Pepper; Communism and Christianism, by Bishop Brown.

3. The comrades who received the highest number of subs will receive a free pass to all league and worker's party affairs for one year.

A year's subscription is $1.00. Subs can be gotten at the office of the Y. W. L. at 208 E. Twelfth street, or at the office of this newspaper.

District Executive Committee,
Y. W. L.

Y. W. L. Dance at Kenosha.

KENOSHA, Wis., May 26.— The Young Workers' League of this city will give a dance at the Danish Brotherhood Hall, Howland avenue, Saturday night, May 31. Old and young are invited, however. One of the best orchestras in town will furnish both the old-time waltz music and the latest jazz hits.

COOLIDGE DEALT BLOW BY CLEARING OF OIL PROBER

More Evidence Comes On Framing of Strikers

By LAURENCE TODD.
(Staff Correspondent of the Fed. Press)

WASHINGTON, May 26.—Adoption by the Senate, by a vote of 56 to 5, of the majority report of the Borah committee, holding Sen. Wheeler of Montana, to be innocent of any violation of the letter or the spirit of the law, in the technical frameup indictment brought against him in Montana by the Daugherty-Coolidge-Lockwood political organization, involves these consequences:

1. It deals a terrific blow to the Republican National Committee and to Coolidge, in whose interest the indictment was brought.

2. It smashes the drive of the administration to stop the investigation of its crooks and crookedness by the Senate and House.

3. It establishes a warning to federal judicial machinery, to keep hands off the work of legislative bodies in future.

Senators who ventured to vote with the administration on one or the other of the three rollcalls taken on this issue of the Wheeler plot were Curtis of Kansas, Moses of New Hampshire, Phipps of Colorado, Reed of Pennsylvania, Spencer of Missouri, Stanfield of Oregon, Wadsworth of New York, Warren of Wyoming and Willis of Ohio.

Framer of Strikers At Bay.

In the most tumultuous session of his investigating committee yet held, Wheeler had prefaced his own vindication by bringing to bay in the witness chair the man behind the recent shadowing of the committee and espionage upon Gaston Means, and his callers. This was Hiram Todd of New York, a hard-boiled, loud-voiced, sneering individual who boasted of his effectiveness in jailing railroad strikers at the direction of Daugherty.

He received $1,000 a month for that job, undertaken "when we found that public sentiment in the west was turning against the strike." Some months ago Daugherty assigned him to prosecute Gaston Means, and meanwhile, as Wheeler showed, Todd has been letting great numbers of bootleggers slip thru the hands of the law after their indictment in New York.

Never Prosecuted Bosses.

When Todd bragged of having convicted the railroad brotherhood men who stopped some trains, at the expectation of a strike, at Needles, Cal., Sen. Brookhart asked if he had ever convicted any railroad managers or business men—the DuPonts, for instance, or any of the other war fraud criminals. Todd replied that that had not been his job.

Wheeler suggested, after a series of clashes in which they ran a risk of blows, that Daugherty never put this go-getter on any case that he "didn't want to have prosecuted."

Then he produced a letter from one Gilchrist, clerk of the federal court in New York, to Judge Killits in Toledo, a notorious reactionary, notifying Killits that Todd wanted him assigned to New York to try Means.

Todd, when pinned down to declaring that Gilchrist had not told the truth, refused to deny that he had named Killits as the judge he wanted. Earlier in the day he had denounced Means as a "crook," thereby disqualifying himself as a fair public prosecutor of Means' case. The disclosure that he had tried to pick his judge merely rounded out the impression he had already made—as a typical Daugherty agent.

HOWAT SOUNDS CALL FOR MILITANT UNIONISM

Extracts from Alex Howat's great speech to the convention of Illinois miners are given below from the official convention records. In contrast to the petty bickering with which Frank Farrington tried to discredit Howat, both Howat's original speech and his reply to the heckling of Farrington go straight to the heart of the rank and file miner. Howat's speech is a defense of the coal-digger against the pay-roll official. It opposes the obstructive attitude that nothing can be done and presents the constructive program of the Progressive Miners' Committee. Said Howat:

"I refused to go down the line on certain things and incurred the enmity of President Lewis. That is the reason I was kicked out of the miners union two years and seven months ago without a trial and without the least justification for it. When we were in jail President Lewis never sent a telegram or letter; he never sent a man down there to see if we had carried out the instructions of the convention. He never sent a telegram asking me if I had ordered the men back to work. No. When we were engaged in a fight against the Industrial Court Law, President Lewis got on our back with Governor Allen and kicked us out of the miners' union.

Farrington Misled.

"I concede the right of any man in this country to support any man he pleases; I take that right for myself, but I feel that President Farrington has been misled in some way and that he did not have a just cause for not going down the line with us.

"I suppose if I had told President Lewis that I would go down the line with him, right or wrong, that I would be with him, thru thick and thin, no matter what the fight was, and if some strong man ran against him for president at some time I would be with him, I suppose I might still be president of the Kansas miners. I did not do that, and I am not going to smother my principles for any man. I am not going to be a member of the miners' union by sacrificing my principles as a man.

Howat Goes the Limit.

"The Kansas miners will testify whether I have always gone the limit during the years I had the honor to represent them in standing for their rights. I would rather go to jail fighting for a principle than to surrender a principle in order to stay out of jail. I would rather go to jail fighting for the rights of the miners than to stay out of jail by giving away their rights. I would rather be put out of my official position and out of the miners' union for standing for the rights of the men than to give away their rights and stay on the job and stay in the organization as a member.

"Of course, I could have got along more easily if I had permitted the coal operators to impose upon the men, but when I was elected president of that district I said I was going to see that the men received justice at the hands of the operators. I have tried to carry out that policy in the many years I had the honor to represent the Kansas miners.

After Howat finished speaking, President Farrington, in an effort to counteract the tremendous effect produced upon the convention by Howat's speech, said in part:

"Since this convention has been in session one delegate has gone out of his way to say the president of the Illinois Mine Workers was guilty of an act of treachery towards Alexander Howat. Do you believe that, Alex?"

Why Did Farrington Quit.

Mr. Howat: Mr. Chairman, I could not say it in those words. During the sixteen months we were in jail President Farrington and the Illinois miners made a splendid fight in our behalf, and some time later on, after I got out of jail, President Farrington, for reasons of his own, wrote me and advised me that he could not go with me any longer. I realize that the fight he was leading had a tremendous effect, and when I received his letter I was sorry that he did not feel he could go along with us to the end of the fight.

"While you were in the fight, President Farrington, you made a good fight and I was sorry, of course, when you felt you could not go along with me. I felt it would have a bad effect upon some of the officials in other parts of the country who might be disposed to go with me. I felt that you had been misled in some way and did not have a just cause for quitting the fight before it was won."

Admits Lewis' Guilt.

Mr. Farrington: "The Chair wants to say this: I don't believe there is anyone in this convention who have said as many times as I have said it that there was no warrant under the laws of the miners' organization that would sustain President Lewis in doing the things he did to Alexander Howat. I have said that in season and out of season, by word of mouth and by pen, in the presence of President Lewis and in his absence, and I say it here and now again—there was no warrant in the laws of the miners' union that would sustain International President Lewis in doing the things that were done to Alexander Howat and the Kansas mine workers.

Tries to Explain.

"I suppose the convention is interested in knowing why I wrote Alexander Howat and told him I could not go any further with him.

"I had reasons for telling Alex I could not go any farther with him. We have a dual movement in the miners' organization now known as the Miners' National Progressive Committee, I think. It has been pronounced as being dual to the United Mine Workers of America by the International Executive Board of our union. It is headed by W. Z. Foster, who has openly declared that he is going to destroy the present trade union movement if he can. I haven't any fight with Foster but I am not going to associate myself with him.

"This so-called progressive committee had a meeting in Pittsburgh during the month of June last year. W. Z. Foster was one of the leaders in that movement. Alex went down there and participated in it. He will not deny that, I think. They made plans in that meeting to capture the miners' organization and run it in their way. And Foster, a man who is not a miner or a member of the organization at all, was one of the chief actors in that meeting.

Alex Refuses Machine's Command.

"Alex went down there against our advice and he identified himself with that gang. When he did that I wrote him a letter and told him that, so far as I was concerned, I was done, that I did not propose to align myself or identify myself with W. Z. Foster and a lot of other I. W. W. and Communists who were trying to destroy the United Mine Workers of America. Isn't that what I told you, Alex?"

Mr. Howat: "Yes."

Hindmarsh Boils Over.

Delegate Hindmarsh: "Will the chair submit to a question?"

President Farrington: "When I get thru, yes. We have their agents in this convention; they have been with us ever since we have been in session proselyting among the delegates. They have no business here. Some of them are voting on questions that come before this convention, even though they have no right to do it. Their paper is distributed here every morning, their representative sits at the press table, and each day he is misrepresenting the proceedings of this convention—everybody is a thief and a crook and a reactionary. Everything your president does has an ulterior motive behind it, according to their version of things. And I say to you that if they were in any place but a miners' convention and they would say the things about the presiding officer of that convention they have said about the presiding officer of this convention, they would be thrown out of the convention.

"I have publicly declared on numerous occasions, from the housetops, if you please, that, in my opinion, Alexander Howat had been done an outrageous injustice. But if W. Z. Foster and that gang are going to straighten out Alex's troubles, I am going to let them do the job and I don't propose to have anything more to do with it.

Always Apposed Dual Unionism.

In a masterful reply, Alexander Howat tells the meaning of the Pittsburgh convention of the Progressive Miners' Committee and refutes Farrington's statements that the progressive miners stand for dual unionism.

Mr. Howat: "Lest a wrong impression be left, I want to say I am not striking at the vitals of the United Mine Workers.

"I have advised the miners in all parts of the country that, no matter what grievances they had or how dissatisfied they might be with their officials or the way their organization was run, to stay in the United Mine Workers of America, and if they had any differences, to fight them out on the inside and not on the outside. I have advised the miners in my own district to do that. That is my advice now. If I was trying to disrupt the organization I would not expect President Farrington or any other man who had the welfare of the miners at heart to be with me, but I believe President Farrington and the miners of this country know I am not trying to disrupt the miners' union. I have always tried to do my part to make the miners' union stronger, and that will be my policy in the future, no matter what may become of my case. Whether or not I will be put out of the union again, I will always advise the miners to stay on the inside and fight out their differences.

Farrington A Quitter.

"President Farrington wrote the letter referred to nearly a year ago. It is true he told me he could not go along with me any longer. I felt that he did not have a just cause for quitting me in the fight. I had not done anything to justify his action and that President Farrington had been misinformed by somebody.

About Pittsburgh Conference.

"Some of the best men, in my opinion, we have in the miners' union were in that meeting. I was not a member of the United Mine Workers at that time and felt I had no right to take a part in their proceedings because the meeting was composed of members of the union. I knew that some of the men there had been thru the fight years ago to establish the miners' union in this country.

Progressives The Best Fighters.

"Regardless of what the International may say about that meeting, the men there had no more thought of establishing a dual movement in the miners' union than you men in this convention have today. I knew most of the men who were there, I had known many of them for years as some of the best fighters in the organization. I was not a delegate, I had no part in the meeting, and I have no hesitancy in saying here that if I had been a member of the miners' union, if I had been president of District 14 at that time, I expect I would have been a delegate to that convention, but not with any thought of disrupting the United Mine Workers of America, not with any thought of doing something that was detrimental in any way to the interests of the miners' union or to the interests of the coal miners of the country. I would have been there with the thought of making our organization better and stronger, better able to do more for the rank and file of the coal miners than the International Union is doing at the present time.

"One of the things the miners there had in mind was to draw up a platform demanding certain things the miners of the country wanted. If that platform had been referred to a referendum vote of the members of our union, I believe they would have voted 95 per cent to adopt it. There was no thought on my part or on the part of the men who attended that convention to do anything that would be detrimental to the best interests of the union. One of the things they had in mind was to try to get the coal miners of this country organized among themselves to go into the International convention and fight for some of the things they believed would be for the best interest of the miners.

Rank and File Agree.

"One of the things they wanted the miners to stand together for was the six-hour work-day, another was nationalization of the mines and another was reinstatement of the officials of District 14. I believe a majority of the delegates here read the platform adopted at that meeting, and I have not heard one word of condemnation here or on the part of any miner in the country of the platform adopted in the Pittsburgh meeting nearly a year ago.

Why Farrington Quit.

"I felt that President Farrington had been misled by some of my enemies who had told him things he did not mention in the letter.

"If President Farrington had gone along in the fight it might be over now. It is true, as he says, that I have never heard that he said anything against me, and I hope if he cannot see his way clear to go along with me in the fight until it is over after hearing my explanation, that he and none of the other officials will put anything in my way to make the fight harder. It has been a long, hard fight, but I have always had faith in the United Mine Workers of America, and I feel when they know the truth they will give me a square deal.

"Any time I can be of service to the miners here or any place else, whether I am a member of their union or not, you will always find my voice raised for the miners and the working class.

Not a Job Hunter.

"I appreciate as much as it is possible for any human being to appreciate anything, the way you have stood with me in this fight. I believe the rank and file of the miners are overwhelmingly in favor of seeing us reinstated in the miners' union.

"I am glad at least the rank and file stayed with me even tho nearly all the officials of the miners' union have been against me all the way thru the fight, with very few exceptions.

"If the time ever comes that I have to vote to crucify some poor devil to uphold the International President in order to stay on the pay-roll, I hope some one will blow my head off."

further reports at intervals since then. No suit has yet been filed."

U. S. Strike Breaking Proved.

Representative Lineberger of Los Angeles, banker and former civil engineer, who entered the committee room after Rice had told of the strike-breaking contribution by the shipping board, vouched for the reliability of F. C. McDonald, general president of the California State Building Trades Council, whom Rice cited as his informant with regard to the shipowners' contributing to the building trades war in San Francisco. Lineberger said McDonald is "no firebrand," and Rice added that he is a close friend of Secretary of the Navy Wilbur.

Rice then testified that McDonald furnished him with a list of the contributors to this $1,200,000 fund in support of the illegal attempt to break up the building trades and all other unions in California.

Lineberger asked whether California business had "officially" taken part in this anti-union war. He asked concerning the part played "officially" by the Bankers' Association, the Chamber of Commerce, the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association, and the Better America Federation. Rice did not know about the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association of Los Angeles, but said that the officers and members of the other groups had helped in the drive to destroy union labor. Lineberger then asked that McDonald's list of contributors to that fund be produced for the record.

O'Connor Tells of Scab Pledge.

Chairman O'Connor of the shipping board testified that, at the time of the 1919 strike on the Pacific coast, he went out there as head of the Longshoremen's International Union, altho the strike was an unauthorized one. The shipping board had joined in paying into the shipowners' strike fund an assessment based on the dead-weight tonnage of their ships. About $500,000 was raised for the maintenance of "hiring halls" where the anti-union pledge was exacted of all applicants for jobs on ships. Rice testified that ex-service men were forced to take the same pledge as other job-seekers.

Expose O'Connor's Treason.

Answering questions by Representative Cooper, Rice testified that O'Connor, after he became chairman of the board, wrote a letter to District Director Simms, ordering him to disregard clause 3 in the contract made with operators of ships, thereby permitting the hiring of men thru these union-seeking agencies. O'Connor made no direct reply, but said that he had tried to see that the "hiring halls" did not exclusively furnish men for government ships; he could not say whether the anti-union rule still prevailed on government ships or not.

Rice stated that the fact of payment of the $163,000 to the scab-enlisting fund was certified by E. W. Relyea, district director for the board, in a report which Rice forwarded to the department of justice.

SEX SLAVERY ON PLANTATIONS UP TO BRITISH LABOR

Compulsory Prostitution On Islands Continue

By W. FRANCIS AHERN.

MELBOURNE, Australia, May 26.—Will the British Labor government tolerate the manner in which native labor is exploited by the French authorities in the New Hebrides islands (South Pacific ocean) and women are handed over by the French for common use of the male workers?

Independent investigations show that the position of women on French plantations in the islands in intolerable. The women are illegally taken, and illegally kept beyond their time. They are used by the planters to decoy men. They are married or divorced at the will of the planter, and are given over to the promiscuous use of men. In other words, enforced prostitution seems to be the order of the day.

The British government, which with the French government exercises joint control of the islands, has acknowledged that these conditions exist, but protests its inability to put a stop to the practices.

From what The Federated Press is able to gather from traders and missionaries joint control of the islands has failed to protect the natives or to settle a single land dispute.

Now that a labor government is in control in Great Britain, it is urged that steps be taken to secure complete control of the islands by the elimination of the French, whose ideas of colonization in the New Hebrides are not in line with civilized standards.

Profitable Disarmament

SYDNEY, N. S. W.—In conformity with the Washington peace pact, the battleship Australia, formerly flagship of the Australian navy, was sunk in the presence of the other vessels of the navy. On the evening following the sinking of the Australia, the prime minister announced building two new cruisers—the combined tonnage of which would more than equal that of the vessel sunk.

FORD PLANNING FIVE DAY WEEK AT HIGHER SPEED AND LESS PAY; WOULD SAVE $30,000,000 YEARLY

By LELAND OLDS.
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

To swell the profits of the Ford family by another $30,000,000 a year, workers in the Ford automobile plants may be asked to produce as much for 5 days pay as they now produce for six, according to the Detroit bureau of The Wall Street journal. Henry will recall his continual advocacy of the five day week on the ground that the extra day of rest would enable workmen to turn out as much in five days as he now turns out in six.

But in the industrial system, in which profit is all important, the entire gain from such increased productivity belongs to capital. Ford pays more only when it means greater profits.

Ford's profits of $82,263,483 for the year ended February 29, 1924, are not considered satisfactory particularly as they represent almost no profit on the 2,200,000 cars turned out during that period. Actual profits from car sales were only $4,113,483 or less than $2 a car. As remarked by The Wall Street Journal, Ford Motor Company is now selling automobiles practically at cost. In the previous year the sale of new cars netted $56,000,000 of the $119,000,000 profits realized.

This year's profits came almost entirely from sale of parts, from excessive freight charges collected on automobile shipments, from by-products and from interest on the cash resources of the concern.

Working 7,000,000 Ford Owners.

It is estimated that each of the 7,000,000 Ford owners buys about $40 worth of parts a year of which the Ford company's share is $28. The company's profit takes about $4.20 of this or $29,400,000 a year. The difference between the freight charged to the customer and the freight paid by the company to the railroads is estimated at $15 a car, adding $32,750,000 to the last year's profit column which is shown with that of the previous year in the following table:

Ford Profits	1923	1922
From parts	$29,400,000	$ 25,500,000
From interest	6,000,000	8,000,000
From freight	32,750,000	22,500,000
From by-prod.	10,000,000	7,432,000
From new cars	4,113,483	55,866,862
Total	$82,263,483	$119,298,862

If Ford should get the same production from a five-day week as he now gets from six days, profits on this year's basis would be swelled to approximately $112,000,000 on the invested capital totaling $435,000,000.

Workers Made It All.

If the workers are asked to sacrifice one-sixth of their wages, about $12 per car, to make up this satisfactory return the question whether this enormous investment is not in reality the investment of the employes during 20 years becomes pertinent. The original capital from which this huge concern developed was $28,000. Surplus profits provided the rest.

Surplus profits at the end of the year had accumulated to $442,041,081 or $2,560 per share of stock. This was produced by the most scientific exploitation of workers yet devised. This result of the worker's increased productivity exists as an excuse for larger profits rather than as a basis for shorter hours without reducing pay showing how small is the worker's stake in industrial progress so long as it is dominated by private interests.

JAP ENVOY MAY LEAVE AS BAN BILL PROTEST

Or Stay If Coolidge Vetoes Exclusion Act

WASHINGTON, May 26.—Masanao Hanihara, Japanese ambassador to Washington, will resign his post here if President Coolidge signs the immigration bill providing for Japanese exclusions, it was learned authoritively today. Action by the president on the bill is expected momentarily.

Should Hanihara quit, the two countries would be without ambassadors in their respective capitals at a time of somewhat strained relations. Cyrus E. Woods, American ambassador to Tokio already has resigned.

Hanihara, it is said, feels that his usefulness here would be over if the immigration bill is signed. He feels, however, that the situation would be different if the president vetoed the measure.

Oust All Traitors From Parliament, Australians Demand

By W. FRANCIS AHERN
(Staff Correspondent of the Fed. Press)

SYDNEY, N. S. W., May 26.—Recall of renegade labor representatives in parliament and the five day, 40 hour week for men and women workers with streetcar fares paid by the employer are the principal planks in the New South Wales Labor council program.

Other measures include socialization of industry beginning with transfer of state funds from private to government banks as soon as this Australian state goes Labor, united labor front, equal minimum wage for men and women with full support when ill, old or unemployed, no strikebreaking, full state maintenance for children up to 16, endowment of motherhood, abolition of white lead in painting, state cement works, stringent adminstration of the monopolies act, state housing, tax upon large holdings of land, a big public works policy inclusive of railways and hydro-electric.

UKRAINIANS IN BOSTON PROTEST POLISH TYRANNY

Workers Appeal For Friends At Home

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BOSTON, Mass., May 26.—The Ukrainian branch of the Workers' Party held in Credit Union hall a mass meeting protesting against the Polish occupation of western Ukrainia. M. Kniozevich was the chief speaker. T. Wanovcy was chairman.

Ask DAILY WORKER Aid.

Over 300 Ukrainian workers participated in the meeting and passed the following resolution with a request for publication in the DAILY WORKER:

RESOLUTION.

We, the Ukrainian workers and residents of Boston assembled in a mass meeting May 18, having discussed at that meeting the conditions of social political life of our brothers and countrymen in the territories, occupied by Polish imperialists, were convinced that

The Polish occupation authorities are subjecting some ten millions of the Ukrainian population to a cruel oppression in all branches of economical, political, national and cultural life, the results of this being that

Poles Refuse Ukraine Workers.

The Polish rulers have deprived the Ukrainian peasants and workers of their means of a decent living by settling Polish colonists on Ukrainian lands and by refusing to employ the Ukrainian workers in industries, private or national, and in civil service, and that

In political life the rights of Ukrainian population are totally overruled by lawless tactics of Polish bourgeois political parties, the Ukrainian voters being terrorized in time of local or national balloting or elections, and that

No Schools.

In cultural life Ukrainians are suffering from lack of Ukrainian schools and other educational institutions, those having been ruined and prohibited by Polish authorities, and also from lack of Ukrainian labor publications that have been recently suppressed by Polish censorship, and that

The Ukrainian population is being persecuted by Polish state and Polish Catholic church even on account of its racial attributes and its religious beliefs, and the prisons in Poland are filled today with thousands of Ukrainians, their only guilt being that they, in some manner, dared to give outward expression to their outraged feelings, or ventured to protest against the inhumane regime of their oppressors.

Arouse America.

Therefore, and because of such outrage and tyranny, we raise our voice of protest before the organized workers of the world and demand freedom and justice for those, our brothers in Western Ukraine, who are facing extermination from the leaders of Polish nobility.

We appeal chiefly to the working people of America and those countries, where the governments have to heed the just demands of the workers and can assist by virtue of their influence in international matters of rightfulness, in securing human rights for the peasants and workers of Western Ukrain.

Appeal to Russia.

We appeal also to the workers and peasants of Soviet Republics, and especially to the government of Soviet Ukraine, urging them to make adequate efforts in helping our unfortunate countrymen in Western Ukraine to shake off the yoke of Polish oppression and gain their liberty and right to self-determination.

Today, as in past centuries, the Ukrainian people are striving for liberty and independence, and having those lofty aspirations, justly deserve in their present struggle with Polish conquerors the assistance from the working people of all and every country.

Business Men Agree That Industrial Slump Is With Us

NEW YORK, May 26.—The situation in business is here, according to the majority of 30,000 business men in all industries and states who answered the annual questionaire of the National Association of Manufacturers. May business is poor, 22 per cent report, while 34 per cent say it is only fair. A slight majority expect an improvement in the autumn. Figures of the survey were given to the annual meeting of the association in New York.

Industrial peace is reported by 95 per cent and 5 per cent believe they have eliminated all possibilities of strikes.

An oversupply of skilled and unskilled labor is reported. Compared with last spring 59 per cent report wage increases and 18 per cent record wage decreases.

Normal supply of stocks on hand is reported by 54 per cent, while 18 per cent say they are understocked, and the remainder are oversupplied.

The Workers Party in Action

Party or Coalition

By C. E. RUTHENBERG,
Executive Secretary, Workers' Party.

THE question whether the June 17th convention shall merely form a coalition of various groups for the 1924 election campaign or whether it shall form a Farmer-Labor Party with a definite organizational program, is one of the important issues which will have to be threshed out at the convention.

The Workers Party believes that the June 17th convention should definitely organize a Farmer-Labor Party, not only for the 1924 election campaign but for a continuous struggle in the interests of the farmers and workers against the capitalist parties and the capitalist system.

It believes that the overwhelming majority of delegates to the June 17th convention will make a similar demand.

An election coalition means that the convention will nominate candidates for president and vice-president and then elect a national campaign committee to carry on the campaign this year without endeavoring to create on a nation-wide basis a party organization which will continue to exist after the election is over, ready to serve the workers and farmers in their future struggles.

To accept such a proposal means that there will be the great possibility that all the work, energy and enthusiasm that has been put into the June 17th convention will be lost. The Farmer-Labor Party cannot be expected to rise to victory in its first campaign. Very few, if any, political parties have ever come into existence which in their first fight have gone thru to victory. It is the long, persistent political struggle that finally wins results, and such a struggle can only be carried on by a definite party organization which does not only fight during election campaigns but carries on a year 'round struggle in the interests of the class which it represents.

Those who hold the coalition viewpoint sometimes add that after the elections, another convention should be held at which the Farmer-Labor Party could be definitely organized. This would mean to sacrifice the best opportunity for organization and try to create an organization in the most difficult time. It is in the spirit of a fight that organizations are created. A party can organize itself only in the conduct of a struggle and the election campaign period will be the best period to create a nation-wide Farmer-Labor organization.

Fitzpatrick's Defunct Organization.

What happens to organizations which are merely election coalitions has just been demonstrated in the demise of the old Farmer-Labor Party of Fitzpatrick, Buck and Brown. This organization, while it called itself a political party, was merely an election coalition. It did nothing between campaigns. It had no continued political program and did not call upon workers and farmers from day to day and week to week to enter into certain actions in their own interests. Such an oganization could not permanently hold the allegiance of workers and farmers. It is only an organization which is continually stirring new interest, continually demonstrating that it is ever on the watch, guiding the interests of the class it represents, that will stand as a permanent body.

Any other kind of organization will be built upon sand and will soon disappear as the old Farmer-Labor Party is now disappearing from the scene.

What June 17th Should Do.

The June 17th convention should formulate a definite organizational plan for a permanent, solidly organized and closely-knit Farmer-Labor Party.

The Farmer-Labor Party, as it has developed in the United States, and as it exists in its English prototype, is not built up upon individual membership. Its organizational units are organizations of industrial workers and farmers representing them in the economic struggle, such as the trade unions, farmers' co-operatives, labor fraternal organizations. These organizations, together with farmer and labor political groups, federate in the Farmer-Labor Party, maintaining their autonomy of action outside of the Farmer-Labor Party.

The June 17th convention should adopt a definite plan for federation on a local, state and national scale of all organizations of industrial workers and farmers; it should create a Nation Executive Committee which will function all the year around. Election campaigns are not the only means of political action. Mass meetings, mass demonstrations should play a part in the Farmer-Labor program between the election campaigns. The Farmer-Labor Party should carry on educational work to familiarize even wider masses of workers and farmers with its aims and objects. It must have speakers and lecturers and papers for this work. The National Executive Committee must closely follow every development of the political life of this country and must issue slogans for the struggles against the capitalists in every situation affecting the lives of the workers and farmers.

A party organized on this basis of continuously functioning as a fighting organization of workers and farmers will not die and disappear as have the political organizations thrown up by the workers' struggles in the past. It will hold its place in the hearts of the masses of farmers and workers. It will show by its actions that it is entitled to their support.

It is now, on the present wave of enthusiasm, that such a party can be organized. If this opportunity is missed at the June 17th convention and only an election coalition organized, it will be gone for some years to come.

Every workers' and farmers' organization that desires a permanent Labor Party, every trade union, co-operative or fraternal organization which is ready to become part of such a permanent federation of the forces of farmers and workers should instruct its delegates to the St. Paul convention to stand firmly for the organization of a Farmer-Labor Party.

The election campaign this year will see great masses of farmers and workers mobolized for the struggle against the old Republican and Democratic parties. For the first time in the history of the labor movement of this country there will be a great mobilization of the political strength of the farmers and workers to fight for their class interests. Let us not only make this election campaign a great fight against the capitalist parties, but the preparation for greater struggles in the future—for the great struggle which will bring the Workers' and Farmers' Government.

The Farmer-Labor Party is the instrument thru which the Workers' and Farmers' Government will be achieved. Let us create that party on a national scale at the St. Paul convention.

WITH THE YOUNG WORKERS
CONDUCTED - BY THE YOUNG WORKERS LEAGUE

THE SIGNIFICANCE OF BOYS' WEEK

By PETER HERD

From May 18th to May the 24th, there was celebrated, thruout the United States, Boys' Week. During this week meetings were arranged in every city in the United States which had for their aims and purposes the moulding of the minds of the sons and daughters of this country along the lines which please, and insure the safety of those who own the wealth of this country.

Parades were arranged in every city, and these parades served the same end: the further enslavevent of the minds of the future workers of this country.

Thruout the whole of the United States the daily newspapers, with but few exceptions, proclaimed the purpose of Boys' Week to be the one week of the year during which the interests of the boys of this country are carefully considered and special stress laid upon the welfare and training of the "future citizens" of this "Land of Milk and Honey."

The vast majority of the population of the United States are workers; and by far the great majority of the boys and girls of this country are the sons and daughters of workers—boys and girls who, in the very near future, will be compelled to go to work to earn their livings.

The iron fist of Imperialism rules this country. Any attempt on the part of the workers to better their conditions is suppressed most ruthlessly. A small number of wealthy owners—heavy industrialists and financiers—rule the United States today; and this small group of men, albeit enriched by the sweat and blood of the workers, holds practically an undisputed sway over this land—the richest country on the face of the globe. And the workers of America are the most ruthlessly exploited class of workers in any country.

Within the boundaries of the United States today several millions of men and working women are jobless, and a very dark period of industrial depression, with its consequent unemployment and hardships for the workers, stare many millions more in the face. Millions of farmers have gone bankrupt and been forced to leave the land during the last year:—the coming depression promises little better for the present year.

Despite these conditions, the future workers of this country are steadily being doped with the opium of this rotten system. In the schools of this country, the boys and girls of the workers are being chloroformed with the lies upon which the structure of the present order rests. Wars, which kill millions of the world's workers, are glorified; the Stars and Stripes, symbolic of the ruling capitalist class of this country, are idolized; the wage system, resting upon the weary and toil-bent shoulders of the workers, is made immortal and worshipped; the Sunday schools and churches, the religious institutions of American capitalism, are revered because of the fact that they take the minds of the workers off the rotten conditions under which they are forced to live, and transfer the attention of the wistful eyes of these workers to some unknown and non-existent being beyond the skies; the Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, the Y. M. C. A., the Y. W. C. A., the American Legion, the Ku Klux Klan and other kindred institutions are praised and upheld by the capitalist class of America because they train the young workers and students of this country for their successful participation in world wars for profit, and for the suppression of the revolt of workers at home and abroad, whenever these workers rise against the unbearable conditions which gradually engulf them.

During this week and every other day of the year, the minds of the young boys of this country were poisoned by the capitalist interests of America. They spoke to us of Boys' Day in industry and conveniently overlooked the fact that between two and three million little tots from 4 to 12 years of age toil in the factories and homes of this country because their parents cannot support their families without such assistance. They spoke to us of the "Defense of Old Glory" and of "Our Country" and forgot to mention the World Blood Bath of 1914-18, in which nearly 10,000,000 workers were slaughtered because the wealth-owning classes of Germany and France and her allies, craved for world empire and universal domination. They spoke to us of honorable citizenship and honest government, and ignore the Tea Pot Domes and Veterans' Bureau scandals which take place every other day.

These things teach great lessons. The workers, the children of the workers of America and other lands are the oppressed and exploited class of the world—and will remain so until they are aroused and determine to establish the rule of the workers and farmers of the world, and in doing so overthrow the present autocratic government of international capitalism.

Alarmed Nations Caught Spying On Russian Soviets

(Special to The Daily Worker)

Moscow, April 8. (By mail)—It is reported that there is a revival of spying activities within the Union of Soviet Republics of the general staffs of certain neighbouring States. The most active in this respect are the agents of the Polish staff, who engage in espionage partly to carry out the plans of the French military mission at Warsaw.

Two trials of Polish spying organisations are pending in the Leningrad military tribunal. The first case deals with an organisation of the former Czarist officers Mioduszevsky, Zelinsky and others, who engaged in espionage activities under the directions of a Mr. Chekhovicz, formerly member of the Polish Repatriation Commission, who the former supplied with information concerning the organisation of the Red Army (where those officers were serving). As for Chekhovicz, he was also engaged in political and economic espionage.

The second case to be heard is that of an agent of the Second Department of the Polish General Staff Lucke, whose business was to enlist spies at Leningrad and supply secret military material to the Polish Staff and Major Dernasz, Chief of the French military mission at Warsaw.

Stinnes Ghost Still Rules Germany; Dead Hand Fleeces World

BERLIN, Germany.—Hugo Stinnes, the German Gary, is dead, but the Hugo Stinnes corporations go on just as before.

The Stinnes undertakings may be grouped under four headings: First, the Hugo Stinnes, Limited, Co., consisting of 59 German and 49 foreign concerns engaged in the steel business. Second, there is the Siemens-Rhein-Elbe-Schuckert-Union, the 72 German and 80 sub-companies of which are principally interested in machinery. Then there is the Stinnes Privat Konzern, consisting of 12 machinery works, 12 shipping and trading companies, 10 oil concerns, nine coal mines, nine companies having to do either with wood or newspapers, and seven miscellaneous undertakings. By countries these are grouped as follows:

Austria, 13; Hungary, 5; Roumania, 3; Sweden, 3; Switzerland, 3; Denmark, 2; Italy, 2; Netherlands, 2; Java, 2; Norway, 2; Russia, 2; Argentina, 1; Dutch Indies, 1; United States, 1.

SELL YOURSELF LIBERTY EDITOR TELLS STUDENTS

Tribune Opium-Maker Tells Truth

"Sell yourself if you want to be good reporters," Harvey Deuell, managing editor of the Tribune's latest big business propaganda sheet, the "Liberty" magazine, told the hopeful students at the Medill School of Journalism.

"Sell yourself to the persons from whom you want information," Deuell told the class, frankly admitting the base mercenary life of the capitalist reporters. "And then sell your news to the public," the outspoken editor declared.

Deuell further pointed out that reporters must be good salesmen rather than writers of good literature. He showed clearly that the newspaper "game" is pure and simple business.

Wealth Gives the Flavor.

According to the "Liberty" editor, age, wealth, education, and sex are the four factors determining a person's reading tastes. One of the students remarked that wealth ought to be first-named.

Another young literary hopeful ventured that some of the more intelligent writers about town ought to get together on a publication to be called "Death" in competition with the Tribune's low-brow "Liberty." Remembering Pat Henry's famous remark, the inspired young writer cried: "They gave us Liberty, but let's have death!"

Buying Straw Derby? — Look for Union Label

T. U. E. L.—Y. W. L. May 30 Picnic

The Trade Union Educational League and the Young Workers League, Local Chicago, are holding a joint picnic on Decoration Day, Friday, May 30th, at Altenheim Grove, German Old People's Home, Forest Park. There will be excellent speakers, Sports, Games, Dancing, Refreshments, etc. Easy to reach: Take Forest Park "L" to the gates of the grove—or Madison Street Car and transfer to suburban line. Admission is 35 cents.

Farmer-Labor Assessment.

A compulsory assessment of 50 cents has been levied upon all Party members by the Central Executive Committee. This assessment must be paid within a month. The assessment is a small one which can easily be paid. The National Office must have more funds if they are to carry on the campaign successfully for the June 17th Convention. The Party needs the money now—at once. Let every member show that he is behind the campaign to form a class Farmer-Labor Party in America or at least paying his assessment immediately.

Branches should not wait for the members to pay their assessment. Branches can take the money out of the treasury and can then get it from the members afterwards. Branch secretaries shall send in their quota at the earliest date to the City Secretary. Stamps have been forwarded to all branches.

Reds Win Works Councils.

PRAGUE, Czecho-Slovakia, May 26.—Elections for works councils', delegates in 25 big plants of the metal industry gave the Communists, affiliated with the Red International of Labor Unions 87 seats; the Socialists affiliated with the International Federation of Trade Unions (Amsterdam), 65; the national Socialists (Fascisti) 30; the Christian-Socialists 3.

THE VIEWS OF OUR READERS ON LIFE, LABOR, INDUSTRY, POLITICS

To the DAILY WORKER:

Among the various forces which impel men to action—political, religious or organizational of any form—if some measuring rule could be found that would determine with accuracy an answer to the question: Is it good or is it bad? Would not its use eliminate much unnecessary conflict?

Undoubtedly, but where shall we look for such a rule? Is it possible to find a meter that will determine whether any particular organization in the following classes is right or wrong:

Any existing political party.

Any existing religion.

Any existing Labor or other organization.

I answer yes, such a measure exists for not only organizations but men; and men not only of the present but of all past generations—Socrates, Caesar, the Gracchi, Christ, Justinian, Washington, Lincoln, Mussolini, McDonald, Coolidge or the Grand Kleagle of the K. K. K.

To find such a rule, of course, we must look for some contention that has persisted thruout the ages.

There is but one—the Class Struggle.

All history is a record of class struggles. On the one side the struggle on the part of the producers of wealth to retain it; on the other side the struggle of the exploiters to appropriate it.

This struggle is of the highest importance, for wealth implies the possession of all the good things of life—food, clothing and shelter, education, recreation and of all the refinements of art.

The measure to apply, then, is this: On which side of the class struggle does a movement or a man react? If it (or he) is calculated to secure for the producers the wealth they create, such a movement (or man) is good. If to expropriate the producers of that wealth such a movement or man is bad.

For example, apply this rule to the Republican party—not that the Democratic party is any better. Under its administration the treasures of the nation (the people) have been looted and transferred to a few of the people. The land, the timber, the coal, the oil, that nature must have designed for the equal use of all, have been transferred to a mere handful. We should, then under the rules, have to decide that the Republican party is bad.

Take, also the Socialist party. In Germany under that regime its people have become impoverished and are starving. So, in spite of the fine philosophy of Socialism, we should also have to declare that the Socialist party (of Germany) was also bad.

Again, take Russia for measurement. This is the only country where the working class—the producers of wealth—is in complete power. The Soviet government has successfully defied the armies of the world and overcome a monster famine at the same time. There is now plenty of food for the people, universal education and homes for all. We must, then, under the rule, decide that the Bolshevik government is good.

The general application of this rule must be left to the reader. But by means of the formula given I affirm that all movements and men can be measured and properly catalogued.

MILTON HARLAN, 1723 Pine St
San Francisco.

A Breathing Spell.

To the DAILY WORKER: I never see anything in the DAILY WORKER from members of the company unions. I am a member of one of these things on the Southern Pacific and in "good standing." (Can't be otherwise, as they take it out of your check the first pay day.) Hence I am able to tell of conditions as they really exist, not as the company pictures them to the public.

The companies which organize and operate their own unions of shopmen have taken away from the employes about everything worth while that was left by the Railroad Labor Board. At least this is true in the S. P. shops. The board left us the six-day week, pay for deadwork and time and a half on Sunday. Now the company has made an agreement with its "union" for straight-time pay over eight hours and on Sunday.

The company has increased the pay of its company union "general chairman" and "system secretary," placing the former on the pay roll at $500 a month and the latter at $450, and expenses. Both are "loyal scabs."

The company union is a tragedy with the men in the shops and won't last any longer than the employes can reorganize their forces and become members of the regular federated shop craft unions. Then it will be necessary to fight for amalgamation if the unions are not to be broken again as they were in the 1922 shopmen's strike. I have never met a company union member who was not ashamed to acknowledge his slavery, and I am one of them.

Let Farrington Explain

To the DAILY WORKER:—Mr. Farrington in speaking to the convention of the Illinois miners of the apology between himself and Mr. Lewis might explain whether it was at the secret meeting arranged by Thomas Moses and his son, Harry in Springfield or Danville, Ill., on January the 2nd, 1922, that they made apologies to each other. Incidentally Tom Moses is superintendent of the Steel Trust Mines and Mr. Farrington might also explain some other secret communications and visits to the trust official.

LABOR PARTIES IN AUSTRALIA WIN VICTORIES

Only Two States Have Anti-Labor Cabinets

By W. FRANCIS AHERN.
Federated Press Staff Correspondent.

SYDNEY, N. S. W.—Both state and municipal elections in Australia reveal a political landslide for the Labor parties. The setback at the ballotbox during and after the world war, in which the reactionaries capitalized labor's opposition to conscription, has subsided.

Queensland, South Australia, Western Australia and Tasmania are now governed by Labor party cabinets. The entire capitol city of Brisbane and its suburbs in Queensland are under Labor municipal rule, as are many other towns. A Labor government for the commonwealth of Australia is not improbable in 1925.

Only two states are now anti-labor. Victoria is not expected to change, but the elections in New South Wales, tho still distant, will probably favor the Labor party.

The swing over to Labor is due in large part to the broken promises of the reactionaries in power. They promised "a new world for the workers" after the war. The new world came but it consisted of lower wages, longer hours, higher living costs, unchecked profiteering by bankers and employers, unrestricted floods of immigration and a militarist foreign policy.

Queensland has been a Labor state almost 10 years. Its workers are more loyally radical than elsewhere in Australia. The cost of living is lower and state protection of labor is greater. Tasmania went Labor the end of 1923. Western Australia came into the fold March 22 with 26 Labor seats as against 24 for all other parties. Previously Labor had 16 seats. South Australia turned out the reactionaries April 5, giving Labor 27 seats to 19 for all others. The previous South Australian total of Labor seats was 16.

The South Australian crash was similar to the others. The reactionaries in addition to their customary anti-labor practices had sent railway equipment and repair orders to foreign makers while the home shops were laying off men, had advocated importation of colored labor and had monkeyed dangerously with public finance.

Australia may now again become the undisputed leader of the world in improved conditions for labor.

MOTHERS DENIED DOLES DONATE BABES TO CITY

German Government Shuts Off Aid

BERLIN, May 26.—The wives of unemployed workers in Nu Scharen, a small industrial town, took their babies to the town hall and left them there when it became known that the unemployment doles would be stopped. The biggest part of the population of this small town are unemployed, and the misery there is much greater than in large cities.

City Refuses Responsibility.

The wives of the employed declared that they had to leave their children to the care of the municipal administration because they themselves could not nourish them. The desperate mothers knew no other way out; they rebelled against their own mother-love. Only after hours of protracted negotiations was it possible to get the women to take their children back.

Law Deprives Neediest.

The new law passed regarding government support for unemployed, is that the unemployment dole is to be paid only to workers who have been unemployed for a period of not more than twelve months. But as many workers have been unemployed for a longer period than 12 months, this provision is causing very great hardship for thousands.

Even the wounded war veterans are not provided for. Of 1,537,000 wounded war veterans who were entitled to compensation after the war, 752,000 have already been taken off the books as settled cases altho they have not received the full settlement money to which they were entitled.

International Workers' Aid.

Child mortality in Germany is constantly on the increase, and little provision is made for the protection of child health. Hospital after hospital is closing down, and this in face of the wide-spread epidemic of tuberculosis among children. Sickness insurance is practically impossible for the worker because the charges are too high. The same is true of all other kinds of government insurance.

The committee for International Workers' Aid is the only organization in America helping the working class population of Germany in its present plight. American workers express their international working class solidarity by coming to the rescue of their destitute brothers and sisters in Germany before too late. The working class of Germany, abandoned by the government of Socialism and capitalism, oppressed by the employing class, enslaved by foreign imperialist powers, this mangled working class is turning to the workers of the world for aid in the fight which it is carrying on against tremendous odds.

LA FOLLETTE ADRIFT

By JAY LOVESTONE.

UNLESS all the press reports now being circulated by La Follette's associates are just that much smoke screen to hide the real plans of the Wisconsin Senator, one can safely assume, in analyzing the present political situation, that "Fighting Bob" has at last made up his mind to continue his fight against the big business interests with practically the same ineffective weapons he has been using in the last twenty years.

At no time were conditions more appropriate for organizing a powerful movement of political opposition to the controlling financial and industrial interests of the country. Only recently La Follette's closest co-worker declared that "all hell can't stop the organization of a third party now." Yet, at the moment of action, at the period of decision, La Follette tells the world, thru devious channels, it is true, that the best that one should expect from him under these circumstances making aggressive action against the enemies of the masses so urgent, is his running as an independent candidate.

It is evident, that La Follette is still adrift. He is floundering. La Follette has been in politics too long to take seriously what some of his agents would have the world believe, that entering the presidential lists in this fashion, will net more votes or be conducive to the welfare of the big movement against reaction. The Wisconsin Senator knows only too well the power and value of organization to base his policies on such untenable notions. There can be only one reason for La Follette's refusal to lead in the most effective manner a movement which will tend to smash the organized political machinery of the most powerful reactionary interests. La Follette in his long career in politics has never dared to make a definite and sharp break, has never taken a fundamentally radical step against the capitalist class. LaFollette, at his best, has been, and still is, only a spokesman for the middle class. Today, as yesterday, LaFollette symbolizes and personifies all the shortcomings, all the hesitating wavering, characteristics so inherent in the middle class.

No matter what LaFollette's final decision will be it is clearer than ever that the working and farming masses are confronted by a two-fold task. The city workers, in a closely-knit alliance, with the poor farmers must get together to line up for a gigantic battle against the big reactionary capitalist interests, the greatest masses possible. There is only one way of doing this and that is for these exploited and dispossessed masses to join in the organization of a Farmer-Labor Party genuinely independent from and unalterably opposed to the two big capitalist parties, a party organized on a national class basis. LaFollette's wavering at this critical moment only proves the Communist contention that the movement of revolt against the capitalist overlords stands the best chance of success only if it is actively led by the working and farming classes as classes. As a matter of fact, the LaFollettes, the Norrises, the Wheelers, and the other numerous lesser lights and satellites of "progressivism" will move forward and attack, even feebly, the powerful business interests only to the extent that they are forced to do so by the organized pressure of the masses.

Even a fifth class grammer school observer of politics knows that the time to crystalize the sentiment of opposition, the moment best suited for organizing an effective opposition to so skilled and well-disciplined an enemy as the one confronting the working masses of the country, is before the election. The election campaign itself affords an unexcelled means of uniting the masses and setting up a permanent political organization of the workers and farmers against the exploiters. To refuse to set up a machinery for the campaign is the best way of throwing away all the opportunities that the election struggle affords. It is unpardonable political stupidity and veritable political suicide to hold off organization until the enthusiasm has waned, until the energy of the struggle is dissipated, until the election of a reactionary capitalist champion as president is made sure by the employment of useless weapons against his class and his party.

LaFollette's hesitation, LaFollette's refusal to move forward, LaFollette's tendency to avoid giving open battle to the big capitalist class interests that he has threatened to declare war upon, only make more urgent than ever the need for the working and farming classes to unite their forces for definite, decisive action against the employing class, thru the organization of a mighty national Farmer-Labor Party, a class Farmer-Labor Party, at the St. Paul convention.

Gompers' Gang Seen Stalling Movement With Red-Baiting

WASHINGTON, May 26.— Public Affairs, a magazine edited here by Ira Nelson Morris, which supports the progressive group in Congress, says: "The American Federation of Labor, which seems to have become a subsidiary of the American Defense Society, and to be devoting more attention to anti-red propaganda than it is to the upbuilding of the labor movement in this country, has become violently exercised over the alleged communist control of the Farmer-Labor Party."

Strike-Fighting Sends Shoe Boss Into Bankruptcy

ROCHESTER, N. Y., May 26.— An anti-labor policy did not pay in the case of Dugan & Hudson, Rochester shoe manufacturers. The company recently fell into heavy debt fighting a long union strike. At the same time it lost trade to its rivals. Now that it is unable to meet its financial obligations, creditors have forced it into bankruptcy.

NEW YORK VOTES MORE DELEGATES TO JUNE 17 MEET

Federated Farmer-Labor Party Active

NEW YORK, May 26.—A drive has just been started by the Federated Farmer-Labor Party of New York City to have as many delegates as possible elected to the June 17th convention from local unions, fraternal and other organizations. Speakers are being sent to various organizations to address the gatherings on the necessity of attending this convention to form a national Farmer-Labor Party to represent the exploited farmers and industrial workers, on the political field.

Expect Thirty Delegates.

Bakers' local 1, and Bakers' local 164, of the Amalgamated Food Workers of America, and the Hungarian Benefit Society have already elected their delegates to the St. Paul convention. The prospects from New York are very bright and there is no doubt but that New York state will have about thirty delegates to the St. Paul convention on the 17th of June.

The United Farmer-Labor Party of New York which held its state convention at Schenectady on May 18th, has also elected a delegate to the St. Paul convention.

Speakers Furnished.

All local unions desiring to have speakers address their meetings on behalf of the formation of a class mass party at the coming St. Paul convention should communicate immediately with HARRY M. WINITSKY, organizer of the Federated Farmer-Labor Party of New York, at 81 East 10th street, or W. J. Kelly, secretary of the F. F. L. P. informing him when and where the meeting is to be held and in which language the speaker is to address the meeting. He must know at least one week in advance of the date of the meeting if a speaker is wanted.

N. Y. Subway Co. Union Bucks Wages Cut; Demands More

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK, May 26.—The company union worm has turned on its New York subway bosses, but what good that will do it remains to be seen. Representatives of the so-called Brotherhood of Interborough Transit Employes have refused to accept the company's polite request that the 15,000 workers reduce their own pay 5 per cent, effective July 1. Instead the employe representatives voted to demand a 20 per cent increase, improved working conditions and a partial 8-hour day.

That was several days ago and the company union has not yet mustered enough courage to present its demands to the corporation.

The proposed cut would wipe out last year's increase and put them back where they were two years ago. For an 84-hour week subway station agents get $34.44. Motormen get about 72 cents an hour, (a few up to 86 cents), and guards 47 cents an hour, (some higher). Time is so divided that it amounts to a 12-hour day.

HOOF AND MOUTH BAN A CIRCUS FOR BARNES' OUTFIT

Graft Greases Way For Elephants And Lions

By Defense News Service.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., May 26.—How did it happen that the quarantine designed to prevent the spread of the hoof-and-mouth disease was lifted for the express benefit of the Al G. Barnes circus? This question is being noised about widely in the vicinity of Los Angeles. It became known this week that the Barnes show was permitted to leave California on April 19. No publicity was given to its departure. There are persistent rumors here that a lot of money was paid to somebody to "fix things" for the move.

When the existence of the hoof-and-mouth epidemic became public news, the circus was playing Long Beach, 20 miles from here. Immediately it was ordered back to its winter quarters at Culver City, ten miles nearer to Los Angeles city hall. And shortly afterward reports began to spread that the Barnes management had "arranged" everything with the authorities, and that it would be possible to get the show out of the state as soon as "things quieted down."

Inquiry discloses that the officials in charge of the quarantine knew all about the move of the 28 cars of circus stock and equipment, and that permission for it was given "very quietly." It appears that they didn't want to alarm any sensitive persons unduly.

The Quarantine for Circus.

Getting away without trouble, the Barnes outfit showed in Kansas, and then jumped to Illinois. Then it played four Indiana cities—Connersville, Bluffton, Kokomo and Muncie; five Ohio towns—Lorain, Barberton, Massillon, Wooster and Lima; and its next date was at Fort Wayne, Ind.

Allotment of this special privilege to Barnes, which is declared to endanger the health of thousands of human beings and animals, has aroused everyday citizens who have had difficulty in obtaining a permit to move a canary from one street to another, and whose pet cats and dogs have been shot by the authorities.

BUFFALO, N. Y.—A pair of symetrical legs are worth $40,000 to any American girl, says Frances Orlando, 17 who was run down by a truck and her knees and ankles so marred that she fears their beauty is lost forever. She sued the truck owner at once.

FAMOUS GRAVE DIGGER TELLS OF FINDING KING TUT

Monarch Was Versatile As To Religion

By ALFRED FRANKENSTEIN

Howard Carter, discoverer and explorer of the tomb of the pharoah Tut-Ankh-Amen, (The Living Image of Amon) lectured on his discoveries at Orchestra Hall last Wednesday and Thursday. Carter said that the finding of a cup with the seal of King Tut on it led him to believe that the monarch's body was buried in the Valley of the Kings, the royal cemetery of ancient Egypt. After six years of fruitless investigation the tomb was discovered. The burial chamber of Rameses the sixth had been dug out of the rock above Tut's tomb, and all the rubbish of that construction, amounting to over 200 tons of rock, had been thrown over the entrance of the sepulchre of the earlier rulers. This accounts for the fact that Tut was not discovered before.

On November 4, 1922, the stairway to the tomb was discovered. Excavation of it revealed a door, sealed on the one part with the seal of Tut-Ankh-Amen and on the other with the seal of the royal necropolis. This, with other circumstances, among them the confusion of the relics found later, led Carter to believe that thieves had entered the tomb some ten or fifteen years after the burial of the king, and had been caught by the royal police force.

Like An Open House.

Further excavation led to the antechamber in which the king's personal effects were stored. Carter said the first glimpse of it looked like the property room of an opera house, and the pictures he exhibited of it showed this description to be perfect. Couches and beds, war chariots, chests, vases still containing perfumes and ointments, benches and chairs were stored in the room in the uttermost confusion.

Most of the first lecture was taken up with pictures and detailed description of these articles. Almost everything connected with the royal personage was either made of gold or covered with it. A couch in the form of a lion, made of wood covered with sheet gold, and couch in the form of the cow goddess Hathor were the bulkiest objects in the antechamber. The chests contained the kings's clothing and jewelry. The frequent-recurring inscriptions showed the monarch in triumph over the enemies of Egypt, always portrayed as an Asiatic with a long beard and a Negro. A chair showed the name Tut-Ankh-Aton (Living Image of Aton), proving that Tut had first professed the monotheistic Aton religion, but had reverted to the polytheism and sun worship of Amon.

A Lively Walking Cane

The idea that Egyptian art was always stereotyped and almost diagrammatic was refuted by a picture of the head of a walking-cane, on which was carved in exquisitely colored and realistic figures the heads of an Asiatic and a Negro, the ancient foes of Egypt.

The second lecture dealt with the discoveries of last year. A sealed door, guarded by two statues of the king, revealed what apparently was a wall of gold. It proved to be a huge shrine, in which were three other smaller shrines. Inside the fourth was a sandstone sarcophagus, inside that a golden casket, in the form of the mummy within. That was as far as Carter got. When the shrines were removed piece meal and reassembled, trouble with local authorities occurred, and further work was impossible.

One of the most curious finds of all was made in this chamber. It was a lamp which apparently was undecorated, but, when lighted, showed a picture of the king and the queen. It was made by the insertion of one alabaster cup within another.

Several chambers remain unopened. Some were opened, but closed again so that the temptation to enter them could be resisted.

Food "Cheaper;" Workers Alone Fail To See It

A drop of 2 per cent in the cost of your food budget in April as compared with March is indicated by the monthly retail food index of the U. S. department of labor. Dairy products and dried fruits were chiefly responsible for the decrease while meat went up. Compared with the previous year the cost of providing your family with food on April 15 should have been 1 per cent lower.

The cost of food is now about 41 per cent higher than in 1913. In many cities the increase during the 11-year period has been greater, among them: Chicago, 50 per cent; Richmond, 48 per cent; Baltimore, 45 per cent, and Pittsburgh, St. Louis and Scranton, 53 per cent. Kansas City, Minneapolis and Newark increased 39 per cent. Fall River and Seattle, 37 per cent and Portland, Ore., 30 per cent over 1923 food prices.

Wholesale prices are going down. The decrease between March and April amounting to slightly over 1 per cent, principally in foodstuffs and metals. Clothing and fuel prices also declined slightly, while building materials and housefurnishings remained unchanged. The wholesale average for all commodities is now 45 per cent above 1913.

NEW SCHOOL OF SOCIAL STUDIES OPENS IN CITY

Literature, Economics, Philosophy Classes

A new educational institution sprang up in our city recently. The founders christened it "The Chicago School of Social Philosophy."

The school aims to stimulate an active interest in vital problems as reflected in modern literary, economic and philosophic tendencies. It makes its appeal to both students and instructors, who are interested in, and willing to freely discuss, the principles governing modern society. The school aims also to develop an intellectual center which in its various activities such as lectures, debates, etc., will bring together those who are seeking for expression.

Regular Courses.

The school is now successfully completing the first term of its activities which consist of:

1. "Conflicts in Modern Philosophy," under Dr. Carl Haessler. Friday evenings at the City Club.
2. "Social Forces in English Literature" under Prof. Robert M. Lovett. Wednesday evenings at the City Club.
3. "Trends in Modern Economics" under Dr. Leland Olds. Tuesday evenings at 1100 N. Kedzie ave.

Special Lecture Coming.

A special lecture will be given by Prof. Ferdinand Schevill on "Our Civilization." The lecture will review the earlier phases of modern civilization and analyze the main forces and agencies which have determined the modern world. The place of science, technology and the industrial evolution will be taken up and an attempt made to evalue the significance of the period of which we are part.

The lecture will take place on Thursday evening, May 29, at the Athenaeum Hall, 59 E. Van Buren street, at 8:00 p. m., and will be preceeded by a musical program.

Dr. Haessler and Dr. Olds are managing editor and industrial editor, respectively, of the Federated Press and Dr. Lovett is well-known for his connections with the university of Chicago and the New Republic, weekly magazine.

S. F. Garment Bosses Unite.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 26.— The wearing apparel employers have formed an association here under the auspices of the chamber of commerce. This one big union of employers will take in all branches of the wearing apparel industry, comprising about 65 manufacturers. It is a counter-move to the Amalgamated Clothing Workers and other organized garment workers.

LUMBER WORKERS FACE WAGE CUTS; INDUSTRY SLACK

Many Unemployed In Pacific Northwest

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SEATTLE, Wash., May 26.—About 10,000 more workers in the lumber industry in Western Washington will have their wages cut now. Common labor will be cut to $3.40 a day. Skilled labor will be cut 10 percent. Rumors are current, but can not be verified, that many mills will soon close to reopen soon at still lower rates.

There are thousands of unemployed, thousands coming daily from California.

Scabbier Union Than Pullman's

One organization here the "4L's"—Loyal Legion of Loggers and Lumbermen—is an even scabbier company union than the Pullman company union concerning which the DAILY WORKER has had much to say.

Anacortes, Port Angeles, Bellingham, and Everett will be affected by this cut, also many smaller towns. Tacoma, Aberdeen, and other parts of Southwest Washington have already been cut, as has the Oregon region around Portland. Some of the mills in the Gray's Harbor did not cut wages, as they were already down to $3.20.

Scab Told To Shut Up

Even the scab union, the Four L's, is too much for the Dollar mill in Portland owned by Capt. Robert Dollar. When it cut below the $3.40 minimum of the L.L.L.L., the scab union protested, and was told to shut up. The policy of Capt. Dollar was expressed some years ago when he said that we needed plenty of ambulances to take union men to the hospitals after they had been properly beaten up.

Fight Spirit Revives

He is said to be the "Cappy Ricks" of Peter B. Kyne's stories, Kyne being a brass checker who never misses a chance to show his hatred of the workers. Dollar recently secured a number of ships from the shipping board at less than half a million each, this being about one fifth of what they cost the taxpayers.

In the Willapa Bay region, lying between Gray's Harbor (Aberdeen) and the Columbia the wage cut has brought about a strike. The L.L.L.L. is dead here now and there are signs that the 1917 spirit of the Industrial Workers of the World is reviving.

Company Union Uses Direct Action To Get Workers To Pay Dues

SALT LAKE, Utah.—Union organizers who find membership dropping off may take a hint from the following letter:

Mr. Lamb—Car-washer—Dear Sir.

It has come to our notice you have been automatically expelled from Shop Employes Association for non-payment of dues. Make arrangements to pay same at once or get off of the job. This is final.— NORTON, LEMON, STANCLIFFE, Committee.

The letter is the final step taken by the Los Angeles & Salt Lake railway in keeping the men lined up in its company union. The men signing the notice are the committee at one of the company's shops of the Shop Employes Association. The object of the company is to show the U. S. rail labor board a large membership in the handfed union so that bonafide railroad unions cannot speak for the men.

Workers' Education Association To Hold London Conference

LONDON, May 26.—The second international conference of the Workers' Education Association will be held at Ruskin college, Oxford, August 15-17, under the auspices of the (Amsterdam) International Federation of Trades Unions. It will be attended largely by delegates from all over the British empire who are coming to London for the Commonwealth Labor conference, which opens August 18. Ruskin college is the oldest residential workers' college in England.

Burns, Manufacturer of Plots

Admission by John W. H. Crim, former chief assistant to Daugherty, before the Wheeler-Brookhart committee, that the "red plots" blazoned forth at intervals during the last several years by William J. Burns were all fakes, merely puts the official confirmation upon common knowledge. "In all the 'red' agitation," said Crim, "They never brought me any evidence."

How comes it that, at this late hour, the fraud and persecution by Burns against the labor and revolutionary movements is officially disclosed. Is it because the investigators wish to protect the workers? That would be nice, if it were true. But as the facts appear, we are forced to conclude that the honorable senators have exposed Burns' outrages against the "reds" only because Burns has been also framing up some of them. They need to discredit Burns to save their own skins.

All of which is grist of the mill of revolutionary workers. We can have no objection to the quarreling groups of exploiters showing up one another in their true colors. It is reminiscent of John L. Lewis and Frank Farrington, and their little correspondence of a couple years ago. When thieves fall out, it is said on good authority, the workers get a look at the real face of their rulers. When the class Farmer-Labor Party begins to make a real bid for power, we will doubtless see Daugherty and all his angels lined up in solidarity with most of those who are now busy exposing the frame-up machinery. Until that time, let us hope that the exposures will continue.

Strikebreakers All!

Time and again the Communists have told the workers and poor farmers that the United States government is today a strikebreaking agency from the top down and the bottom up. We have made this charge, not on the basis of our own fancies, but solely on the basis of the cruel everyday experiences of the working masses with the various government departments. As we go on, the evidence supporting our view of the present political machinery of the employing class piles up mountain high.

Only the other day, after almost five years of secrecy, it was disclosed that the United States Shipping Board has been playing the role of a tireless strikebreaker. At the congressional hearings on the operations of the Shipping Board, Special Department of justice Agent Thomas F. Rice, admitted that this government bureau was actively engaged in helping the Steamship Owners' Association of the Pacific Coast and the Pacific American Steamship Association in crushing a strike in 1919. While the government was supposed to be investigating this shipping combine for the purpose of prosecuting the association violating the Sherman Anti-Trust Law, the same government, thru its shipping board, was spending about $150,000 in defraying the expenses of the employment bureaus set up by the bosses to break the longshoremen's strike.

The present policy of the shipping board is to maintain the open shop. The board continues this closed shop policy against all union men and still stands for the upkeep of these private employment bureaus which blacklist union members.

Practically speaking, there is no exception to the rule that in the hands of the employing class every agency of the present government, every department, every official from the president down, is a strikebreaking weapon used to beat back the working and farming masses and to support the exploiting class. When the miners struck in 1922, the shipping board did its level best to fit out ships which would facilitate the importation of coal from England in order to cripple the effectiveness of the strike. When the coal diggers talked strike last year the same shipping board proudly boasted that it would do its bit in repeating the strikebreaking activities of the preceding year.

This incident should serve to disillusion many workers who were still blindly groping for aid and comfort at the hands of the government, the general staff of their enemy—the capitalist class. The terrific price paid shall not have been in vain if it serves to hasten the organization of a powerful class farmer-labor party as a step towards scrapping the entire strikebreaking machinery used by the bosses.

Reactionaries in Perplexity

What to do with the McNary-Haughen bill for agricultural relief is a major worry of reactionary politicians in Washington. They have the votes to defeat it (and they want to defeat it), just as they have the votes to nominate Coolidge at the republican convention (and they want to nominate him). But—and there's the rub—what will be the effect upon the voting millions thruout the country, particularly upon the bankrupt and suffering farmers of the North and Middle West? The reactionaries are in perplexity, wondering what to do with the power now in their hands, whether to boldly carry out their black desires, or to attempt to trim sails a bit to the winds of discontent.

The dilemma of free-booting politicians is the opportunity of the class-conscious elements of the farming and laboring masses. A clarion call for a class party of the toiling masses, a real Farmer-Labor Party, that will cut thru all the hesitation, muddle-headedness, cowardice and reaction that characterizes all the old-line politicians, that will break once and for all with every capitalist influence, that will put forward a clear-cut working class program—such a call will go far to smash the rotten and crumbling structure of the old parties, insofar as they still control the workers and farmers, and lay the foundation for real relief to the suffering agriculturalists as well as to the laboring masses in the industries. June 17th, at St. Paul, there will be the great opportunity to humanely end the mental distress of the reactionary politicians by telling them—to the devil with you, and all your works! We have our own Farmer-Labor Party!

Why the Scare?

The last few weeks have seen the development of an organized campaign in the press, in congress, and on the public platform by an apparently well-financed group for the purpose of making the United States Navy second to none in strength.

Editorial column after column, news dispatch piled upon new dispatch, and stories of tape-worm length all having as their objective the spreading of the notion that the American navy is in a deplorable state are now to be noticed in the metropolitan press and the leading rural journals. Why the sudden scare?

An examination of the methods and personnel involved in the new preparedness drive answers these questions. One of the leaders in the navalist revival movement is a man, Shearer, who calls himself an inventor and who is actually interested in torpedo boat manufacturing. We are being told that the United States has not lived up to the 5-5-3 naval ratio set down for England, America, and Japan by the Washington conference. We are being asked to believe that American submarines may be good enough at going down but are even better at staying down, at never coming up. Overnight, as it were, the naval personnel is said to have become depleted and the efficiency of the fighting ships and sailors to have sunk to unfathomable levels.

Facts speaker louder than liars when the truth is sought. The United States government is utilizing the four-years' naval holiday voted at the Washington conference for the purpose of extensive and intensive research into new methods of naval warfare instead of investing billions in archaic weapons whose inefficiency were revealed by the experiences of the world war. American imperialism has already invested over four billions in its navy. Within the last decade the value of the American navy has increased more than 250 per cent. Thus, the hesitancy on the part of the American government to sink more millions into heavy useless fighting ships cannot be attributed to a niggardliness on its part in squandering the money of the working and farming classes in behalf of the capitalists.

But new events of gigantic significance are developing. The Dawes plan to turn Germany into an American capitalist workshop, the increasing competition of Great Britain, particularly in the Latin-American markets, the none too pleasant relations between the Japanese and Yankee imperialist cliques all serves as an effective pretense for demanding an American navy of the first rank immediately. A group of our imperialists especially interested in the above spheres are therefore urging the government to continue the spending of millions on old-style ships and methods even while new and more hellish engines of destruction are being prepared.

The scare being so zealously spread by our navalists arises out of a desire to safeguard the new and increasing loot recently pilfered by our imperialist clique. Today patriotic scares and the greed for piling up huge profits are one and the same.

"LaFollette's Fool Friends"

Circulars are going out from a "LaFollette for President Committee" headquarters, Auditorium Hotel, Chicago. This committee must have, at least, encouragement from LaFollette, containing as it does the name of Donald Richberg, attorney for the railroad shop-craft unions. But if LaFollette or his fool friends were deliberately trying to slap the Farmer-Labor Party movement in the face, they could not have done a better job in picking this committee.

The committee has not a single worker, town or country, on it. Two manufacturers, two lawyers, a merchant, an author, a publisher and a banker—these are the men in charge of LaFollette's pre-convention campaign. Is this the kind of committee to represent the exploited masses of workers and farmers in revolt against the domination of capital? A more completely middle-class committee could hardly be imagined. There is not the slightest trace of working class influence upon it, outside of the tenuous one of a hired lawyer in the service of the unions.

It was a middle-class newspaper that, not long ago, deplored the activity of "LaFollette's fool friends." But if LaFollette really means to break with the old capitalist parties—which seems less likely every day—it is certainly a bunch of "fool friends" that could imagine launching a campaign committee for him that contains not a single labor man in the whole list. Is LaFollette intentionally ignoring the whole Farmer-Labor Party movement?

Why Alex Howat Is Popular

By JOSEPH MANLEY.

RECENTLY while in Pittsburgh, I learned at first hand the basic reason for the tremendous popularity of Alex Howat amongst the rank and file of the miners' union, particularly in the Kansas district—his home.

While walking on the streets of Pittsburgh with him I noticed that he was greeted on all sides by miners and their wives and children who invariably hollered, cheerily, "Hello, Alec!" And this familarity was not confined to Pittsburgh, because later in Kansas City I observed the same treatment towards him.

Always Fought for Radicals.

The basic reason for this popularity of the leader of the Kansas miners, is due to the fact that he has at all times fought to protect with the full weight of the miners' union, the militants amongst the miners (who are invariably radicals) who had the courage to act as spokesmen for their fellow workers in the various disputes arising out of the attempts of the coal companies to infringe on the working conditions won by the union.

This is the explanation, as to why Howat retains his following, and why, on the other hand, the name of John L. Lewis is reviled because he has betrayed the rank and file by driving out of the organization their leader, and then putting over an "employers' agreement" which provides for arbitration in place of the right to strike.

Taming the Missouri Pacific.

To bear out this contention it is well, at this moment, to recall the battles won by Howat and the Kansas miners nine years ago. At that time coal companies—who were becoming well organized—used to select a mine where militants were voicing the grievances of the miners; shut down the mine completely, starve out the men and blame the trouble on the "agitators."

Howat decided to take counter action against the biggest company in his district, the Missouri Pacific, which had just shut down a large mine throwing three hundred miners and their families out of work. Howat and the District Executive Board went to Kansas City and served notice on Mr. Jenkins, the head of the company. Said Howat to Jenkins:

"That mine was down six months last year; now it is down again, and our people get hungry in summer as well as in winter, and must have work. . . . We insist that all the mines owned by your company work at least part time so as to give an equal share of the work to all.

"Jenkins replied: "I want you to understand, Howat, that we own these mines, and we don't propose to let you dictate to us when we shall open them up or shut them down. . . . We cannot look out for the miners; they must look out for themselves, and stick together thruout Kansas."

Strike Was Howat's Answer.

Howat and the Executive Board returned to Pittsburgh and called 3,500 miners employed by the Missouri Pacific, out on a strike that lasted two months and ended by the company agreeing to open up all their mines, including the one in dispute. Since that time and until Howat was deposed by Lewis, no company has dared to shut down a mine with the purpose of terrorizing the workers or the radicals amongst them.

Today in District 14, of Kansas, there are 10,000 miners, barely 3,000 of whom are at work—in spite of the fact that Lewis signed an agreement a few weeks ago which was supposed to put them all back to work.

An Unblushing Traitor.

District 14 went on strike April 1st. Three weeks ago John L. Lewis came to Kansas City to make an agreement with the operators. After having been closeted with the representatives of the operators for some time, Lewis appeared before the miners' wage conference. It is reported that he informed them that he hadn't given anything away, and that, "you still have a better contract than they have in other parts of the country. . . . I must congratulate myself on what I have accomplished; I got along better than I expected. . . . Arbitration ensures peace in the industry. . . . Three hundred and fifty thousand men are working under arbitration, and you are no better than they." Lewis' inanities, coupled with the support of his "tool," the district president who has superseded Alex Howat, influenced the wage conference into accepting the three-year "employers agreement." With the acceptance later by the district organization controlled by the machine, were sacrificed all the better working conditions that had been gained by years of struggle.

Lewis at His Worst.

This is one of the worst pieces of treachery that Lewis has yet been guilty of. And it is typical of the complete degeneration that is coming upon our trade union "leaders." Lewis seeks to exterminate the radicals from the organization, both locally and nationally, so that he can consummate "employers" agreements" that strip the organization of its militancy and the better working conditions it has striven for, and makes of it a co-operating instrument in the service of the coal operators for greater efficiency of "their" workers competing with the non-union fields. That is the real goal of Lewis and his kind to make of "their" organizations more efficient mediums for the exploitation of the workers than the present "company unions" which have sprung up in some of America's giant industries.

Canker of Employers' Agreements.

The canker of "employers' agreements," has for many years poisoned the labor unions—notably in the building trades. But today this malignant growth is spreading to the rest of the small proportion of the organized industries. And the poison of such agreements is now being used against the workers. The radicals and militants who built the unions are now often discriminated against thru expulsion and loss of their pobs thru some closed shop clause in an agreement, that the workers never could realize would be so used against them.

Like the Landis Award.

The Landis Award in the building trades, the B. and O. agreement on the railroads, the Brockton agreement in the shoe industry, are but a few of the whole series of "employers' agreement" that have led up to that last betrayal of real trade unionism, just consummated by John L. Lewis.

In his persecution of the militants and desire to co-operate with the employers to the detriment of the rank and file, Lewis first removed Howat, and now with the completion of this scandalous agreement and in order to make it thoroly effective Lewis brings with him to Kansas City, his henchman, John P. White (former president of the miners' union and "dollar a year" man during the war) whose "organizing campaign" in Kentucky and Tennessee, under the direction of Lewis, has been a miserable failure. And White, thru the influence of his friend, Lewis, has been appointed "Arbitrator" in the Kansas district for the three-year period of the "agreement" at a fat salary.

This is the same White who said in former years, when speaking of arbitration: "It puts too much power in the hands of one man." And now he has the power that goes with starving men into submission, to weed out the rebels in the Kansas fields, and to force upon the remaining miners conditions equaled only in the non-union fields which he so recently failed to organize—while drawing a salary from the miners' union of $5,000 per year and an expense account in proportion.

Howat Scrapped Industrial Court.

Is it any wonder that Alex Howat is the most popular man in the miners' union, on the basis of his record in the Kansas field? Howat fought to protect the working conditions of the miners, and with the aid of the militant union men—the kind whom Lewis afterwards expelled—built an organization that the entire power of the state failed to crush. This attempt, made thru the Allen Industrial Court Law, was not successful because Howat, Dorchy and the others on the District Board had the guts to defy the law and go to jail and suffer persecution. And that law is now a dead letter—not alone in Kansas, but nationally. The originator of this law former Governor Allen, is on the political scrap-heap.

Union Will Live Despite Lewis.

When the power of the state failed to crush the miners' union or Howat—now comes Lewis and his aide-de-camp, White, with an effort to tie up the Kansas organization with a three year "employers' agreement." In spite of Lewis' false promises and glib arguments about "stabilizing the industry," seven thousand Kansas miners are still out of work. And if there is still a union in existence in Kansas at the end of three years, it will be in spite of the efforts of Lewis and because of the confidence of the rank and file in the honest fighting character of Alex Howat.

"RED ROSA" - By Jessica Smith

LARGE, sun flooded rooms. On the looms the shuttles dart back and forth weaving bright colored cloth. In the air, the women's voices, singing, weave a bright clear thread thru the rhythmic whir and clack of the machines. In another room women move easily and freely about among the spindles, tying a broken thread here, adjusting a spool there. Old, toil lined faces, bent figures, gnarled hands. Young rosy faces, erect bodies, deft fingers. An atmosphere of light and freedom and joy.

Freedom and joy, cleanliness and light—when before have those words been connected with great factories where thousands of workers pour out their lives day after day into greedy machines? The word factory, since factories began, has been associated with ideas of smoke belching chimneys and dirt and noise and ugliness and strain and weariness. In the Red Rosa silk factory in Moscow I saw none of these things.

The skeptical friend whom I took with me laughed when I attributed all this to the revolution.

"The buildings and technical equipment were all there before," he told me. "The same air and light and sunshine came in. As a matter of fact, conditions are probably worse now—some of the machinery is out of use, some of it is in bad repair, which certainly must make the work more difficult. The wages are lower, which means the living conditions must be worse. The factory is only running at 50 per cent of capacity, because raw materials are so expensive. After all, what have they gained?"

The old woman weaver who has worked in the factory 26 years can answer that question better than I. She is the forewoman of a department now, and has just been explaining the intricacies of the machines in her section to us. I put the question to her as we move beyond the whir of machinery.

"Svoyou!" is the first word that comes to her lips, a Russian word that means "It is our own!"

"Didn't you notice the women at the machines in there," she continued, "how alert they are to watch every thread that breaks, to keep everything in perfect order? That never used to be the case. The work was slovenly and careless. Production was higher perhaps because we worked 10 to 12 hours a day, and now we work only 8, and there were more workers and machines going. But each individual is doing better work now. Why? Because the factory and its products are our own. Every month our director reports to us (our director is one of our own, a worker like the rest of us) and every worker knows all the details of what goes on in the factory—how much money we have spent for raw materials, for repairs, for wages, how much money has been taken in. If our wages are low, we know why they are low, because we know the financial condition of the factory. And we have seen our wages increase from month to month as the efficiency of our own work increased, and we know how much higher they will be in another year if we do our work still better. Good work is in our own interests. Did you hear the women singing? It never used to be like that. They used to beat us sometimes . . . . but now we are free!"

My skeptical friend was unconvinced. "O well, she's just a sentimentalist like you are, talking in vague terms of freedom—she talks like that because she has to, probably. And she herself admits that some of the machines aren't running, and that the wages are low. What I want to see are concrete proofs that the lives of the workers are better than they were before, and that at the same time the workers are able to turn out products equal in quantity and quality to what they should produce under a capitalist regime."

The young assistant director, Maislin, a mere youth in his early twenties, smiled when I translated this for him.

"Of course, as far as production is concerned, we are way below the pre-war level. Then this factory produced 14,000,000 yards of silk every day, and now we are producing 2,000,000—there were 5,500 workers, working in two shifts before,—there are now only 1,200. It is natural enough that under the soviet regime the silk industry should not have received great attention when the vital industries needed restoration. But now that our general conditions are improving there is no reason why the workers shouldn't wear silk clothes now and then as well as any one else, and within 3 or 4 years we expect to have the factory runing at pre-war capacity. Our production at that time will probably be even better than before, because individual production has already increased due to better methods of work which we have introduced. We have doubled our production during the past year while the actual number of workers has increased only 50 per cent. The comrade must remember that for a few years after the factory was nationalized, it hardly worked at all—during '18, '19, and '20. But all during that period the workers kept the machinery in good condition. Raw material is our greatest problem. During the years of war and hunger our native silk growing industry was almost completely destroyed, but now it is reviving in Turkestan, Bokhara and the Caucasus, and we are beginning to import raw materials from Italy, Japan and China again. . . ."

The young assistant director was a bottomless well of enthusiasm, pointing out improvements they were making in the factory, especially in the line of making things easier for the workers. They were building wooden shields for overhead machinery, to protect the workers in case of accident; they were installing a new ventilation system to make the air better. In every department the workers explained to us some special process or peculiarity of the machine they were working on with the pride of artists. The man in charge of a gas machine for glossing the satin set it running especially for us to see. The factory poet expatiated in glowing terms on the glories of his machine, and showed off the factory "wall" newspaper with great pride. Even my skeptical friend began to be impressed by the universal spirit of joy and comradeship we found among the workers of Red Rosa. The percentage of communists in this factory was quite high, even tho the workers were mostly women, who, as they are more illiterate, are usually more backward in joining than the men. There were 250 regular members of the party, 150 members of the Communist Youth organization, and 200 new applicants for membership since the death of Lenin.

"But we're all Communists together, whether we belong to the party or not," one old worker assured us.

In the office of the factory committee Comrades Tarasova and Philipiva, two fine types of women workers, were toiling indefatigably to see that the interests of the workers should never be neglected. At the present time they were carrying on an enthusiastic campaign to "liquidate illiteracy." The women were almost entirely illiterate before the revolution. Now they are all attending evening classes, and by 1925 there will not be one illiterate person left in the factory.

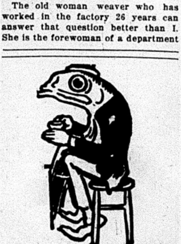
"But the living conditions?" My skeptical friend was still bound to find something to criticise. In answer the young director led us to the big white house on the factory grounds where "the Fat One," as they called the former manager, used to live. One part of it was a day nursery for the babies of the working mothers, where the babies were bathed and fed and sanitarily cared for every day, while their mothers were at work. Another part was a kindergarten for the older children, where they received excellent care in clean, pleasant surroundings, with trained people in charge. In other buildings were the quarters of the workers—the unmarried ones living in spacious, clean, sunny dormitories, the ones with families in "quarteera" of their own. Then there was the dispensary where all kinds of medical help was given, the hospital where the more serious cases were cared for, the club rooms, libraries, lecture hall, theater. And every one of these Bezplattne (free of charge) supported in part by the state, and in part by the factory. When these things were added to the wages they exceeded the pre-war level.

"But didn't these things exist before the revolution?" my skeptical friend ventured hesitatingly.

The young assistant director laughed.

"The manager of the factory lived in the house where the children are now being cared for. His son lived in the house where the hospital is now. The big building used for our club house was his private museum where he kept his hunting trophies. Our workers' gymnasium was his conservatory. . . . ."

My skeptical friend was silent.



The Poor Fish Says: I am afraid God does not always punish the wicked. The Bolsheviks are wicked enough to come within the meaning of any dictionary's definition of wickedness, yet we find the governments of Europe begging the Socialists for recognition, while the task of saving the capitalists from the Workers' Republics entirely desolves on poor Sam Gompers. And he is so old.

"Newt" Baker Gets In Trouble On New York Central Graft Probe

CLEVELAND. — Politicians and business men in Cleveland are buzzing with rumors and hints of "more to come" since Newton D. Baker, Wilson's secretary of war and now head of the open shop interests in Cleveland, has had his name mentioned in the congressional debate on a resolution calling for investigation of the New York Central-Nickel Plate terminal deal. The two roads were refused permission for a phony-looking $60,000,000 proposition by the interstate commerce commission. Then Baker got on the job and the permission was granted, without any modification is the scheme, one month later.

Rep. George Huddleston, Democrat, who is pushing the investigation demand, said in the house. "I have not forgotten that soon after Newton D. Baker got out of the cabinet as secretary and when many Democratic appointees were still in office here in Washington, he became counsel for these interests and did what he could to get the necessary certificate from the interstate commerce commission."

Farrington Loses Fight to Save Plumtree

21 STATES IN LINE FOR ST. PAUL, JUNE 17

Class Party Drive Is Growing Daily

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ST. PAUL, Minn., May 27.—Interest in the June 17th Farmer-Labor convention to be held in this city continues to grow according to the information given out by the National Arrangements Committee.

Kansas, Nebraska, Iowa and North Dakota have decided to follow the example set by the farmers and workers of South Dakota in organizing automobile parades to bring their delegates to St. Paul.

Credentials have now been received from twenty-one states. Every mail is bringing them in. Indications are that several thousand accredited delegates, as well as thousands of visitors, will flock to St. Paul for the convention.

Place for Campers.

The Hotel and Restaurant Owners' Association is making special plans to co-operate with the local committee in accommodating the delegates. The Commissioner of Parks has assured the committee that the tourist camp will be at the disposal of those delegates who come with cars and bring their camping equipment with them, and that if it becomes evident that more space is necessary that his department will help to secure it.

Hundreds of local unions have written in expressing regrets that they were unable to finance the sending of a delegate, but stated that their local had unanimously endorsed the St. Paul convention and the formation of a new party this year. Many of these locals have reported that they were taking an active part in building city or state parties pledged to support of a great new national party of workers and exploited farmers.

Must Have Firm Foundation.

A great national convention at St. Paul would be a splendid thing from an agitational point of view, but unless this convention was supported by state and local organizations thruout the United States, it would not be able to accomplish a great deal in carrying on the struggle of the workers and farmers politically.

The effect of such a convention, if not followed by concrete organizational work would soon disappear. The significance about the June 17th convention is not only that it is arousing a nation-wide interest and that delegates are being selected to attend this convention from all parts of the country, but that in many states organizations are being formed to serve as the permanent foundation for the national organization which will be formed at St. Paul.

At the outset, the June 17th convention had the support of five state parties that had already been thru the fire of several political campaigns and has polled votes that had definitely

MOTHER WANTS BABY BACK; CAN'T PROVE CHILD IS HER OWN

ST. LOUIS, Mo., May 27.—Whether Fannie Lockwood, 18-year-old unwed mother, is to be given a foundling of six months as her own child, taken away from her five months ago, will rest with circuit judge Erwin Ossing.

Fannie's habeas corpus proceedings were resumed today. The girl was to attempt again to prove the blue-eyed boy, which she failed to identify positively last week, was her love child.

Thomas Poepping, handsome opera singer, confessed taking a child from her and leaving it on the steps of St. Joseph's orphanage. The children's board is opposing Fannie's suit to recover the child, claiming that she is unable to identify it as hers.

The La Follette Illusion

By C. E. RUTHENBERG.

The position taken by Senator Robert LaFollette is relation to the growing revolt against Wall Street domination of the government is one of the worst failures to grasp an opportunity which has appeared in the recent history of this country.

The more open use of the governmental power by the big capitalist group to increase their profits has developed a movement of protest among both the small business interests, which LaFollette represent, and among the industrial workers and farmers. The Teapot Dome exposures of bribery and corruption to secure control of the wealth of the country for the big capitalist group—bribery and corruption which reached into the cabinet itself—created a dramatic situation in which millions of those who opposed the domination of the government by Wall Street, could have been rallied for a struggle against the Big Capitalists.

This was LaFollette's opportunity to break with the Republican Party, which he so well knows is the instrument thru which the Big Capitalists put through their plans. A clarion call from LaFollette for a new party would have shaken the old parties to their foundation. But LaFollette remained silent.

Despite the fact that the man to whom great numbers of voters looked to lead the fight against domination of the government by special privilege said nothing, while the character of that government was being demonstrated to millions of voters in the spotlight of Teapot Dome, the movement away from the two old parties grew both among the elements LaFollette represents and among the industrial workers and exploited farmers. Because LaFollette in the past had made some attacks upon Big Business, this movement still looked to him to take the lead thru becoming its presidential nominee.

But LaFollette is still pussy-footing. He still refuses to lead. The only thing that has come from LaFollette is the suggestion of his friends that he will run as an independent candidate and graciously allow everybody who feels that way to support him in the election campaign. If LaFollette's plan goes thru their will be no Farmer-Labor Party representing the interests of the industrial workers and poorer farmers, there will not be even a "Third Party" made up of that economic group which LaFollette and his followers in the house and senate represent. There will be just LaFollette running for the presidency with a heterogeneous Republican, Democratic, Progressive and some Farmer-Labor support.

It is a nice plan for LaFollette. But where do the farmers and exploited workers who want a political party which represents their interests and fights their battles come in? If LaFollette is defeated, as he is likely to be, that will end the whole business. Nothing will remain, for according to LaFollette's plan everything will depend upon him personally.

If LaFollette by some miracle should be elected president, what then? He will be elected as an independent. He will have the right to go his own way. There is no Farmer-Labor program which he will be bound by. His program is the Wisconsin Republican program. There is nothing in it which means anything to the workers and poorer farmers. It will help little business against Big Business somewhat, but their is nothing to it which will help the industrial workers and farmers to get something more of what they produce so that they can improve their standard of living. The LaFollette program would make Big Business be good in relation to little business, but there is nothing in it which challenges the right of little and big business to rob the industrial workers and farmers of their product.

LaFollette as a leader of a party of farmers and workers is an illusion. He might be the leader of a party of little business but his recent actions raises a doubt as to whether he can lead any kind of a party.

His failure in the Teapot Dome exposure, his stand on the presidential nomination, his inoccuous Wisconsin Republican program, which he insists is the only program he will run on, his pussy-footing with the two old parties, raise the question whether it is not time for the workers and farmers to get rid of their illusions about LaFollette.

LaFollette has been hailed as the probable nominee of the June 17th Convention. The Workers Party has always said that it was opposed to the nomination of LaFollette. The question which is before the masses of workers and farmers who are supporting the Farmer-Labor Party movement, is whether LaFollette has not sufficiently demonstrated his unfitness to be the nominee of this movement, so that it will be possible to nominate a real Farmer-Labor candidate at St. Paul—a candidate who is for a class party of farmers and workers and who stands on a platform which represents the class interests of the farmers and workers.

The nomination of a Farmer-Labor candidate at St. Paul and the adoption of a platform which in every line and paragraph makes clear the interests of the exploited farmers and industrial workers—that would make the St. Paul Convention a historic milestone in the struggle of the producers of this country against their exploiters. That is a goal for which every supporter of the class Farmer-Labor movement should strive.

FIRE IN PHILANTHROPIST MILLS' SLEEPING PENS KILLS 6 WORKERS

NEWARK, N. J., May 27.—Six nameless, homeless wanderers burned to death today when fire roared thru the dormitories of the Mills hotel here, imperiling lives of 200 sleeping men.

The hotel, where men find lodging for a few pennies, burned like match wood and many inmates fled naked down fire escapes as the flames gained headway.

The six who lost their lives were burned beyond recognition.

ILLINOIS MINE CZAR'S COME-BACK FAILS

Can't Appoint Legal "Investigators"

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PEORIA, Ill., May 27.—A roll call vote of 496 to 443, by official count, this afternoon, defeated President Farrington's effort to regain appointive power over legal investigators. The investigators must be elected by the rank and file of District 12 of the United Mine Workers of America.

PEORIA, Ill., May 27.—Frank Farrington's revolt against the Illinois Mine Workers' decision to strip him of the power to hand out jobs to his faithful henchmen came to a head today when the roll call vote was taken on the administration's amendment exempting the legal department from the rank and file mandate.

Unofficial count of the roll call vote shows 495 against Farrington and 435 for on this exemption provision.

This means that legal investigators as well as organizers, must be elected by the rank and file of the miners' union. The official count has not yet been given out, but there is little likelihood that a bare faced steal could be put thru.

Wanted To Keep Some Plums.

Farrington's attempt to keep some plums still hanging from his patronage tree provoked a bitter fight. The machine thot they could put their plan thru because some of the delegates, were not clear as to the importance of the exemption of the legal department from the convention's decision.

Delegate Tom Parry, of Divernon, put the issue before his fellow miners when he showed how Farrington used his legal "investigators" for political purposes.

Act As Sluggers.

He began to tell how these legal investigators, paid out of the union treasury, were used as sluggers to beat up members of a rank and file committee that came from Belleville to Springfield in 1919, to plead for a higher rate of wages. They were getting only $5.00 a day. The sluggers were "legal" department appointees of Farrington.

Parry's shot hurt and Farrington ruled him out of order. Fifty to sixty delegates were on their feet demanding the right to speak, but the chairman allowed none of them to speak.

Cold-bloodedly, Farrington then informed Parry that the committeemen never would have been beaten up had they stayed home in Belleville.

Shut Off Debate.

Debate on this vital issue was shut off by the district president after his own speech urging the convention to reverse its previous decision. During his own talk, Farrington viciously assailed John Hindmarsh, one of the leaders of the rank and file movement.

Crying out that he had never seen such a well organized opposition at any convention, Farrington attacked the militants for coming to Peoria with the intention of destroying his machine.

Would Mean Complete Defeat.

Loss of the appointive power, Farrington admitted, would mean his complete defeat. He urged the delegates to vote against their instructions.

Amazement reigned in the convention when tellers announced that the amendment to the committee's report, allowing legal investigators to be appointed, had carried by a 291 to 215 vote. Cries for a roll call vote came from all over the hall.

Thirty Minutes of Turmoil.

For thirty minutes there was turmoil while Farrington used all his trickery to prevent the roll call, but he was compelled to yield to the convention rules, which require a roll call if demanded by 125 delegates.

The roll call vote was taken with a majority of 60 against Farrington on the unofficial count.

"PIE IN THE SKY"—NO "PEACE ON EARTH" FOR FUNDAMENTALIST

MILWAUKEE, Wis., May 27.—Denouncing modernists as materialists who seek to destroy the fundamentals of religious faith, Rev. John Roach Straton, New York, leader of the fundamentalists of the Baptist church, declared that modernism within the Baptist church is an offspring of German militarism and German rationalism, in an address before the Baptist Bible Union of North America. The Bible Union, composed of members known as "Insurgent Conservatives," is preparing to carry the battle against modernism to the floor of the Northern Baptist convention tomorrow.

Dr. Straton declared that the religion of revelation at home has been discarded to a great extent for a religion of "mere humanitarianism" with an over emphasis upon reform and social and economic betterment.

TAYLOR MAKES POOR WITNESS BEFORE FOELL

50 Workers Impatient at Many Delays

In order to get their cases over with and be able to return to their work, 49 garment workers pleaded guilty to contempt of court before "Dennie" Sullivan yesterday and were fined $25 each. The strikers were all impatient at the delays that had been forced on them for more than two weeks and, knowing they would only face further delays if they insisted on a trial, decided to plead guilty to the contempt charges.

The knowledge that they could not hope to get any sort of justice at the hands of Sullivan, and that their "trial" would only be a farce when it occurred, helped the workers to decide to plead guilty. Most of the workers had jobs and were anxious to get out of court in order to return to their work.

While pronouncing sentence "Dennie" sat on the bench and delivered a lot of blah at the strikers. The strikers looked at "Dennie" and wished he would hurry up his speech so they could get out of his hands once and for all.

Taylor's Story Canned.

Judge Foell fined David Krause, a striker, $100 for contempt. Dudley Taylor was prosecuting him. The whole case against Krause seemed to be that he had been fined by Sullivan for contempt before. Taylor swore himself as a witness and told a wild tale about Krause's beating up of a scab. The tale was so evidently apple sauce that Judge Foell ordered it struck from the record. But just the same Foell slapped a fine of $100 on Krause.

The fact that Dudley has not been having the easy success that first met his efforts to send strikers to jail is telling on him. He looks worried and is always out of patience. Labor men who have known Taylor for years declare that he never shows emotion. But lately he has begun to show the strain of defeat. For it is defeat for him if he is unable to send workers to jail. Yesterday he looked like the victim of an unsuccessful monkey gland operation. While making out the order which when signed by the judge would release Krause till after an appeal in the case had been taken he trembled violently.

Foell Gets Rough.

It is evident that Judge Foell is increasing the severity of his sentences as the busy season in the women's dress industry draws near, in an effort to stop picketing. So far he has not worked his courage up to the point of handing out stiff jail sentences to the strikers, as Sullivan does, but he is as severe as he thinks he can be.

Union Shows Up Fire Frauds.

SAN FRANCISCO. — The Sheet Metal Workers' union charges local contractors with violation of fire ordinances thru substituting cheaper materials than the law requires. Low gauge iron casing in chimneys, omission of asbestos lining in sheet metal lined garages, and placing of asbestos only at the edges (where it would show) are among the violations charged.

COMMUNISTS JEER VON TIRPITZ ASKING "WHERE ARE YOUR SUBMARINES?"

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BERLIN, May 27.—The new German Reichstag opened today, with files of armed troops guarding all the entrances and approaches. The Communists were searched for arms. Great masses of workers thronged the streets and cheered the Communists who arrived in a body.

It was the most heterogenous collection of legislators that ever gathered in Berlin. Among the most notorious of the war scoundrels were General Eric Von Ludendorff, who fled to Sweden in disguise after the signing of the armistice and Admiral Von Tirpitz, the blundering naval chief who was responsible for the submarine campaign.

The aged revolutionist Clara Zetkin was prominent in the Communist ranks.

Communists Jeer Kaiserite.

The session opened amidst turbulent scenes. The Communist deputies jeered when Admiral Von Tirpitz called the roll. "Where are your submarines?" they shouted at the whiskered Kaiserite.

"Mass murderer!" was the cry hurled at Von Ludendorff as he appeared dressed in civilian clothes. Before the general took his seat in the Reichstag he went to the bar and had a couple of stiff whiskies to bolster up his morale.

Fascisti Wear Iron Crosses.

The nationalist deputies and Fascisti wore war ribbons and iron crosses.

President Ebert commissioned Chancellor Marx of the Centrum (Catholic) party to form a new cabinet, replacing that which resigned last night. Marx is a Catholic and favors the Dawes plan.

Socialists Are Weak.

Besides losing in numbers, the socialist party has also lost whatever "steam" it possessed. There is hardly a squak out of its leading members. They are understood to be ready to support any party that promises to retain the capitalist system in Germany. The "Vorwaerts," official organ of the socialists, has come out with a big headline calling for the support of the Dawes plan.

The presence of Ludendorf and Von Tirpitz in the Reichstag is not expected to add to the serenity of the sessions. Many of the Fascisti are accustomed to posing as "bold, bad men" who like a scrap and don't particularly care where they fight.

Ludendorf is the recognized leader of the Hitlerites. The Communists have, however, in the person of the Hamburg sailor, Thomas Wendelin, a powerful scrapper who is only too willing to form the thin edge of the wedge should the Communists find it necessary to supplement their arguments to defend themselves against the Fascisti with other arguments than words.

Should Marx accept the invitation to form a government, he is expected

DEMOCRATS LEAVE PROGRESSIVES IN LEGISLATIVE LURCH

WASHINGTON, May 27.—Progressives who have swung the decisive votes to the democrats in every partisan tilt on important legislation to date found themselves deserted by their allies today.

Not only will the democrats vote with republicans to endorse the compromise tax bill, which contains the democratic income tax rates by virtue of progressive support, but minority leaders will aid the republicans in getting adjournment by June 7th.

The progressives thus find themselves with their ambitious program of farm relief and railroad legislation shunted into the background.

LEGION FAILS TO HELP SLAYER OF HUNGRY WORKER

Daily Worker Stories Scared Him?

An attack of cold feet kept Lawrence Packwood, American Legionnaire defending Dewey Norman, slayer of John Bajur, the starving workingman who tried to keep himself alive by taking a few rotten potatoes, from appearing at the coroner's inquest over Bajur's body yesterday morning. The yellow, weazened face of the super-patriot was missing from the Racine Ave. police station.

Tough Job Twisting Truth.

Whether Packwood feared to take responsibility for delaying the case until a frameup could be managed, or whether the presence of a DAILY WORKER was too much for him, is not known.

Norman, however, was left unaided in his attempt to show how a bullet fired to the ground can pierce the back and right lung of a man fifty feet away.

Widow Poverty Stricken.

In one corner of the bare room Bajur's wife, worn with long days and longer nights of sorrow, and with the even more terrible strain of trying to keep together the little family whose only support has been taken away, waited nervously until the inquest should be over. Near her was a small brown sack, half filled with rotting potatoes, which, Norman claims, Bajur was trying to steal from the yards of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad.

To defend this bit of private property a workingman has been killed and a family made destitute.

"You killa my countryman, you killa my countryman," was the bitter, constantly repeated exclamation of a friend of the dead man.

Norman's case will be continued in the Desplaines St. court on June 6.

Two Cents An Hour Gained By Chicago Union Machinists

CHICAGO, May 27.—Over 2000 union machinists in the Chicago area are enjoying an increase of 2c an hour by agreement of the International Association of Machinists district with the employers, retroactive to May 1. The new rate is 95c an hour. A considerable number more will get the raise after some shops that wanted to cut wages 10 per cent sign up. An important change in working conditions makes the union district office the exclusive agency for hiring men. With present unemployment this insures that union men will get first shot at available jobs.

No Daily Worker Saturday; Saturday Magazine Friday

Owing to the fact that Friday, May 30th, is a holiday, Memorial Day, recognized as such by the printing trades, there will be no Saturday issue of the DAILY WORKER this week.

The regular Saturday Magazine Section will appear, the same size as usual, in Friday's issue. Make your arrangements now with your newsstand dealer to see that you get your Friday's issue of the DAILY WORKER.

PULLMAN CZAR AFRAID TO SHOW FACE IN MEETING

Carry Took 'Sick' When Advertising Failed

President E. F. Carry, of the Pullman Car Works, deeply disappointed a few old fogies when he failed to show up at a scheduled meeting at the Public Auditorium in Pullman Park on Monday night.

Whether Carry was still weighted down with the Knighthood of St. Gregory, heaped on him by Cardinal Mundelein just after he had given his employes a drastic wage cut, or whether Carry was afraid there might, by some strange chance, be an honest-to-God workingman in the audience, has not been reported. However, Carry sent his regrets and the meeting broke up at 9 o'clock.

If Carry was afraid to face some of the workers who had struck against his slavish company union, and against a wage cut, he worried without cause. As one of the visitors was heard to remark, "Say, there's not a human being in the place."

Bum Show Well Advertised.

Carry had made great preparations for this "mass" meeting. The twenty thousand Pullman slaves had been exhorted to come. Leaflets were distributed broadcast thruout the shop, declaring that "All loyal employes are expected to be present to hear their president speak." Posters were put up on all the bulletin boards announcing the "treat" which the Pullman piece-workers were to have in feasting their eyes on the president. Announcements were made in the local papers, "Carry, the benefactor of Pullman, will speak under the auspices of the Pullman Twenty Year Service Club on Monday night."

Carry must have got wind of the fact that instead of a mass meeting of workers, there assembled only a handful of veterans who had worked in the Pullman shops for twenty years or over and looked it too. There was also a sprinkling of office workers and their wives.

"Lock Up Your Troubles."

There was a piano recital and a recitation by a worn-out society woman who continually sounded the refrain in her poem that the workers should not worry. "Lock your troubles up in a box, sit on the box and throw the key away," ran the theme. Considering that the audience was composed of veteran Pullman employes, this was asking a lot. The poem pleaded for reverance for God and the boss.

But everyone was waiting expectantly for the piece de resistance of the evening—the talk of St. Carry. Expectancy thrilled the audience as Mark Higgins, president of the Pullman Twenty Year Slavery Club, rose. He was to introduce Carry.

Higgins, however, regretfully announced that Carry was sick. "He is under the doctor's care and his family is worried about him," said G. Higgins. "I know that you will be sorry to hear that Carry has a sore throat."

The DAILY WORKER reporter didn't blame Carry for giving the twenty-year termers the run-around. What could Carry get out of these worn-out pieces of machinery. They had served their sentences.

Loyal Slave Praises Boss.

Mark Higgins spoke a little in eulogy of Carry. "Probably a good many of you have never seen Carry," said Higgins, "let alone talked to him. I worked as a furnace tender in the Pullman plant for 36 years, and I never saw Carry except once, a year and half ago. I didn't get close enough to touch him, but I did get real close to him and got a good look at him."

"It is too bad Carry didn't show up," Higgins continued. "I know you folks wanted to get a glimpse of the man you are working for. I know I always want to know who I am working for and want to know what kind of a man he is."

The DAILY WORKER could have suggested that Higgins go talk to one of the riveters or reamers who had their wages reduced as high as 50 per cent, and in the bargain, were speeded up under the Taylor piece work, stop watch system, if they wanted to get a real insight into what the Pullman employes think of the man they work for.

After Higgins had adjourned the meeting, he explained to the DAILY WORKER the meaning and purpose of the Pullman Twenty-Year Service Club.

"No, this club is not run by the Pullman company officials," said Higgins, "but only Pullman employes who have worked in the Pullman shops twenty years or over are eligible to join."

Only Benefit Is Button.

Higgins seemed surprised when asked what were the benefits of membership in the club. "Well, there are no particular benefits," he stammered out, "you just get this green button with the club initials on it, and everybody knows you are a twenty-year service man. You have to pay dues of 25 cents a month."

Higgins said the Pullman employes are permitted to have a Christmas entertainment every year under the auspices of the Twenty-Year Service Club. If the Knight of St. Gregory runs true to form, we'll wager he makes the employes pay twice for every candle on the Christmas tree.

One Machine Smashed

When in the closing hours of the Illinois Miners' Convention at Peoria, the Farrington forces were defeated in their twelfth-hour attempt to recover the appointive power, abolished during the last week's sessions, the downfall of one vicious machine that has hobbled Labor in Illinois was signed and sealed. Unofficial count of the roll-call vote showed that 496 delegates voted against Farrington while 443 were still under his control. Like all such artificial groupings, Farrington's hitherto well-oiled machine will quickly fall to pieces, now that it has received its walking papers as the official administration.

All of which shows that the rank and file revolt is something deep and fundamental. No amount of agitation and propaganda could have created the profound resentment against the old bureaucrats displayed by the delegates at District 12 Convention, and by the local unions that gave the delegates their instructions. The Illinois miners are taking determined steps forward.

DAILY WORKER SELLS FAST ON FOOD WAR FRONT

Scab Restaurant Men Get Strike Message

The Special Food Workers' Strike Edition of the DAILY WORKER was well distributed yesterday. Dozens of workers sold thousands of copies of the "Special" to both patrons and workers in Chicago restaurants. Unorganized workers were eager to buy the paper which told their story and carried the message of the union in spite of the injunction of Judge Hugo Friend.

Restaurant patrons were just as eager to know all about the strike. They bought the paper in large numbers and many after reading it came back to the strikers who sold it and gave them contributions to help the work of organizing the sweated workers.

Swells All Read It

Altho the sale of the paper was greatest in working class neighborhoods the "swell" districts were not overlooked by the union workers. Sheridan Road and the Wilson Ave. district were visited by the unionists who reported big sales.

"The most effective weapon we could have gotten under any circumstances," was the way one member of the organization committee of the Food Workers' Union described the "Special" of the DAILY WORKER.

"It enabled us to take the message of the union right to the workers and the public under the nose of the injunction. The bosses know how to use publicity and it is fine to see the workers use such a valuable weapon so well.

Good Job Well Done

"The DAILY WORKER talked in the language of the workers. The effectiveness of the "Special" was added to by the fact that it was so well done. The paper was there. We must hand it to the staff which turned out such a fine sheet for us. A good job well done, that's what it was."

BREED! BREED! BREED! FRENCH MILITARISTS CRY—AND CRY IN VAIN

PARIS, May 27.—Bear sons for the republic is the cry of placards all over Paris, posted by the National Alliance for the Increase of French Population. The posters show two babies, one large, blonde and blue-eyed, supposed to represent a German child, the other small, brunette and dark-eyed, representing the French baby. The text reads:

"France is in danger. The Boche mothers bear 1,145,000 children annually, our women only 760,000. This means revenge. French births decreased 27,000 per year since 1868. German births increased correspondingly. If things continue France is lost. Therefore, French patriots, produce children, the more the better. And you, French women, do your duty and bring children into the world. Vive la France!"

But the landlords and food profiteers are not patriotic.

Big Picnic On Decoration Day

The committee in charge of the joint picnic to be held on May 30, by the T. U. E. L., and the Y. W. L., announces further reasons for the attendance of every trade unionist, sympathizer and young worker, at the first major social affair of the summer season.

A program has been outlined that bespeaks not only an enjoyable time, but also a profitable one. Three splendid speakers in short, snappy talks are to add a valuable note to the gathering. Bob Minor, editor of the Liberator and the country's greatest cartoonist, will be at the festivities. J. W. Johnstone, district organizer for the T. U. E. L., who has just returned from the Miners' Convention where the militants have accounted for themselves so splendidly, brings a welcome note from the field of battle. And Max Schactman, editor of The Young Worker will speak for the young militants.

These three speakers, attraction enough for any affair, are only part of the program. Arrangements have been made to introduce novelties new to Chicago's gatherings. Games and sports of many kinds have been arranged. For the children the grove facilities provide swings and a merry-go-round and decorations will add a festive note to the occasion.

Last year's most successful affair will be duplicated if all advance notices of the ticket sale and the committees, preparations are to be taken as indications. The grounds are Altenheim Grove. Take Forest Park "L" to the gates; or Madison street car and transfer to suburban line.

100 TRAPPED IN MEX MINE; HUMAN LIFE IS CHEAP TO U. S. OWNERS

MEXICO CITY, Mexico, May 27.—In a mine cave-in near Guadalajara more than 100 workers were killed. Many of the bodies have been recovered.

The Mexican mines are even more unsafe than those in the United States. They are mostly owned by "gringoes" who don't give a damn about the lives of "greasers."

FRENCH RADICAL SOCIALISTS WAR ON MILLERAND

Poincare Backers Hint at Dictatorship

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, May 27.—The drive to jimmy president Millerand from his office is now in full swing. It is believed the socialists will consent to accept portfolios in the Herriot government, provided the president is removed. This would be a good excuse for them to break their pledges against collaborating in the left bloc cabinet. The majority of the French socialists are undoubtedly against participation in the cabinet, but it is safe to say that this is not true of the leaders.

The socialist organ, Le Populaire, points out that there are two ways to force his withdrawal; one is by refusing to form a government and the other, to move a reduction of his salary.

In the meantime, Herriot is letting it be known that he is no enfant terrible. Like the American La Follette, he has a reputation for being a dangerous enemy of the big capitalists, but so far he has not inflicted any severe wounds on them. He is a supporter of the league of nations, yet he no less than Poincare, insists on "security" against Germany, and payment of reparatoins. His is in hearty accord with the views of Ramsay MacDonald on the question of the league of nations.

Herriot is for the Dawes report and will talk about the evacuation of the Ruhr only after the Dawes plan is put in operation. Poincare, in a speech declared, that his Ruhr policy would not be given a kick in the slats by the new government and that he would be back in power again after the left bloc failed to accomplish anything or make good its pre-election promises.

On the Russian question, Herriot declared himself as follows: "I do not confound the Russian people nor the Russian government with the Communist International. In trying to re-establish relations with the Soviet Republic, I shall not let myself he manouvered by agitation and shall not forget that small French investors have great interests in Russia."

Herriot also expressed thanks to Poincare for the frankness which his political opponent put him in touch with the foreign negotiations of the government. Meanwhile, Poincare is warning the country against secret German military preparations, and declaring that France would not withdraw her military forces from the Ruhr except in a measure equal to the Dawes reparations. He makes it quite clear that the Dawes plan does not insist on Ruhr evacuation.

In view of the fact that Poincare is about to quit office, the significance of his threats is increased by a statement in the Nationalist Fascisti newspaper, The Liberte, that the present situation in France is similar to that of Italy after the second Nitti government, before Mussolini seized power. This may be a hint that should the left bloc be unsuccessful in muddling thru, Poincare and the heavy industrialists, who are his backers, may pull off a Mussolini stunt, and establish a Fascisti dictatorship.

The financial situation is growing worse and worse. The lefts blame the rights and the rights blame the lefts. The Communists blame both and declare the only solution of the ills that afflict the sick social body of France, is a Workers' and Peasants' government as a step toward a dictatorship of the workers and peasants and the beginning of the work to social reconstruction on a Communist basis.

The illness of the franc is blamed on the Poincare financial backers by the lefts, while the reactionary press say that it is not surprising if French investors should prefer to withdraw their investments from French industries, feeling their wealth would be safer in some other country, not governed by radicals. The Poincare crowd now point to the huge French debt as the cause of the slump in the franc.

M. Painleve, the leader of 39 Republican Socialist deputies, is out for the presidency of the Chamber; a position which is regarded as a stepping stone to the presidency of the Republic.

Senator Anatole De Monzie, a convert to the program of recognizing Soviet Russia, is mentioned for finance minister.

FARRINGTON PLAYS HIS TRICKS

PEORIA, Ill., May 27.—Discarding the last vestige of loyalty to the Illinois miners who pay him his salary, President Frank Farrington yesterday told the convention that if their vote, taking from him the power to appoint union employes, were allowed to stand, it would mean that the legal investigators would have to be elected in the last minute of the convention.

Despite the fact that Vice President Harry Fishwick, acting as chairman, when Farrington's report was being discussed, ruled that the vote against the appointive power meant that the constitution committee would be honor bound to bring in a report along the lines voted by the convention, Farrington is making a last desperate effort to get the delegates to vote against their instructions and reverse their previous action.

Farrington called to his aid Chief Counsel Angus Kerr, of the legal staff, and was also backed up by the report brought in by his appointed committee on constitutional resolutions.

Rules Against Berkowich.

Farrington had ruled S. Berkowich out of order on the ground that Berkowich was not a delegate to the convention, when Berkowich tried to protest against the joint group board allowing him to be blacklisted without protest. Farrington decided against a point of order made for the same reason, and allowed Kerr to speak in Farrington's defense, altho Kerr is not a delegate.

The motion upon which Farrington tried to sneak back his appointive power was No. 76, of the resolutions on constitution, which would give Farrington the right to appoint legal investigators. It is with the legal investigators that Farrington has been able to saddle the Illinois miners with his tyrannical machine. Farrington has been able to control the elections, steal the votes, and use his legal investigators to good advantage to himself as committee members at the district conventions.

The legal investigators have been the real bone of contention, and Farrington is looking ahead to the elections next December. The delegates say that if Farrington's appointive power is kept from him, he will not even dare run for re-election, knowing that a fair vote at the next elections will depose him in favor of some progressive.

Finally Get Resolutions.

The stage was all set by Farrington and his committee to railroad thru the resolution allowing him to retain control of the legal investigators. The book of resolutions on constitution, altho printed two weeks ago, and in the hands of Farrington's pet reporters for over a week, were not given out to the delegates until now. The delegates have been asking for these resolutions daily, knowing that they contained some of the most important business before the convention. But Walter Nesbit, who was in charge of their distribution, had declared he did not know where they were.

Immediately after the distribution of the book of resolutions, Farrington's committee at once started in on the resolution relating to the appointive power. This was contrary to all proper procedure, as there are five resolutions in the book which should have been considered before the first resolution on appointive power came up. This was in line with Farrington's procedure the day before, when he defied all the laws of the convention and brought in the report of the committee on appeals and grievances instead of the report on resolutions. Farrington's game has been to save discussion of the appointive power until the last minute and then adjourn the convention with the matter still hanging in the air.

Create Much Confusion.

After Kerr spoke for his boss, Farrington, the committee's report was amended, to still further confuse the situation; then the amendment was rushed to a vote without any one getting the floor.

The amendment was carried by a vote of 224 to 168. The motion as amended was being put to a vote when the delegates began to wake up and find what was being put over on them. Delegate John Hindmarsh took the floor and pointed out to the delegates that they were confused by Farrington's trickery. "To continue to vote as you did on this amendment would be to undo what you did a few days ago," said Hindmarsh. "To allow Farrington to appoint the legal investigators means that you have returned to him his appointive power, which you so decisively took away a few days ago. I warn you that if you were instructed to vote against the appointive power to watch what you are doing on this motion."

Hindmarsh told the delegates that if they followed out their instructions they would have to vote down the committee's report as amended and take up one of the resolutions from amongst the 63 that pertain to the subject. The convention adjourned for the day after Hindmarsh had spoken, to take the matter up again at the morning's session.

Aid Mooney Defense Fund.

After a discussion, the convention voted, 269 to 101, for $500 to the Tom Mooney defense fund.

21 STATES IN LINE FOR ST. PAUL

established them as permanent organizations. These were the Farmer-Labor parties of Minnesota, South Dakota, and Washington, and the Progressive parties of Idaho and Nebraska. In addition to these, the convention was supported by the Farmer Labor parties of Montana and North Dakota, which, altho they are new parties, are backed by some of the most influential men in the political life of the state.

New State Parties Building.

The organizations named above were all in existence at the time the June 17th convention was called. Since the call for the convention was broadcasted thruout the country the sentiment for independent political action by the workers and farmers has been greatly stimulated. The Farmer-Labor Party of Colorado, which has gone thru several campaigns has decided to line up in support of the June 17th convention. In many other states conventions have been or will be held for the purpose of organizing state parties and electing delegates to the St. Paul convention.

In Oklahoma, Kansas, Missouri, New York, and Illinois, conventions have been held in the last week, made up of delegates from workers and farmers' organizations, which in each case nominated a state ticket, took the necessary steps to get their party on the ballot, and elected delegates to the June 17th convention.

In Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Ohio, and California calls are now out for state conventions for the avowed purpose of supporting the national movement. In Iowa, Oregon, Michigan, and Wisconsin efforts are being exerted in an attempt to form state organizations in time to actively participate in the November campaign.

In the Farmer-Labor parties of West Virginia and Indiana, strong groups are working in an effort to line these parties up behind the St. Paul convention.

Permanent Party Assured.

The nation-wide agitation for a party representing the interests of the farmers and workers independent of the two old parties is stimulating interest everywhere. The building of parties in the states named shows conclusively that the new party is assured.

The decision of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers in their convention just closed in Philadelphia to send delegates to the June 17th convention with instructions to work for the formation of a crystallized organization in the American Labor movement, and their action is sure to have its effect on the other Internationals.

There are strong indications of a split in the C. P. P. A. over the question of supporting McAdoo on the Democratic ticket or La Follette on a ticket independent of the two old parties.

The events of the past few days affords good evidence that the support piling up behind the June 17th convention in St. Paul has aided in breaking many of them away from nonpartisan action and convinced them of the wonderful possibilities of building a new party this year.

With this split now evident, it is well to remember that the position of the St. Paul convention is that they will adopt a policy and program flexible and broad enough to include all elements who stand for independent political action by the workers and farmers. They have repeatedly declared for unity of action between all farmer-labor elements.

The organizations already built and in the process of building show conclusively that the foundation for the St. Paul convention is firm. At the St. Paul convention the real American Farmer-Labor Party will be built.

STRIKING FOOD WORKERS TELL PUBLIC FACTS

Plan Mass Meeting On Thursday Night

The striking Greek restaurant workers will present the barbaric conditions under which they were forced to work before the strike, to the general public at a mass meeting to be held Thursday night at 722 Blue Island avenue.

The Chicago branch of the Amalgamated Food Workers' Union declares, that when the general public knows the evil effect of the 12-14 hour day and seven-day week on the men, that they will refuse to eat in the 170 scab restaurants which issued the injunction against the strikers.

Central Board Report.

Charles H. Keller, organizer of the Chicago branch of the Amalgamated Food Workers, will report today on the results of his conference in New York with the central executive board of the Amalgamated Food Workers' Union. The central executive board is expected to put all the power at their command back of the striking restaurant workers, in the fight on the injunction Judge Friend and the Greek restaurant owners who granted the blanket injunction restraining the strikers from picketing.

Flock Into Union.

Albert E. Stewart, secretary of the Chicago Amalgamated Food Workers' Union, said today that all over the city workers in the Greek restaurants are flocking into the union. "This is the first strike I ever heard of where an injunction was issued against picketing before the men went on strike," Stewart told the DAILY WORKER reporter. "But a general campaign to get the restaurant workers of the city into the union will more than counteract the attempted intimidation of the strikers by the issuance of the blanket injunction." Stewart said that no injunction can be issued which will prevent the men from joining the union. "It's getting so now that the men who are being fired for joining the Amalgamated, cannot be replaced by non-union men. They are all joining the union, and will soon be one hundred per cent organized."

Will Tell of Strike.

The mass meeting Thursday will be addressed by speakers in both Greek and English. The story of the strike will be told, and the public will have an opportunity to gain a true picture of the conditions under which the Greek restaurant workers are forced to live and work.

Troops Guard.

The Nationalists claim the right to elect the president of the Reichstag. Secretly the Nationalists are not unalterably opposed to the Dawes plan, but cannot admit this openly, as they were elected on an anti-Dawes platform.

Considerable pressure is being brot to bear on Germany by the Ramsay MacDonald government to bring about acceptance of the Dawes report. The British government is anxious to stabilize the capitalist system and holds a club over the head of German leaders who might be inclined to resent the mortgaging of Germany to the International bankers.

White today the Reichstag is the centre of interest, rumblings of industrial warfare come from the Ruhr where over half a million miners are still on strike. Mr. A. J. Cook, secretary of the British Miners' Federation and radical left winger who has not changed his mind immediately he assumed office, said that the British workers could not support their seven-hour day unless they support the German miners for the same principle.

TELEGRAPHERS DODGE JUNE 17TH AND JULY FOURTH

"Nonpartisan" Attitude in Politics Taken

By J. A. HAMILTON.

(Special to "The Young Worker").

CLEVELAND, Ohio, May 27.—The Order of Railroad Telegraphers (O. R. T.) closed its tri-ennial convention here after a two-weeks' session. The old officers, E. J. Manion, president, and L. R. Ross, secretary-treasurer, were re-elected. The next convention will convene in 1927 in St. Louis, the headquarters city.

The convention endorsed the Howell-Barkley Bill, now under consideration by congress as a substitute for the Esch-Cummins Act, supported by the sixteen standard railroad unions, as a far more equitable measure than the present law. It was voted to subscribe for the entire membership of 67,000 to "Labor," the weekly, published in Washington by the railroad unions.

The policy of non-partisan political action was endorsed but no definite actions proposed, either as to representation at June 17th or July 4th, or as to supporting any presidential candidate. Amalgamation did not come up for discussion. Demands for wages and conditions do not come before the conventions but are taken care of by the various "System Divisions" or organizations of the telegraphers on each railroad system.

The Telegraphers' Union claims to have practically 100 per cent of the railroad telegraphers organized in the United States and Canada. There was a delegate from Newfoundland, and one from the Panama Canal Zone. The so-called "North Pole Division" has been organized to include the telegraphers on the Alaskan Railroad. The eight-hour day, six-day week, and time and one-half for overtime, have been secured. The telephone has been widely introduced as an auxiliary to the telegraph in controlling the movement of trains, but it is said that the telegraph is the main reliance, being less subject to bad weather, and allowing the transmission of orders with less opportunity of error. Telephone operation is provided for in the union schedules.

The telegraphers have at St. Louis, one of the Labor Banks, which has deposits of over five millions and resources of over six millions. The union does not supply insurance, but has a mutual benefit department which pays only death benefits to a maximum of $1,000. One of the chief general grievances of the men is against the Railroad Labor Board, because of its custom of settling disputes in favor of the companies.

The telegraphers are not organized in local unions but according to the railroad system for which they work. There is a local division with a local chairman to correspond with the section of the railroad under charge of a superintendent. For each railroad system there is a system division, with a general system secretary-treasurer, to whom are sent the dues of the members on this system. The whole organization is known as the "Grand Division." The supreme agency between conventions is the board of directors, which does not include the resident officers, whose duties are therefore more confined to administrative work than in dictatorships, such as the miners' union. The 655 delegates at the convention were elected by referendum of the members of the various system divisions; for example, the Pennsylvania System Division sent 41 delegates. The basis of representation was approximately one delegate to 100 members.

WORLD PROTESTS UNJUST DEATH SENTENCE ON SPANISH WORKERS' REVOLUTIONARY ARTIST—ACHER

MADRID, Spain, May 27.—Telegrams and cablegrams from all over the world are pouring in demanding that the Spanish government release Juan Bautista Acher, known affectionately by the working masses as "El Poeta" or "Shum," the name he uses on his cartoons. Acher has been sentenced to death for crimes in which he had no part and his execution is expected at any time. No definite date was ever set by the authorities.

Not only do working class organizations of all countries protest the unjust imprisonment of "Shum" but prominent citizens have added their voices for the poet-and-artist's release. One of the most noted lawyers of Spain, Eduardo Barrio Harran y Bero, has spoken against the decision of the courts in "Shum's" case.

"Shum" is a thoro revolutionist first of all and an artist. His philosophy is more Communistic than anything. His poems and drawings are all directed against the oppressing master class. Many of his caricatures have appeared in the Anarcho-Syndicalist paper, "Solidarida Obrera," of Barcelona.

Bomb Wounds Artist

"Shum" was sentenced to death two years ago for alleged murder in connection with the bombing of a factory. Acher insists that he is innocent. He says that he was visiting some girls in a sweat shop when a bomb was exploded in which many were hurt and in which Acher himself lost both hands. The artist has to draw with a pencil held between his stumps and chin.

When brought to trial, Acher was sentenced on the basis of "second offence," altho he had never been convicted for the previous bombing incident which occurred in a private home. The Supreme Court reaffirmed the decision in spite of the opinions of prominent jurists that the trial was a tragic farce.

Communist Leaders In Prison.

Most of the leaders of the Communist movement in Spain have been incarcerated in the various dreadful old bastiles under the Directory which prevails in the country now. Juan Andrade, Corredora Alta 17, 3rd. Acha, Prison Modele de Madrid, has sent requests to all party publications in America for literature to be sent the Communists with him in prison. All the old Central Executive Committee of Spain's Communist Party are now in the vile prisons and the new committee uses the publications regularly sent.

The Directory places a government censor at every public meeting. The government representative can raise his voice against the proceedings of the meeting but he cannot break it up with clubs as the police do in America. Formerly anyone could say whatever he pleased in Spain except about the King and the army. The new military dictatorship is attempting strict censorship of speech and press. Morality is about the only thing not licensed by law.

Peasants Scorn Government

The Spanish workers and peasants have an inborn contempt for authority and government. Mass demonstrations occur whenever a petty official usufps too much power to himself. The workers invariably scorn police officers and take the side of the offender being nabbed by the officer.

Spanish workers labor long, whether in the fields or in the factories or on the docks. They are not imbued with the "manana" (tomorrow) spirit which has so long been mouthed as the characteristic of all Spanish people. The put-it-off people are the middle class bourgeoisie and the upper classes. The peasants particularly work long hours and find no "manana" of rest because modern agricultural methods have not been introduced. The soil is tilled in the same old way it has been scratched thru the centuries under the glaring sun of the south.

There are 5,000,000 agricultural laborers, 1,500,000 industrial workers, 160,000 miners, 140,000 fishermen; 3,700,000 tradesmen and office workers in Spain. The proportion of workers organized in unions has never been great. At their height the Sindicato Unico organizations claimed 1,000,000 members. The Catholic church has about the same membership, it declares, in its unions of agricultural workers.

Barcelona Strongly Syndicalist

The Sindicato Unico is not a single organization but rather a principle of "industrial unionism" which was used in organizing various industries. The syndicalist unions are autonomous but act with one another in spontaneous sympathy.

The syndicalist unions retain their hold in Barcelona in the great textile and printing plants. Cotton from the southern United States comes in great quantities to these Barcelona mills for cloth manufacturers and practically all the printing for Spain is done in this city. Much machinery is manufactured in Barcelona, which is one of the most modern cities of the country. The population of the city and its surrounding manufacturing town suburbs is about 700,000.

Strikes Affected Politics

The 3,000,000 Catalonians are close sympathizers with the syndicalist unions and support the strikes which occur in Barcelona. The syndicalists' direct action tactics have caused serious crises in politics at times.

The Socialists control the Central Union of Workers which has formed a "Labor Party". No more than seven Socialist deputies have ever been in a single session of the Spanish Parliament.

The Socialists are strongest among the miners of Asturias, who are almost perennially striking. The railway workers and building trades workers also incline towards Socialism. But the northern coal miners of Asturias, the Wales of Spain, are the backbone of the organization. (The crown prince of Spain is Prince of Asturias.)

Communists Gaining

In Rio Tinto, the biggest copper mines of the country, the union used to be 100 per cent strong but British control broke the power of the organized workers. Bilbao is still under Socialist influence among the metal workers. It was in this city that Professor Unamuno of Salamanca University now exiled in the Canary Islands, used to edit a Socialist Paper.

Trotzky visited Spain in 1916 and expressed hope that the backwardness of the Spanish proletariat would help towards a real workers' revolution but so far the Communists have not made as much headway as might have been expected, due largely to the Directory established last year.

There is growing sympathy for the Communist program now in spite of the fact that the Communist leaders are clapped into prison as fast as they are discovered. The demand for Communist literature has greatly increased altho the local party papers have been suppressed again and again.

WAR VET OFFICIALLY DEAD, VERY MUCH ALIVE; MAKES DOCTORS THINK

NIBRARA, Neb., May 27.—Physicians representing the United States Veterans Bureau today examined the remains of a world war veteran, buried as Arthur Frazier, in an effort to solve a puzzle created by the return of the real Arthur Frazier, an Indian.

Until the identity of the remains is cleared up the real Frazier will remain on the veterans' bureau list as "killed in action."

The body buried as that of Frazier was brought from the trenches in France in 1918. It was interred here and the local American Legion post was named the Arthur Frazier Post.

Some time ago a young man arrived at the lower Brule Indian Reservation near here. He said he was Arthur Frazier and is now living there with his parents. The young man is suffering from shell shock.

STEEL INDUSTRY HAS HIT BOTTOM SAY MAGNATES

Congress Interferes With Their Business

NEW YORK, May 27.—Steel executives, here to attend the meeting of the American Iron and Steel Institute, said today that the steel industry was dragging bottom, but that slight signs of betterment appeared.

Passage of the bonus bill and other legislation were attributed by the leaders as having a bad effect upon business.

"The Bethlehem Steel Corporation is operating at about 50 per cent. We have touched bottom," President Grace of the company, said.

"My company is operating at about 50 per cent. The situation is as low as it can get and business is bound to be better. I look for an improvement after the national conventions and the adjournment of congress." President Campbell of the Youngstown Sheet and Tube Company, said.

"Things are not as bad as made out in some quarters," officials of the Jones and Laughlin Company pointed out. "Business probably will turn for the better. It always has. I do not expect the change immediately."

Chairman Huston of the Lukens Steel Company said legislation was to blame for the poor business, but was convinced better business would be witnessed by mid-summer.

GOTHAM BUILDERS IN NEW ATTACK ON PLASTERERS

Try To Get Them On Conspiracy Charge

(By The Federated Press.)

NEW YORK, May 27.—Is a labor union illegal when it is strong enough to enforce its rights? This is the issue in the second legal fight which 36 New York plasterers are about to wage against conspiracy indictments. The first trial a year ago ended in a jury disagreement. Among the indicted men are President Michael J. Colleran, Palsterers' Local 60, and other executive board members of the union. The case is to be tried soon before the state supreme court judge, Jeremiah Mahoney.

The indictment is based on the contention that the union with an alleged 100 per cent organization forces its demands upon employers which constitutes a conspiracy. The union takes the position that the men indicted committed none of the alleged offenses for personal profit but solely upon the sanction of the union membership and for the rights of the union membership. The defense is expected to forward certain employers as witnesses to show that their business did not suffer during the period of alleged conspiracy.

A handicap has been placed on the defense by the court in allowing the prosecution to pick a special jury panel. The panel consists of business men, and includes no member of a trade union nor person known to be friendly to labor. Samuel Untermyer, a clever millionaire lawyer, who failed to get the union in the last trial, is again prosecuting the case.

MARINE UNIONS STRIKE TO SET DESERTERS FREE

Crew Wouldn't Sail In Sinking Ship

By W. FRANCIS AHERN.

SYDNEY, New South Wales, May 27.—A fine spirit of working class solidarity is shown in connection with the steamer Port Lyttleton which is laid up in Sydney harbor awaiting repairs.

Last January, the steamer struck a rock and temporary repairs were carried out. The captain ordered the vessel to sea but some of the crew refused to sail, fearing she would go down with them. They were arrested for desertion.

When the vessel got to Sydney, in a badly leaking condition, the 14 maritime unions comprising the transport workers' group of the Sydney Labor council refused to sanction the repairs unless the charges against the men were withdrawn. The owners refused whereupon the vessel was declared "black."

For three months the agents have tried in every way to get repairs but dock after dock has refused to do the work, as the dock-employes have notified their employers that any attempt to have the job done while the vessel is "black" will cause a general strike. An attempt to take the vessel to New Zealand to have her docked there has also failed.

The vessel is still laid up at Sydney and a crew is kept busy pumping to prevent it from sinking.

Iron Workers Strike When Boss Fires Foes of Overtime

SYDNEY, N. S. W., May 27.—About 700 iron workers are on strike at the ironworks near Sydney, owing to the management dismissing two workers who refused to work overtime on Sundays. The men's reason was that there were fellow workers out of employment and they didn't think it right to earn overtime while others were starving. The men refuse to resume until the two men are reinstated and overtime is given to men out of employment.

Labor Leaders Wage War Over Carcass Of Cleveland Meet

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, May 27.—LaFollette will be nominated by the Conference for Political Action, at Cleveland, on July 4th, regardless of whether McAdoo has been named as the democratic presidential candidate, in the opinion of LaFollette men in the union movement. Rejection of McAdoo will be urged on railroad labor men upon the ground that, in preparing himself financially for the presidential race, he undertook to serve the oil interests in imposing an imperialist policy upon Mexico. He agreed for a contingent fee of $1,000,000 to seek to nullify the fruits of the Mexican revolution, embodied in Article 27 of the Mexican constitution, under which Mexico claims title to the oil deposits.

There is new discussion of the possibility that Warren S. Stone of the Locomotive Engineers will be named for the vice-presidency with LaFollette.

LARKIN MAKES SECOND RAID ON LIBERTY HALL

Locks Out Transport Union Chiefs

DUBLIN, May 27.—Liberty Hall, the historic building in which the Easter Week rebellion, under the leadership of James Connolly, was planned, was temporarily occupied by Free State troops following the action of James Larkin and his followers in seizing the premises and ousting the officials of the Irish Transport and General Workers' Union, whose headquarters are located there.

Larkin is reported to have collected dues from members of the union who came to pay their subscriptions.

As an aftermath to the arrests the port of Dublin was idle; the men being more interested in the factional struggle between Larkin and his former associates than in going to work.

(This is the second time the offices of the Irish Transport and General Workers' Union have been seized by James Larkin since his return to Ireland from America, after an absence of eight and one-half years.

His first attack on the headquarters resulted in a crop of injunctions and long litigation. Larkin was defeated in the courts. The executive expelled him as general secretary of the I. T. and G. T. W. U. The fight between Larkin and the union executive promises to destroy what was once one of the most powerful and militant labor organizations in Europe. It has grown in membership from approximately 5,000 when Larkin left Ireland in 1914, to 100,000.

'How To Do It' Worries Labor Gov't Forced To Pay Workless Workers

LONDON, England, May 27.—Experts' reports prepared for the labor government, indicate that the unemployed army will not be reduced below 800,000 during the next four years.

To meet this situation the government is worrying its young head off. If they must hand out unemployment doles for 800,000 persons, they are wondering where the money will come from. Last winter over one hundred million pounds were spent for unemployment relief. Indications are that this amount will have to continue to be spent during the next two years.

The government intends increasing the number receiving "out of work doles" by paying unemployed girls and boys from 14 years old up.

The opponents of the labor government are accusing them of trying to bribe the voters with the unemployment relief.

DETROIT.—Edward McKenna, 27, fell to the ground from a six story window of an office building, demanded a cigarette shortly after his landing and protested vigorously when police took him to the hospital. He bruised a hand trying to grab something on his way down.

OIL STRIKERS IN CONFLICT WITH BRITISH TRUST

Mexican Workers Fight Royal Dutch Shell

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MEXICO CITY, May 27. — The strike of the 2,000 oil workers against the Mexican Eagle Oil Company is still going strong. The strike is entering its third month and has tied up refining at the Tampico plant of the British-owned concern. The Eagle is a subsidiary of the Royal Dutch Shell Company organized under Mexican law.

Negotiations between the workers and the representatives of the men were broken off when the oil company refusd to permit a representative of the Mexican Federation of Labor to sit in on the conferences. The oil company sprung the usual bunk about being willing to deal directly with the men but not wanting to have anything to do with outside unions.

The Mexican government is anxious to settle the strike as the taxes they collect from the Eagle have been cut from 2,500,000 pesos to 500,000 pesos. The Eagle is filling its orders for the South American market, which it practically controls, by buying from American concerns.

Fight Workers' Committee.

The strike began when the company refused to grant the demands of the workers that the company should not fire any workers without the consent of a workers' committee. The company replied that they would not stand for any interference with the running of their business.

Later they backed down enough to go into conference with the workers only to withdraw when the workers wanted a representative of the Mexican Federation of Labor to sit in with them. The workers expect the company to recede from its pig headed stand almost any day.

"Die-Hard" New York Theatre Managers Play Judicial Farce

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK, May 27.—A temporary injunction has been granted to the die-hard group of the Producing Managers' Association, restraining the Actors' Equity Association and the Managers' Protective Association from carrying out the recently signed 10-year contract. The latter organization which controls more than 75 per cent of the theatrical productions had agreed with the union, an American Federation of Labor organization with about 10,000 members, that all casts be 80 per cent Equity. Both the managers' organization and the union, as well as individual producers are named in the injunction.

This is regarded as a death bed gesture on the part of the anti-union producers, who now control but 11 Broadway productions. It is pointed out that they have secured an injunction ten days before the expiration of the Equity contract in order to be able to sign with the union without closing their theaters June 1, provided they are not able to get a permanent injunction.

Figures Show That Unemployment Is Rapidly Increasing

WASHINGTON.—Out of every 100 workers who applied for jobs during March, 28 found no jobs open. But 40 more out of each 100 were unsuited to jobs that were open, according to reports from the state and municipal employment agencies received by the U. S. department of labor from 39 states. This marks a temporary improvement as compared with the winter months but shows a condition much worse than any month of 1923 prior to December. During May and June, 1923, the first months for which combined statistics from the various states are available, there were more jobs offered than workers available. Late reports of curtailed activity in many industries make it possible that returns for April and May of this year will be less favorable than those for March.

GREAT RUSSIAN TEXTILE LEADER DIES IN MOSCOW

V. Nogin Had Dramatic Revolutionary Career

NEW YORK, May 27.—Victor Pavlovitch Nogin, who established the All-Russian Textile Syndicate, Inc., in America last winter, died from an operation in Moscow, May 21, reports from Moscow state. Nogin, who had many friends in the United States, spent his entire life in the Russian revolutionary movement. He was born in Moscow, Feb. 2, 1878.

During his long revolutionary activities he was arrested by the czar's police and exiled eight times. Each time he escaped, once to England and once to Switzerland. Finally, in 1911, he was exiled to Verkhoyansk in north eastern Siberia, 2000 miles from the nearest railroad station. One year was required for him to reach the place of exile.

Held Many Leading Offices.

He held many leading offices in the Soviet government, having been an important member of the Bolshevik party in the second imperial Russian duma. In the first Soviet cabinet he was commissar of trade and industry. Later he was president of the Moscow Soviet, chairman of the supreme economic council, and vice-president, presidium of the central executive committee of soviets.

In his youth he was a textile worker. And in November, 1923, he came to the United States to organize the buying of cotton for the Russian mills and formed the All-Russian Textile Syndicate. The syndicate is now said to be the largest foreign buyer in the American cotton market.

Thrilling Revolutionary Career.

Nogin was arrested for the first time in St. Petersburg on December 16, 1898, and was exiled to the Province of Poltava for three years; he did not serve his time of exile, escaping on August 6, 1900, to England. Upon return to Russia, Nogin was arrested on October 1, 1901; for the second time, and was exiled to the Province of Yenissey (Eastern Siberia). He escaped from there on April 27, 1903, going to Geneva, Switzerland. On March 8, 1904, Nogin was arrested once more in Nikolayev (Black Sea Port), and was exiled to the Province Archangel (White Sea) from where he escaped on August 10, 1905. On October 1, 1905, Nogin was arrested again in Moscow and was imprisoned for three months.

Disguises and Escapes.

In August, 1908, Nogin came to Moscow disguised as a peasant Vladimir Feodorov Rodionov, in order to participate in and carry on Anti-Government propaganda at the convention of co-operative organizations. On August 17, 1908, Nogin was arrested and by order of the minister of the interior, was exiled for four years to the Northern Counties of the Province of Tobolsk. He escaped from there January, 1909, but while escaping, was captured at the station Belostrov of the Finnish Railway on February 14, 1909.

Exile in the Artic.

In the spring of 1910, Nogin had escaped once more, was arrested and exiled to the Province of Tobolsk from where he escaped on August 2, 1910. He came secretly in the winter of 1910-1911 to Tula, where he was arrested on March, 25, 1911, and exiled to VERKHOYANSK, YAKUT PROVINCE, NORTH EASTERN SIBERIA.

Verkhoyansk is located at 67 degrees 33 latitude, and is the northernmost of all Siberian cities, being located 2000 miles from the nearest railroad station. Mr. Nogin was enroute to exile to Verkhoyansk from Tula for one year. Later he wrote a book, "The Polar Belt."

Young Workers On Way To St. Paul Visit Washington

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 27.—At the regular meeting of the Washington Young Workers' League, May 23, Comrade J. Powell delivered the third lecture in his series of talks. His subject dealt with the development of mankind thru the feudal ages. An interesting discussion followed. Comrades J. Rubinstein and Milton Weichenberg of the Y. W. L. of New York City, attended as visiting members. These young workers are on their way to attend the convention of the Farmer-Labor Party at St. Paul on June 17.

Trachtenberg Wins Canadian Communists In Vancouver Meet

(Special to The Daily Worker)

VANCOUVER, B. C., May 27.—"Build up your revolutionary movement that American capitalism, which is stretching its arms across the ocean in an effort to strangle the revolutionary workers of Germany, may be kept busy at home." This urgent request from Germany's toiling masses to the workers of North America was delivered by Alexander Trachtenberg to the wage earners of this city, at a crowded meeting held under the auspices of the Communist Party of Canada.

Trachtenberg, who spoke on "Russia and Germany in 1923," and gave a very vivid description of present conditions in both countries, is the first Communist speaker to address a public meeting in this city since the changing of the Workers' Party of Canada to the Communist Party of Canada.

At the close of the meeting, which was attended by over a thousand workers, innumerable questions were asked, and ably replied to by the speaker. A member of the Socialist Party of Canada took the platform, and endeavored to show the impossibility of a revolution, such as had taken place in Russia, occurring in Germany or Great Britain because of the highly industrialized state of those two countries. In closing, he stated, "We have brains in our movement; let us use them," the inference being that a surfeit of brains could accomplish a peaceful change.

These arguments were rapidly torn to pieces by Trachtenberg, who exposed the reactionary ideology which gave birth to such conclusions, and told the S. P. representative that persons holding such opinions should be in the Salvation Army.

It is the hope of Vancouver workers that Comrade Trachtenberg, or some other equally able exponent of Communism may soon visit this city again.

Keep June 14 For Philadelphia Picnic For "Daily Worker"

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., May 27.—The City Central Committee of the Workers' Party has decided to hold a huge picnic for the benefit of the DAILY WORKER and local Defense Committee, on Saturday, June 14, at the Shuetzen Park.

Comrades and sympathizers are requested to keep this date in mind and arrange no affairs that will conflict with it. The Arrangements Committee is laying out plans that will make this picnic an outstanding feature of Philadelphia summer activities.

Watch for further notices.

Tarentum To Vote At Picnic For Its St. Paul Delegate

TARENTUM, Pa., May 27.—Everybody in this vicinity has been invited to attend the great picnic at Cheswick on Decoration Day, May 30. The picnickers interested in politics for the workers' and farmers' own government will elect a delegate to the St. Paul convention. The proceeds of the holiday will go towards the financing of the delegates' trip.

Young Workers Push Milwaukee League

MILWAUKEE, Wis., May 27.—With a constantly increasing membership and activity, the Young Workers' League in Milwaukee is rapidly forging to the front as one of the best leagues in the country. Comrade Cline of the N. E. C., addressed the last meeting. A very interesting discussion was held on the historical development of the working class and the role of the Young Workers' League. Many activities are being planned for the summer. A membership drive is under swing and has already been fruitful of results. A vigorous drive for subscriptions to the Young Worker and the DAILY WORKER is also being prosecuted.

Special Meeting To Be Held Saturday For Picnic Plans

There will be a meeting Saturday, May 31, 2:30 p. m., at 166 West Washington street, room 303, to take up in detail the matter of the July 4 party picnic and the Press picnic on August 10. Every branch and City Central Committee should be represented at this meeting, in order that it may contribute its share towards the success of both the July 4th and August 10th affairs.

In addition to the matter of the July 4th picnic, we should also begin making extensive preparations on August 10th. We should decide just what arrangements are to be made, such as financial returns to the various papers, etc., in order that we can be certain of the fullest co-operation from every federation and every language and English paper. To this meeting, therefore, the representative from the respective papers should also appear. Branches that have failed to send in their monthly report cards promptly, are requested to send in these reports as quickly as possible, so that reports can be made correctly to the National Office.

Kansas City Plans Picnics To Benefit Party Activities

KANSAS CITY, Mo., May 27.—The local branches of the Workers Party are arranging a monster picnic for June 29th to be held at Speedway Grove, 85th and Troost streets. All party members of this vicinity have been requested not to plan other engagements for the date.

The Farmer-Labor Party campaign is arousing great interest here and brings favorable comment to Workers Party members for their energy in utilizing every opportunity to achieve their ends.

A picnic for the benefit of the DAILY WORKER will be planned soon.

MILLION LOCKED OUT GERMAN WORKERS ARE FACING STARVATION; AMERICAN LABOR GETS APPEAL

In a cabled appeal to the American Branch of the International Workers' Aid, Clara Zetkin, veteran Communist, asks that the American workers send to Germany at once every penny they can to aid the workers of Germany, more than a million of whom are locked out and facing starvation.

The message is signed by Clara Zetkin as a member of the International Workers' Aid Executive Committee, and Willi Munzenberg, as as secretary.

The message says that more than one million workers in Germany have been locked out, half of them miners. Among the miners, suffering is great. The Russian workers have sent $25,000 to the International Workers' Aid for the German workers, according to the cable. The I. W. A. is now supporting daily more than 50,000 people, most of them strikers and children and is raising funds for relief on a wider scale.

"Mighty Defensive Movement."

The message describes the fight of the German workers as a "mighty defensive movement." "The whole burden of the European situation weighs on the German workers," the message declares. "The textile and metal workers who have been locked out for a long time are being joined by hundreds of other workers' groups.

"The miners of the Ruhr basin have been out of work during the long passive resistance period. During that time they were pauperized. Now they are faced with the job of defending the seven-hour day, which they won after long years of fighting."

"The bosses of Germany and France have utilized the condition of the Ruhr workers in order to beat down the living standard of the workers in other sections to a coolie level.

Will Extend Efforts.

"The International Workers' Aid is convinced that this fight means not only heroic effort, but also hunger and the most profound distress. The I. W. A. therefore decided to appeal to the workers of the world for their most energetic co-operation in this fight, which will introduce into Germany a new revolutionary epoch.

"It decided to open new soup kitchens at once for striking and locked out workers and to organize bread distribution and child relief.

Appeal to U. S. Miners.

"We ask you, as the American representative of the International Workers' Aid, to appeal especially to the miners of the United States to help their fellow workers in the Ruhr and other parts of Germany.

"Send every penny you can possibly raise at once."

Contributions for the German workers can be sent thru the American section of the International Workers' Aid, 19 South Lincoln avenue, Chicago, Ill.

Robbers of Crippled Veterans Due For More Investigation

(By The Federated Press)

ALBANY, N. Y., May 27.—Another and more thoro senate investigation of the United States Veterans' bureau is demanded by delegates to the New York state convention. Invited To Russia, Morris Winchevsky In 'Good-Bye' To Chicago

Morris Winchevsky, one of the oldest members of the Jewish section, Workers party, who was invited by the Soviet government to come to live in Russia on government pension as one of the old Russian revolutionists, came this week to Chicago to say good-by to the Chicago comrades.

Sunday afternoon a mass meeting was arranged at the Douglas Park auditorium. The big hall was overcrowded with Jewish workers, who came to say farewell to their beloved revolutionary poet and writer. In the evening a spontaneous banquet was held at Chesky's restaurant, where hundreds of workers crowded the place and sidewalks, being unable to get in for the lack of space. Speeches were made in Jewish, Russian and English by representatives of the Young Workers league, Freiheit Singing Society, Jewish Workers' Relief committee and other organizations whose representatives happened to be at the banquet. A big bouquet of red roses was given to Comrade Winchevsky by the Y. W. L. of Chicago. They also invited him to join their league, but it was a little too late, as he was already a member of the league, being initiated by the Detroit league.

Monday night, at Douglas Park auditorium, a meeting of volunteers of the Jewish Workers' Relief committee, of which Comrade Winchevsky is the national treasurer, was held. At this meeting a delegation of the junior groups of the Y. W. L., composed of members of the Vanguard group, Abe and Eva Stolar and Jessie Harris, presented Comrade Winchevsky with a bouquet of red roses and a membership card of the juniors, which he accepted with thanks and kissed the spokesman of the delegation, Comrade Jessie Harris.

RELEASED PRISON MATE OF DOLLA ASSISTS FAMILY

Steel Trust's Victim Has Wife In Need

J. Martinovich, who has just recently been released from the Pennsylvania state penitentiary, where he served a term as a political prisoner, knows what it is to be confined behind the walls of a cossack bastile. Immediately upon his release from prison he set about doing what he could for his erstwhile co-prisoner, Jacob Dolla.

The DAILY WORKER has received the following letter from Comrade Martinovich, which speaks for itself as an act of comradeship and as an example which may well be followed by those workers who have not yet felt to so severe an extent the iron heel of capitalism:

Dear Comrades:

I know Jack Dolla in the penitentiary, but I have never seen him outside and really I don't know his crime of opinion. Personally I spoke with him and I came to the conclusion that he fears nothing and conceals nothing, but he openly said that as long as the steel corporation remains in power and holds the influence over the board of pardons, he will have to stay eight more years in the penitentiary.

The readers of the DAILY WORKER are aware that this militant striker needs help for himself as well as for his wife and children and I hope that they will reply to his appeal for help.

I am sending to the DAILY WORKER a letter and $10 and I forecast that the others will do their duty.

J. MARTINOVICH.

Internatl. Athletic Carnival Planned For N. Y. Branches

NEW YORK, May 27.—An international athletic carnival and picnic is to be held on Sunday, August 10, at Pleasant Bay Park, under the auspices of the Workers' Party, District 2. All friendly organizations are cordially invited to join in the fun.

The park is a beautiful spot located at the east end of the Bronx in full view of Long Island Sound. There is plenty of woodland and a large athletic field.

A program of all kinds of sports is being arranged. There will be a great baseball game between the Young Workers' League and the Workers' Party members.

June 17 Convention "Talk of the Town" In Baltimore Unions

By A. JAKIRA.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BALTIMORE, Md., May 27.—There is hardly another city in the United States where the issue of June 17th Convention has created as much interest as in Baltimore. The local Farmer-Labor Party, which due to some legal technicalities, is compelled to call itself the Peoples Party, has for the last several months rooted itself deeply into the local labor movement. The Peoples Party has endorsed the June 17th Convention and is sending a delegate.

Several local unions have also acted favorably on the call for the June 17th Convention and some of them will send delegates.

The machinists of this city endorsed the St. Paul Convention despite of the fact that President Johnstone, of the Machinists' Union, has sent in a written request to the local to reconsider its action. His request was based on the fact that he is the chairman of the July 4th Convention.

The issue came up several days ago in the Central Labor Council. After a two hours' battle the reactionary machine was compelled to move that the question be deferred for action to the next meeting. This motion carried by a majority of one vote, 24 voting for and 23 voting against the motion to defer action.

Hancock, Michigan, C. P. P. A. Votes To Support June 17th

HANCOCK, Mich., May 27.—About a month ago a meeting was called here by the Conference for Progressive Political Action for the purpose of organizing a local branch of that organization.

At the first meeting, the issue of the June 17th convention as against the July 4th convention, was raised in the gathering which was representative of the labor movement of this city, and the workers present, representing largely the railroad unions, urged that the June 17th convention was the only bona fide movement for independent political action by the workers and farmers.

At the conference held a few days ago the organization voted to support the June 17th convention and to send a delegate to that convention. Charles Girard, a member of the railroad workers union, was elected as the delegate to St. Paul.

The organization formed is regarded as the beginning of what will be a strong unit of the Farmer-Labor Party of the state of Michigan when the latter is organized.

COOLIDGE SIGNS BILL STRIKING AT FOREIGN BORN

New Immigration Law Registers Workers

WASHINGTON, May 27.—The immigration law calling for the photographing and registration of immigrants and providing for Japanese exclusion, effective July 1, received President Coolidge's signature today and becomes a law. Coolidge's surrender was expected.

Immigration from non-Asiatic countries is limited to quotas of two per cent of the foreign-born population in this country, according to the 1890 census. After July 1, 1927, immigration will be limited to 150,000, each country getting a quota in this figure according to national origins as shown by the 1920 census. Not more than 10 per cent of the annual quota from each country may receive visas in any month.

Wives and children of American citizens and citizens of Canada are exempted from the quota provision.

Blow At Unionism.

A blow at marine unionism is seen in the ruling that alien seamen on vessels touching at American ports may not land except for medical treatment. This means that these workers are forbidden to walk out on strike in American ports.

A nation-wide fight was made against the registration clauses of the bill, under which immigrants are compelled to register themselves so that the authorities may lay their hands on them at any time desired. The deportation deliriums of 1919-20, when striking mine and steel workers were sent to immigration detention pens, shows the use to which this provision will be put, say unionists who fought the measure.

God and Coolidge

Every time Coolidge receives a defeat, every time Congress administers the President a drubbing the country is treated to a series of prayers and a flood of paeans in behalf of the "Cautious Cal," the silent employing class watchdog of the White House.

The other day Coolidge was repudiated by his own party leaders on the bonus question. The presidential veto was overriden more decisively than the Chief Executive could ever foresee in his worst nightmares. This was a severe loss to the prestige of the president as a party leader and to his chances of succeeding himself in the coming campaign. The extent of the blow struck at Coolidge can best be seen by the fewness of the presidential vetoes overriden by Congress in the history of the American government. Up to McKinley's administration only twenty-eight vetoes were discarded by Congress. Of these, sixteen were passed by Congress in the administration of President Johnson when the legislative and executive divisions of the government were at war with each other. Of all the bills passed by Congress over the presidents' vetoes, the one in which Coolidge was so soundly trounced was the most important.

No sooner had Coolidge met defeat than the biggest industrial magnates and financial kings joined in a mighty chorus of praise for the Chief Executive. From Gary down Coolidge was reassured that the most powerful of our powerful were behind him to the bitter end. Typical of this outburst is the song of praise sung for "Silent Cal" by Guy E. Tripp, Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Westinghouse Electric Company. Said this capitalist solon: "Thank God we have Calvin Coolidge in the White House. When we amended the Constitution and decreed that senators were to be chosen by popular votes we throw away the safeguards with which our forefathers had sought to surround us. We are reaping the results of that ill-advised action."

This is a welcome clarification of the issue. Coolidge speaks for the upper crust of our ruling class. Though he is the supposed representative of the "people," he is interested in guarding the interests of the biggest exploiters only. The plea made for the abolition of the direct election of the senate and the thanks rendered the almighty invisible god blast all the talk of the capitalists about the danger democracy is in because of the discontent of the masses. The Junkers of America finance talk the same language that their prototypes spoke only yesterday in monarchist Germay. The German feudal Junkers talked of the Kaiser and God and denounced democracy openly. Our American capitalist Junkers today speak of Coolidge and God and dishonestly sneer at the very democracy they ask the workers and farmers to die for.

"For the Glory of Britain"

British workers are begining to understand that they have not yet conquered political power. The lesson is being driven home again, through the disclosures of the terrible conditions of labor existing at the great Empire Exhibition at Wembley. Waitresses at the Exhibition restaurants, putting in atrociously long hours for the "glory of the Empire," with total earnings of about $4 per week, including tips. Eating facilities are shown to totally inadequate, with exhorbitant prices. Washing and lavatory accomodations for the workers were absent. Union labor was not recognized. Conditions of labor generally were found to be rotten in the Exhibition, conducted by the Government supposedly in the hands of Labor.

Labor has been associated with the British Exhibition since its inception, but unless proper trade union conditions of employment are substituted for the present state of affairs, Labor will have to consider very seriously its withdrawal from any association with the Exhibition." These were the words of Fred Bramley, secretary of the Trades Union Congress, after the investigation conducted in response to deep discontent among the workers.

"The glory of Britain" today, under the Labor Government, is thus seen to rest, as it has always rested, upon the pitiless exploitation of the workers, not only in private industry but also in Government undertakings. British workers will have to learn the lesson that the real glory of the British workers will only come with the establishment of a real workers' government, the Soviet Government of Britain.

Marcus Garvey, "provisional president" of the projected Negro republic in Africa, is reported from Boston as swaying great meetings of his race to tears and cheers. Garvey's utopia of an African capitalism is, at one and the same time, the sign of a great awakening of the toiling Negroes to their exploitation and an opium to smother their class consciousness.

What's in a Name?

Much has been said about the "victory" of the left in the recent French elections. Herriot has been painted as a genuine radical. Briand has been labeled a sizzling red. Painleve's political picture has been put in a crimson frame.

Everybody knows that the Radical Socialist Party of France is neither radical nor socialist. This outfit of capitalist politicians merely assumed the name to fool the working masses into believing that there was something radically social about their policies. As a matter of fact the leaders of these parties have advanced on the ladder of French imperialist politics principally thru their waging an aggressive battle in behalf of the banking and manufacturing interests of France.

The keynote to the policies of the so-called new left government has just been struck by Paul Painleve, who is slated to be the coming president of the republic. In an authorized interview, printed in one of the metropolitan papers, Painleve announced his policy as follows: "In taking over power in France, as we shall shortly do, we liberal and democratic republicans wish to show we can make organized society as its stands work in the interest of all."

This declaration makes clear what the workers of the world in general and the working class of France in particular may expect from the "radical" government. The new cabinet will be an agency of the French imperialist capitalist class as much as the Poincare clique was. It will use different words; sweeter words undoubtedly, more camouflage to hide the mailed fist always in readiness for being swung against the masses. The admitted purpose of Painleve is to make capitalism work in the interest of all. That's an impossibility. The present system of production and exchange works very well for the owning class. How it has been working for the laboring and farming masses can be seen best from the conditions in which the working and farming classes find themselves today in the capitalist countries.

Finally, we feel certain no one will be fooled by the expectations from the present order of society working in the interest of all classes with renegades like Briand at the helm. The French "radical" Briand, like the American reactionary, Coolidge, was made by breaking a strike. When the French Confederation of Labor called a railway strike in 1909 he smashed it by forcing the railway workers into military service. Obviously there is nothing in a label. The workers of France know the poison despite the false label worn by the "left" and will treat it as such.

Aid the Ruhr Miners!

Initial remittance of $4,000 for relief of the locked-out German miners of the Ruhr, sent yesterday from Chicago by the International Workers' Aid in response to cable request for international assistance, shows that the American workers are alive to the necessity of world-wide solidarity. It is indeed a heartening thing to see this solidarity expressing itself in practical deeds. Financial assistance may be a small thing, but it is the beginning of larger deeds that will finally bring even backward American Labor into the revolutionary currents of the world struggle.

The stakes of the battle being waged in the Ruhr are such, that even conservative-minded miners must realize that the German struggle is their own. The coal barons of Germany, following the hint given them by Dawes and their own natural inclinations, have launched a drive to force the miners to work 8 hours underground, instead of 7, and 10 hours aboveground, instead of 8. If the German miners lose their conditions, what miner can doubt that it means another drive against the British miners, and even against the American?

Irresistably, the forces of decaying capitalism pull the American labor movement into battle against the whole rotten system. The coal miners of America must help the revolutionary miners of the Ruhr, or else see their own conditions of labor also reduced to the coolie level. The whole United Mine Workers should resound with the call for help to the embattled Ruhr miners.

"Prospects, Uncertain"

Current mill reports on conditions of employment in the steel industry, in the current issue of the Amalgamated Journal, organ of what is left of the steel workers' union, show the rapid downward trend of industry. From district after district, the reports are "prospects, worse," and "prospects, uncertain." The steel industry, after speeding up for a few weeks in the spring, is sagging in a most decided manner. Production is reported at 50 to 60 per cent of capacity.

For the workers this has quite a different meaning than for the owners of industry. The latter must adjust themselves to the difference between $25,000,000 dividends instead of $50,000,000. This may make a difference in the number of country homes they add to their household cares; it may make it necessary to put off buying that new yacht for another month or two; it may reduce the amount of alimony paid to the ex-wives by a few hundred thousands; it may even reduce the standard of living of the luxurious Fidos who may now have their paws manicured only once a day, instead of twice.

For the owners of industry, the ruling class, depression means an adjustment in their superfluities. But the working class is feeling the gradual slowing down of production in the pangs of hunger, in the lack of clothes, in the worry of unpaid bills, in the inability to obtain medical attention for loved ones, in all the misery of poverty, uncertainty, degradation. "Prospects, uncertain"—for the working class. But in the growth of revolutionary consciousness of the workers it also reads—"prospects, uncertain for capitalism."

Business Continues to Drop

By JAY LOVESTONE.

THE leading financial observers continue to see a steady drop in business. Employment is falling in many industries, prices are declining in some cases, and wage cuts are increasing in frequency.

The latest view of the situation according to Dun's is summed up as follows:

"A thirty per cent decline in steel output in about two months measures the sharp reaction that has occurre. in that quarter; coal mining has fallen off; some textile units are running at only 50 per cent of capacity, and in most other lines curtailment has been forced by the decrease in new orders. Nearly all reports tell of unusual caution among buyers, of their continued disinclination to purchase beyond their immediate needs, and of increasing competition among sellers that causes price concessions in both raw materials and manufactured products.

"No check to the curtailment of steel output has yet come, the industry now operating at about 65 per cent rate. This marks a reduction of 5 per cent during the week, and contrasts sharply with the average of around 90 per cent reached last March."

The situation is especially critical in the textile market where at Fall River, for instance, the sales of print cloth last week were only at 10 per cent of capacity.

Chronicle Takes Same Dark View.

The Commercial & Financial Chronicle sees the situation in the same dark light. Its latest review of the present economic conditions is as follows:

"The flour trade has been slow. As a rule shoe manufacturing business has been unsatisfactory, altho in parts of New England there are signs of improvement. Iron and steel has remained dull and prices have declined further. Output has also fallen off. Other metals have also declined. As the case stands, the output of steel mills is variously estimated at 55 to 62 per cent, as against 90 at the high point in March. Prices of carpets have recently declined. The bad weather this spring has also reacted on the petroleum trade, especially on gasoline, because of the restriction of travel. The lumber trade is less active, and the same is true of the demand for furniture. Building, tho still on a large scale, is not so active as recently. . . . One indication of the dullness in the big industries of the country is the fact that bituminous coal is the smallest for years past. It is a kind of barometer.

Wage Reductions Increase.

The lack of snap in business the country over is being seized upon by the employers for launching a wage cutting campaign. In Fall River an attempt is being made to slash wages 20 per cent. Carpet mills have tried to reduce the workers' pay by 20 per cent." Some railroads have already reduced wages. At the shoe factories in Haverhill, Mass., wages were reduced 20 per cent on May 21st. At Birmingham, Alabama, the Republic Iron & Steel Co. has cut wages 10 to 15 per cent. To date, five iron companies have cut wages in this state. Several independent coal companies, among whom are to be found the Pratt Consolidated and the De Hardeben, the largest in the field, have also cut wages.

Some railroads are reducing their force of employes as a preliminary to cutting wages. The executives of the principal railroads thruout the country are now considering a plan for instituting a five-day week amongst the shop crafts. The Reading Railway has already adopted a shorter week. The Baltimore & Ohio has instituted the shorter week amongst the twenty thousand men in its Montclair shop.

At this moment the textile industry seems to be the hardest hit. In Fall River, Mass., two-thirds of the spindles are idle. In New Bedford, the same state, the cotton spindles are running 50 per cent. In Lawrence and Lowell at about the same rate.

In New Hampshire, the Nashua Manufacturing Co. has been closed for some time. The Amoskeag, one of the largest textile corporations in the world, is running on a four-day schedule. All in all, a very small number of the 200,000 workers in New England cotton plants are employed full time.

The Taxation Compromise

The end of the powerful campaign launched by the biggest business interests under the captaincy of Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, for the reduction of their taxes, has come to a halt. By a vote of 60-6 and 376-9 the Senate and House respectively have adopted the measure which is a compromise of the porposals put forward by the self-styled insurgents and the standpat Democrats.

The tax bill as enacted saves the multimillionaires a good deal of money, throws a sop to the upper middle class and a bone to the skilled workers and lower middle class. The surtax on the big capitalists is lowered 10 per cent. Fundamentally the new law is of no significance in national tax legislation. As a matter of fact the provisions of the bill keep the country in the same position it was before the whole controversy, in so far as the shifting of the burden of taxation from the masses to the rich is concerned.

In view of the decisive manner in which the House and Senate voted on the measure, Coolidge will not fling himself against a stone wall. The president has already been overridden on the bonus question. He is not anxious to secure a further depreciation of the little prestige he may still have left in his party. Besides, it would be suicidal for a president to veto any bill which tends in the least to save any money from the tax bills—particularly on the eve of a national election.

All the horror-shrieking that we have been subjected to by the black press about the loss to the country in the failure of the Mellon scheme and the adoption of the dangerous Simmons measure were only clouds of poison gas to hide the real attitude of the big capitalists toward the tax bill as just passed. Today the best minds of the financial circles feel satisfied with the bill and are making it clear to Coolidge that they are not really anxious to have him veto it. Many of them feel that they have gotten more than they expected when they first put forward the Mellon plan. Besides, they fear that the effect of Coolidge being overridden twice in one session would be disastrous to them from the point of view of endangering his chance of being sent back to the White House. Just now this is the primary consideration of the capitalist leaders.

One phase of the taxation controversy must not be overlooked. Thruout the debates on this question the so-called progressives showed themselves to be a spineless pack. In the House the LaFollette group led by Frear of Wisconsin threw away its program at the first sign of battle. In the Senate the "progressives" were swallowed by the regular Democrats with little if any resistance.

If the workers and farmers are to blame anybody for the failure of Congress to make the rich, the capitalists, pay more for the upkeep of a government which does the bidding of the exploiters, then the LaFollette "progressive" group, more than any other, is to be adjudged guilty.

It was within the power of this group to stop the reactionary attempts. It failed and it failed miserably. The workers and farmers whose support these so-called insurgents are now seeking will remember this.

All Hail the Jolly Bishop!

Bishop William Montgomery Brown of Galion, Ohio, is brot to trial before the dread ecclesiastical court of the Protestant Episcopal Church on charge of heresy. Bishop Brown's crime was writing a book, called "Communism and Christianism," circulated in hundreds of thousands of copies, which sums up the results of a long life of thot and activity.

That no one may be in doubt as to the importance (to the church) of this trial, it may be recalled that the heretic is a Member of the House of Bishops, Protestant Episcopal Church; Fifth Bishop of Arkansas resigned; sometime Archdeacon of Ohio and Special Lecturer at Bexley Hall, the Theological Seminary of Kenyon College. And, as the Bishop adds, with a twinkle in his eye, he is now "Episcopos in partibus Bolshevikium et Infidelium."

Bishop Brown makes no bones of his rejection of the ancient hocus pocus upon which the church is based. But he is going to force his accusers to admit before the world that they also, in spite of all evidence to the contrary, are not completely brainless. He expects to make them admit some slight doubts of the strict accuracy of the miraculous dogmas they pretend to swallow. And above all, he expects to stir the minds of a few more hundreds of thousands who have not yet questioned these mouldy superstitions. The world, without question, has been made a livelier place by the good Bishop.

The Immigration "Solution"

After resorting to the lowest grade of precinct politics in order to beat Hiram Johnson in the California presidential primaries, Coolidge has finally made up his mind on the Japanese exclusion act and has signed the immigration bill.

The new law which is heralded as a great solution of the immigration problem is, briefly speaking, characterized by the following points: Immigrants who are Asiatics are ineligible to citizenship and are therefore excluded as settlers. The quotas permitted entry are to be based on the 1890 census instead of the 1910 figures and are to be reduced from 3 to 2 per cent. After 1925 there is to be put into effect a "national origin" clause which will limit the total annual immigration to 150,000 and each nationality a proportionate section thereof determined by the per cent of the total population the particular national group has at that time. All immigrant applicants are now to be certified by American consuls abroad.

We do not share the craft psychology, the narrow craft outlook with which the business unionism of Samuel Gompers is afflicted. We recognize no need for conflict or antithesis of interests between the workingmen of one country and those of another. We feel and know that the emigrant workingmen of Italy have an enemy in their own and in the American capitalist class, but have friends in the working class of the United States. We are unalterably opposed to enabling the exploiters of the workers and the oppressors of the poor farmers to play upon differences of nationality that are irrelevant and immaterial in the settlement of the basic points of conflict between the working class and the employing, in the points of conflict involving the masses.

Finally, we, as Communists, are unqualifiedly opposed to any measure which gives more power to the employing class and its government to limit the movements of any members of the working class regardless of the nationality or residence of the ones affected. We know from our bitter experiences in the every day struggles of the working class that the capitalist class and its government have already too much power over the lives and movements of the working and farming masses. We also know that the employing class exploits all workers alike, regardless of their nationality, and merely plays upon supposed national differences for the sake of dividing the workers and thus crushing them more easily.

We believe that only the international working class has the right to determine and guide the movements of the workers the world over.

The Chicago Tribune reproaches the senator from Montana for being exonerated of the charges that he improperly represented oil interests. It thinks that Wheeler, as an ex-attorney for oil interests, should be considerate of those who more crassly represented capitalist interests in combined public-private capacity. And at that, it does not seem that the investigation is slowing down. The soft pedal is getting in its work.

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

A Washington correspondent co pared Calvin Coolige's brain to scrapbook. One of the gems fro the scrapbook was dropped on memorial day when the president point out, while fishing for the Souther vote over the graves of the co federate soldiers that both sides i the civil war prayed to the sam God, therefore it was only a questio of time until they would see things i the same light. After several hundre thousands of soldiers from both side were killed, God let them see thing in the same light, but only when th Southerners had no more money o artillery.

Some God! The army of Genera Lee had more religion in its composition than any army since that o Oliver Cromwell, said the genial president. A favorite method of Cromwell's soldiers to express their lov for the Lord was to spit little Catholi infants on the points of their bayonets and looking toward heave murmur "nits will be lice." Cromwel could not satisfactorily murder an opponent unless he read at least on paragraph from the old testament. I is said that he was seized with religious hydraphobia after news wa brought him that his soldiers murdered several thousand women and children in the public square at Wexford Ireland. Coolidge would feel just a exhilirated in 1919 if the news was brought him that every member o the Boston Policemen's Union w boiled in oil.

Calvin Coolidge has made the remarkable discovery that unknown to themselves, the Federals and Confederates were not fighting over economic issues, but by some unequalled process of reasoning since Woodrow Wilson attributed an economic crisis to a perverse public psychology, the president came to the conclusion that God knew right along what he was doing in allowing the rival armies to slaughter each other. "To protect our American institutions, and our American ideals, beneath a common flag, under the blessing of Almighty God." That was it. The president in winding up this delightfully spicy piece of pifle says, "All about us sleep those of many different beliefs and many divergent actions. But America claims them all. Her flag floats over them. Her government protects them. They all rest in the same divine peace." A splendid government indeed that "protects" the dead by allowing suc tommyrot to be uttered over the graves. But then, what could be expected from a human scrapbook?

Chief Collin's threat to jail every moron in the city of Chicago, would i carried out, compel the police department to take over Cub's Park to house the catch. Considering the number of injunction judges and grafting capitalist politicians elected by the workers of this city, one cannot but feel like apologizing to the morons for putting them in the same category with the foolish workers who cast their ballots for their enemies on election day, while they are obligated to fight them on the industrial field the rest of the year.

Crime is on the increase, according to a report issued by the American Bankers' Association. Forgeries alterations and minor thefts show an increase of 48 per cent over last year. This must be one of the blessings accruing to the nation from the ennobling experience our young men had during the world war when they had the satisfaction of glutting their thirst for human sacrifice either i person or by proxy. The orators who glorify the war killed their Germans by proxy. The protective Department of the Bankers' Association blame the banks for undermanning their staffs. Rather than give their slaves better working conditions the greedy plutes prefer to take chances with those who are not much concerned with the paltry wage that a willing and loyal slave is satisfied with. When they are in Rome they do as Rome does.

Mrs. Marshall Field, one of the wives of one of the owners of the great Chicago department store, is creating a sensation in Paris. This means that the lady is disporting herself to the satisfaction of those Europeans who like to gaze on the female form divine when properly or—improperly, according to taste and geography—decorated with costly raiment, not necessarily generous. It must be costly. We learn that blase Paris is "stunned." A nude harem would not make a typical Parisian wriggle his eyebrows, so the kind of capers that Mrs. Field is cutting must be left to the imagination. We are not concerned with the lady's method of getting a kick out of life. What we want to get across is that her ability to knock Paris for a string of imported Japanese soupstones is due to the docility and hard work of the thousands of men and women who toil in the big slave pen in the Chicago loop. The overworked girls who help to pile up the millions that this parasite helps to spend in riotous living, are lucky if they can buy sufficient clothes to appear "respectable." Such is American democracy under the capitalist system.

LA FOLLETTE SLAPS AT WORKERS

June 17 to Go Ahead Without La Follette

(Special to The Daily Worker)

St. PAUL, Minn., May 28.—If LaFollette does not want the support of June 17th Convention, that gathering is prepared to go ahead without him. Such is the gist of a statement of William Mahoney, chairman of the Committee on Arrangements of the St. Paul Convention, when shown the letter of Senator Robert M. LaFollette denouncing that gathering. Opposition from the senator from Wisconsin will have no effect upon preparations which are going forward full speed.

"Senator LaFollette is evidently the victim of bad counsel," said Mahoney, "if this report is an expression of his attitude."

"Arrangements have all been made for the gathering on June 17th and delegates are expected from every section of the nation."

"The convention will be composed of delegates from diverse groups of progressives who are willing to join a coalition to place a single set of candidates in the field for president and vice-president of the United States on a platform calling for fundamental changes in the laws regarding the railroads, banking, natural resources and courts.

"Senator LaFollette is the unanimous choice of those who have expressed themselves, and will doubtless be endorsed unless he directly forbids the use of his name. In that event, some other will be named.

"Communists will constitute but a small fraction of the delegates at the convention, and as long as these are willing to submit to the terms of the coalition, their co-operation is acceptable.

"This convention is not based on doctrinaire theories, but on stern economic realities. Senator LaFollette is evidently the victim of bad counsel, if this report is an expression of his attitude."

Wisconsin Senator Raises Cry of "Red Menace" While Hitting June 17 Convention

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 28.—Camouflaged progressivism, that has been masquerading a fake militancy in an effort to win the support of the workers and farmers for this fall's elections, today turned loose its guns on the class Farmer-Labor Party Convention called for St. Paul, Minn., June 17th.

Not only Senator Robert Marion LaFollette, who has been in hiding during most of the Teapot Dome exposures, but the Conference for Progressive Political Action, that is daily growing more brazen in its flirtations with the old parties, issued statements attacking the promising gathering of workers and farmers at St. Paul.

Both statements carry the stamp of the reactionary Gompers regime in the American Federation of Labor.

They raise the bugaboo of the "red menace," a tune so often played by the Palmer and Daugherty regimes in the hysterical department of justice, under both democratic and republican rule.

The Blessing of Burns.

While the Conference for Progressive Political Action has already, on every occasion, raised the "red" bogey, Senator LaFollette now joins the pack, that received the blessing of the ousted Detective William J. Burns, who said: "Altho I do not sleep in the same bed with Mr. Gompers, I certainly support him in his stand against the Communists," or words to that effect.

It has been felt all along that Senator LaFollette would seize the first possible opportunity to desert and betray the growing class conscious farmer-labor movement in the United States. He has done this in his statement issued today, in which he uses the excuse of Communist participation in the St. Paul convention to withdraw from it.

At the same time LaFollette confessed his allegiance to the old parties of Wall street when he made clear that he still had his eyes on the national conventions to be held at Cleveland and New York city.

LaFollette's statement today took the form of a letter to Attorney General H. L. Ekern of Wisconsin, in full as follows:

LaFollette to Ekern.

"My dear Ekern:—

"I have your letter of May 17, saying that many of my friends in Wisconsin are anxious to know my attitude toward the 'Farmer-Labor-Progressive convention' called to meet at St. Paul June 17.

"I should not feel it incumbent upon me to declare my attitude except that my name is being used by the promoters of that convention in such a way as to convey the impression that it has my approval and, as a result, some of my friends in different parts of the country contemplate attending the St. Paul convention. Because of these facts, I feel it my duty to state my view frankly.

"I have no doubt that very many of those who have participated in bringing about the St. Paul convention have been actuated by the purest desire to promote genuine political and economic progress.

He Smells "Fatal Error."

"Nevertheless, in my judgment the June 17th convention will not command the support of farmers, the workers, or other progressives because those who have had charge of the arrangements for this convention have committed the fatal error of making the Communists an integral part of their organization.

"The Communists have admittedly entered into this political movement not for the purpose of curing, by means of the ballot, the evils which afflict the American people but only to divide and confuse the progressive movement and create a condition of chaos favorable to their ultimate aims. Their real purpose is to establish by revolutionary action a dictatorship of the proletariat, which is absolutely repugnant to democratic ideals and to all-American aspirations. The official declarations of the Workers Party show clearly that they are seeking to use the Farmer-Labor party of Minnesota and other progressive organizations that have lent their names to this convention as a means of advancing their own ends.

JUNE 17 MEET FEELS STEAM OF ENGINEERS

Brotherhood's Backing Increases Party Speed

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ST. PAUL, Minn., May 28.—Sentiment towards the National Farmer-Labor-Progressive Convention to be held in this city on June 17th, was given a big push forward by the action of the Minnesota legislative committee of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers at their recent meeting here.

Representatives of the twenty-six divisions of the order in this state unanimously endorsed the June 17th convention and criticized "Labor," the organ of the railroad workers published in Washington, D. C., for attacking it.

Speaking for the committee, Chairman Ralph Davis said: "We regret that this matter has been injected into the campaign and we would like to have it dropped now. We admit that 'Labor' struck first, and we can't blame those who are working for the success of the June 17th convention in defending themselves from the attack. If the paper did not have anything good to say about the convention, then it should have said nothing. We want to show the Federation (meaning the Farmer-Labor Federation of Minnesota) and the Farmer-Labor movement that the Engineers are for it by our continued support."

C. P. P. A. Likes McAdoo.

The belief that the Conference for Progressive Political Action leaders have no intention of helping to build a new party representing the economic needs of the workers and exploited farmers is becoming more apparent each week. Each time the supporters of the Cleveland convention commit themselves, they make their real intentions more clear.

SOVIET GOVERNMENT WOULD MOVE MARX'S REMAINS TO MOSCOW

LONDON, May 28.—The Soviet government, thru its delegates to the Anglo-Russian conference, has been carrying on negotiations with the British government with a view to transporting the remains of Karl Marx from Highgate cemetery to Moscow, where the Soviet republic planned to build a monument costing half a million dollars in honor of the founder of modern Communism.

Jean Longuet, grandson of Marx and leader of the French yellow Socialists, who have stabbed Marxian Socialism in the back, refused the request of the Soviet government for permission to transfer the body of his grandfather to the capital of the first workers' republic in the history of the world.

Stand Fast for the Farmer-Labor Party

Statement of the Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party

SENATOR Robert M. LaFollette has come out in the open as the enemy of the Farmer-Labor movement. In his statement on the June 17th Convention he shows clearly that he is opposed to the workers and exploited farmers organizing a permanent political party to fight for their class interests.

In order to kill the movement for such a party which is reaching over the country he raises the question of the Communist participation in the Farmer-Labor movement.

In other words he raises the issue of the "red menace" in the same manner that the reactionary Republican politicians are raising this issue against the Farmer-Labor movement. Coolidge, Lodge and LaFollette take their stand shoulder to shoulder against this "menace."

LaFollette's statement should raise in the mind of every exploited farmer and industrial worker the question why LaFollette is attacking the June 17th Convention. What is there about the June 17th Convention that LaFollette fears? The cry of Communist participation is merely a red herring and not the real ground for LaFollette's opposition.

* * * *

THE TRUTH of the matter is that LaFollette does not represent the exploited farmers and industrial workers. There is nothing in his program which stands for their interests. LaFollette is the representative of the small business men of this country in opposing the Farmer-Labor movement, is fighting in the interests of this class and against the exploited farmers and workers. His opposition to the June 17th Convention is really opposition to the formation of a class Farmer-Labor Party which will fight the battles of farmers and workers—even against LaFollette.

There is another reason why LaFollette fights the June 17th Convention. His statement shows that he still has hopes that one of the two old parties will "purge" itself of the evil influences which have long dominated it." The workers and farmers who support the June 17th Convention have broken their ties with the old parties. They have flung down the gauntlet and entered the political arena to fight their own battles. LaFollette is against such independent political action. He wants the workers and farmers to wait for him and possibly to be led back into the old parties by him.

* * * *

THE Workers Party has many times warned the workers and farmers of this country against putting their faith in any individual politician. It has told them over and over that their strength lies in their organizing a Party which will make an uncompromising fight in their interests. It pointed this out last spring when an attempt was made to call off the June 17th Convention in the interests of the Conference for Progressive Political Action. LaFollette's attack on the convention of farmers and workers shows that the warnings of the Communists were based upon a clear understanding of the situation.

LaFollette says that the Communists are in the Farmer-Labor movement for the purpose of disrupting it. The Workers Party challenges LaFollette or any other politician of his stripe to show any group in this country which has worked consistently and energetically to build up a great mass movement of farmers and workers as have the Communists. While LaFollette and his followers have remained in the Republican and Democratic parties, the Workers Party is fighting in every state of the nation to help the workers and farmers create their own mass Farmer-Labor Party.

The reason why the Communists support the formation of a Farmer-Labor Party was stated by Karl Marx in the Communist Manifesto which was written seven and a half decades ago. Marx wrote of the Communists, "They have no interest separate and apart from those of the proletariat as a whole."

In the same statement, the founder of the Communist movement wrote:

"The Communists fight for the attainment of the immediate aims for the momentary interests of the working class but in the movement of the present they also represent and take care of the future of the movement."

* * * *

THE Communists seek, in the present movement in this country, for the formation of a Farmer-Labor Party, the first great step forward by the workers and farmers to fight their battles against the old capitalist parties. The Com-

STRIKING FOOD WORKERS HOLD MANY MEETINGS

Revolt of Restaurant Employes Spreads

The restaurant workers' mass meeting at 214 North State St., at which one of the DAILY WORKER editorial staff will speak, is one of a series of meetings to be held in all parts of the city, the Amalgamated Food Workers' office announces. These meetings will lead up to a general mass demonstration of all the restaurant workers in Chicago.

Reports coming into the office of the union last night were that the sale of the special "Food Workers' Strike Edition" of the DAILY WORKER was a huge success. The food workers covered the North Side strike zone and West and South Side sections of the city.

Sold Like Hot Cakes.

On West Madison St. the sales of the DAILY WORKER were exceptionally good. In the section near the Crystal restaurant, on the corner of Madison and Kedzie, which is affected by the strike, the strike edition of the DAILY WORKER sold especially well. The union members who distributed the paper report that many men passersby, after reading about the conditions of the Greek restaurant workers, came back and promised their support.

One man said it was a shame the way the American Association of Greek Restaurant Keepers has been taking advantage of the Greek workers with their long hours and small pay.

Daily Worker Everywhere.

Other zones covered by the special Food Workers' edition of the DAILY WORKER were near the Askounis restaurant, 1166 North Clark St.; the Elite restaurant, 1035 Wilson avenue; Peterson's restaurant, 1007 Lawrence, and sections near 63rd St. and Cottage Grove, and Blue Island Ave., near Halsted St.

The food workers' headquarters reports that the New Day restaurant, 807 East 63rd St., told their employes that every union member must get out of the union or they would be discharged. In retaliation, the employes quit in a body during the evening meal rush hour, waitresses walking out with the male employes.

Greeks Worst Paid.

Secretary Albert E. Stewart of the Amalgamated Food Workers said yesterday: "The DAILY WORKER special edition telling about the strike has undoubtedly stirred up the people of Chicago who use restaurants. They have learned that the Greek restaurant workers are among the poorest paid and the hardest worked in the city. In a few days we will issue another special food workers' edition, and will distribute a larger number than the original two thousand.

MINERS BAR MEMBERS OF ENEMY ORDER

Convention Closes with Rank and File Victory

PEORIA, Ill., May 28.—The convention of the Illinois Mine Workers adjourned today after giving Frank Farrington two decisive defeats on the appointive power and administering a beating to Farrington on the question of the Ku Klux Klan.

The convention again went on record against admittance of miners into the union who belong to the Klan, in spite of Farrington's plea. Farrington pleaded with the delegates not to discuss such a delicate subject on the floor, claiming it would do no good.

The convention today decisively passed resolution No. 7, of the resolutions on constitutional changes, which again robs Farrington of his appointive power. This resolution passed with a substantial majority, over the vigorous opposition of the Farrington machine.

Delegate Joe Tumulty tried to expose to the convention how the present election laws allow elections to be stolen by the Farrington machine. Farrington ruled Tumulty out of order in an attempt to prevent exposure of his election methods.

ROYAL PANHANDLERS ARRIVE IN LONDON TO TOUCH BRITISH BANKERS

LONDON, May 28.—The King and Queen of Roumania were right royally welcomed by the royal family of England on their arrival in London yesterday. All the princes and princelings that the English workers are carrying on their backs were there together with sundry titled parasites from other countries, whose subjects got tired feeding them and presented them with the choice of two evils, either submit to having their heads removed or getting out of the country. They chose the lesser evil and are now living comfortably on the broad backs of the loyal Britons.

Hundreds of blackshirted Italian and British Fascisti crawled on their bellies before the Roumanian panhandlers, who are here openly and brazenly on a begging expedition. They were bounced out of Paris by the result of the elections and are playing London as their last European stand. If they cannot land any dough here, they may come to the United States. They need the money, but refuse to go to work.

BAKERS STRIKE FOR WAGE BOOST AND UNION SHOP

Jewish Workers Walk Out at 1 A. M.

Two hundred members of the Jewish Bakery and Confectionery Union of America, Local 237, went on strike at 1 o'clock yesterday morning for an increase in wages and against the attempt of the bakery owners to break up their union.

The men immediately gathered at Liberty Hall, 3420 West Roosevelt Rd., and held an enthusiastic strike meeting which did not break up until 4 in the morning. Business Agent Lipkin told how the union had asked for an increase in wages and how the men had been locked out in an attempt of the bosses to break the union. The bakers unanimously pledged to stand solidly together until the strike is won.

The strike and lockout, which centers around the Douglas Park district, includes the White Palace bakery, which is one of the most reactionary establishments in town.

Daily Forward Had Scab Ad.

It was declared in a speech by one of the members at the strike meeting that the Jewish Daily Forward, yellow Socialist journal, carried a front page ad for men to work in the bakeshop at 1308 South Kedzie Ave. The union member said: "This bakeshop is supposed to be union, but is well known as a scab shop."

A strike committee of seven was elected, and the union will establish headquarters at 3420 West Roosevelt Rd., which will be kept open from 10 a. m. until 6 p. m.

Daily Worker Aid Pledged.

Hymie Harris of the Young Workers' league, who was asked to talk to the strikers, told them about the help the DAILY WORKER had given in the garment workers' and the Pullman car builders' strikes. He promised that the DAILY WORKER would support the striking bakers with both publicity and speakers.

ST. PAUL IS TOO RED FOR FAKERS OF THE C. P. P. A.

Against United Front with Workers-Farmers

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, May 28.—Rejection of overtures for a united front with the national Farmer-Labor-Progressive convention to be held June 17 in St. Paul was voted by the national committee of the Conference for Progressive Political Action, in session here, on the ground that the Communists had had too much to do with the St. Paul gathering, and that Communist influence was dictated from Moscow.

This open declaration by the official leaders of the movement which will hold its convention on July 4, at Cleveland, was made in response to a letter from J. A. Hopkins, founder of the Committee of 48 and member of the arrangements committee for the St. Paul meeting.

Yellow Leaders Sign Document.

It was signed by William H. Johnston of the Machinists' as chairman, but it represents the attitude, at this time, of the whole committee. There were present Johnston, D. R. Robertson, of the Locomotive Firemen, J. P. Noonan of the Electrical Workers, E. H. Fitzgerald of the Railway Clerks, Morris Hillquit and Vladeck of the Socialist party, Benjamin C. Marsh of the Farmers' National Council, Edward Keating, Basil Manly, and others.

"Our conference," says the reply to Hopkins, "is striving to organize all progressive forces in American politics for permanent, harmonious and concerted action. Our organization was formed in February, 1922, for this purpose, from which we have never departed. If at this critical time, when the political unity of all progressive forces is the crying need of the country, an attempt is made to split these forces and weaken our movement, the responsibility does not rest on us but on those who originated the separate convention on June 17.

Fear Workers-Farmers' Control.

"The convention which the C. P. P. A. is calling will represent at least five million voters. It will be generally representative of the political sentiments of the producing classes of America, and may be trusted to take such action on the nomination of presidential candidates and the formation of a new party as the situation will warrant. There is neither need nor justification for a separate convention of workers and farmers.

"However, our conference has no desire to waste time in the effort to fasten responsibility for past mistakes. It is ready and eager to cooperate with all bona fide bodies that will be represented in the St. Paul convention, provided that a solid basis for united action is created. A common political program is an important step in that direction, but it is not all that is required to insure lasting and fruitful co-operation. Our conference from the very first has taken an irrevocable stand on the principle of democracy in industry, government and politics. We are for majority rule and for home rule. We are opposed to all forms of dictatorship, whether exercised by capitalists, politicians or workers, by Fascisti or Communists.

Horrors, The Communists.

"It is common knowledge that the St. Paul convention has been largely organized and that its counsels will be influenced, if not dominated, by a political group that definitely rejects the principle of democracy.

"The Communist party, under different names and guises, is in the majority on the organization committee of the St. Paul convention, and, according to all indications, will be strongly represented in the convention. Our conference recognizes the right of every individual and group to hold such political opinions and social theories as they please. But our own political views and methods are so divergent from those of the Communist principle of dictatorship that we can find no common ground to work with them.

"Furthermore, all fruitful political co-operation must be based on an honest determination to work together. The Communist groups have no such intention. In their own press and over the signatures of their own leaders they have repeatedly avowed their plan to join the progressive political movement for the ultimate purpose of permeating a large part of it with Communistic doctrines and then 'split it off.'

Trot Out Moscow Bogey.

"Very recently, moreover, they have publicly admitted that their activities with respect to the St. Paul convention are directed by the Communist Internationale at Moscow. You will readily see how utterly impossible it is for any body of American citizens to submit to such foreign dictation.

"We sincerely hope that the true progressives in the St. Paul convention will find a way to place themselves squarely on the principle of democracy as opposed to dictatorship in any form. As to our own convention, we will welcome the co-operation of all bona fide progressives, to the end that the producing classes and progressive forces in this country may present a united and powerful front to the forces of political reaction in the coming presidential campaign.

The New Politics

By EARL R. BROWDER.

Old-timers in the game of politics in the United States profess to see in the June 17th convention at St. Paul, called to form a party of workers and farmers to battle the political domination of Wall Street, merely one of the adjuncts of LaFollette in his personal and independent drive for political power. They base their judgment on the fact that propaganda for an individual as presidential candidate at St. Paul has been confined to the name of LaFollette.

But such an opinion is entirely unsound. It ignores the essential feature of the June 17th convention. It makes the basic mistake of applying the same standards of judgment to June 17th as to the Republican or Democratic parties. In reality, the St. Paul convention represents such a new factor in American political life, that LaFollette or any other individual from the old scheme of things cuts little ice in the long run, no matter how much noise he may raise at present.

St. Paul is the focussing point of the political awakening of the masses; LaFollette does not embody that political awakening. St. Paul stands for the emergence of a new power in politics, the power of the classes hitherto politically submerged; LaFollette stands only for an old middle-class protest. St. Paul stands for the political struggles of the masses; LaFollette stands for the outworn individualism of small capitalism.

How comes it, then, with such fundamental cleavages between St. Paul and LaFollette (considered as political symbols) that this old-time Republican name is mentioned on every hand as a potential leader of the new Party? This question is especially remarkable in view of the fact that LaFollette has not yet made any direct statement that he is going to leave the Republican party.

The explanation of this paradox, so far from cancelling the statement that St. Paul represents the new class force in politics, throws new light upon the profound chasm between LaFollette and June 17th.

St. Paul represents a mass breakaway of the rank and file from the old parties. This mass exodus is of a class nature, and does not follow any individual. Personalities are but the chips on the waves. It has not crystallized sufficiently as yet to establish an authoritative leading group, accepted as such by all elements.

At the same time LaFollette, opposed as he is to the class basis of the new movement, has come to symbolize a revolt (that of the petty bourgeoisie) that in times past has threatened to split the old parties and is today stirring somewhat restlessly. In the absence of another peg to swing popular thought around, in the present process of re-orientation of the popular political mind, the name of LaFollette has been seized upon because of the superficial characteristic common to both political factors—i. e., both threaten to split large masses away from the traditional political lines.

This popular confusion of LaFollette with the farmer-labor party movement is destined to be quickly dissipated. LaFollette himself will do the dissipating. Already the issue is being cleared, as the farmers and workers see with astonishment that LaFollette gathers around himself only bankers, merchants, lawyers, publishers, etc., and carefully draws his skirts away from contact with the vulgar workers and poor farmers. LaFollette is as deathly afraid of, and hostile to, a real class movement to throw off the political domination of capitalism, as any other middle-class politician. And as the class forces take shape, as the workers begin making demands upon LaFollette which he ignores, this becomes more and more clear to the masses.

Already we are on the eve of the St. Paul convention, and the struggle between the old confusion of thought and the harsh realities of politics is becoming acute. Many workers and farmers are finding it difficult to use the new forms of thought necessary to adjust themselves to such a rapidly changing situation. But the silence of LaFollette and his kind, which has hitherto helped to continue the confusion, is now helping to clear it up. Because even the dullest mind can now see that HE WHO IS FOR EFFECTIVE POLITICAL ACTION OF THE WCRKING MASSES IN 1924 MUST SPEAK UP—FOR OR AGAINST THE ST. PAUL JUNE 17TH CONVENTION!

Entirely new politics are in the making. Those who still think in the old terms are finding themselves lost in the maze of rapid developments. Old leadership and prestige is being shattered. New leadership is in the making. The fragments of the past may be swept along with the great currents of events, but they will not determine its course.

June 17 Convention Feels the Steam of the Engineers be held in St. Paul on June 17th, says, "The Farmer-Labor Party of Minnesota is rather of a local nature, but is a distinct third party proposition. It has not as a third party the endorsement of the Sixteen Standard Railway Labor Organizations, altho they lent much support to them in their two last senatorial campaigns, which produced two splendid senators from the state of Minnesota."

Later in the same editorial they again state, "If William G. McAdoo should receive the democratic nomination it would, in our opinion, be folly not to support him, rather than to engage in a third party venture."

Workers for New Party.

This editorial, as well as the numerous other statements given out by the C. P. P. A. leaders, plainly shows that they have learned nothing from the economic struggles of the workers and farmers during the past few years, when in each case the employers have used their political control to force the workers to accept lower wages, longer hours, and scab shops. The leaders cannot break away from the corrupt political machines of the financial interests. By the method of voting that will prevail in the Cleveland these leaders will cost more votes than all other groups combined.

The workers and farmers of the Northwest, including the railroad workers have learned their lesson. Indications are that the rank and file of the workers thruout the country have also learned that a new party must be formed which will fight their battles. They have hoped that the leaders of the international unions were ready to show the way; but the backwardness of these leaders will not prevent the rank and file from launching a successful movement at St. Paul on June 17th.

BISHOP BROWN GOES ON TRIAL FOR ATHEISM

If Found Guilty Will Appeal to Scientists

CLEVELAND, May 28.—Bishop William Montgomery this afternoon pleaded not guilty to charges of heresy before the tribunal of eight bishops trying his case in Trinity Cathedral here. The plea came after Brown's counsel had lost every motion to have the case dismissed.

A sensational challenge was hurled at the tribunal of bishops by Joseph Sharts, attorney for Brown, when he demanded that the bishops take the stand and confess their faith in the doctrines of the church.

"There would be eight different opinions and you know it," he thundered at the bishops.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, May 28.—If Bishop William Montgomery Brown of Galion, Ohio, is found guilty of heresy by the tribunal of the Protestant Episcopal church here, he will appeal to noted scientists of the world to try his case.

Bishop Brown, charged with heresy for alleged heretic utterances in his book, "Communism and Christianism," published in 1920, went on trial here today before nine bishops of the Episcopal church.

Brown, a few hours before his trial, said he had wired several noted scientists, asking them to try his case and that several had accepted. He refused to make public their names.

"If the church throws me out, the scientists shall try me, and I will abide by their results," he said.

Brown's big hope of the trial is that he may put to the bishops who try him his celebrated list of questions on the virgin birth and miracles of Christ.

The rebel bishop hopes to get his trial judges furrowing their theological brows over the following questions:

That God made the world in six rays;

That He caused vegetation to grow on the earth before creating sun, moon or stars;

That He made Eve out of Adam's rib;

That the serpent tempted Eve to eat the forbidden fruit;

That God made coats of skins for the guilty pair;

That the sons of God married the daughters of men;

That God gave Noah instructions how to build an ark;

That Noah took into the ark pairs of all living creatures;

That the flood covered the earth and drowned all except those in the ark;

That God came down and confounded man's speech at Babel;

That God performed the wonders and sent the plagues on Egypt recorded in Exodus;

That Jesus was literally born of a virgin;

That He raised Lazarus literally from the dead;

That He literally performed such feats of magic as walking upon water, turning water to wine, and feeding 5,000 people upon five loaves and two small fishes and leaving twelve baskets of broken pieces.

That He literally descended into hell and then literally and bodily, in the sight of many who watched him going up, ascended into heaven.

The bishop, not satisfied with the prospect of seeing his former comrades in the army of the Lord writhing in agony over the above fifteen questions, wound up with this heavy wallop:

"The church, to survive, must adapt itself to human life. It must cast off bravely its antiquated and out-grown stuff—its bloodthirsty anthropomorphic gods made in man's barbarous image; its windowed heavens above the earth from which angels flit down to control our affairs; its fire-heated hells underfoot from which devils jump up as thru trapdoors to snatch sinners; its miracle mongers. It must tear off all these frowsy and threadbare old trappings of the dark ages. It must broaden its religious conceptions to conform to the advance of modern knowledge. It must formulate a satisfying answer to the present day's social and intellectual unrest."

munists are for the workers and farmers and against the capitalist parties. They see, in the present movement for independent political action by the workers and farmers the most hopeful developments in the American labor movement for several decades. If a million organized farmers and industrial workers join forces to create a class Farmer-Labor Party they will create a fighting organization that can win concessions for them from the present capitalist government and which will move onward for a fight against the whole system of exploitation and special privilege.

* * * *

IT IS because the Communists recognize in the Farmer-Labor Party movement this great step in advance that they have thrown themselves heart and soul into the work of building up this movement.

While fighting with the workers and farmers in their present struggle to win better things, the Communists have never concealed their principles. They believe that the ultimate solution of the class struggle between the capitalists and the workers and farmers can only come thru the establishment of a Soviet Government and a Dictatorship of the Proletariat. While fighting shoulder to shoulder with the workers and farmers in their struggles of today, the Communists know thru the lessons of experience that it is only thru a government as completely dominated by the workers as the present government is dominated by the capitalists that the existing system of exploitation can be abolished.

* * * *

THE attack by LaFollette on the Farmer-Labor Party should serve one purpose. It should arouse every worker and farmer to a consciousness that the producing group in capitalist society must rely upon its own strength. It cannot surrender itself to the leadership and possible betrayal by any individual politician. It must organize its strength in a class party and rely upon that party to make its fight and not upon individuals.

The answer to LaFollette should be a more energetic fight for the June 17th Convention. Every workers' and farmers' organization should send delegates there. The Workers Party will continue its efforts to make the June 17th Convention a great demonstration of workers and farmers and seek to realize there the hope of the workers and farmers for a party to fight their battles.

"Progressives inclined to attend the June 17 convention should also consider the statement published in 'THE DAILY WORKER' on May 16, 1924, by the Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party of America, over the signatures of William Z. Foster, chairman, and C. E. Ruthenberg, executive secretary:

"'In order to settle the question of whether the Farmer-Labor United front was a policy that a Communist party such as the Workers Party should put into effect and in support of which it should throw all its strength, the Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party submitted this question to the Communist Internationale (Moscow) with which it is affiliated as a fraternal organization.

"'The view of the Communist Internationale on this question is expressed in the following cablegram:

"'Communist Internationale considers June 17 convention momentous importance for Workers Party. Urges C. E. C. not to slacken activities preparation June 17. Utilize every available force to make St. Paul convention great representative gathering labor and left wing.'

"'Executive Committee, Communist Internationale.'"

"The Communist organization in America thus acting under orders from the Communist Internationale at Moscow, will not only participate in the St. Paul convention on June 17, but has already secured a strategic position in the direction of that convention.

Fear Hathaway.

"C. A. Hathaway, the secretary-treasurer of the committee on arrangements for the St. Paul convention, is an avowed Communist and was a delegate to its Third National convention, held in Chicago, December 30, 1923. All credentials for the St. Paul convention are made returnable to Hathaway as secretary and as treasurer he controls its funds. Joseph Manley, son-in-law of William Z. Foster, and an avowed Communist, is also a member of the committee on arrangements.

"Altho the National Communist organization as such may be granted only five delegates in the St. Paul convention, the basis of representation adopted, is lending itself to their purpose to control. Reliable information shows that a very large number of Communist delegates will be present at St. Paul with only authorized credentials.

"Reposing complete confidence in the soundness of the deliberate judgment of the American people, I have no apprehension that the Communist party can ever command any considerable support in this country. I do not question their right under the constitution, to submit their issues to the people, but I most emphatically protest against their being admitted into the councils of any body of progressive voters.

Doesn't Like Soviets.

"The Communists stand for the substitution of the Soviet form of government for the one we now have and propose to accomplish this change thru a revolution, with a class dictatorship as their ultimate aim instead of a democracy. Their pretense that the Communists can work with the Progressives, who believe in democracy, is deliberately to deceive the public. The Communists are antagonistic to the Progressive cause and their only purpose in joining such a movement is to disrupt it.

"Not only are the Communists the mortal enemies of the Progressive movement and democratic ideals, but, under the cloak of such extremists, the reactionary interests find the best opportunity to plant their spies and provocatory agents for the purpose of confusing and destroying true Progressive movements.

All Hope in the Ballot.

"I have devoted many years of my life to an effort to solve the problems which confront the American people by the ballot and not by force. I believe that the people thru the ballot can completely control their government in every branch and compel it to serve them effectively. I have fought steadfastly to achieve this end and I shall not abandon this fight as long as I may live. I believe, therefore, that all progressives should refuse to participate in any movement which makes common cause with any Communist organization.

"There is no doubt that the people have come to understand that private monopolies control the official machinery of both the Democratic and Republican parties. Recent public scandals, such as the war frauds, the shipping board, Teapot, and other oil leases, the veterans' bureau, the alien property custodian, the degradation of the Department of Justice under both Democratic and Republican administrations and the endless frauds and corruption in connection with taxation and prohibition enforcement are but evidences of such control of party machinery by lawless and predatory interests.

Has Hopes in Old Parties.

"The approaching Democratic and Republican conventions will demonstrate to the people whether either of these parties can and will purge itself of the evil influences which have long dominated them. This cannot be accomplished by merely nominating some alleged Progressive and filling the platform with misleading promises. It demands the elimination of monopoly control, the downfall of the corrupt political bosses, the adoption of truly progressive principles and the repudiation of those great campaign contributors who have in the past bought up both parties.

"If this is not done, a long suffering and righteously indignant people will find in the coming campaign effective means independent of both these old parties, to take back control of their government and make it truly representative.

"Sincerely yours,
(Signed) "Robert M. LaFollette."

FARMER-LABOR PARTY ANSWERS N. Y. SOCIALISTS

Show State Meeting Represented Labor

NEW YORK, May 28.—In response to the article "Communists Absorb Themselves," printed in the "New Leader" after the New York State Farmer-Labor convention at Schenectady, the United Farmer-Labor party sent the following letter to the Socialists backing the "New Leader:"

Many Labor Delegates.

Dear Sir:—In the last issue of the "New Leader" you carry a story on the front page pertaining to the state convention of the United Farmer-Labor Party, held at Schenectady on May 18th, in which article, to quote your own words, you say: "The convention so far as is known, did not have a single delegate from a bona fide Labor organization."

In order to clarify the situation and prove to you that your statements are untrue, we wish to point out to you that the following are some of the bona fide labor organizations which were represented at the state convention:

Journeymen Barbers, Local 141, Buffalo; Niagara Lodge No. 330, International Association of Machinists of Buffalo; Iron Moulders' Union, Local 84, of Buffalo; Progressive Lodge No. 17, Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers' Union, of Buffalo; Buffalo Central Trade and Labor Council; the Iron Moulders' Union Conference Board of Buffalo and vicinity; the Glove Workers' Union of Gloversville; International Hod Carriers, Building, and Common Laborers of Schenectady; Bakers and Confectionary Workers' International Union, Local 221, Schenectady; Electricians, Local 2, affiliated with the A. F. of L., New York City; Bakers' Local 1, and Bakers' Local 164, of the Amalgamated Food Workers of America; Cutters' Local 10, of the Amalgamated Shoe Workers of New York City; Fitters' Local 17, of the Amalgamated Shoe Workers of America, of New York City; Ind. Journeymen Barbers' Union, of Brooklyn; Window Cleaners' Protective Union No. 8; Paper Bag and Plate Markers' Union, Local 107; Carpenters' Local 2090, affiliated with the A. F. of L.; Carpenters' Local of Yonkers, and Bakers' Local of Yonkers.

We are merely sending you the names of some labor organizations that were at the state convention.

In addition to these labor organizations, the following political parties were represented. The Workers Party, the Progressive Party of New York, the Buffalo Labor Party, the Rochester Labor Party and the Committee of Forty-eight. In fact, the only organizations that were not represented at this convention were the 100 per cent reactionary organizations, controlled by the reactionary officialdom, and the socialist party and the organizations owned, controlled and bossed by the socialist machine.

In spite of the fact that the socialists were invited to attend this convention, they refused to do so, putting themselves therefore on record of standing by the old reactionary organizations in refusing to participate in a convention for the formation of a party for the exploited workers and farmers in this state.

Of course, we don't believe that you will correct your story or print this letter but we merely wish to call your attention to the fact that the United Farmer-Labor Party organized at Schenectady on May 18th, endorsed the call for the formation of a national farmer-labor convention to be held at St. Paul on June 17th, and elected only one delegate to that convention and not many as your article states.

Such attempts as these made by the "New Leader" will have absolutely no effect upon the workers of New York, who know the socialist machine for what it is, and will not allow them or anyone else to stand in the way of the formation of a real mass class Farmer-Labor Party in the United States. After all, what difference does it make which organizations were present, as long as they were truly representative of the working class, and knew what they wanted and how to achieve their aims. That is more than can be said about the groups behind the Cleveland conference.

Fraternally yours,
The United Farmer-Labor Party,
Harry M. Winitsky,

ST. PAUL, Minn., May 27.—Delegates to the Minnesota Democratic state convention, to be held here Saturday, were being selcted today in county conventions thruout the state.

Glimpses of the Illinois Miners' Convention

By KARL REEVES.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PEORIA, Ill., May 28.—In the first few days of the convention of District 12 United Mine Workers of America, one man, Frank Farrington, dominated the proceedings. At least one hundred of the delegates were "pay-roll men," who, because of obligations to the president of District 12, voted for Farrington no matter what issue was involved.

Farrington, as chairman, wielding the gavel vigorously and often, in the early stages of the convention was able to keep the half-formed sentiment against him in check. Another group of delegates who contributed to Farrington's support were the old veterans of the union, some of them well past seventy years of age, such as old "Charlie," who looked to Farrington as the conservative leader. These men, remembering the earliest days of the miners' organization, felt that present day conditions are at least better than pre-union days. Many of the old-time delegates are now past the age of active work in the mines. They took no real interest in any of the proceedings except the old-age pension and the resolution relating to the hiring of miners over 45 years of age.

Instructed To Fight Farrington

The local unions instructed some of these men to vote against the appointive power and to vote for the Howat resolution, the two issues which most concerned the rank and file. They no doubt, said, "Old Pop needs a vacation. Let's give him a trip to the Peoria convention."

This indifferent "centrist" group, many of whom had never seen Frank Farrington, had looked up to him as the capable and much discussed leader of their union. They are the element which, before the lines between the Farrington machine and the rank and file were clearly drawn, defeated the resolution for the unqualified recognition of Soviet Russia and the resolution indorsing an independent political party of labor.

The "Machine" Worked Smoothly.

If the rank and file sentiment was not definitely crystalized at first against the Farrington machine, it can be said of Farrington that he was on the job from the start. George Mercer, chairman of the resolutions committee, while he endeavored to create the impression that he was a rank and filer, not once brought in a report on a resolution that went counter to the Farrington machine. Mercer spoke to the delegates in a soothing voice, using their first names but he endeavored to sidetrack every progressive, constructive measure that came before the convention. Mercer is a Farrington appointee, bearing the high sounding title of "statistician."

Vice President Fishwick is another district 12 official who tried to use the mask of "fairness" while he knifed the rank and file in the back to the advantage of the Illinois Coal Operators' association. Fishwick made himself entirely ridiculous before the convention ended. When Fishwick substituted as chairman, he tried to imitate the biting sarcasm and tyrannical gavel swinging of Farrington. Even the Farrington machine delegates, however, got a smile out of "Andsome Arry's' futile attempt to control the convention.

Another stalwart, who sat on the elevated stage, with the Farrington satellites, who attempted to cajole, incite, domineer, tyrannize, threaten and flatter the delegates into voting for the Farrington machine, was Secretary Walter Nesbit. After reading his report, which rumors says was written for him by the kindly legal department, Nesbit subsided to the role more suited to him, of making the announcements and distributing the delegates' mail. Nesbit came in handy to the Farrington machine, however, in so counting the votes as to have the DAILY WORKER reporter ousted from the convention, and making the vote on the appointive power close when in reality it went 3 to 1 against Farrington.

William Hartness, a former member of the Socialist-Labor Party, who came briefly into the limelight as chairman of the committee on officers' report, tried his best to convince the delegates that "in the interests of democracy" they should vote for the retention of the appointive power of Farrington. In his argument, Hartness drifted all the way from Moscow and London to Springfield, Ill. Hartness pointed to the Soviet government as the most extreme form of democracy, and he said, "Yet the Russian government appoints men to power with like ideas." He said "the labor party of England and the state government at Springfield—both democratic—use the power to appoint employes of similar belief." In the interests of "harmony and democracy," Farrington's appointee sought to retain his job by inflicting sophistries on the rank and file.

Attempt to Break Instructions.

The regulars, together with their tellers, and other "ward heelers," knew that a majority of the delegates were instructed by their local unions to vote against Farrington on the appointive power and the Howat issue. "I have been charged with packing this convention," said Farrington, "But it is packed against me with instructed delegates." The great victory on these two issues was a real victory for the rank and file.

Hard to Explain Smallism.

Farrington instituted a well organized campaign to induce the delegates to break faith with their membership and vote against their instructions. Farrington also went to great length to explain his alliance with Len Small in the primaries and the coming elections.

In his report, commenting on the appointive power, Farrington says, "The matter of amending our district constitution so as to divest your president of his power to appoint workers needed to carry on the work of our union is one that has been vigorously agitated by a certain element and to such an extent that many of you have come to this convention under instructions from your local unions. You should courageously vote your honest conviction regardless of instructions."

Squirms at "Renegade" Thrust.

John Walker, invited to the convention by Farrington, devoted practically his entire speech to an attempted justification of his desertion of the Socialist and Farmer-Labor Party. Walker attacked the DAILY WORKER for calling him a renegade Socialist, and then said, "I am a renegade not only from the Socialist Party, and the Farmer-Labor Party, but I am a renegade from the Knights of Laborers as well. Walker's speech was devoted to an attempt to counteract the influence of the DAILY WORKER on the mine delegates, and to put Farrington in a favorable light in spite of his desertion of independent political action of labor in favor of the corrupt Len Small camp.

Wants Membership Disobeyed.

Walker managed to add his voice to the general chorus which was trying to save Farrington's appointive power for him by counseling the delegates to disobey the instructions of their local unions. Walker's last words to the Illinois miners were, "I could not conscientiously cast my vote to injure our membership even if they expelled me for not carrying out their instructions;" the inference being that in the case of the appointive power the delegates should disregard their instructions and vote for the retention of Farrington's appointive power.

Union "A Business Institution."

President Farrington's report declares the Illinois Miners' Union to be "A business institution engaged in the sale of labor power of its members and promoting and protecting their wages and conditions of employment." He held the Standard Oil Company up as a model. But thru Farrington's report can be noticed the strain, which was played on by all of his illustrious invited guests—that nothing much can be hoped for in the future.

When the delegates came to the convention they found that instead of furthering their interests, the District 12 officials had tied their hands for three years with what the coal operators declare to be the "best contract we have ever signed with a union." The delegates complained of scores of abuses to which Farrington bare-facedly answered, "nothing can be done about it."

Pass Buck on Vital Issue.

A resolution demanding that the practice of the coal operators, which has become general thruout the Illinois field, of stopping the payroll and making the men lose many weeks' pay, be ended, was referred to the next wage scale committee. The scale committee meets in three years, and Farrington coolly announced that nothing can be done about it until then. The resolution demanded that it be incorporated in the contract that mine operators bond the payroll of the men, and thus prevent this general practice of thieving.

"Nothing Can Be Done."

Other complaints made by the rank and file about the three-year contract were that men over 45 years of age are being discriminated against. Young non-union men are being hired, and join the union as new members, and old timers in the union suffer great distress.

Farrington calmly explained that under the three-year contract the union is forced to take in new members. Farrington declared that it states in the contract that the operator shall have the sole right to determine who he shall hire. Farrington declared he thot when the agreement was signed that only members of the union were to be hired, but he found out after that the operators interpreted it to mean that non-union men also, even bosses, can be hired, and must be taken into the union. He repeated his overworked phrase that nothing could be done about it for three years.

How About Compensation?

Still another general complaint from all sections of the rank and file is that the compensation laws are inadequate. Numerous resolutions were presented demanding that the convention go on record for the Ohio compensation law. It was pointed out that insurance companies in Illinois are making millions of dollars on mine injuries which rightfully belong to the miners. But George Mercer, chairman of the resolutions committee, presented a substitute commending the legal staff for the good work they have done in having the Illinois law, and Mercer himself declared that while the Illinois law was not perfect, it was a whole lot better than nothing.

The Farrington machine tried to block material constructive progress: To do this, they endeavored to show how much better off the miners are now than they used to be. Murray, Green, Lewis, Olander and Walker spoke so much in the same vein that by the time Lewis was put up to speak only a few of the delegates showed any interest in what he said. The same joke—that of a check-weighman falling thru one of the ineffective screens when the union was newly formed—was told by three different speakers.

Real Issues Before Miners.

What were the big issues which face the Illinois coal diggers at this convention? Forty thousand miners in the state of Illinois are without employment. Coal is being bought at a cheaper rate from the non-union coal operators. The miners of America still work under the ten-hour day in the non-union fields and the eight-hour day in the union fields, altho the British miners have achieved the six-hour day.

Cheap Production for Bosses.

How has Farrington proposed to meet the unemployment crisis in the coal fields? In his recent report, Farrington tells us that "There is only one way to get more work for Illinois miners and that is to cheapen the cost of production to the degree that will enable the Illinois operators to sell their coal in competition with coal mined in non-union and sparsely organized districts where the cost of production is much cheaper than in Illinois. Respect for contract, elimination of strikes in violation of contract, work when the operator has work to do, careful workmanship, load clean coal, reduce the amount of slack by careful shooting, give an honest days work, co-operate with the management in doing the things that are right, do not antagonize, be on the square.". Close your eyes and it might be any 100 per cent chamber of commerce president talking instead of the leader of a powerful union.

It was noticeable that the illustrious array of talent brot in to defend Farrington, while they were excusing him and the international for their inaction, took plenty of time to knock the Progressive Miners' committee.

Progressives Versus Bureaucrats.

The Progressive miners' program, which formed the central theme of Howat's address to the convention, was the only aggressive, constructive and hopeful note struck at the miners' convention.

John L. Lewis spent two and one-half hours reviewing the past accomplishments of the miners' union, telling the Illinois miners how powerful they were, and telling them how impossible it is to organize the non-union coal fields. Lewis, in opposition to the Progressive demand for a six-hour day, told the miners to be satisfied with an eight-hour day.

William Green, secretary of the International Mine Workers' Union, instead of making the progressive demand that in times of unemployment the hours be shortened so that the industry can employ all its workers, advocated cheapening the cost of production and the doing of better work so that the mine operators would be better satisfied.

Can't Organize, Cry Fakers.

Instead of proposing an aggressive drive for bringing the non-union coal fields into the union, Lewis and Green and Phillip Murray, the international vice-president, told how impossible they had found it to organize the non-union fields. Questions, however, brot out the fact that where aggressive campaigns have been put on, as in such parts of West Virginia, these fields have been successfully organized.

Each problem that came up for discussion revealed the only advocates of a practical solution to be the progressives. It was this group and a few others, who fought for progressive measures thruout the convention, and gave hope for greater forward moves by the Illinois miners in the future.

RESTAURANT BOSS, SLUGGERS AND POLICEMEN FRANTIC WHILE REBEL GIRL SELLS HER PAPERS

Two restaurant bosses, two policemen, and two sluggers gathered in mass formation and observing strict military discipline, couldn't stop the sale of the DAILY WORKER by one girl agent.

So code telegrams are being sent out from the headquarters of the police department, and secret service agents are getting on the job. Every policeman will be given an extra supply of cartridges, intensive drill practice among the force will begin, and martial law will be proclaimed in the region of the Sheridan restaurant, 3944 Sheridan Road, where yesterday a girl, suspected of being a special agent of the Soviet government, sold hundreds of copies of the Special Food Workers' Strike Edition of the DAILY WORKER.

Boss Notes With Alarm.

The first indication of something wrong dawned on the owner of the Sheridan restaurant when he noticed people looking in at the windows of the restaurant, and then turning away. That was bad. Further, among those who entered, some carried copies of the DAILY WORKER. That was still worse.

There emerged from the door of the Sheridan restaurant—first, the stomach, then the diamond stickpin, then the florid and rather flustered face, and last, the receding chin, of the prosperous owner of the Sheridan road restaurant. He glanced viciously at the girl agent of the DAILY WORKER. But he didn't stop. He wasn't going to tackle this job alone.

Five minutes passed. Thirty more copies of the DAILY WORKER had been sold. Six copies a minute. . . .

Bluecoats to the Rescue.

From around the corner swung a column of police. First in the line of march was the boss. It cannot be said that he ran. It was a thing that couldn't be done. But he led the assault gallantly, and with as much speed as his short fat legs could muster. Then came the police. They weren't mounted police, but that was the only military touch missing. In a nearby drug store two sluggers waited.

The police ordered the sale of the DAILY WORKER stopped. The owner produced a thick envelope stuffed with credentials—his guarantee of protection from the courts.

For answer the girl agent pointed to the near-by stand from which the Tribune was being peddled, and went on selling antidotes.

A Swearing Match.

The police argued, pleaded, and swore. The boss swore too. He called out his partner, and they matched vocabularies. It ended in a draw.

Fifteen minutes passed. It was time for the bosses to go back and count his diminishing profits.

The police scratched their heads, and went away to get recruits.

The paper sold on.

PLUTE PRIVATE SCHOOL NEST OF SEX PERVERSION

Harvard School Owner Makes Confession

Mott Kirk Mitchell, 52, instructor and part owner of the Harvard private school here, has admitted acts of perversion, the office of State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe, announced today, in connection with the investigation of the mysterious kidnaping and slaying of Robert Franks, 14-year-old son of a Chicago millionaire.

"Mitchell confessed he had been guilty of numerous acts of perversion, and that he had been a psychopathic case since the age of seven," an attache stated.

He said the statement has been authorized by Crowe.

Mitchell denied any connection with the Franks murder.

Mitchell, and Walter Wilson, another instructor, have been in custody, "for examination" since last Thursday.

Officers said that Wilson had told them Mitchell approached him with an immoral suggestion.

A pupil at the private school also accused Mitchell of attacking him, Crowe's office stated.

Following these accusations, Mitchell broke down and confessed to perversion, the office attache said.

SILENT LEADER IN WHITE HOUSE IS SILENT BECAUSE HE IS DUMB

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, May 28.—Seasoned Washington reporters smile cynically as they send stories over the wires extolling the leadership of the "silent man in the White House." G. O. P. voters who inherited their political convictions read the drivel approvingly and mutter "Thank God For 'Cal'."

Observers sent to the Capitol by big dailies tear the man of straw to pieces, the man who is supposed to be leading the country out of the political and economic wilderness. They find no such man in the flesh. He ain't there and that's all there's to it.

Calvin Coolidge is no myth of course. Please don't misunderstand me. He has being. He eats, drinks, sleeps and takes his stroll thru the business section of the city in the early days of the morning. His head is not set on his shoulders at a jaunty angle. His face is furrowed, particularly when he feels that he is being observed. He says nothing.

Even members of his own party, fear that his silence is due to chronic emptiness of the brain.

The politicians who run the G. O. P. machine blame Congress for the slump in business. They try to lift the blame off Calvin's shoulders. Things would be even worse, they say, "but for the genius in the White House." "But if this man is a leader," say the cynics, "why does not somebody heed his words or his desires?" Nobody, does, excepting perhaps, his butler.

It is freely admitted here, that there has not been so much confusion in Washington in the last twenty years. There is no firm hand at the helm. The man who claimed the credit for breaking the Boston Police Strike would not be trusted by hardened politicians with the destinies of a loaded baby carriage. They do not say this out loud of course, for publication, but they give expression to their innermost thots over the cigars and the moonshine.

Smoot and Lodge, Harrison and La Follette, famous leaders who are credited with possessing political intelligence, are neither here nor there. That is, metaphorically speaking. Lodge and Smoot are in the Senate. The former is used these days merely for an attraction. Visitors from Konkhonk or Oshkosh, when shown over the historic spots of the capitol, are not allowed to go back to the village drug store without getting a good look at the representative of the Sacred Codfish, the Seer of Nahant. But outside of that, Lodge does nothing but look wise and occasionally quote Shakespeare.

La Follette is becoming a blurred point of interrogation on the political map. Coolidge got so many kicks in the pants from Congress recently that he is thinking of wearing a coat of mail.

Leadership! There is no such animal in Washington. Coolidge may get by as long as he keeps his mouth shut. But even silence has its limit. The opinion is now growing that Coolidge's silence is not due to wisdom, but to mental bankruptcy.

KLEAGLE YOUNG DEFENDS SLAYERS OF JACK SKELCHER

Wants Cowardly Killers To Go Scot Free

HERRIN, Ill., May 28.—S. Glenn Young, Kleagle of the Ku Klux Klan and anti-labor gunmen, is trying to head off any prosecution of the K. K. K. who assassinated Jack Skelcher on a lonely road near hear.

Young's defense of the slayers is his unsupported assertion that Skelcher was in the party that fired at his car near Marion, Ill., several days ago, wounding him in the leg and his wife in the head. Whether Young's feudist argument is successful depends on the strength of the Klan in the southern Illinois district.

Cold-Blooded Murder.

Skelcher's friends deny that he had anything to do with the Young affair and charge that the assassination was a cold-blooded murder. They say that Young has been threatening to get Skelcher for a long time, because of the latter's resistence to Klan domination of Williamson county.

Young is now under $220,000 bond on 55 charges for his part in the Klan's raiding and shooting in the Herrin district. These raidings were advertised as "prohibition" raids, but in reality, they were intended to terrorize the organized miners.

Skelcher was murdered by Ku Klux Klan constabulary. A fusillade of shots was fired in Skelcher's car, piercing his body in three places.

King Tut May Be Good Husband But Was A Poor Lover

James A. Stillman had nothing on King Tut as a perfect lover, said Howard Carter, famous Tutologist, who is here to recuperate from the expenses incurred by him in helping to discover that ancient luminary's last resting place and throw light on his historic past.

Mr. Carter being in the presence of ladies, and the Windy City weather giving indications that spring was somewhere about a year off, the explorer's fancy turned lightly to thots of love. He picked on King Tut for his theme, tho he could have picked up hundreds of worthier subjects within the confines of the steel quadrangle which is the Loop.

However, there is something intriguing about Egypt so the explorer took his hearers in fancy to the pyramids. Tut was devoted to his wife, said Mr. Carter. "Tut, Tut" muttered the idle wives of tired business men, "what a perfect brute? How could he be so selfish?"

Mr. Carter waxed legalistic. "I think," he went on as if talking to a jury of his peers, "that the evidence will show King Tut caught in the act (by the painter) of caressing his wife's hand. Another picture shows him looking with longing eyes at her."

The wife was not behind the times, either. Mrs. Tut is shown whisking specks of dust off Tutty's robes. Mr. Carter did not specify whether she used a whisk broom or a rolling pin. "Those were the days when love was love," Mr. Carter raphsodied, "when man and wife lived together and died together." Most of Mr. Carter's fair audience thot it extremely unfair to compel people who lived together, to die together. It was too much. The verdict of the jury was that while King Tut may be alright in his day, his technique was too crude for modern times.

Bill Raising Wages Of Postal Workers Passes Lower House

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, May 28. — The Edge bill, increasing salaries of 300,000 postal service employes, was passed today by the senate by a vote of 73 to 3. It now goes to the house. Eestimates as to the cost of the increase range from $60,000,000 to $85,000,000. Clerks and carriers' salaries would be raised about $300 a year.

Farmer-Labor Office Open

MINOR HOLDS MANY MEETINGS IN MILWAUKEE

Workers Learn Tactics for Labor Movement

MILWAUKEE, Wis., May 28.— Rebels of almost all shades of opinion had the opportunity to hear Robert Minor, editor of the LIBERATOR, and well-known revolutionary writer, speaker, and cartoonist, discuss the part the various workers' groups must play in the crisis of today and tomorrow.

Negro Workers Interested.

Lovett Fort Whiteman and Minor addressed a large meeting of negro and white workers on the subject of the American negro and his relation to the American labor movement. Minor emphasized that the workers of the two races must unite in the fight against the common enemy. He said that the negro is branded as proletarian by the very fact of his skin's color and that discrimination against the negro was chiefly due to his class position as a worker.

The negroes were urged to join organized labor and to fight for the right to belong to unions where discrimination against them exists. Minor reiterated that the Communists are fighting in the unions to do away with the intolerable division by race.

Join Workers' Party.

Whiteman urged the members of his race to join the Workers Party. He brilliantly outlined the necessity of such action by the negroes and gave a clear exposition of the Workers Party program which was well received.

Minor spoke to two Junior Schools of the Young Workers League, and then addressed the Hungarian branch of the Workers Party, urging them to send delegates to the Farmer-Labor convention in St. Paul, June 17. The organization promised to give moral and financial support to the Farmer-Labor movement and adopted plans to send a delegate to St. Paul.

S. L. P. and I. W. W. Hear.

At the Socialist Labor Party state convention, Minor called upon that group to adopt united front tactics. He asked the members to study the lessons of the Russian Revolution and pointed out that the revolutionist must work within the reactionary trade unions.

Minor spoke to the Industrial Workers of the world meeting on the role of the political party in relation to their organization. He analyzed the Russian Revolution carefully and pointed out the tactics of the revolutionary movement from that historic experience.

Mob Lynches Negros

FORT MEYERS, Fla., May 28.—Accused of having attacked two white girls two young Negroes were lynched here. They were riddled with bullets and then dragged thru the town.

Block Greek Smugglers

ANTWERP, May 28.— The local police arrested on board a Greek vessel 24 Greeks who were trying to get into the U. S. without passports. The captain was transporting them for 10,000 francs each.

Are you self-conscious about the impression you make on people?

PERSONAL appearance has a lot to do with the way you feel. Clothes count, of course. But still there is one thing so many people overlook—something that at once brands them as either fastidious or careless—the teeth.

Notice today how you, yourself, watch another person's teeth when he or she is talking. If the teeth are not well kept they at once become a liability.

Listerine Tooth Paste cleans teeth a new way. At last our chemists have discovered a polishing ingredient that really cleans without scratching the enamel—a difficult problem finally solved.

RUSSIAN COMMUNIST PARTY RUTHLESSLY EXPELS MEMBERS WHO LIVE LIKE BOURGEOISIE

(Staff Correspondent Federated Press)

MOSCOW, May 28.—The housecleaning of the Russian Communist party, and the party conferences are the chief questions taking attention in Moscow at present. They put in the background the Anglo-Russian conference in London.

Since the standpat pronouncement of the English bankers there has been a loss of hope of good results from the conference with England. Russians rather doubt the ability of the English labor government, even with the best will, to put thru any substantial assistance to Russia against the will of the English bankers.

Building Without Foreign Help.

Such is the comment one hears, not from government officials, but from workers' letters to the press, which are copiously published, and from general discussions among lesser officials and in workers' groups. There is absolutely none of the glow of hope that preceded Genoa in 1922. There is rather a brief comment: "How wonderfully we could put things on their feet with half a billion dollars' worth of goods"—and then a turning to the harder ways and means of building from within.

Soft Livers Expelled.

The cleaning of the party is one of the methods of internal building. It is very drastic. A central commission takes up one factory group of Communists after another, investigates their manner of living and acting, hears complaints from all sources, and ruthlessly cleans out of the party those who are "living like bourgeoisie," "associating too much with profiteers," "acting in a dictatorial and uncomradely way in dealing with the workers under them," or doing any of the other things that may injure the morale of the Communist party in its program of building Russia towards a Communist state.

Many Expelled.

Many high and well-known Communists of long standing have been thus expelled and many more of the petty officials, who have been exalting themselves in red tape at the expense of efficiency. Some of the economic departments, connected with state industry, were announced to be especially bad in having Communists who were seeking personal advancement and luxuries.

In the party conference one of the main problems is the trade crisis. Industry is producing better, but the gap between price and purchasing power is still high. While the government has turned it main attention to production and wholesale exchange, the private traders have been capturing the retail trade. This is not so important, since it gives no control of basic resources, but it puts the price-fixing power partly in their hands. Hence sacrifices made by workers in industry for the sake of giving cheap goods to the peasants and thus building up agriculture, are thwarted by the high profits of these small middlemen.

Lithuanians Protest Polish Imperialism; Raid Frontier

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WARSAW, Poland, May 28.—Two hundred armed Lithuanians crossed the frontier to attack the Polish railway station at Agnaline, near Vilna, last night, while a second band raided the village of Wojslawice near by. The uprisings were spontaneous outbursts of protest on the part of the Lithuanians against Poland's imperialist policy in holding Vilna and other cities along the frontier, which are Lithuanian in speech and sympathies, as part of Polish territory by force of arms. Polish military invasion in 1922 ended in the conquest of this territory. Lithuania has never made formal cession of her land.

"Our Civilization"—Lecture Subject For Prof. Schevill

Ferdinand Schevill, University of Chicago, will lecture on "Our Civilization" under the auspices of the Chicago School of Social Philosophy Thursday, May 29, 8 p. m., in the Athenaeum hall, 59 E. Van Buren street. Tickets at 75c are obtainable from the secretary of the school, M. C. Winokur, 3236 Cortez avenue, Chicago, or at the door.

Schevill will analyze the factors in modern civilization, including science and technology that underlie its dominant industrial character.

What Yale Education Does

NEW HAVEN, Conn.—After four years at Yale the college boys graduating this spring show the following results of goose-step education: In the scientific school 111 of the 125 voting stated that they expect to belong to the Republican party. In the liberal arts division 221 out of the 270 voting made the same declaration. The Democrat party got 50 votes in both divisions combined. Asked who was the biggest world figure of the present time, the scientific students gave Coolidge 26 votes, leading the second highest man by 8. On the liberal arts side, Lenin got four votes, one more than Secretary of the Treasury Mellon. Coolidge got 28.

Democrats Desert Progressives At Rail Bill Crisis

WASHINGTON, May 28.— Because a large proportion of the 203 members of the House who voted to take up the Howell-Barkley railroad labor bill on May 19, failed to stay in the fight thru the evening session, the enemies of this labor measure were able to carry a motion to strike out its enacting clause. The friends of the bill then battled for hours to restore the enacting clause, which was accomplished, but they adjourned at 10:17 p. m. without bringing the bill near to passage.

The session was marked by hostile manuevers led by Mapes, Sanders, Graham of Illinois, Blanton, Williamson of South Dakota, Free of California, Newton of Minnesota, Sinnott of Oregon and Burtness of North Dakota. At the end, the railroad lawyers were jubilant, claiming that they could filibuster thru the next calendar discharge day, the first Monday in June, and that adjournment would then kill the bill until next winter.

There is now a demand by the progressives that the Democrats join them in refusing to permit adjournment of Congress until this filibuster has ended and the bill is put to a final rollcall. Failure of great numbers of Democratic members to stand by the railroad labor measure in the evening session of May 19 by remaining on the floor, has disclosed the insincere character of this support. When everything depended upon having 200 friends of the bill on the floor to prevent its being throttled by adverse action, just 134 were there to vote against striking out the enacting clause. The roll was called a few minutes later, and 211 voted against adjournment. But they ran out as soon as another hostile motion had been stopped.

Women Voters Lay Down Planks; Want U. S. In World Court

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, May 28.—Federal child labor laws; entrance of the United States into world court, increased appropriations for the women's bureau, children's bureau and bureau of home economics; enforcement of the merit system in office, and the equalization of educational opportunity thruout the country are a few of the biggest "planks" laid down by the National League of Women voters in the platform that they will present to the conventions of all parties in the forthcoming elections.

The women are making their main fight against war by urging the participation of this country in the world court and their plank includes an emphasis to the senate to take the action necessary for United States entrance into the court.

The elimination of legal discrimination against women is demanded by the Women's League in the plank urging "specific measures not prejudicial to women's labor laws or to special welfare legislation."

Noah Not Malthus Favorite Prophet Of U. S. Farmers

CHICAGO, May 28.—There is no race suicide on the farms, the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation stated today. But the only effect of this is to enrich the cities, the Foundation said.

"Comparing the entire farm population of 32,000,000 with the same number in cities, America's farm families have 4,000,000 more children under 21 than the city families," the report stated.

"Farm communities also have 4,000,000 fewer grown-ups than do the cities, so with 4,000,000 fewer producers, the farm families of the nation are carrying the burden of rearing, feeding, housing, clothing and educating 4,000,000 more children than their urban neighbors."

NEW YORK, May 28.—Frank Okonsky, a longshoreman unable to find work, stole a bottle of milk, some rolls and a loaf of bread and when he was arrested hung himself in cell.

BIG BUSINESS WILL HAVE PERFECT HOLD ON G O. P. CONCLAVE

WASHINGTON, May 28.— From the opening prayer to the final word, the convention of the Republican Party to be held in Cleveland, June 11, promises to be one of complete harmony and accord, with the machine in complete control. The program is all worked out. Present indications are that the convention will last about three days. Three days of perfect peace and harmony is the schedule.

According to the dope the first session will open by John T. Adams asking a reverend gent to offer a prayer. It will be done and then the delegates will sing and Adams will suggest that Theodore Burton be made temporary chairman. This will probably be done. Burton will spread the apple sauce and then the committees will be appointed. That will not amount to much and it will probably end the day. The delegates will then get down to the serious business of having a good time while they are away from home.

The second day the committees will report. Someone will be nominated for permanent chairman. It will, no doubt, be Burton.

The suggested platform will be read and adopted. Eminent leaders of the G. O. P. will arise to shoot the bunk and the delegates will adjourn to serious business.

The third day the convention will nominate Coolidge for President amid cheers and then nominate a candidate for vice-president and the show will be over. That is how the great conclave of G. O. P. harmony and good will looks as if it will arrange itself.

Big Business will rule the whole show without fuss or fumble. Nobody will deny it and nobody will do anything about it because that is as it should be.

Coolidge May Not Deliver Muscle Shoals To Flivver Kaiser

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, May 28.—Henry Ford's grab of Muscle Shoals power has been defeated in the Senate committee on agriculture by a vote of 10 to 6, and Chairman Norris is confident that he and Sen. Johnson of Minnesota will win their fight for straight public ownership of that resource.

Judson King, secretary of the National Popular Government League, urging the committee to vote for public ownership and operation, put in evidence receipted bills for residence and hotel rates, here and in Ontario, showing that for 334 kilowatts in Washington the charge was $23.18 for a month, while in Niagara Falls, Ont., it was only $3.55; for the Hotel La Fayette here the charge for 12,000 kilowatts was $425.00, and for the Hotel LaFayette in Niagara Falls, Ont., for 8,000 kilowatts it was $93.42.

The half of the Niagara Falls international bridge lighted by the publicly owned power system of Ontario paid $8.43 for a month's service, and the American half was lighted in exactly the same degree by privately owned power for $43.10.

Carl Vrooman of Illinois, former assistant secretary of agriculture, urged the committee to stand for government control as against private exploitation.

More Churchmen Want To Forget Civil War And Outlaw All War

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., May 28.—Steps toward mending the schism between the northern and southern branches of the Presbyterian church, existing since Civil war days, may be taken some time this week at the 136th general assembly of the Presbyterian church in the United States of America, (Northern).

The break between the northern and southern churches came at the general assembly of 1861 in Philadelphia, when a resolution declaring for union and loyalty to President Lincoln was adopted. In protest against the resolution, the southern churches withdrew and forced a separate body.

As the assembly got down to work today, it appeared that the first order of business would be discussion of a resolution to outlaw war.

Correction On Authorship.

"The Future Belongs to Union Militants," an article on the Boston convention of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, published in last Thursday's issue, was credited to Rebecca Grecht, thru an error. It was written by another careful student of the situation who took part in the convention.

DON'T WORK SO HARD IF YOU WOULD REACH A HUNDRED YEARS

KIRKSVILLE, Mo., May 28.—A million persons die unnecessarily every year, Dr. Eva Kate Coffey, Los Angeles, told the annual convention of the American Osteopathic Association here today.

"You can live to be 100 if you live right," she said.

People die not of "old age," but as the result of some definite ailment caused by incorrect living, she said.

"Old people don't play enough," she asserted. "Further, old age doesn't cause round shoulders. Round shoulders instead cause old age.

WARM PROTEST AGAINST DAVIS' PLOT TO DEPORT 15 RADICALS UNDER VICIOUS IMMIGRATION LAW

(By Defense News Service.)

So many protests have poured in upon President Coolidge opposing the threatened deportation of the 15 alien-born I. W. W. ex-political prisoners that the Department of Labor, to which these protests are passed along, has taken to using a multigraphed form-letter to reply to them.

This is made evident by the procedure of the federal labor department in answering a letter written to Secretary of Labor Davis recently by 28 residents of Hull house here.

These residents wrote at length, giving strong reasons why the defendants in question should not be banished. Each of the 28 protestants received a multigraphed reply from Robe Carl White, second assistant secretary of labor, beginning with the words: "Your letter addressed to the president . . . has been referred to this department for . . . attention."

Signers of the Hull House protest included: Ellen Gates Starr, one of the founders of that institution; Dr. Rachelle Yarros, Dr. R. W. Gerard, Clara P. Paige, Amelia Sears, George E. Hooker, Thomas Holland and William F. Byron.

"Undesirable" to Capitalism.

The 15 deefndants are facing deportation on the ground that they are "undesirable residents," because they have served prison terms under the espionage act. "It is our understanding," the Hull House residents wrote, "that your department has consented to reopen the cases of two of the defendants, and we urge that you give the other 13 the same opportunity."

"Aliens have played a great part in the upbuilding of this country." All of the 15 defendants were workers in the industries of this country before they went to prison; they did useful work; then were convicted amid hysteria and the prejudice attached to an unpopular labor organization, an organization which had been more aggressive than tactful in its criticism of working and living conditions in various fields of industry.

"As a matter of fair play, will you not agree to give all the 15 men mentioned a full opportunity to be heard?

"Those for whom we appeal are: Herbert Mahler, Joseph Oates, William Moran, Pietro Nigra, Richard Brazier, John Avila, Don Sheridan, James Slovick, Joseph Graber, Peter Green, James Mulroney, Morris Levine, James Phillips, Bert Lorton and Harry Lloyd."

Prison Treatment Caused Death.

Since the Hull House protest was dispatched, James Mulroney has died in Arizona of tuberculosis contracted while he was in the Sacramento, Cal., jail awaiting trial, and made worse by the conditions in Leavenworth penitentiary.

Second Assistant Secretary of Labor White said in his reply to the Hull House residents: "I cannot be unmindful that congress by the act of May 10, 1920, has directed that aliens convicted of violations of certain acts shall, if found by the secretary of labor, after hearing, to be 'undesirable residents.' Under our general immigration laws aliens who have committed or advocated acts amounting to opposition to organized government are subject to exclusion and deportation. . . . . The cases are being reviewed with those considerations in mind."

Ex-Post Facto Law.

But White said nothing about the fact that the exclusion amendment he mentions was enacted after the convictions of the I. W. W. defendants, and thus is a clear violation of article 1 of the constitution, which stipulates that "no ex-post facto (after the fact) law . . . . shall be passed."

Cruel Millionaire Allows Heart-Hungry Frau Lots Of Dough

BATTLE CREEK, Mich., May 28.—John L. Kellogg, son of W. K. Kellogg, millionaire breakfast food magnate, was divorced today by his wife, Mrs. Hannah Christine Peterson Kellogg, on charges of extreme cruelty.

Circuit Judge Walter H. North granted the decree, which was not contested.

Mrs. Kellogg was allowed $200,000 in cash, the Kellogg mansion with its furnishings, an automobile, and a monthly allowance of $200 for their two sons, Will, 16, and John, 12. The Kelloggs were married in 1901.

Kellogg is secretary of his father's company.

Flat Janitors' Head Given Diamonds By Belgian Admirers

William F. Quesse, on his reelection as head of the Building Service Employes' International Union, was presented with a gold watch studded with diamonds by Belgian members of the organization, who are employed as janitors in this city.

Quesse was recently pardoned after conviction on a charge of boycott in connection with a strike against the big real estate builders of Chicago.

Gompers Asks Labor Voters To Give 'Cap' Partics Even Break

WASHINTON, May 28.— The American Federation of Labor will make a big drive to nominate members from its own ranks for the vice-presidency in the coming elections, according to a statement issued here by Samuel Gompers. Gompers did not say that it made any difference which capitalist ticket the labor aspirants should be hitched to. Labor in that worthy's opinion, should maintain the sacred principle of non-partisanship to the last ditch, and therefore, bestow its favors impartially on Republicans and Democrats alike.

Gompers hopes by using this tactic, a sufficient number of labor leaders, listed as progressives, will be bitten by by the vice-presidential bug, which may induce them to lay off even flirting with a Third Party and devote their energies to getting a job pushing either one or the other of the broken-down capitalist political bandwagons up the hill toward the summit of victory.

Already two notorious strikebreakers, George L. Berry, and John L. Lewis, have thrown their pocket books into the ring, one for the Democrats, the other for the Republicans. The rank and file, however, are looking toward St. Paul.

West Virginia Miners Vote On Abolition Of Four Sub-Districts

CHARLESTON, W. Va., May 28.—Abolition of the four subdistricts of District 17 (northwestern and central West Virginia) will be voted on by immediate referendum of the coal miners of the district. The proposal to concentrate administration of the union in the district officers and board was carried by the special Charleston convention of 500 delegates held in May. It is an economy measure to make relief of the starving unemployed miners possible.

In the Kanawha field 10,000 union miners and their families are hungry because the operators refuse to acknowledge the Jacksonville (Fla.) agreement that rules in the central competitive field. The convention voted that any miner unable to get two days a week work outside the industry shall be entitled if destitute to food from the district office for himself and family, consisting of flour, meal, bacon, lard, sugar, coffee, salt, baking powder, pepper, soda and also soap.

Carpet Workers Walk Out When Company Cuts Wage

(By The Federated Press)

AMSTERDAM, N. Y., May 28.—Workers in the Sanford Carpet Mills of Amsterdam have walked out following the company's attempt to double-cross them. When the mills opened this week, after a shutdown, the skilled workers were promised that wages would be cut only 10 per cent. But weavers have been cut 20 per cent, and setters 27½ per cent.

REBELS ACTIVE DESPITE SLUMP IN BUSINESS

Dist. 5, Workers Party, Boosts the Battle

By VINCENT KEMENOVICH.

SOUTH BROWNSVILLE, Pa., May 28.—Working conditions here are very poor. The H. C. Frick Coal and Coke Co. closed about ten of their mines in Fayette and Westmoreland counties.

Over 3000 men are out of jobs. Many of the small concerns are closed down and mines that are working are on a part time basis, working two or three days a week.

The Monongahela Railroad laid off over one hundred men in the South Brownsville shop and the Pennsylvania Railroad laid off the men in the West Brownsville shops.

Building Only Booms.

Building trades are sailing well under the present boom in the Brownsville towns. Laborers signed a contract at 62 cents an hour and with the closed shop.

Local No. 2086 of the United Mine Workers, subscribed $12 for the St. Paul convention. The Trades Council couldn't act because it had no funds.

Splendid Donations.

The local branch of the Workers Party collected $30 for the St. Paul convention; sent $50 to Comrade Martinovich just released from prison; $62 to the Defense of the Farrell cases; $10 to the Federated Farmer-Labor Party. The branch members assessed themselves $5 a month to build up the District 5, Workers Party, treasury.

The members of the South Brownsville branch are launching a vigorous campaign for the DAILY WORKER and other party organs altho the bad working conditions hinder their work considerably.

Pay More Wages Or We Strike, Declare New York Waiters

NEW YORK, May 28.—Demands for a 15 per cent wage increase, complete shop unionization, and union recognition and agreement guaranteed by cash security by employers, were voted by 3000 members, Waiters' and Waitresses' union, local 1, and handed to the New York Restaurant Keepers' Association. The old contract expires May 31. Unless the employers sign, the union will strike.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., May 28.—Dugan & Hudson, Rochester shoe manufacturers, recently fell into heavy debt fighting a long union strike. Creditors have now forced it into bankruptcy.

CENTRALIA WHITE GUARD "HONORED" BY GRAFT EXPOSE

Collectors Got All The Monument Money

By Defense News Service.

CENTRALIA, Wash., May 28.—Hundreds of persons who contributed money to the fund for an American Legion memorial to the four legionnaires killed in the Armistice day rioting here in 1919, have finally learned what became of the $16,500 collected by the Centralia Memorial association, Inc. It was all spent for salaries and expenses of those who promoted the project.

This was revealed in a law suit brought against the association by A. D. Tasker to recover judgment on an assigned claim for service. The assigned claim was that of Frank Jackson of Seattle, who was under contract with the association to conduct a subscription campaign at a salary of $500 a week and expenses. One-half of this salary was to be paid weekly and the balance when the proposed fund of $250,000 was raised.

Go-Getters Got It.

Jackson was advertised as a go-getter, and the drive started early in 1922 amid a blaze of glory. Big business in various parts of Washington nodded its approval. At the head of the memorial association's general committee as chairman was Col. C. B. Blethen, editor and publisher of the Seattle Daily Times, while Lieutenant Governor W. J. Coyle was vice chairman, and the head of the executive committee was C. D. Cunningham, then state commander of the American Legion.

Cunningham was one of the special prosecutors who sent eight I. W. W. members to prison for 40 years for defending their lives against a mob of legionnaires on the Armistice day in question. Four of the five incorporators of the memorial association were lawyers, one being Lloyd Dysart, who headed the man hunt in which the I. W. W. members were rounded up in the vicinity of Centralia after the riot.

Publicity material about the campaign was sent in Colonel Blethen's name to newspapers all over the country. This material included a sketch of the projected memorial building, which was to have been 135 feet wide and 130 feet deep. Toward the erection of this edifice the American Legion's national convention of 1921 appropriated $10,000. Of the money collected by Jackson, the first $500 was supposed to go for a site and other local expenses here.

Raiders No "Heroes."

Gathering in that $250,000 looked easy to the promoters at first. And for a little while the going was easy. But after a month or so they struck snags. Several Legion posts in the easter part of the state refused to contribute; it was said that the Yakima post would give nothing. And the collectors found that many citizens were skeptical about the slain legionnaires being heroes.

So the great memorial project hit the rocks. Jackson quit his job at the end of 11 weeks; the law suit was for the remaining half of his salary for that period. In defending the suit, the Centralia Memorial association pleaded that it was without funds, and when judgment was returned against it, the organization moved for a new trial. This motion was granted by the King county court in Seattle, and its decision has just been affirmed by the state supreme court.

INFLUENCE OF DAILY WORKER IS BIGGER THAN EVER AT PEORIA AFTER OUSTING OF ITS REPORTER

PEORIA, Ill., May 28.—The ousting of the DAILY WORKER reporter from the Illinois mine workers' convention, which was accomplished by means of a stolen vote, had a strong reaction in favor of the militants and the DAILY WORKER and against Farrington. The sales of the DAILY WORKER increased greatly since the expulsion. Over two-thirds of the delegates bought the DAILY WORKER every day, and 85 of them have it mailed to their homes as well. The DAILY WORKER sales were greater than all the rest of the other papers sold at the convention combined.

For almost a week prior to the excluding of the DAILY WORKER representative, either Farrington or one of the speakers invited by him, had bitterly attacked the DAILY WORKER. The reason for this was obvious. The DAILY WORKER was not only in favor of the progressive program of the rank and file delegates, but the delegates were regularly reading the paper.

Frank Farrington, stung by the severe whipping administered to him by the progressives on the Howat resolution, instituted a campaign to incite the delegates against the DAILY WORKER reporter. When this method failed, because the progressives solidly stuck by their paper, Farrington put up one of his appointees to vote for the expulsion of the DAILY WORKER.

Everybody Lies But Farrington.

Every newspaper representative at the press table, with the exception of a local Peoria paper, had been called a liar by Farrington. Farrington attempted to control the press table by his tyranny as he was attempting to control the delegates. He had no success in either direction. But Farrington's continual harping upon the newspapers was aimed at the DAILY WORKER from the first.

The delegate who made the motion to ask the DAILY WORKER to withdraw, William Sage, a Farrington appointee holding down a fat job on the scale committee, was obviously coached. The charge upon which Sage based his motion for expulsion, was the phrase, "Farrington machine," but Farrington himself admitted, "I have a machine, and it's a good one, too."

The Hickory Stick.

The only other thing which Sage interpreted as "an insult to the convention" was the statement, "An old grand-dad waving a hickory stick in one hand and a DAILY WORKER in the other, called out, 'Is this the paped?' Farrington said, 'Yes' and the machine delegate said, 'Then let's throw the reporter to hell out.'"

Sage was either entirely absent from this session, or else he was sitting where he could not observe what was going on. Sage called the story about the old grand-dad a lie.

But the absurdity of Sage's whole case against the DAILY WORKER was apparent when the delegate with the hickory stick himself got up and admitted to the convention that the DAILY WORKER story was true.

This veteran was a little mixed up and excited when he spoke, laboring under the impression that the DAILY WORKER wanted to throw him out. He walked up to the front of the platform and waved his cane aloft. "Yes, I'm that old grand-dad that the DAILY WORKER spoke of," he shouted, "and I say it's a shame to want to throw an old man out of the convention. Yes, I've got a hickory stick," he added, waving it menacingly at the press table, "and the DAILY WORKER reporter better get out of here or I'll use it, too."

Yes, It Was Hickory.

Examination afterward proved that the DAILY WORKER statement was accurate to the minute detail of the naming of the wood. The old grand-dad's cane was made of hickory.

When the vote was taken, the press representatives drew closer together and discussed the DAILY WORKER reporter's chances of staying. There was a common bond of sympathy. Practically every man had been attacked by the thin-skinned labor faker, Farrington. Less than a hundred stood up in favor of removing the DAILY WORKER reporter. He had taken up his hat and coat and papers but when approximately two hundred stood up opposed to asking the DAILY WORKER to withdraw, the press representatives all said, "You've won, you'll stay. Put down your hat."

Vote Larceny.

Then the vote was announced—234 in favor of withdrawal and 169 opposed, and shouts of protest went up from the progressive delegates. Twenty of them were on their feet at once, protesting a stolen vote and demanding a roll call, but when Farrington's tellers took the vote on a roll call, two hundred men were counted as 114 and the roll call was denied. It takes 125 votes to secure a roll call vote.

As the DAILY WORKER reporter was leaving the hall, Farrington ruled the still protesting progressives out of order. "The only thing that is before the convention at this time, is the resolution on compensation."

"Well, why didn't you rule Sage's motion out of order?" called Freeman Thompson. "Because you didn't ask me to," said Farrington, with his characteristic, satirical grin.

Then the DAILY WORKER sales began to boom.

TEACHERS WANT FACTS ON NEW JUNIOR HI PLANS

Fight Education Board for Say in Adoption

The elementary teachers' councils are not showing as much wrath over the high-handed methods of the Board of Education in jamming thru the program for establishing junior high schools in Chicago as do the forces of organized labor and the members of the city council. The teachers, while not losing their fine fighting spirit, look forward to the open hearings to be held by the board of education June 3 with less expectancy than the other forces attacking the board's action.

Board Ignores Teachers.

According to Teachers' federation officials, the board has passed the report for the adoption of junior high schools, and all the talk allowed now will probably not budge them. Superintendent William McAndrew is supporting the board of education and the junior high program and both he and Charles M. Moderwell, president of the board, have taken a "go-to-hell" attitude toward their opponents, chiefly the members of the Teachers' federation.

The board of education ignored the request of 34 elementary teachers' councils for further information on the junior high proposals except for the invitation to attend the June 3 hearing. The board passed the resolution for the junior high plan at the same meeting at which the teachers' request came up.

Pass the Buck.

The board of education, with the exception of J. Lewis Coath, failed to appear before the city council's school committee and instead asked council members to attend the principals' meetings now being held at Lane Tech high. Teachers of the school were denied admittance to the meetings at which the junior highs were discussed.

Forces of organized labor, led by Victor Olander, are bitterly opposed to the adoption of the junior high plan, which they claim is practically the Gary plan under a new name. They maintain that the new system will break down their careful apprenticeship training in the unions by giving too many youngsters industrial training before they are 16, when such training should normally start.

Some Union-Busting Tricks Explained By Chicago Employer

"It's not always easy to keep union men out of your factory," says the owner of a large machine ship in Chicago. 'Blacklists and company spies help some, but card holders slip by just the same.

"The scheme we finally adopted after much experimenting by our employment department works almost 100 per cent. When we need men we interview each applicant carefully. We ask him whether he belongs to a union or belonged in the past. Of course the man thinks we are anti-union and he says 'No, I don't belong to a union.'

"We tell him that's too bad because what we want is union men. If he is a union man he'll usually tell you that he did belong once and can get his card renewed. Sometimes he will actually pull out his card. Then we take his name and address and promise to notify him when he is needed.

"But the fellow who walks out of the office when we say we want only union men is the man we are after. When he gets to the doorway we call him back and say maybe we can make room for him temporarily anyhow and we send him into the shop.

"The other fellow whose name and address we took down is S. O. L. We forgot all about him. This is the best scheme for weeding them out we've ever tried."

FINGERPRINT FORGERY MAKES LABOR FRAME-UPS EASY IF ALIEN IDENTIFICATION BILL IS PASSED

In view of the proposed immigration measures which advocate taking the fingerprints of all aliens entering and living in this country, Albert Wehde's discovery that fingerprints can be forged becomes tremendously significant, especially when it is considered that identification "experts" will not profess recognition of the discovery.

The menace of fingerprint forgery is that once a man's fingerprints have been taken, whether he has been convicted of any crime or not, the prints may be duplicated, may be placed on an object at the scene of a crime, at any time the authorities want to frame-up the fellow for a new offense or merely for activities hostile to the status quo. If aliens were fingerprinted, the possibilities of charging them with baffling crimes or of railroading them to prison or out of the country for alleged participation in labor "offenses" would be enormously increased.

Burns' Pride Exposed.

When the king of stoolpigeons, William J. Burns, quit his job (by request) in Washington, he boasted that he left after having perfected the bureau of identification of the department of justice. He bragged that his bureau of identification had become recognized thruout the world by its work of identifying suspected criminals.

William J. Burns has an international reputation as a champion frame-up man. His record was made chiefly on the frame-up of men involved in labor cases. These are things well known.

A great aid to the framing-up of any individual would be the forging of his finger-prints. William J. Burns supposedly never knew that finger-prints can be forged. The head of his bureau of identification, A. V. Renoe, however, was aware that finger-prints can be forged. When Burns, asking a "candid opinion," wrote to Renoe who then conducted his bureau at the federal prison at Leavenworth, Kansas, Renoe had his secretary reply that finger-prints could not be forged.

At the time Burns wrote for information, Albert Wehde, an American citizen who had acted as a German agent and who had unfairly been railroaded to the Leavenworth prison under Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis during the war hysteria, had proved conclusively by his experiments that finger-prints could be forged and he succeeded in baffling so-called finger-print experts with his purposely forged prints.

Simple Process.

Wehde, from his experience in engraving and photography, experimented in a laboratory of the bureau of investigation and worked out the method by which finger-prints can be forged. The process is generally speaking, Wehde says, identical with the making of line etchings. A sensitized metal plate is exposed to the light under a negative taken from the finger-prints to be forged. After development the plate is slightly etched. A paper transfer like jewelers use for transferring designs is made and a perfect replica of the original finger-print is put upon any object capable of holding a genuine impression.

Wehde, by the way, is the author of a most engaging autobiography entitled "Since Leaving Home," in which he sketches his prison experiences and the work he did on finger-print forgery experiments. He and John Beffel, a nationally known publicity man, have a book to be called "Finger-prints Can Be Forged," about to go on the presses. Wehde deals with finger-print identification and the ways of forging prints while Beffel gives the history and significance of the use of finger-prints.

Wehde says in "Since Leaving Home": "The process is so simple that there is no good reason to suppose that conterfeiters or other shady characters, or private detectives with a little knowledge of laboratory work, cannot and do not readily apply it."

Men Hung on Finger-Prints.

On the second anniversary of his release from Leavenworth the other day, Wehde asserted that men have been hung on finger-print evidence alone, which makes more necessary the correct public appraisal of his discovery of the possibility of forgery.

Thomas Jennings was hung for murder in Chicago on February 16, 1912, and one of the jurors in his trial stated that "it was the finger-print evidence and that alone which convinced us Jennings was guilty." William Y. Mills was hung April 16, 1920, for killing two men and the chief evidence saginst him was finger-prints.

According to Wehde, very few finger-prints taken from objects touched during a "job" are complete enough for really accurate identification. When a print is taken by police officials or by the bureau of identification, a firm pressure is insisted upon to give a clear impression of the whorls of the finger lines. The inadequate prints taken from the scene of crime can be touched up and worked over by engraving and photographing processes. Wehde saw an Oklahoma official do this very thing in the Leavenworth identification laboratory and later read of the conviction of the men on whose case the official had been working. This incident started him upon his experiments.

"Experts Cry Fraud."

Wehde addressed a letter to the Illinois Identification Association just prior to its convention in October, 1923, asking permission to explain the finger-print forgery discovery to the experts. Al Dunlap, president and also editor of the detectives' trade paper published in Chicago, made a telephonic request for a demonstration before Wehde be given the floor.

Wehde permitted Dunlap and six others to attend while he showed them the process. Only one of the six was a laboratory expert and after the demonstration, when the rest were holding a chilly private conference over the prints, he said to Wehde in the hearing of a witness: "I know it can be done, but for Christ's sake don't give me away." The other men were detectives.

Dunlap wrote Wehde afterwards that he was a fake and that he would not permit him to exploit his "fraudulent and preposterous claims" by addressing the identification "experts." The association went ahead with its convention at Champaign, Ill., congratulating themselves as most conventions do. They were afraid to admit Wehde's discovery. Finger-prints had always been taken as infallible evidence by the public and the dicks could not afford to lose the prestige their meagre knowledge of identification gave them.

Toledo To Save By Prisoners' Scabbing In City Park Work

(Special to The Daily Worker)

TOLEDO, Ohio, May 28.—Prisoners from Workhouse Farm, Whitehouse, are to take the places of the regular workers in the city parks, Welfare Director Newcomer announced. The move is made in the interests of economy, the city being too poor to continue paying labor for park unkeep, according to Newcomer, who also directs the park work.

The prisoners will be allowed to live at home in the city, if they accept the park work, Newcomer promised. The men will work unguarded. They will be paroled to the Welfare Department. If they fail to appear each day for work at the parks they are subjct to return to the Workhouse Farm to finish their sentences.

Norwegian Iron Workers End Long And Bitter Strike

CHRISTIANA, Norway, May 28.—After a bitter conflict lasting over a year, the strike and lockout of all sections of the iron workers' union in Norway ended yesterday when the men returned to work. The strikers had persistently refused to submit to the decisions of the "court of industrial arbitration." The terms upon which the men returned to work have not yet been learned.

GRAFTERS GET SHORT SHRIFT IN SOVIET RUSSIA

Robbing Workers' Republic Poor Indoor Sport

LENINGRAD, May 28.—Unless the executive committee of the United Soviet Republics commuted the sentences imposed on seventeen former high officials of the administration of the New Economic Policy, the latter will have paid with their lives for their faithlessness to the trust reposed in them.

The charges against the condemned seventeen and thirty-one others who received sentences of from ten years imprisonment to deportation, were: exploitation of the state organization in their own interests, plotting with others to combat state capitalism in favor of private enterprises and giving information secretly to former capitalists who are now abroad.

The prosecutor in summing up declared that the Soviet government must uphold the rights of the people won thru the revolution. The revolution demands that those who betr the trust reposed in them be merc lessly dealt with. It was a pity, he said, to waste a single red army bullet on such contemptible traitors.

Over one hundred Czarist officers and stool-pigeons are now on trial in the same court for espionage and counter-revolution. A majority of them are charged with complicity in anti-Soviet plots hatched by ex-Czarist War Minister Savinkoff and giving aid to Poland against Soviet Russia.

Two directors of the state textile trust were denied a new trial by the high court of appeals. They are condemned to death for corruption.

Quick Response to the Urgent Appeal of German Miners

The first response to the appeal for the 600,000 miners locked out in Germany was a ten-dollar bill handed yesterday to Rose Karsner, national secretary of the Committee for International Workers' Aid, by a young woman comrade who desired her contribution to remain anonymous.

What workers can do if they get together and make a combined effort is well illustrated by the following letter from Bessemer, Pa., dated May 21, received by the Committee for International Workers' Aid:

"Dear Comrades—Here is a bunch of young men willing to help the working people whenever possible. We read in the working class papers about the bad need of help for the German workingmen, women and children. We Jugoslavic workers got in contact with Finnish workers and had a good time together, and did something for our comrades across the ocean. We held a dance on May 10, and we raffled a lady's wrist watch, from which we cleared $38.50. Together with the admission, which was $44.85, this made $83.35, which was sent directly to the Friends of Soviet Russia and Workers' Germany. We appeal to all the rest of the workers to do their share and help till it hurts. Fraternally yours, A Worker."

Surely what these workers can do others can also. The locked out miners of Germany are fighting against longer hours and lower wages. It is the same fight which the workers all over the world are waging. A victory for the workers of Germany is a victory for all workers all over the world.

All contributions are to be sent to the Committee for International Workers' Aid, 19 South Lincoln St., Chicago, Ill.

Gompers, July 4th, and La Follette

Three groups with essentially the same ideas, Gompers, the C. P. P. A., and the LaFollette group, still go their own separate ways. They are united in their lack of definite program of action, and they split on the question of who shall lead the inaction.

The American Federation of Labor non-partisan campaign committee (which means Gompers) issued a statement a few days ago. It expresses a few pious wishes, which it hopes and trusts will come to the attention of the candidates of the Republican and Democratic parties. It promises that those candidates who tip their hats to the statement will be announced as "friends of labor." The C. P. P. A. has announced that it wants liberty and justice for all, and has shown that it intends to split its forces between Democratic and Republican parties in an effort to get it both places. LaFollette has slapped the organized Farmer-Labor movement in the face, is organizing his committees from middle-class elements, and announces that unless a "good man" is named by one of the old parties, the citizens of the United States will have an opportunity to vote for, not a party of their own, but an "independent" candidate. The one positive thing, common to all three groups, is their confusion.

All of which makes the June 17th, St. Paul convention stand out on the political horizon like a mountain on the desert. St. Paul has issued a clarion call for independent political action of the workers and farmers. At St. Paul has been laid the basis for a real class party of the toiling masses. At St. Paul the rank and file will find expression thru delegates selected by themselves. St. Paul gives a clear lead towards establishing political power for the hitherto disfranchised classes. St. Paul is the gateway from the present leaderless, chaotic, confusionist, futile, helplessness of the workers and farmers, into the field of struggle, of organized power, of the beginnings of achievement.

The Turn in the East

One outcome of the estrangement between the Japanese and American governments over the exclusion of Nipponese that will very soon outweigh all other considerations is a new turn in the relations between Soviet Russia and Japan.

Taking advantage of its present unassailable economic and political position the imperialist Washington government dared do against Japan what it has for years shrunk from doing. This compels Japan to seek new friends, if not to unmake old enemies, at least. A reproachment between Soviet Russia and Japan in the Pacific will do more than anything else to make the Yankee ruling class toe the mark and accord the Japanese the same treatment now accorded European immigrants. In view of the center of gravity of the economic development steadily veering toward the Pacific, such a realignment would be of inestimable significance in world politics.

Thus the reports of a settlement of the old difficulties between the Soviet republic and Japan are of paramount interest at this moment. From Peking it is reliably reported that Japan has agreed to recognize the Soviet Republic, to evacuate Saghalien, and to cancel the old czarist debts. In return the Soviet government will grant certain concessions to the Japanese in Eastern Siberia and Northern Saghalien.

In the history of Soviet Russia's foreign relations this is an event of international significance that is "not even exceeded by the British recognition of the Soviets," according to one of the ablest observers of world politics. The new American immigration policy and the swing to the liberals in the recent Japanese elections have undoubtedly played a decisive part in precipitating the change in attitude on the part of the government of Japan.

This resumption of friendly relations between Soviet Russia and Japan is bound to have its effect on the attitude of the American capitalist government towards the Workers and Farmers' republic. Judging by the way foreign affairs are developing in Europe today, one cannot blink the fact that the United States has dismally failed in its attempt to isolate Soviet Russia.

United Shoe Machinery Corp., announces net earnings for the year of 8,054,941. A surplus of over $21,000,000 shows on the corporation books. It was an "uneven and unsatisfactory" year, the president's report states. Reports from the shoe workers indicate that 90 per cent of them operated at a loss for the year. Wages were reduced, hours lengthened, unemployment was rampant. If the year was unsatisfactory for the capitalists, what would you call it for the workers?

Chasing Death Rays

The air in Washington is thick with peace rumors. There is loud talk of Coolidge calling a new naval and military disarmament conference. Senator Lodge, the historian of the reactionary republican party, is falling all over himself in an attempt to make history by putting forward a new peace plan whereby the United States can enter the League of Nations thru a back door. Senator Pepper of Pennsylvania, the reputed best legal mind of the Old Guard, is on his hind legs keeping pace with Sir Oracle Lodge in concocting peace schemes and is advertising his own quack remedy to secure world brotherhood.

Why all this fight for peace among our militarist capitalist peacemakers? On the basis of our experiences with our ruling class we are inclined to think that all of this noise is merely camouflage to hide the aggressive plans for new increased military and naval preparedness now being worked out by the general staff of the employing class. If the increased volume of the noise for a more powerful navy means anything at all this is already obviously true.

But there is another incident which turns the scorching searchlight on the fraudulent peace maneuvers of our capitalist clique. While Coolidge, Lodge, Pepper and a horde of other employing class agents are mouthing phrases about the earnest desires of the American government for peace, the same government is working overtime devising the most effective weapons of infernal destruction.

A certain English Professor Matthews is reported to have invented a death ray which can destroy whole cities at a distance of miles. This new messenger of imperialist peace is said to be of so deadly a character as to be able to decimate regiments of soldiers at a stroke. Disappointment with the lack of enthusiasm that first greeted his invention, Mr. Matthews turned to France for recognition. The French imperialists, of course, welcomed the inventor with open arms. Now, the United States, hearing of the mad scramble for this new agency of hellish destruction, has joined the race to secure control of the invention and is feverishly chasing the death rays. There is no doubt that the government paying the highest price will win a monopoly against England and France and the United States stands the best chance of winning the race.

Apparently, chasing death rays is the shortest and only road to peace that our employing class knows.

Another Friend of Labor

When workers first began to organize labor unions, the bosses passed laws, in their kept legislatures, making unions a conspiracy. Workers were hung, branded, mutilated, imprisoned and suffered all the tortures of bourgeois law for the crime of conspiracy, for organizing unions. It is popularly supposed that the old "conspiracy" laws had been dead and forgotten for a long time. It has remained for a well-known "friend of labor" to dig them up again.

Samuel Untermyer, millionaire lawyer, liberal and "friend of the working man, is prosecuting for the second time officials of the plasterers' union of New York City on the charge that, because the organization is powerful enough that the bosses are afraid to fight it, therefore the union is a conspiracy. The theory is that in order to be lawful, the union must be weak.

Untermyer is no exceptional instance of a "friend of labor." One and all they love labor most when labor is most helpless. They want to come to the "rescue" just when labor is about to be hung, drawn, and quartered. And if no one else will put labor in that desperate plight, they will do it themselves. Perhaps they will stage a last minute rescue, just in time to get labor back to work in good health and at a "reasonable" wage. Labor generally, however, is getting a belly full of such friends. Better be friendless and strong, than have a world full of friends like Untermyer, McAdoo et al, whose kindness is the sort that kills.

Recognition of Russia

Capitalist world politics continues to stagger from pillar to post. On the question of recognition of Russia, it is torn by the contradictions of class-interests demanding that Russia be crushed, sectional interests demanding the profits of trade, and the sympathies of the great masses of every country demanding full and complete recognition of Soviet Russia, as is. Out of the tangle comes, not a policy, but a drift of events, that shows that Soviet Russia is here to stay, and that politicians of realism are being forced to deal with the stubborn fact.

That American capitalism is the slowest in getting into this drift of history is explained by three facts. First, capitalism in this country is the strongest in the world, and the most able to follow its instinctive aversion to dealing with a workers' government. Second, trade connections with Russia before the war were weaker with America than with other capitalist countries, and the lure of present profits is therefore not quite so strong. Third, the masses in this country are not yet aroused to express their sympathies with Soviet Russia in a political way, as, for instance, is reported by Claire Sheridan, who says: "I have seen the proletarians both in Britain and France rise up in wrath whenever the subject (aggression against Soviet Russia) recurred for discusion." But slow though America may be, for these reasons, the same forces are at work. Recognition of Soviet Russia must come, and come soon.

Capitalist Agents in the Unions

Many years ago Austin Lewis wrote a little pamphlet about the deadening influence of the petty bourgeoisie in the revolutionary movement, but Lewis dealt with the question in the abstract and referred definitely to the role of the petty bourgeoisie in the old Socialist movement of pre-war days.

New conditons and the new Communist movement has devloped a new petty bourgeois influence, or rather has brought out in bold relief the petty bourgeois nature of that influence wielded over the working class by the bureaucrats of the trade unions. It is, therefore, intensely interesting to learn that so able an analyst as William Z. Foster has briefly but distinctly defined the character and tendencies of this class' influence on the organized labor movement.

In the Labor Herald for May Comrade Foster makes clear that the trade union bureaucracy has become a special section of the petty bourgeoisie. More definitely it has become that section of the bourgeoisie which is posted as its agents and sentinels in the headquarters of organized labor—as spies upon and traitors to the marshaled ranks of labor.

As petty bourgeois shopkeepers the union bureaucracy is interested in labor only insofar as labor is saleable. As Foster puts it, "They have the same interest in organizing and maintaining the union as has the shopkeeper in building shelves and filling them with saleable merchandise." The article elaborates how this interest inevitably conflicts with the interests of the rank and file workers. Here, also, Foster makes clear that the opposition to the program of the Communists and the measures advocated by the Trade Union Educational league is not derived from any "honest opinion" on the part of union officials. The solid wall of hostility confronting the militant workers in the unions is the united officialdom. These officials are famous mainly for their stupidity and ignorance, and Foster correctly points out that nothing on earth could unify such a piggish tribe but the threat against their material interests embodied in the T. U. E. L. program for amalgamation, a labor party and other measures. It is not a "difference of opinion."

Comrade Foster depicts how these bureaucrats trade off organizational power for personal favors, how they often become immensely wealthy, their intimate relations with politicians of the capitalist parties which keeps organized labor in leading strings in this manner.

Such a subject could be well expanded into a book, and it is notable that, according to the Labor Herald custom of condensing the most valuable matter into brief and readable form, Comrade Foster in the May issue has given the very essence of so important a work. By it he makes clear that the necessity of fighting reactionary labor bureaucracy is bound up with the fact that it is the outpost of capitalism in the camp of labor, and no attack can be made upon capitalism without making first contact with these petty bourgeois sentinels. No better and more vital article has appeared upon any labor union subject for many months.

MUSIC - LITERATURE - DRAMA

SIMON CALLED PETER

By ALFRED FRANKENSTEIN

After seeing "Simon Called Peter," now playing at the Great Northern, one has a strong and itching desire to go after Jules Eckert Goodman and Edward Knoblock, the dramatic butchers who ruined Robert Keable's novel to make the play, with a large bottle of some effective but torturesome poison in either hand. For Keable's story and what might have been a good play are both spoiled by one of the most asinine happy endings ever put on a stage.

The play deals with the effects of the war on a bourgeois minister. Peter Graham leaves his church and his rich congregation to serve in France as a British army chaplain. But when a small group attends his sermons, and only because of regard for him and not for what he has to say, he doubts the value of his preaching. A British officer explains that nobody wants his sort of religion, a religion of words and phrases. He advises the "padre," as they call him, to get down from his high horse and learn the unrestrained and lewd psychology of men at war.

The "padre" does so, and in the doing learns to doubt that religion has any value at all. There occurs an episode in a French cafe, in which is a startlingly vivid air raid. A friend of the preacher is killed in the raid, but dies without wanting the prayers of the church of England. There is also an adventure with a prostitute, which further destroys his belief.

Graham falls in love with an army nurse, and lives with her for a week in a London hotel when they are on leave. He declares his intention of quitting the church, and his intention of marrying her. But she refuses, because she says he is still too much of a preacher. She says he will go back to his sumptuous church and his rich congregation to preach again the same old stuff. And she is right.

So far so good. But in the final scene the play falls flat and far. It represents Peter Graham preaching in his robes of a priest of Jesus. Clack, clack goes the scissorbill. He winds up by telling his hearers he will quit the church because he has sinned according to the laws of the church. Thru the house comes Julie, the nurse, crying, "Peetah, Peetah, forgive me."

Acting, costumes and scenery are good. Noel Tearle makes a good preacher, and Frieda Enescort a good Julie. There is splendid work on the parts of Jetta Goudal as Madeleine, the prostitute, H. Tyrell Davis as the lieutenant killed in the air raid, and Harold de Becker, as the private who tells the preacher his reversed collar "is too damned nosy."

ELIJAH

"Elijah," by Mendelssohn, opened this year's North Shore music festival, at Patten gymnasium, Northwestern university, last Monday night. The soloists were Louis Graveure, baritone; Richard Crooks, tenor. Merle Alcock, Contralto, and Monica Graham-Stults, soprano. There was a chorus of a thousand voices, flanking the huge bank of organ pipes in the center of the stage.

"Elijah" deals with the famine and misery of the Jews, the miracle working of the prophet to bring them back to the worship of the Jews, and his subsequent flight, ending with his resolution to devote his energies to a second reclammation of Israel. The music, unlike so much of Mendelssohn, is powerful, almost classic in spirit, and so dramatic that the oratorio might well make an opera.

It was Graveure's evening, as far as the solo work went. The words of the prophet were given to the baritone. Graveure's voice is a most unusual baritone, for, unlike the dark profundities of Russian, German and American singers of low voice, it is light and high in quality, yet low in range. His interpretations of the prophet taunting the priests of Baal to perform a miracle, and of the hopeless and tired Elijah cast out into the wilderness were especially fine.

Musically, the chorus is next in importance. It is no small task to train a thousand singers to the point where they can put over even a mediocre performance of such a work as "Elijah," and this was no mediocre performance. The work of a small cappella choir, singing the words of the angels of the Lord, gave a peculiarly beautiful and mystical effect.

The other soloists had little to do, but that little done with perfection. Richard Crooks has had his praise sung in these columns before. His rendition of the famous aria, "If With All Your Hearts Ye Truly Seek Me" demonstrated the high silken quality of his voice and his dramatic interpretative ability.

"Behold This Dreamer."

By FULTON OURSLER.
(The Macaulay Company, New York.)

By GEORGE McLAUGHLIN.

Charley is a dreamer, an inchoate artist married to a contented slave and chafed to fury by his slave ring, which is inscribed "Filing Clerk." He meets a girl of charm and plays awhile in Arcady. He chivies her away in disgust when he finds she uses a lipstick and—doubtless—garters. His in-laws railroad him to an asylum to save a divorce scandal. He escapes to New York, the modern sphinx, whose shibboleth and motto is: "Quick, quick; be quick." His cartoons make a big splash but he hotly refuses a fat job; he will not become a "dreamer, who has accepted harness and oats," he will draw only beauty, nothing so coarse, so ugly as cartoons.

So he meets his dream woman, his Aphrodite, lovely in mind and body and soul, and her uncle is a wise old craftsman, who makes a master painter of him. The world acclaims him and the book ends in a rosy Pollyanna mist.

A corking book but strangely myopic. The world is a cesspool but he still devoutly praises God. 'Tis a wild weird theory that the knights of Hearst and the Saturday Evening Post are self-aborted dreamers.

Picture the shy, stifled souls of Arthur Brisbane and Edna Ferber, of George Patullo and Mary Roberts Rinehart! These heroes are word-merchants, there's a streak of shoddy in them. Some of the dreamers manage to compromise enough to join Romain Rolland and Oursler in their safe retreat "above the battle." The gifts of those, who are not heard at once and who find no Fairy with an uncle-cornucopia are strangled at the daily task in coal-pit, steel mill or packing house. The best use their divine fire to heat the coals in Vulcan's brazier forging the rebel blade to hack out a world in which Promethean fire will not be stifled.

THE VIEWS OF OUR READERS ON LIFE, LABOR, INDUSTRY, POLITICS

Unholy City of Disgraced Angels.

To the DAILY WORKER: We are supposed to have an up-to-date chief of police in this city, but police brutalities are just as bad now as ever before, or worse. Even Deputy District Attorney Clark—suspected of being a bootlegger—was badly beaten up last year in the third degree chamber of the city jail. But this was a "mistake," of course, and therefore does not count, they say. On the other hand, former U. S. Senator Works, who, by the way, is rich enough not to work any more, comes out in Cornelius Vandervilt, Jr.'s newspaper saying that all third degree methods are illegal, and therefore, all brutality of this kind is a mistake and often criminal.

The question is: What is the reason for this hot-headed stuff? The climate, of course. So now they are fumigating the hot air of Southern California in general and this unholy city of disgraced angels in particular.

Arrest Little Children.

A prominent woman here invited some radicals from San Pedro to arrange for an entertainment in Pasadena—a city of millionaires—and a group of children, with their parents, went to their hall for practice last week. But the affair was broken up by six husky brutes who represented "law and order." A mother and father and several little children were sent to jail. The charge is criminal syndicalism and contributing to the delinquency of minors. The rottenness of such injustice smells to high heaven.

The American Civil Liberties Union is going good work here, but more publicity is necessary, for Chief Vollmer's "scientific police methods of today" are copied from the Spanish inquisition—with some devilish tricks added to it for good measure.

The painter's strike is still on—but good hopes are reported. Those articles in the DAILY WORKER about this struggle against the open shop did a lot of good, as the sale of the paper among painters increased 400 per cent. This put 100 percentism into the back seat in shame once more.—L. P. Rindal, Los Angeles, Cal.

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

While the Communists in the Ge man Reichstag sang "The Internatio ale," the Socialists and the Fascis roared out "Deutschland Uber Alles The session which was to pave t way for the Dawes slave plan, end in an uproar. When the presidi officer—a Socialist—could not stop t noise, he put on his silk hat a walked out. Socialists in Germany li up with the Fascisti. That is, the S cialist leaders and the less class-co scious of their followers. In Engla ex-premier Asquith praises Phil Snowden's budget. A good lab budget that will satisfy capital a labor. The only worth while oppo tion to the capitalists everywhere now carried on by the Communist The Socialists in every country a the betrayers of the workers.

Morris Hillquit said there was n difference between the progressiv capitalists in congress and the Social ists. Now, there is less than eve La Follette took a hand at denoun ing the Communists because of the energy in pushing the June 17 conve tion in St. Paul, Minnesota, in the d rection of organizing a class part representative of the interests of th exploited farmers and workers and n merely a jumping-off board for som ambitious capitalist politician. Th Communists do not depend on indivi uals who wish to play the role o Moses leading the children of Isra out of the capitalist Egypt. They b lieve in organizing the workers to fre themselves.

The editor of the Locomotive En gineers' Journal arrives at the pro found conclusion that even if La Fol lette is not elected, the workers stil have a chance of "CHOOSING BE TWEEN THE REPUBLICAN AND DEMOCRATIC CANDIDATES thru their balance of power in the house." What a splendid opportunity? I seems they have had that opportunity for several decades and don't seem to be particularly satisfied. Mr. Warren S. Stone's employee also says that if the Magnus Johnson and Shipstead forces in Minnesota control the June 17 convention, the Cleveland and St. Paul conferences may serve as the twin pillars to La Follette's political arch of triumph. While the C. P. P. A. does not know what it wants, La Follette may be able to advise it, provided of course, the labor leaders who are watching it—not pushing it—will not make a satisfactory agreement with the capitalist parties.

Victor Berger published the editorial from the Locomotive Engineers' Journal in his paper and comes to the conclusion that only if the reactionary Communist and Gompers' machines are eliminated from both conferences will the situation be hopeful. Otherwise, the La Follette edition of the 1912 Bull Moose revolt would start out with the germs of an incurable disease in its system. Well, Berger is even more incurably sick than his worst enemies think. If, as La Follette says, the capitalist parties don't take a physic and purge themselves of the evil within them, Berger will have an opportunity to offer himself as a pill on the altar of patriotism. The capitalists are welcome to him.

The state of Texas is sending a strong Klan delegation to the Democratic convention pledged to vote for McAdoo for the Democratic nomination for president. In order to counterbalance the anti-Catholic Klan support Senator Phelan of California, a prominent Catholic and oil expert will place the name of McAdoo in nomination. This is expected to soothe the feelings of Catholic delegates that may be ruffled by the presence of the Kluxers. It is rather appropriate that Phelan should nominate the man who received a $50,000 retainer from Doheny. He nominated Doheny for the vice-presidential race at the 1920 Democratic convention. Senator Phelan is one of the most reactionary capitalists on the coast, yet McAdoo, the "friend of labor" is not too radical for him. Nice gentleman is McAdoo. Tries to please capital and labor.

Lady Astor, the American parasite who became a naturalized British subject because there was no title factory in the United States, ventured into Glasgow to oppose the labor candidate and assist her friend, an ex-army officer, who is running on the Conservative ticket. There is much unemployment in Glasgow and Lady Astor "feels" for the poor, but the best way out of their troubles, she says, is to forget them and refuse to listen to the pessimistic speeches of the Communists. She has many friends in The Highland Light Infantry, stationed in Glasgow. "Nancy" is one of the gay ladies who are used by the ruling class to tickle the fancy of the soldiers who may be needed at any moment to die for the safety of the aristocracy and the capitalists. But the Glasgow workers have listened to better propagandists than Lady Astor and her bunk will not impress them. The Highland Light Infantry can have her all to themselves as far as the workers are concerned.

JUNE 17 DRIVE GROWS!

'COMMUNIST' CRY FAILS RENEGADE

Minneapolis Unionists Repudiate Hartwell

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MINNEAPOLIS, May 29.—Organized labor of this city emphatically repudiates the action of Lewis Hartwell, former Socialist chief of police under the Van Lear administration, in deserting the Farmer-Labor party and supporting George Leach, Republican party candidate for mayor.

Machinists' local No. 477 has adopted a resolution severely censuring the action of Hartwell who is a member of their lodge. The machinists are solidly behind the coming June 17 convention and they state that Hartwell is not speaking for organized labor in supporting the old party candidate.

Ridicule His "Communist" Phobia.

Hartwell's thin excuse that he is opposing the Farmer-Labor movement because of the presence of Communists in its ranks is severely castigated in the current issue of the Minneapolis Labor Review, official organ of the trade union movement of Minneapolis.

Hartwell's assertion that he wants the Farmer-Labor party beaten this election in order to make it "clean house" and get rid of the Communists is held up to scorn by the trade union paper, and his allegation that the Communists are "burglars" attempting to steal the Farmer-Labor party is held up to ridicule.

Hartwell for Labor's Foes.

"The Republican party," that Hartwell supports now, "is and has been the bitterest enemy of the organized workers and farmers," says the Labor Review.

"During the years when Hartwell was active in the labor movement, he always bitterly censured persons leaving a labor organization because of their grievances, fancied or real, against any portion of the officers or membership, and his present position is very inconsistent in view of his past statements.

Referring to Hartwell's statement in the capitalist press that the Farmer-Labor victories were not won by union labor and league farmers alone, but with the aid of about 100,000 progressive voters, the Labor Review replies:

F.-L. Party Is Only Hope.

"The 100,000 progressive voters who Hartwell says vote the Farmer-Labor ticket would have no Farmer-Labor ticket to vote if it had not been for the organized effort of the farmers and workers on the political field. Hartwell, if he carries his reasoning to a logical conclusion, would now have the entire membership leave the Farmer-Labor party and become Republicans to save the Farmer-Labor party from the Communists. He would have Farmer-Laborites become Republicans.

This is the old erroneous balance of power policy stated in a shrewd way. A policy that brought defeat after defeat to the organized workers and farmers of Minnesota as long as they pursued it.

SILVER MINERS STRIKE FOR LABOR PRISONERS AND SHORTER WORKDAY

By Defense News Service.

CARSON CITY, Nev., May 29.—All workers in the Comstock mine at Gold Hill have gone on strike to register a protest against imprisonment of their fellows in labor cases and to compel an improvement in wages and working conditions for themselves. Their first demand is for the release of the Centralia defendants in Washington and of all criminal syndicalism prisoners in California and other states.

Other demands are: Abolition of the bonus and contract system; a $6-a-day flat scale for all underground workers; a six-hour day; that the Gold Hill store and the company boarding house boycott all food products from California; that unsanitary and dangerous conditions in the mine be eliminated.

MORE BAKERIES SURRENDER TO STRIKING UNION

Jewish Workers Carry Fight to the Rest

Two more boss bakers settled with the Jewish bakers' union yesterday. The strike goes on with greater energy than ever in the fifty shops which are still resisting the union demands for the one year agreement and a five dollar increase in weekly wages.

Strike meetings are held every day at noon at the union headquarters, 3342 W. Roosevelt road. The strikers are confident of winning. Scabs are few and the market for Jewish bread cannot be filled elsewhere in Chicago.

A statement just issued by the strikers' local No. 273, tells of the 9 to 11 hour day they have been working and the lack of pay for overtime. The bosses' use of scab labels is vigorously denounced and the workers pledge themselves to fight on until victory comes.

The two shops just signing are Joseph Horowitz's at 659 W. 12th street and Joseph Gurewich's on Western avenue. Twenty others had previously signed.

RUHR INDUSTRY STOPS AS STRIKING MINERS CUT OFF FUEL SUPPLY

BERLIN, May 29.—All big industrial plants in the Ruhr district will be shut down completely by the end of the week for lack of fuel. The strike of the members of the Miners' Federation continues effectively.

Arbitration proposals, offering to continue the 8-hour day for underground work and the 9-hour day for work above ground, until October 1, were turned down by the miners. The strikers emphatically demand a reduction of one hour a day for all mine workers.

Miners are appealing to organized labor in France, England and America. The International Workers' Aid is a strong factor in the relief situation.

GERMAN WORKERS STILL REFUSE SHIP-BUILDING BOSSES' TERMS

(By Federated Press)

HAMBURG, Germany, May 29.—The lockout of the 45,000 workers in the ship building industry, which has been in progress ever since the middle of January in about a dozen coast towns, continues unabated. The workers simply will not return under the conditions outlined by the bosses, namely, a nine-hour day and no appreciable improvement in wages. The conflict is one of the most obstinately fought on both sides on record in Germany.

"Manage Your Own Affairs," Message to Nation's Workers and Farmers

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ST. PAUL, Minn., May 29.—Calling on all workers and farmers in the nation to rally more energetically than ever for "June 17th," the Committee on Arrangements has issued a statement in reply to the sinister attack of Senator LaFollette. The statement is in full as follows:

* * * *

TO ALL WORKERS AND FARMERS:

A GREAT Farmer-Labor-Progressive Convention will be held at St. Paul on June 17th, 1924. This convention was born out of the intent and purpose to give to the farmers and workers and other progressive voters of America an opportunity to vote for candidates for President and Vice-President in the campaign of 1924, who would be absolutely free from the vicious influence that dominates the old party organizations.

But the ultimate purpose of inaugurating an independent national political movement in the campaign of 1924 was to lay the foundation for a permanent independent political organization which would represent the wealth producing elements of the nation.

For this reason it must be evident that the movement cannot be built around any individual but rather must be founded on the economic interests of the great masses of the people who depend primarily on their labor for a living.

The sponsors for the June 17th convention were not oblivious to the strategic advantage of having prominent individuals of national character, who had the confidence of the people, lead in this movement. This is why Senator LaFollette has been, from the very inception, the choice of the active proponents of the convention.

At the same time, the danger of making Senator LaFollette the prime factor in the movement was not overlooked. From the very outset the point has been emphasized that this was to be an independent Farmer-Labor movement, and that if Senator La Follette failed or refused to meet the call of leadership the place would necessarily be filled by a less prominent person.

Senator LaFollette's published statement gives no absolute assurance that he will be a candidate for president on any ticket; and that even a third party ticket is contingent on what the old parties may do. The concluding part of his letter is exceedingly vague and certainly cannot satisfy the aspirations of the millions of men and women of this nation who are willing to break their affiliations with the corrupt old parties and join in launching a clean independent movement which will stand for the interests of the common people.

Senator LaFollette's letter subordinates the tremendous issue of rescuing the government from plutocratic control, and the necessity for all honest progressive voters uniting in this crisis, by engaging in petty factional contentions.

On the face of his statement there is manifest certainty that it is not the result of original investigation and calm deduction. It is obviously the unfortunate decision that comes from unfair and unjust counsel.

No direct inquiries have come to the local committee of arrangements regarding the nature of the June 17th convention. Mr. LaFollette or his representatives have made no inquiries and his attitude as expressed in his statement must have been reached from adverse, ex-parte reports.

As expressed in the beginning of this statement the National Farmer-Labor Progressive Convention is not a LaFollette, or a one-man movement. It has come into existence in response to the call of millions of voters whose experiences under the lash of special privilege have driven them to seek relief thru independent political action. It cannot be diverted or destroyed by anything Senator LaFollette may do or say. The need for it continues to exist and there is no alternative but for it to proceed.

Fifty thousand invitations have been sent out and thousands of responses from farmer-labor and progressive political organizations have been received, filled with eagerness and enthusiasm. The responses are manifestations of loyalty to a great principle and not to any great man. In justice to a great cause the June 17th Convention must be held.

In the first place it would be a betrayal of confidence to disappoint the vast numbers who have been looking forward to June 17th as the day of emancipation. It has not been looked upon as a LaFollette day, but a day of independence for those who toil.

In the second place, the charge that the Communists will dominate the convention is a gross misrepresentation. Every effort has been made to secure delegates from every group coming within the terms of the call and Senator LaFollette and his advisors must know that the Communists constitute only a small fraction of those who are interested in a National Farmer-Labor Party.

The Communists make no secret of their aims and frankly outline their method of procedure. They signify in their published statements that the program of the Farmer-Labor Party represents the next step in progressive political development and they are willing to co-operate in promoting every practical measure that will advance the interests of the wealth producing classes.

There is no more reason why sincere supporters of a National Farmer-Labor Party should doubt the Communists than they should question the sincerity of Senator La Follette. For many years he has maintained formal affiliations with the Republican Party, the most infamous political machine ever in control of the American government.

For the same reason that Senator LaFollette feels that the time has come for all right thinking people to join in a common cause to break the shackles imposed on the people by plutocracy, it is reasonable to give the communists credit for as much honesty and sincerity as Senator LaFollette claims for himself by giving the Communists an opportunity to unite their forces with other progressives in the first great national battle for freedom.

The Farmer-Labor party in Minnesota has been developed along constitutional lines and has always employed democratic methods in carrying out its program and principles. The persons who are largely instrumental in giving form and force to the movement in Minnesota are behind the June 17th convention. The Farmer-Labor conventions of Minnesota unanimously endorsed the proposed national Farmer-Labor Progressive convention after the question had been agitated for many months among the membership.

In Minnesota all progressive elements without regard to creed or philosophy have engaged in united political action and have built up a powerful Farmer-Labor party which has accomplished more in the few years of its existence than other states have done in a quarter of a century to prepare the way for a truly progressive movement in this country. It is by these people and by these methods the proposed national movement is projected.

It is the successful experience of Minnesota in uniting all progressive elements into an independent party which has employed the democratic methods provided by the United States constitution that has impelled the farmers, workers and other progressives to undertake the launching of a national movement that will provide an opportunity for the despoiled to employ peaceful constitutional methods in bringing about the great reforms that the masses of the American people demand.

The Minnesota Farmer-Labor movement has been and is a movement of the rank and file.

The national June 17th convention in accord with this successful, democratic policy will be a rank and file convention.

Senator LaFollette's statement should be a signal to all members of the Farmer-Labor movement to come to the June 17th convention and demonstrate their ability to manage their own affairs in building a great national movement in the same manner as they have already built their state movements.

"RED BOGEY" OF WISCONSIN SENATOR SHOT TO PIECES; HIS ALLIANCES QUESTIONED

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ST. PAUL, Minn., May 29—The giant labor—in the cities and on the farms—has brushed aside, without hesitation for a single moment, the silly and mendacious attack of Senator LaFollette on the June 17th Convention of the national Farmer-Labor forces.

The spirit of the rising class farmer-labor movement, in replying to the political trickery of the Wisconsin senator, in behalf of the old Wall Street parties, was interpreted today in a rousing statement issued by the Committee on Arrangements of the June 17th gathering, and signed by its chairman, William Mahoney, and its secretary, C. A. Hathaway. It sounds its call to the oppressed thruout the land in stirring words as follows:

"Senator LaFollette's statement should be a signal to all members of the farmer-labor movement to come to the June 17th Convention and demonstrate their ability to manage their own affairs in building a great national movement in the same manner they have already built their state movements."

Labor's Reply Comes Quickly.

The statement was drawn up immediately the news arrived from Washington that LaFollette, who is vacationing at the fashionable Atlantic City seaside resort, had severed all relations with the farmer-labor movement, that he had repudiated the workers and farmers for his old associates in the Wall Street Republican party.

The statement sets this forth quite clearly when it says that "LaFollette's published statement gives no absolute assurance that he will be a candidate for president on any ticket, and that even a third party ticket is contingent on what the old parties may do.

"The concluding part of his letter is exceedingly vague and certainly cannot satisfy the aspirations of the millions of men and women of this nation who are willing to break their affiliations with the corrupt old parties and join in launching a clean, independent movement which will stand for the interests of the common people."

Not "One-Man Movement."

The statement emphasizes again and again that the cause of the worst exploited farmers and workers is not a one-man movement.

It also replies, in no uncertain terms, to the "red" bogey that LaFollette, in common with Palmer, Daugherty and Burns and the worst reactionaries, seeks to raise at this late date, even after a high official of the department of justice at Washington has confessed before a senate committee that all the "red menace" propaganda sent out by government agencies was "mere bunk."

Concerning the Communists, the statement says:

Communists Have No Secrets.

"The Communists make no secret of their aims and frankly outline their method of procedure. They signify in their published statements that the program of the Farmer-Labor party represents the next step in progressive political development, and they are willing to co-operate in promoting every practical measure that will advance the interests of the wealth producing classes."

The statement then challenges the sincerity and purpose of the self-styled progressive senator from Wisconsin when it says:

"There is no more reason why sincere supporters of a national Farmer-Labor party should doubt the Communists than they should question the sincerity of Senator LaFollette.

Hits LaFollette's Allegiance.

"For many years he has maintained

SAMMY CASTS GLOOMY GLANCE AT ST. PAUL AND FEELS UNHAPPY

WASHINGTON, May 29.—Samuel Gompers, taking his cue from Senator LaFollette, is attempting to halt the movement toward a great party of workers and farmers which is coming to a head at the St. Paul convention, June 17.

In a formal letter against the St. Paul convention, signed by Gompers and other members of the federation's "nonpartisan" political committee, the "red menace" is flaunted and the statement is made that a "plot has been made to trick you into injuring our labor movement and undermining our national institutions." Gompers adds that Moscow will direct the convention.

At the same time Gompers has addressed a communication to the capitalistic Republican [illegible] Democratic committees, asking them to give favorable consideration to labor candidates. In the case of the Democrats this means an appeal for support for George Berry—post-war major, legionnaire and strike-breaking president of the pressmen's union, who seeks the vice presidential nomination.

BLOW TO HOOVER FISH STEALING DEALT IN SENATE

Anti-Monopoly Bill For Alaska Passed

WASHINGTON, May 29.—Exposure of Secretary of Commerce Hoover's assistance to the Salmon Trust theft of the $60,000,000 a year fishing resources of Alaska, led to the passage of the Sutherland anti-monopoly bill in the senate.

Hoover was sharply rebuked. The bill instructs the commerce secretary never again to grant any exclusive rights of fishery to any corporation or favored interest. All American citizens are to have equal right to fish.

Senator King of Utah, charged Hoover with preaching conservation and then allowing corporations to monopolize and waste the fish resources.

The bill now goes to the house. Alaskans fear that the teeth of the bill will be drawn in conference. Publicity will be given to efforts of Hoover lobbyists to salvage their graft.

JENSEN'S LOCAL IN CARPENTERS' UNION HITS BACK

Local Passes Resolution Opposing Suspension

A storm of protest by the eight thousand members of nine locals of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, who were suspended from the district council in order to keep opponents of Harry Jensen, president of the Carpenters' District Council, off the ballot in the June election, came to a head when Jensen's own local, No. 181, passed a resolution rebuking Jensen for the suspension.

In spite of the fact that Jensen was present at the meeting, and spoke in defense of the action of his machine, Local 181, at their last meeting, almost unanimously passed the resolution declaring that a grave error had been committed and demanding that Jensen and his co-workers immediately declare the nine suspended locals in good standing again.

Committee Comes Back.

The committee, representing Locals 13, 1, 80, 416, 250, 1118, 1727, 2200 and 1693, which went to Indianapolis Sunday, to appeal the case direct to President William L. Hutchison, has returned and it is learned that Hutchison told the suspended members that he will sustain their appeals on Locals 1 and 13.

Local 13 had mailed in the building assessment on Thursday, May 22, the day before they were suspended. Local 1 had paid the district council the greater part of the assessment. The excuse given for suspending those locals which had candidates up for election who opposed the Jensen slate was that the locals had not paid their building assessment.

Suspended Without Notice.

Members of the suspended locals, however, pointed out to the DAILY WORKER yesterday that the locals had not paid these assessments for many weeks, yet they were suspended Friday entirely without notice. One member of a suspended local told the DAILY WORKER yesterday that, "We have said from the first that the building assessment will be paid as soon as the proper committee is elected to take care of the funds.

This committee was to have consisted of one member from each local union in the district council, but it has never been formed. The committee was supposed to have been elected and bonded before the locals paid over the building assessment.

The membership has contributed the money, but the local unions are holding it until the building committee is elected."

Council Meets Tonight.

A special meeting of the district council has been called for tonight to consider the cases of the suspended locals, one member of the district council told the DAILY WORKER yesterday.

The membership is especially wrought up over the fact that, altho the elections are not to be held until the second week in June, Jensen is trying to keep the opponents of his slate off the ballots on the ground that they were nominated when the locals were under suspension.

This was confirmed when Charles Sand, secretary-treasurer of the district council, told the DAILY WORKER that he did not believe the opponents of Jensen would be allowed back on the ballots.

"It's too bad," said Sand, "But according to our law, the members of the suspended locals are not entitled to have their names on the ballot because they were under suspensions when nominated."

Sand said that there were no locals suspended who had nominees on the Jensen slate among their membership.

"I don't believe the Jensen slate is menaced by its opponents in the coming election," Sand told the DAILY WORKER. "They haven't enough standing to worry us. Take myself for instance. I was unopposed for nomination, and will run without any opposition."

Members of Local Union No. 80, however, violently disagreed with this statement of Sand.

Sand told the DAILY WORKER that in his opinion, the suspended membership will be allowed to vote in the June elections, but that Jensen will rule that the nominees opposed to him cannot go on the ballots. Sand declared he believes that President Hutchison will back up Jensen. He claimed the locals would be taken back into the union as soon as they pay the district council their building assessment.

Jensen's opponents, however, term the election trick pulled by Jensen as "the rawest deal ever pulled off in the carpenters' union."

SOVIET CHIEF LEAVING LONDON FOR CONFERENCE WITH FRENCH LEADERS

LONDON, May 29.—The Soviet delegates to the Anglo-Russian conference, despite inspired reports to the contrary in the Tory press are by no means disappointed with the progress made by the negotiations so far. The result of the French elections considerably strengthened the diplomatic position of the Soviet Republic and the passage of the Japanese Expulsion Bill in the American Congress, had a sobering effect on the anti-Russian saber-rattlers in the oriental empire.

It is reported that M. Rakovsky, chief of the Soviet delegation in London is leaving for Paris to take up preliminary discussions with responsible members of the incoming French government.

MOSCOW JOYOUS AS COMMUNIST CONCLAVE SITS

1,000 Delegates There from Near and Far

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, May 29.—Moscow is decorated and a holiday spirit is noticeable everywhere as the Thirteenth Congress of the Russian Communist Party is considering the momentous questions confronting it.

More than one thousand delegates from every section of the Soviet Republic are on hand to participate in the sessions which are recognised by the Communists the world over and the capitalist governments of every country to be of extraordinary importance.

From East and West.

At yesterday's sessions the convention welcomed factory workmen coming from Vladivostock, the Donets Basin, Ekaterinaslov, Odessa and the other industrial centers of the republic. These workers brot wreaths to lay on the tomb of Lenin. They presented the delegates with new red banners as a mark of working class solidarity and purpose.

Kamenev roused the delegates and workingmen to a high pitch of enthusiasm in his opening address on the life and work of the departed leader of the international Communist movement and the world revolution. An air of extreme solemnity gripped the inspired audience which rose in memory of Comrade Lenin and stood motionless for nearly ten minutes in honor of their dead teacher and leader.

Workers in Shop Clothes.

The sessions of the Congress are being held in the famous Hall of St. Andrews. The many mirrored walls and ceilings and the sumptuous candelabra are all bedecked with black crepe to commemorate the death of Lenin. As the hundreds of workingmen in their shop clothes and the delegates clad in peasant costume filled this hall of splendor one could not but be deeply stirred by this symbol of the new day in which the working class and peasantry reign supreme over a land on whose territory the sun never sets.

The tremendous power of Communism as the liberating force of the city and rural masses is dramatized by the striking contrast.

A presidium of forty-two has been elected to facilitate the convention's work. A spirit of unity is manifest in the ranks of the delegates. There does not appear to be a trace of the effects of the recent controversy which was settled with the decisive victory for the old guard of Leninist co-workers and followers. Among the prominent members of the governing body of the convention are: Zinoviev, Trotsky, Rykov, Djerjinsky, Kamenov and Krupskaya, the widow of Comrade Lenin.

Many Important Problems.

The congress is confronted with numerous complex problems. Merely to mention a few of the most pressing questions one finds the following: The Communist party is determined to increase the proportion of its membership which consists of industrial workers. The executive committee is planning to launch a new drive for members in order to reach the million mark. Ninety per cent of this million is to come from the ranks of the city workers, according to the plan of the leaders of the party. This is merely part of an elaborate program mapped out by the central executive committee to strengthen the party organization.

Building Up Industry.

Another problem of serious import before the delegation is that of strengthening the Soviet system of national economy. Soviet Russia has a long road to travel yet before it will realize the complete Communist program for economic reconstruction and industrial reorganization along Communist lines.

The congress will deal especially with ways and means of counteracting the influence of the new bourgeoisie.

Great consideration will be given to the strengthening of the bonds between the workers and the peasant masses. The Communist party is striving to achieve complete unity of purpose and action between the working class and the poor peasantry.

Zinoviev on National Problems.

In his masterly address, lasting more than four hours, Comrade Zinoviev gave a detailed report of the remarkable progress made by the Soviet republic in the handling of its internal affairs. Particular stress was laid on the manner in which the many nationalities constituting the Union of Soviet Republics were being welded together into one powerful Soviet republic. The non-Russian speaking minority peoples are today receiving and enjoying full rights and are achieving their ambitions long restrained and crushed by the czarist capitalist clique formerly ruling Russia.

In his speech Zinoviev declared, amidst thunderous cheering of the delegates: "We can say with pride that such problems as the Armenian question, which has for years baffled the entire world, which has for generations proved unsolvable to the capitalists, has been solved by Soviet Russia. We have done as well in our relations with the Soviet republics of Georgia and the Ukraine."

Trotsky for Party Unity.

Comrade Trotsky, who in the recent party controversy was at variance with the central executive committee, made a strong plea for the unity of the party. The spirit and contents of his speech showed how the recent disputes have been completely liquidated.

In closing his address, which was a passionate appeal for the greatest possible unity and the building of an invincible Communist party, Comrade Trotsky said: "The Communist party is always correct in its fundamental general aims. I understand the duty of every disciplined Communist, of my duty as a party member at the present momement. I am ready to admit, as every other member is, mistakes, but these are not aimed against discipline and party unity."

MACDONALD CLAIMS HE WILL QUIT IF HOUSING BILL LOSES

LONDON, Eng., May 29.—The Labor Government may resign and appeal for the support of the country if it is defeated on the housing bill, according to the DAILY HERALD'S report of the MacDonald cabinet's decision.

The correspondent states that the Labor premier and his conferees will immediately leave office if they are not completely victorious in the debate on the bill for more adequate housing. Part of the bill is directed against profiteering in building materials.

Despondency From Facing Bosses' World Takes More Victims

An old lady committed suicide in her dingy room in a boarding house by covering her face with chloroform-soaked towels. "Despondency over ill-health," her landlady said.

A married man of middle age committed suicide at almost the same time by inhaling gas. "Despondency over ill health and unemployment," his wife said.

These cases are only two of many suicides because of "despondency over ill-health and unemployment" which the conditions of the profits-system society brings on young and old. The young, altho down and out, will yet cling to life a little longer. The young can work when there are jobs, but the old are scrapped by the greed of the bosses.

The old, worn-out workers, forgotten and weary, muster their courage to end the burden of life which no merciful god will remove.

Fight for Gold Coast.

"Ma" Streeter has started suit for $100,000,000 damages from the Chicago Title and Trust company and approximately 1,500 wealthy Chicagoans. This is a continuation of the fight by the late "Captain" Streeter, who claimed ownership of the "Gold Coast," now the home of the Potter Palmers, Cyrus H. McCormick and other millionaires.

FITZPATRICK'S FORMER PARTY AT LAST GASP

Brown Resigns; Class Movement Gains

The dissolution of the Farmer-Labor party of the United States was practically completed with the confirmation by the DAILY WORKER yesterday that Jay G. Brown, national secretary of the party, has resigned. Brown told the DAILY WORKER that he is leaving town for the west coast and is severing connections in Chicago.

The resignation of Brown is seen as another preparation by those connected with the American Federation of Labor to throw their entire support behind Len Small, the Republican good roads governor, in the coming elections.

The Chicago Federation of Labor at its last meeting deserted its party of independent political action, and John Fitzpatrick withdrew from the Cook county and the national Farmer-Labor movement. Recently Jay Brown announced that all preparations had stopped for the convention at Cleveland, July 4, "because we did not get enough response."

Walker Began Retreat.

The Illinois State Federation of Labor, with John Walker, renegade Socialist at its head, had already deserted labor party action in favor of the corrupt Len Small at the primaries. Frank Farrington, president of the Illinois mine workers, also refused to indorse a labor party and threw the support of his machine to the Republican camp.

At the same time that Brown announced his resignation to the DAILY WORKER, it was declared in well informed circles that Robert Buck has also resigned. Buck, while he would not deny his resignation from the executive committee of the Farmer-Labor party of the United States, refused to make any statement.

Buck Quitting Chicago.

Friends of Buck told the DAILY WORKER that Buck will move to Washington, D. C., in about three weeks, and will resign from all activity in Chicago. Jay Brown will motor to Seattle and will reside there hereafter.

The Farmer-Labor party of the United States was a thorn in the side of Governor Small in his campaign for the nomination in the recent primary campaign. It declares in the national and Cook county constitutions of the Farmer-Labor party that no member may enter old party politics and calls for complete severance of all workers from the two old parties. While Small was able to draw Fitzpatrick, Wills, Clay and other members of the Farmer-Labor parties in line to his support, their positions as executives of the Farmer-Labor party laid them open to the charge of being double faced.

The New Majority, official organ of the Farmer-Labor party of the United States, is in danger of suspension of publication thru the complete collapse of the Farmer-Labor movement. It is thought that the policy and purpose of the New Majority may soon be drastically changed.

Tightening Small's Fences.

The withdrawal of Brown and Buck from Chicago is seen as a move of Small to tighten his fences for the coming elections. The Chicago Federation of Labor will probably try to pass the indorsement of Len Small at their next meeting.

At the same time that the leaders of the old Farmer-Labor movement were scrapping their Chicago Federation of Labor party, the Labor party of Illinois announced an intensive speaking campaign thruout the state on behalf of its candidates. The Labor party of Illinois elected Duncan MacDonald of Springfield to the St. Paul Farmer-Labor convention on June 17. The Labor party of Illinois has declared for an independent class labor party.

"WAR! WHAT FOR?"—HEAR IT TONIGHT; YOU YOUNG WORKERS

Every one who has to fight the battles of war when the government gives the high sign is invited to hear Max Shachtman, editor of the Young Worker, tell a few startling truths about war and war-makers. Shachtman speaks at the Workers' Lyceum, 2733 Hirsch Blvd., at 8:15 p. m. tonight.

"You ought to know why you fight," is the Young Workers league cry to all young men of the country. The girls can listen in, too, because they have brothers and friends whom they can tell what they should should know about war.

The meeting tonight is open to all and is held under the auspices of the Maplewood branch of the Young Workers league.

Brookwood Labor College Struts In New Scholarships

KATONAH, N. Y., May 29.— Five recent trade union conventions have promised financial assistance to Brookwood Labor College, and the second commencement day in its history on May 30 will find Brookwood accepted and approved as organized labor's own college. Conventions of the International Ladies' Garment Workers, District No. 2 of the United Mine Workers, which has already established two scholarships, Pennsylvania and Virginia State Federations of Labor, and the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America have all gone on record to establish scholarships or to make direct contributions of corrsponing value.

Labor leaders and prominent educators will be the only speakers at the commencement exercises. These include James P. Coughlin of the New York Trades and Labor Assembly, Joseph Schlossberg, Fannia M. Cohn, Rose Schneiderman, Dr. Henry Linville, Abraham Lefkowitz, Spencer Miller Jr., Workers Educational Bureau, H. W. L. Dana, A. Brownstein, Christian Madsen of the Chicago Painters, and Harry Elmer Barnes, the eminent sociologist, who has been recently making a searching analysis of historical methods and challenging the orthodox historians.

Dismiss Troops to Pay Employes.

MEXICO CITY.—In answer to a committee of the starving Mexican government employes asking for the suspension of payment of the debt to the United States, President Obregon said that he has begun to demobolize the troops which took part in the last revolution, and that the money saved would be used to pay the teachers and office workers. Obregon also said that by June he expected the teachers' salaries would be paid with regularity.

Labor Runs Factory.

MEXICO CITY.—During his absence in Europe Cesar F. de la Reguera, owner of the large textile mill Guadalupe will leave the administration of his mill to a committee from the Mexican Federation of Labor. Luis N. Marones is to be chief of the directing committee. In return for their service Reguera will give the Mexican federation 20 per cent of the profits for the year.

DAWES BOOMED AS COOLIDGE RUNNING MATE

Might Curse His Way to Victory

WASHINGTON, May 29.— While President Coolidge is not ready to shout "My kingdom for a horse," he is getting really anxious over a worthy running mate. Good vote getters refuse to play second fiddle to the little huddled figure in the White House and the "willin' Barkuss" are willing alright, but that is all that can be said in their favor.

There are several senators who might hazard their political fortunes on a throw of the vice-presidential dice, provided Coolidge was a heavy eater and looked at his friends occasionally thru glasses darkly, but there is nothing human about him, in the generally accepted sense of the word, and even if he does take a drink occasionally, he lets his pet dog taste it before consigning the beverage to the presidential palate. A man who does not even love his dog cannot be expected to make ambitious senators look forward with pleasant anticipations to occupying the White House via the vice-presidential route. People like Calvin Coolidge seldom die. They usually stop living.

There is one man, however in the United States so fitted by nature and environment to act a running mate for Calvin Coolidge that it is quite likely in spite of the abundance of his verbosity and the richness of his obscenity, the date of the Republican Party convention may find him up in the lead of the possible nominees for Cal's partner in the presidential marathon.

The man is General Hell-and-Maria Dawes, author of the Dawes plan and other well-known literary works, including a plan for breaking strikes.

The fact that Dawes never refuses an opportunity to swear, is considered by friends of the president, to be a strong reason for urging the candidacy of the arm-chair general. Coolidge neither speaks nor swears, except very seldom and the American voters like to have their leaders act like he-men once in a while. Of course, Coolidge is handicapped coming from cultured Boston but Dawes has no such liability. He is a native of Chicago where the odor from the stockyards blights every budding genius not protected by the impenetrable intellectual hide of a Ben Hecht.

Hence two strikebreakers, one from the Hub of civilization, who says nothing, having nothing to say and is at least wise enough to know it; the other also a strikebreaker, who says nothing because he knows nothing and does not give a damn who knows it, are possible team mates in the coming election.

Hail the leaders of the Republican Party, Calvin Coolidge, the Silent and the Dumb, with General Hell-and-Maria-Dawes, the Dumb, but not the Silent!

You said It! (No. 2)

The average judge is a subnormal moron. — Attorney George W. Alger before the New York Bar Association.

THE POWER COLUMN

MORE CITIES GO OVER THE TOP

Kansas City, Portland, Miles City and Pittsburgh Making Serious Bids for Winner's Flag

With only two weeks remaining to the DAILY WORKER subscription campaign, the contests between the leading cities of the two divisions are still pretty well bunched. In spite of the fact that there is quite a number of points on the quota list between some of the leaders, uncertainty of the results of the next fortnight make it the toss of a coin to determine which city will finally pull down the banner.

Kansas City, Portland and Miles City are three cities which have brought glory to themselves during the week by passing the 100 percent mark on the quota list. All credits is due to Comrade J. H. Wilson of Miles City who brought his city across almost single handed. The comrades of Kansas City and Portland are not over many either and the work of a few loyal comrades is responsible for the splendid showings these cities have made.

Pittsburgh is making a strenous attempt to overcome the lead gained by Toledo in the contest between the larger cities. The City-of-the-Steel-Trust gained a few points during the week and is far from resigning a permanent hold on the top to the Ohio town. Fully a dozen more ambitious burgs are freely predicted taht they will show their heels to the rest of the pack before the drive is over and any one of them can do it if they make the best of the remaining time.

TOLEDO SLIDES A BUNCH UNDER THE WIRE AGAIN.

The live wires in Toledo think they know just when The Power Column goes to press. Each week for the past three special delivery letters arrive just in time to get reported in the Friday Power Column. This time a catch of 26 new subs comes to bring their week's total up to 29 and their grand total to 188 or 150.4 per cent of their quota. If the Toledo comrades keep up their good work they will necessitate the printing of a special Toledo edition of THE DAILY WORKER to fulfill the seemingly limitless demand for the paper.

From Syracuse, N. Y. comes a belated complaint that the comrades there feel slighted because they have not been assigned a suota. Comrade Wodneff writes that Syracuse can make a record of at least 15 and requests that the quota be set at that figure. You and your comrades will have to get a move on, Comrade Vodneff but there is no question but what it can be done before June 15.

IS CHICAGO WAKING UP?

Comrade Helen Lotoszynski of the Ukranian Branch says so and turns in 16 subs t oprove it. A few more like this young speed demon and Chicago would be out of its near cellar position. Comrade Lotoszynski says it's easy to sell subs but she never found out how easy it was until she tried it. There are a few thousands other readers of THE DAILY WORKER who also can be given a pleasant surprise if they will set themselves to the task of selling subscriptions to their friends shop mates and neighbors. Comrade Lotoszynski has demonstrated to the "It Can't be Done Club" the way it can and has been done.

Lots of Fun at Affair This Friday

Final arrangements have been made for the May 30 picnic to be held jointly by the Trade Union Educational league and the Young Workers league.

The grove, at Altenheim, Forest Park, will be decorated in a novel manner. Booths will be trimmed and every effort made to add a gay, festive spirit to the occasion.

The facilities of the grove are well suited for the affair. Plenty of tables and benches, all in a deep shade and under large trees, will give comfort to the crowd. A large part of the grove is grass covered for those wanting to get closer to earth.

Swings and a merry-go-round promise a day's fun for the children and a dance pavilion will take care of those with an interest in another movement. A splendid (and union) orchestra has been hired for the occasion.

Food will be dispensed in a generous and efficient manner by the Amalgamated Food Workers, who will receive help from the Hungarian group of militants and young workers . . . . as well as some waitresses mighty easy to look at.

Well-Known Rebels to Speak.

Short talks by Bob Minor, Jack Johnstone and Max Schachtman will alone be worth while coming to hear.

The grove is easy to get to. The Forest Park L (Metropolitan) will take you directly to the gates. Or one can take the Madison St. car and transfer to the suburban line.

Passing the Test

It was a real trial of the quality of the men, pioneers in the Farmer-Labor party movement in Minnesota, who have joined in making the June 17th Convention in St. Paul, when they were faced with the outrageous statement of LaFollette against that gathering. These men had accepted LaFollette as the standard bearer of the new movement, not only because they shared the popular illusions about him, but principally because they wanted to unite the broadest possible masses in the revolt against big capital. When LaFollette tried to knife the great gathering, called to lay a solid foundation for the revolt of the workers and farmers, the leaders of the St. Paul Convention Committee had to make a fundamental decision.

They did not hesitate. With cheering unanimity and in unmistakable terms, they told LaFollette where to head in at. They served notice on him that he has been a "leader" by courtesy only, and that June 17th is not the property of any man, that the movement will determine its own destinies. If LaFollette does not like it, he knows what he can do. The statement issued by William Mahoney and C. A. Hathaway for the committee on arrangements is a historic document in the development of a class party of workers and farmers.

Mahoney's statement is not a Communist document. While it calls for a clean break with the capitalist parties, and for an all-inclusive combination of class elements for that purpose (things which have the unqualified support of all Communists in America) it is still permeated with the illusions of "democracy" and the expectation of achieving fundamental changes without serious social conflicts. Communists do not share these illusions. That is one of the reasons why the Workers Party maintains its separate organization. These illusions can only be shattered thru the workers and farmers, acting as a class, getting into the political struggle and thru a long process of experience in the political struggle. Therefore, the Workers Party supports the formation of a farmer-labor party. The capitalists of America will force the growing farmer-labor movement more and more to the Communist position. So we can afford to give our heartiest and most complete co-operation to the next step in the class struggle, for which Mahoney and his associates stand—June 17th and the class party.

The Minnesota movement has proved that it cannot be dominated by any vacillating politician of the middle-class type. It has resolutely asserted its independence. The test is passed in splendid fashion.

Kan the Klan

Condemnation of the Ku Klux Klan by the miners' convention of District 12, Illinois, again draws attention to this budding organ of Fascism in America. Like other Fascist bodies the world over, the Klan is attempting to permeate labor organizations, not to make them stronger fighting organizations against the employers, but to weaken them, break up their class lines, and serve the capitalist class.

The poor tools who make up the rank and file of the Ku Klux Klan do not, of course, understand what they are doing. They are stupid and ignorant, and elevate these qualities into the virtues of 100 per cent Americanism. Taught to believe that this makes them the natural rulers of the land, they become willing accomplices in the most atrocious crimes, at the direction of the sinister forces behind the scenes directing the affairs of the Klan.

Rumor has it that some of the rag-tag and bobtail of the Chicago labor movement is being lined up in the Ku Klux Klan. Certain it is that the organization is boring within the United Mine Workers of America, where, in a few backward villages, they control the locals. But the wizards and kleagles can never flourish in the soil of the labor movement. Union men will be on the watch to kan the Klan.

The anonymous "expert" who writes for the Chicago Tribune on economic subjects, under the name of Scrutator, continually wails about the evils of "tampering with natural economic processes." He has no confidence in the ability of human brains to manage society. The job must be left to "natural law." Considering the mess that his bosses have made of "managing" society, it must be admitted that he has some reason for his distrust.

An electric bricklayer that does the work of 20 masons, is the latest startling announcement. In Soviet Russia such an achievement would mean increasing welfare for the workers; in America under capitalism it spells starvation for the masons.

Decoration Day

Today the propaganda foxes of capitalist patriotism will congregate in packs to commemorate the heroism displayed by the fighting forces of the United States in all its wars. Wreaths will be placed on the graves of the Blue and the Gray of the Civil War. The tombstones of the fallen in the Spanish-American War will not be forgotten. Eulogies of the dead of the World War will be delivered from coast to coast.

The graves of the poor workers and farmers who gave their lives in these wars are monuments to a past that the working class of today should never again face. These lower-bedecked tombstones are stern warnings to the future of the city and rural masses of the ghastly lot that capitalism has ordained for them.

The workers, from the northern industrial centers, who fought to end chattel slavery, have died in vain. The hounding and lynching of Negroes and the ravages of the Ku Klux Klan in the south; the degrading working conditions and abject wage-slavery of the steel and textile workers of the north are a sad commentary on the tragic consequences of this struggle for the exploited masses. The ruthless imperialist policies pursued by our capitalist government since its victory in the Spanish war have been made possible only at the cost of the lives of thousands of workers and farmers who died on the battlefields in the tropics or who were killed by the poisoned beef sold the country by the profiteering packing trust. The present plan to turn Europe into a coolie colony of the American capitalists is the logical outcome of the workers and farmers being misled into fighting to make the world safe for fraudulent employing class democracy.

While the hired patrioteers and hundred per cent capitalist Americans are engaged in hypocritically lauding the workers and farmers of yesterday who gave their all that the present system might endure, the workingmen and poor farmers of today should resolve to make impossible the recurrence of such capitalist wars. Let us think of the graves of the thousands of workers who are killed annually while grinding out profits for the bosses, of the graves which are never decorated by the exploiters and their apologists. Let us think of the workingmen who have been slaughtered by the strikebreakers in and out of uniform, or of the hundreds of thousands of workers and farmers whose death was brought on prematurely by the misery and starvation visited upon them by the bosses who own our industry and the government. Above all let us resolve to end the vicious capitalist system that drives workers and farmers to murder their brothers of other countries, that shoots down striking laborers, that drives the farming masses into bankruptcy and ruin, and that permits the very class that murdered our comrades and brothers to desecrate their graves with the flowers of dishonest homage and hypocritical cant.

Woll Knocks Constitution

"We recognize that by our form of government . . . the difficulties of parliamentary action are almost inconceivable."

No, dear reader, these are not the words of a bold, bad Bolshevik, intent upon destroying the glorious constitution of the good U. S. A. It is Matthew Woll talking, the heir-apparent to the throne of Gompers, president of the Photo-Engravers Union, and staunch upholder of things-as-they-are. Even Woll, near-chief of the labor "red-baiters," acknowledges the existence of the dictatorship of the capitalist class in America. "The difficulties of parliamentary action" to accomplish working-class aims, says Woll, "are almost unconceivable."

But Woll draws the moral, not that this dictatorship of capital must be overthrown, but that Labor must submit unconditionally. Not even a mild Labor party can be allowed, according to Woll, because it would lead to something more drastic. "Those who are most zealous in promoting an independent labor party, while not avowedly communistic in character, nevertheless and ultimately in their mind, are for the destruction of the concept of private property and personal freedom as we know it in our industrial life. Principally for that reason the A. F. of L. has opposed a distinctive labor party . . . it would ultimately carry with it the adoption of the socialistic or communistic idea of society."

To question the unconditional rule of capitalism, leads to the adoption of the Communist program. True enough! But the fear of the red flag is not going to cause the labor movement to bow to strike-breaking governments, or the bankrupt farmers to kneel to mortgage-foreclosing sheriffs who are protecting the private property of the money-sharks by taking away the private property of the land tiller. And when the workers and farmers really learn the truth of Woll's statement that they must choose between ruthless, exploiting capitalism on the one hand, or communism on the other, at that time the red flag of Bolshevism will indeed begin to kiss the breezes of these great and glorious United States.

"Policy at Moscow adapts itself with dizzy speed to the needs of the moment," comments the New York Times, deploring what it calls the "reaction toward Communism" now taking place. It must make the capitalists envious of the Russian workers' leadership, when they have to contemplate the stupidity and confusion, the lack of all trace of clear-headed, decisive action, of the Coolidges, MacDonalds, Poincares, and others temporarily in charge of capitalist governments.

TRACHTENBERG IN CHICAGO AFTER 12,000 MILE TOUR AND AMUSING EPISODES WITH D. OF J. DICKS

He has just finished one of the most successful tours ever made by a Communist speaker in the United States, covering 12,000 miles and addressing 54 packed meetings.

One of his last meetings was in Minneapolis where capitalist newspapers assailed him for urging the building of a powerful Farmer-Labor party movement at the St. Paul convention—the St. Paul Dispatch alone lavishing a half column editorial to the attack.

Trachtenberg's tour led him thru the wide open spaces where liberty is scarce and thru the eastern mill towns where it doesn't exist at all, but he left behind him an inspiring knowledge of the Soviet system of great Russia and the rising tide of revolution in Germany which give American workers hope in their own struggle for freedom.

Best Meeting in Vancouver.

"My best meeting," said Trachtenberg, "wasn't in the United States at all, but in Vancouver, British Columbia. There, one of the big theaters was jammed to the doors. I had just come from Seattle where the timid leaders of the labor movement denied us the Labor Temple. It was inspiring to find such enthusiasm for the international revolutionary movement.

Big meetings were held in California. In Los Angeles the Industrial Workers of the World turned over their hall to the Trachtenberg meeting when the owners of the hall that had been engaged, got cold feet. A second successful meeting was held there in the Workers' Party hall.

D. of J. and Labor Fakers.

Trachtenberg found a splendid feeling for the revolutionary movement among rank and file union men in the City of the Angels tho trade union leaders there have been working hand in hand with the department of justice. Names of Trade Union Educational League members seized in the raid on the T. U. E. L. hall, have been turned over to the labor fakers by the department of justice for expulsion purposes.

Department of Justice agents had a habit of shadowing the Communist lecturer, but they did their shadowing very obviously. Trachtenberg says they are just as foolish as the fellows who worked for the czar back in the 1905 days when he was in the old Russian revolutionary movement.

Dick Lennon Is Very Crude.

In Erie, Pa., Trachtenberg ran into that very crude federal operative, Mr. Lennon, who was loaned by Burns to the Steel Trust during the Farrell sedition trials. Lennon, posing as an innocent visitor, asked the lecturer a string of questions, ending with the query, how the revolution was coming in the U. S. He seemed very much disappointed when Trachtenberg merely answered that no class gave up without a struggle. Later at a resturant, Lennon moved over to Trachtenberg, "Say, you were wrong about Daugherty. It was a frame-up against him."

Thru the Ohio steel towns private industrial spies kept tab of the speaker. They were spotted at all meetings by Workers Party members.

Trachtenberg is on his way home to New York.

Trachtenberg to Write Story.

In a special article in an early issue of the DAILY WORKER magazine section, Trachtenberg will tell his own story of the "What I Saw in Russia and Germany" tour.

NEW YORK CITY Party Activities

Industrial Organizers to Meet.

The left wing movement in the needle trades and the results of the needle trades conventions will be discussed at the next meeting of Local New York, Industrial Organizers, on Monday, June 2, 8 p. m., at 208 East 12th St., Room 2. The eastern district industrial organizer will lead the discussion.

In addition the regular report of industrial activities will be given.

All industrial organizers should attend without fail. The situation in the needle trades is of extreme importance for our party, and every active comrade should be acquainted with it.

Class in Public Speaking.

A class in practical public speaking is being organized in Local New York to prepare comrades for active participating in our open air speaking campaign.

FRENCH COMMUNISTS WAR ON HERRIOT AND BANKER DAWES' PLAN

PARIS, May 29.— The Communist party of France, thru its daily organ Humanite, opened a vigorous campaign against Herriot and the left bloc for its acceptance of the Dawes plan, which, in the words of the Communist paper, would "seal the counter-revolutionary holy alliance of the bourgeois parties."

The Communists refused to join the pre-election anti-Poincare left bloc, in which the Socialist party joined, but instead formed a united front with the peasants under the slogan of a workers' and peasants' government.

The Communist challenge caused considerable nervousness in the ranks of Herriot's suporters, whose margin of safety is very slim. "German Social-Democracy," declared Humanite, "the English Socialists and our left bloc receive with enthusiasm the Dawes plan to reorganize the trembling capitalist system and to choke the proletarian revolution. All workers should fight it to the bitter end, for the peace of the Dawes plan means a workers' famine and the peace of the tomb."

The government press accuses the Communists of being in the pay of the German government. This charge brings a loud laugh from the French workers. The French Nationalists claim Germany could now place one million soldiers in the field and that the radical government will prove easy picking for the Berlin militarists. Herriot will not be allowed to go to sleep on his job.

Irish Unemployed.

DUBLIN, May 29.— President Cosgrave, in a recent speech in the Dail, is quoted as saying that there were 80,000 unemployed persons in the Irish Free State, most of whom belonged to the agricultural labor class.

Wages Rise With Living Costs.

PARIS, May 29. — Leading Paris dressmakers have observed the agreement made with their employes last October, by raising the latter's wages in relativity to the increased cost of living.

CHICAGO FOOD STRIKERS HAVE N. Y. BACKING

Looks Like Defeat for Restaurant Bosses

The Central Executive Board of the Amalgamated Food Workers' Union of America, has gone on record to back up the Chicago branch of the union, morally and financially in conducting the strike of the Greek restaurant workers, Charles Kellar, Chicago district organizer, telegraphed from New York yesterday. Kellar will remain in New York for a few days, addressing local unions affiliated with the Amalgamated Food Workers, and other unions which are expected to give financial aid to the Chicago organization fight.

A general membership meeting of the Amalgamated Food Workers' Union was held at the Food Workers' Hall, 214 North State St., Wednesday night, at which it was decided to vigorously continue the organization of all the Greek restaurant workers in the city. Albert E. Stewart told the DAILY WORKER that new members are pouring rapidly into the union.

Thursday night's mass meeting at 722 Blue Island avenue, was well attended. Speakers in both English and Greek told the audience of the bad effects caused by the long hours under which the restaurant employes are forced to work.

Pittsburgh to See "Russia-Germany" on Monday Night

PITTSBURGH, Pa., May 29.—The great wonder film of "Russia and Germany—A Tale of Two Republics" will be shown here at the Nixon theatre, on Monday evening, June 2.

There are eight glorious reels of fine photography showing the coming revolution in Germany and the terrible conditions which are bringing it about, as well as the reconstruction work which is going on in Russia, now a country of peace.

As there will be only one performance in Pittsburgh, reserved tickets should be secured at one. They can be had at 722 Fifth avenue.

The picture is shown under the auspices of the American section of the International Workers' Aid, and all proceeds from the picture will be used for relief work among German workers and their families.

Y. W. L. Group Will Give Program in Concord, N. H.

By HILMA PAANANEN.

WEST CONCORD, N. H., May 29.—The Junior Group of West Concord, N. H., will hold an entertainment in Oak hall, West Concord, Saturday, May 31. The leading number of the program will be a speech given by Bloomfield of Worcester. There will also be poems, singing exercises and a show, "The School Struggle," all given by the Junior Group. Every one is invited to this entertainment.

On Sunday forenoon Bloomfield will attend the Junior Group meeting, and he will instruct them. All parents, in spite of nationality, are strongly urged to send their children, and all parents are invited to attend also this Junior Group meeting to find out what this group in reality is for.

Akron Calls City Conference for Farm-Labor Action

AKRON, Ohio, May 29.—A city conference for the election of delegates to the State Farmer-Labor convention to be held in Columbus, has been called for June 1, here, at the Enright Bldg., 313 S. High street, room 4, at 9:30 a. m. The city conference is called because many individual groups of workers and unions cannot afford to send representatives to the state convention on June 7 and 8.

The city call is signed by the Molders, Machinists, Bakers, and Rubber Workers' Unions, and by the Workers Party branch.

The state convention on June 7, and 8, will be held in Columbus Federation Hall, 50½ W. Gay St., Columbus.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, May 29.—Local Cleveland, Workers party, will hold a Decoration day picnic, May 30, at Russick's farm, end of West 25th St. car line. There will be games, prizes and dancing.

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY

After LaFollette delivered his "crushing blow" to the American Communists as the Chicago Tribune had it, J. A. Hopkins, his stenographer and the handy man who mails his monthly bulletin, the three remaining survivors of the Committee of 48, ostentatiously announced their withdrawal from the June 17 convention. A middle-aged lady in Wisconsin admitted that she had sinned grievously in having promised to go to St. Paul without first getting the advice of the Badger political Solomon. This is the net result to date of the grand assault on the mass convention of the American workers and farmers. All will be well, unless Gompers declares war on the "reds."

We have often heard of people being obliged to eat their own words, but if Bishop William Montgomery Brown has his way, he will make the bishops who are trying him for heresy, swallow the whale that swallowed Jonah. Brown claims it would be much easier for Jonah to have swallowed the whale. There are other fish stories listed by the rebel bishop that should prove as obnoxious to the theological gullet as the whale story. There is the virgin birth theory, for instance. We wish the bishop good luck and bet ten to nothing that he will be found guilty.

The sum of $16,000 is offered as a reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person or persons who took the life of the boy Franks, son of the millionaire pawnbroker. The Herald-Examiner and Chicago Tribune have put up ten thousand of it. Morons are suspected of being responsible for the crime, but any moron who would show such mental helplessness as the Chicago police have displayed since the outrage was committed, should be hanged on general principles. At first the crime was to be solved in the usual twenty-four hours, but after everybody who wore a pair of horn-rimmed spectacles, drove a gray automobile or used a portable typewriter, was arrested, the police department announced it was clueless, excepting a pair of glasses thru which it is looking for inspiration. The capitalist papers are offering rewards for the apprehension of the criminal in order to keep interest aroused in the murder and in circulation.

The House of Representatives passed a bill calling for an appropriation of $111,000,000, to repair battleships and build new cruisers. It is rumored in Washington that the noise created in the capitol over the Japanese exclusion law was fostered by the large navy boosters in order to create the necessary atmosphere for putting the bill across. There is considerable profit in building battleships and even tho they may not be used, before new inventions render them obsolete, they can be utilized in collecting Wall Street's bills in South America.

General Pershing has joined the New York police force. He was presented with the gold medallion and beribboned credential of the Traffic Association of the force. Pershing always appeared to us better fitted for a job on a busy street corner stopping traffic than digging his spurs into a desk. He has an excellent face for stopping a runaway horse.

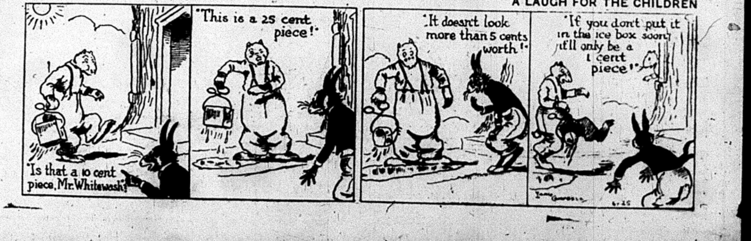
formal affiliations with the Republican party, the most infamous political machine ever in control of the American government."

The statement was drawn up at a conference attended by William A. Schaper, Farmer-Labor candidate for governor of Minnesota; Robert D. Cramer, editor of the Minneapolis Labor Review, the official organ of the Minneapolis Trades and Labor Assembly; William Mahoney, chairman of the committee on arrangements for "June 17" and editor of the Minnesota Labor Union Advocate, official organ of the Minnesota Federation of Labor and St. Paul Trades and Labor Assembly, and C. A. Hathaway, secretary of the committee on arrangements for "June 17."

Mahoney stated he believes Senator LaFollette's letter to Attorney General Ekern of Wisconsin was inspired by Basil Manley, Washington, who has opposed the St. Paul meeting from the start.

UNCLE WIGGLY'S TRICKS

A LAUGH FOR THE CHILDREN



"Is that a 10 cent piece, Mr. Whitewash?"
"This is a 25 cent piece!"
"It doesn't look more than 5 cents worth!"
"If you don't put it in the ice box soon it'll only be a 1 cent piece!"

REFLECTION ON BUSINESS SENTIMENTALITY

By ANALYST.

POPULAR belief has it that there is no sentiment in business. There is at any rate plenty of sentiment in business propaganda. It is pretty well all sentiment, of a peculiarly maudlin sort. Apparently the business mind, which has to be sober and realistic in dealing with the solid facts of industry and trade, functions in another way when it steps out of its own proper sphere. Otherwise its fantastic childishness in discussing such questions for example as the motives of Mr. Doheny in developing oil fields is inexplicable.

C. W. Barron, publisher of the Wall Street Journal and other financial papers, has a typical business mind. He is hard-headed and sober enough when analyzing economic conditions and profit prospects. Those are the qualities that have won for the Wall Street Journal "the richest circulation in the world." But when it comes to talking about business ethics, Barron is ludicrously and idiotically sentimental.

He has been writing articles painting Doheny not as a profiteer but as a philantropist. Doheny, according to Barron, is a pioneer of civilization. It was in that role that he went into Mexico. Some years ago Barron made a trip to Mexico with Doheny to see some of the latter's oil properties. When he asked Doheny what he might say in his papers about the situation, Doheny replied: "Nothing about me or my properties. We can take care of ourselves. But help the people of Mexico if you can."

Barron pictures Doheny, not as a profit monger yearning to exploit the material resources of Mexico, but as a humanitarian pining to "give the good people of Mexico right, justice, and freedom in a modern system of society." Barron says Doheny told him that to accomplish this end, he would "sink all his interest on this coast ten thousand feet deep in this sea."

After this effusion one is somewhat propared for Barron's remark that when he read the stenographic reports of Doheny's testimony at Washington in the oil steal investigation, he could hear "his rugged sincere voice in denial that his loan to a personal friend of 30 year's standing had anything to do with Doheny's leasing of the California naval reserve." Having swallowed a camel, Barron is not going to strain at a gnat. A man who can believe Doheny wants to raise the Mexican people more than he wants Mexican oil, can believe anything.

Of course Barron may not believe any of the nonsense he is writing about Doheny and his laudable motives. He may simply be trying to fool others. But that is not a necessary explanation. There is a cult, a religion of business, which glorifies all its processes. According to this religion, business is the architect of civilization, the source of all material and spiritual well being. It is the fountain of progress and the indispensable means of individual and social health. Barron is a high priest of this religion. It is conceivable that, like other priests, he accepts the prescribed articles of faith.

There has been nothing in the Wall Street Journal condemning the oil steals. The only crooks that the Wall Street Journal knows anything about are labor leaders who foment strikes, politicians who oppose reductions in income surtaxes, and agrarian agitators who tell the farmers that their troubles are due to something besides the normal working of economic law. Occasionally the paper mildly frowns on Democratic politicians who accept retainers from oil magnates. But bribing public officers to precure dishonest alienation of public resources does not apparently meet with its censure, provided the alienated properties get into the right hands. This attitude does not, however, prove conscious moral depravity. It may be only a result of excessive devotion to the business religion.

Consider what this devotion entails. It rests on the principle that private business is an absolute good. Consequently anything that promotes private business must be good, too. Getting valuable public resources into private hands has this effect. It is therefore not merely defensible but praiseworthy. One who thinks it a sin to keep oil and coal and timber where profits cannot be got out of them is not apt to boggle at any irregularities that may be necessary to correct the evil. The end justifies the means. A devotee of the religion of business need suffer no pangs of conscious for not reprebating the oil steals. They will probably yield a stream of profits that will wash away every stain.

Barron and his sort are probably not aware how ridiculous they look in trying to make business look like philanthropy. They have to be more or less under the influence of their own sentimentality in order to spread it with an air of conviction. Moreover, it has the advantage of fooling others as well as themselves, and that is an important consideration now that great numbers of people are geting suspicious about the truth of the theory that business is a beneficent force always and everywhere. There is consequently likely to be more rather than less illusioneering about business in the future. But it is worth while to puncture the pretty bubble that the aggrandisement of private business, however achieved, is necessarily a public benefit.

This myth springs from the assumption that business is synonymous with production. Secretary of State Hughes has stated the assumption in its classic form in giving his reasons for not recognizing Russia. Private production is not enthroned in Russia; therefore Russia is an economic vacuum, in which no production at all is possible. Since the facts refuted this naive assumption, Hughes has not repeated it; but it lies at the root of the whole religion of business. For the elevation of business into a religion, it must be represented as the sole efficient agency of production. It is a fact that production is the basis of civilization. If the Barrons and Hugheses and other apologists of capitalism are permitted unchallenged to make production synonymous with business, there is no escape from the conclusion that business interests should have the right of way over everything else.

Confounding business, which is merely one mode of production, with production itself, enables business leaders to claim as their work all the results of science, invention and labor. It is a highly ingenious trick that has never been sufficiently exposed. Under certain conditions, production is impossible except under the leadership of business men. But the world now has proof that under other conditions, production can be carried on without their help. This is the truth, now historically established, that is destined to shatter the whole fabric of business sentimentality. When it is more widely appreciated, attempts to show looters of the public domain in the guise of public benefactors will be less successful.

BURNS LOOTED D. OF J. FILES AND DESTROYED INCRIMINATING EVIDENCE BEFORE HE WAS BOUNCED

WASHINGTON, May 29.—Confidential Department of Justice data on alleged Mexican border gun-running plots were removed from the department's files by William J. Burns, former director of the bureau of investigation, Senator Wheeler, Montana, charged today before the senate Daugherty committee.

Wheeler said the committee had searched for several special delivery letters bearing on a "revolutionary plot," and was unable to locate them in department files.

The committee learned, he said, that the documents were removed from the main file room and placed in the confidential files in Burns' office but could trace them no further.

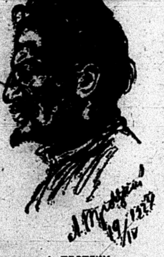
number of political and organizational steps to achieve this end.

An important step in this direction is the present membership-campaign, the so-called Lenin-Drive, carried on by the Russian Party. It was started immediately after Lenin's death, the party having decided to enroll 100,000 new members from among the factory workers.



L. TROTZKY

Up to April 22, new applications for membership have been made to the party to the number of 269,372. Of this number only 125.815 have been accepted thus far. All of those that have applied are factory workers actually engaged in the Russian industries.

Democratization of Party Organization

The process of democratizing the party organization, i. e., drawing the rank and file of the party into active participation in party and Soviet work, is to be continued. At the same time close attention will be paid to the petty-bourgeois influences that are making themselves felt in the party.

Comrade Molotov's thesis takes cognizance of the fact that certain elements in the party, petty-bourgeois in nature and psychology, are interpreting this tendency for party-democracy to mean that the proletarian dictatorship is to be changed or modified. The thesis proposes to wage a relentless struggle against these elements to the point of completely eliminating them from the party, if this should become necessary. Comrade Molotov's thesis will in all probability be adopted by the Congress.

Conclusion

Great are the responsibilities of our Russian Comrades, but just as great are their opportunities for revolutionary service. We are certain that the Russian Party will successfully solve its problems and will continue in the future, as they did in the past, to guide and promote the efforts of the revolutionary workers the world over to destroy the rule of capitalism and establish the International Soviet Republic.

The Mainspring of International Communism

By ALEXANDER BITTELMAN.

THE Russian Communist Party is at present in Convention assembled, in the city of Moscow, in the heart and stronghold of the proletarian world-revolution.

Let us turn for a while our minds to the East, to the place of courageous struggles and glorious conquests, to the spiritual center and fountainhead of revolutionary inspiration for the class-conscious workers the world over. Let's have a glance at the admirable workings of that powerful machine of working class energy and purposeful devotion which is known as the Russian Communist Party.

This is the 13th National Congress of the Party, but the first one to be held without Lenin. He will be no longer there to inspire, to direct and to instruct. The brave and proven leaders of the Russian Revolution, the men and women who set an example for the struggling proletariat in every country in the world,—this splendid body of working-class workers will for the first time in their glorious history assemble to transact the business of their party without the all-intrusting and magnetic presense of Nicolas Lenin.

But the business of the Russian Revolution will be carried on. The delegates to the 13th National Congress of the Russian Communist Party will continue the work started under the great leader with even more determination, loyalty and devotion. Their responsibilities as leaders of the working class will be felt by every one of them even more keenly than at the time when the immortal Lenin was still in their midst. Under the heavier strain of those new responsibilities, every member of the Russian Communist Party has grown bigger, wiser and stronger. The working class of Russia, and the revolutionary workers the world over, may rest assured, therefore, that the business of the Russian Party is in the right hands, and that in the future just as in the past our Russian comrades will continue to be the guiding spirit and driving force of the revolutionary movement all over the world.

Problems before the Russian Congress

Various problems are confronting at present the Russian party. Problems, economic, political, cultural, problems of internal party-structure as well as of the economic structure of the entire Soviet System, questions of internal policies of the Soviet government,—all these matters will come before the Congress of the Russian Communist Party. And they will be taken care of. We are certain, with only one thing in mind, and that is, the further development of the proletarian world revolution.

The Soviet Government and the Capitalist World

From public declarations so far made by the Comrades Zinoviev, Trotzky and other responsible leaders, it can be easily seen that no important changes will be made in the policies of the Soviet Government towards the governments of the capitalist countries.

The fundamentals of these policies can be summarized as follows: Russia desires peace. It needs it in the very interests of the ultimate success of the proletarian revolution in Russia. But at the same time Russia cannot forget for a single moment that it is still surrounded by a world of enemies. These enemies are constantly awake, always engaged in intriguing and plotting against the security of the Soviet power.

Poincare is gone, it is true, but French capitalism is still in the saddle. The new French government whether it be a Radical-Socialist coalition or a Briand-Poincare combination, will continue to fight the battles of French imperialism. Which means substantially, if not in detail and form, the old Poincare policy toward Soviet Russia. England is "ruled" by a Labor government which had recognized the Soviet government. This, too, is true. But it is also true that MacDonald's cabinet is just as much alive and awake to the vital interests of British Imperialism as were the cabinets of Lloyd George and Baldwin. Well, what of it? Nothing much but the following: that Soviet Russia is still exposed to the danger of capitalist attacks, military, economic and otherwise; that the question of protecting and defending the security of the Soviet State is still a problem of first importance; and that the present Congress of the Russian Communist Party will have to leave nothing undone to prepare the working masses of Russia for any possible capitalist aggression against the Soviet Republic.

There is yet another phase to this question of Russia's relations to the capitalist world, namely, the question of old debts, credits and concessions. On this score, too, there will hardly be any changes of policy. If anything, this present Congress will put some more steel, backbone and stiffness into the old policy, which was:

Lenin With a Group of Old Bolsheviks

We are not going to pay the debts of the Russian Czar and the Milukov-Kerensky outfit that followed him. Or, if we consider at all payment of these debts, we shall also demand restitution and compensation for all damage done to us by the counter-revolutionary bands of the Entente governments.

And, further, we need credits, and are willing to pay for them. We are willing, if need be, to pay a heavy price, but there is one thing we wouldn't do, namely, we will not surrender our control of the basic industries, banking and the foreign trade. This was the old policy, and it will most assuredly be continued.

Problems of Economic Reconstruction

There are three phases to these problems. One is the basic industries. For the last year mining, steel, textiles and railroads have shown continuous improvement. The number of workers employed in these industries has considerably increased, and so has the standard of production.

However, these industries have not yet reached the stage of self-sustenance. They have still got to be subsidized, which, of course, is not a new thing as far as Russia is concerned. Never as yet, not even under the old regime, could the heavy industries of Russia pay their way. The old Czarist government had been squeezing out of the peasants and workers millions upon millions of rubles to subsidize the "infant" capitalist industry.

The Soviet government inherited this problem from the old regime and is now attempting to solve it in accord with and in the interests of the new Soviet Economy, its main principle being at all costs to develop the heavy industries under the control and supervision of the Soviet Power.

Another phase of this economic problem is the attitude of the Soviet government to the developing private petty-bourgeois and capitalist economy. The "New Economic policy" (Nep), instituted in Russia some three years ago, resulted in the upbuilding of quite a strong and well developed system of private industry and commerce. To a large extent this system had benefited the Soviet power by enabling it to get hold of and utilize rich hidden resources of material wealth, and also by bringing into operation some medium of exchange for the products of the city and farm.

Now the situation has somewhat changed. While these new capitalists, merchants and speculators had been fulfilling their economic functions (at very great profits to themselves, this goes without saying), the Soviet Government was busily engaged in developing and strengthening the cooperative movement among the peasants and city workers. These cooperatives, which are intended to become an organic part of the Soviet State Economy as as distinguished from the private capitalist economy, have reached a stage, where they are in a position to successfully assume some of the functions of the "Nepmen". In competition between the cooperatives and the private merchants and speculators the former have been getting the best of it in quite a number of instances.

This fact raises before the Russian Communist Party the following problem: Inasmuch as the cooperatives are already competing successfully in many fields of industry and commerce with private business, is it not, therefore the duty of the Party at this time to throw the entire weight of its power behind the cooperatives and against private business?

It is a problem that has been occupying the minds of the Russian Party for quite some time, and will no doubt find its solution at this Congress. Judging by the opinions so far expressed, the Congress will most probably adopt the following policy. Private business will be permitted and even encouraged to continue only inasmuch as the cooperative system is not yet able to assume all the functions of this private business. On the other hand, the entire weight of the Soviet Power will be thrown behind all those endeavors of the cooperatives in which they can successfully compete with the efforts of the private merchants and speculators.

And yet a third phase of the same economic problem, which covers the special field of the peasant economy. This is also a political problem, more so than the other two phases, because it directly involves the class-relations between the rich and poor peasants.

On its economic side this question will be partly covered by a proper solution of the problem of the cooperatives. In a special thesis prepared by comrade Kalinin for the Congress and approved by the Central Executive Committee of the Russian Party, the following views are expressed. First, that the "New Economic Policy" resulted in the villages in a very effective class-differentiation between the rich, middle and poor peasant. Second, that the rich and middle peasant, by accumulating capital (in the shape of cattle, agricultural implements, etc), are reaching out after new and wider fields of exploitation. Third, that the poor peasants are turning in masses towards the cooperatives as a means of combating the village-exploiters. The economic problems of the village as seen by comrade Kalinin, is to utilize the Soviet power (its control of banking and foreign trade) to assist the cooperatives as against the "Kulak"—rich peasant.

Maintaining Unity Between Workers and Peasants

This is the political side of the peasant problem. As far as the theory of it is concerned, there will be nothing new in it at this Congress. The old bolshevist slogan of unity between workers and poor peasants ("Smitchka," as Lenin used to call it) still holds good. Only the present situation in the villages offers a better opportunity than before for the upbuilding of a strong Communist movement among the peasant youth and poor peasants, and consequently, the present Congress will have to see that this opportunity is properly utilized by the party.

Internal Party Structure

This is a very important problem, of course, but most of the work preparatory to the solution of it has been done by the last party Conference and by the Central Executive Committee of the Party. The thesis on the "Internal Party Structure" to be submitted to the Congress was prepared by Comrade Molotow and approved by the Central Committee. This thesis incorporates the position of Comrade Zinoviev and the old Central Committee.

A Party of Factory Workers

Our comrades in Russia want their party to be primarily and substantially a party of factory workers. Comrade Molotov's thesis proposes a

The Defeat of U. S. Agriculture

By O. PREEDIN

SINCE the beginning of this century agriculture of the United States was in a period of decline on world's market, except only the years of war when its domination was there secured by temporary violent exclusion of some of its important competitors. This decline is expressed in the foreign trade of foodstuffs.

UP to the year 1900 growth of exports of foodstuffs (crude and manufactured) from the United States was on the increase. "Value" of these exports grew from 266 million dollars in average in 1875-1879 to 519 million dollars in average in 1900-1904. During all this time exports of foodstuffs constituted about 44 per cent cent of total "values" of domestic exports.

CONTRARY movement was started here from the first year of this century. The exports of foodstuffs started now to decrease absolutely and still more relatively in the total "values" of exports. During the first 15 years of this century they showed the following changes:

Years	Average Exports of Foodstuffs in Millions of dollars	Per Cent of Values of Exported Foodstuffs in Total Exports
1900-1904	519	37.0
1905-1909	479	28.1
1910-1914	416	19.7

ON the side of foreign trade, in imports, foodstuffs did not show any noticable change during all the time of glorious victories of agriculture of the United on world's market: "Values of these imports were in yearly averages during 1880-1884 about 232 million dollars and during 1900-1904 about 234 million dollars. But since that time they show a rapid increase to $299,000,000 in average during 1905-1909 and farther to $397,000,000 in 1910-1914.

THE excess of exports over imports of foodstuffs decreased from $285,000,000 in 1905-1909 and farther to about $20,000,000 in average during 1905-1914.

THE above figures show that from beginning of this century the United States were transformed from exporters of food to importers of foodstuffs. Agriculture of the United States, which played an immense role on world's market, was loosing its positions not only on foreign markets but on the domestic market as well.

THANKS to exceptional conditions on the world's market of foodstuffs during the war years excess of exports of foodstuffs increased here again in average to about $780,000,000 a year, during 1915-1919. But as soon as these special conditions were removed, when the sky-high food prices came nearer to the earth, the excess of food exports was decreased here again. In 1923, it was only about $120,000,000. That is still considerably higher than it was immediately before the war. But it is in further decrease and the pre-war level (about $20,000,000) is not the natural limit for this downfall.

IN the light of the pre-war developments on food markets, it is clear that war-time disturbances did not cause the fundamental difficulties of U. S. agriculture on the world market. What was "disturbed" in this respect is, not the growth, but the frustration. If there must be "adjustments" to the "pre-war standing" than this "adjustment" can lead not to improvements, to further decrease of the present "standing" of United States agriculture on the world's market.

PURCHASING power of masses of people in many industrial countries of Europe had decreased and the post-war market of foodstuffs has shrunk. In the case of the people of England, Germany, France and other food-importing countries could have sufficient means to satisfy their needs of food, then there would be instead of surplus, a great shortage of food. Competition on markets of foodstuffs could appear then in present forms only after many years of increased agricultural production. But we have to deal not with possibilities under unexisting circumstances, but with realities of present society. This reality shows fierce competition on every market of agricultural products. In this competition food products of U. S. agriculture are failing to find purchasers not only to the extent of decrease of purchasing power of masses of people here and in other countries, but from the decreased markets, bigger parts than before are taken by agricultural products of other countries.

TO foreign wheat markets, United States supplied from July, 1922, to January, 1923, about 162,000,000 million bushels, but from July, 1923, to January, 1924, only 111,000,000 million bushels. But during this same time when wheat exports from United States decreased by over 50,000,000 bushels, Canada increased wheat exports by over 20,000,000 bushels, British India and Australia more than doubled their exports. Wheat from Russia appeared on many European markets. On the domestic market of United States, disregarding high import tariff duties and great surplus of this product, imports of wheat increased during this period by about three million bushels.

THESE facts show that agriculture of United States appears at present in a similar position as was agriculture in European countries—in England, France, Germany—about 50 to 60 years ago when American and Russian competition commenced there widespread permanent agricultural crisis. Present agricultural crisis in United States appears similar to that European crisis not only in its expressions on market, but even in its reflections on mental processes of the "scientists." In Europe, some 50 to 60 years ago the "theory" of Malthus that increase of population is limited by means of existence, was suddenly taken out from its wide circulation and substituted by an "Agrarierjammer," which tried to convince that not only agriculture, but all the society in Europe must go down if the immense supplies of food will not be kept away from the people by violent means. This same at present here "farsighted" discussions about "natural limits of food supplies" are silenced by cries for limitation of agricultural production, restrictions of imports, subsidies for exports.

THE economic expressions of agricultural crisis in Europe, Fr. Engels summarized as follows:

"A part of the land in Europe came definitely out of competition in culture of crops, rents were in decrease all over—falling price and falling productivity of additional investments of capital was a rule for Europe." ("Das Kapital". K. Marx. III vol. II part, page 260.)

This is true for the present crisis of agriculture of the United States too, but only for the years after the war-time boom.

DURING the first 15 years of the decline of U. S. agriculture on the world's market some very essential features of the European crisis were absent here. Instead of depressive prices we had here just the contrary. This was a time of growing prices of agricultural products and of growing costs of living. The best blessings Europe had from her agricultural crisis were the decreased land rents and subsequent absolute and relative decrease of economic power and influence of the most reactionary class of landowners. Here was nothing of that kind: "land values" were rising here at tremendous speed.

THE indexes of "land values," as published by the U. S. Department of Agriculture ("Yearbook 1920," page 825), show that from 1899 to 1914 these "values" increased 2½ times (147 per cent).

The start of agricultural crisis in the United States had specific forms and expressions. Unusual growth of "land values" is the most characteristic and fundamental economic factor in the troubles during these years.

FINAL disappearance of suitable "free lands" about the end of last century made the rapid rise of "land values" possible. But this fact alone does not explain anything about dynamical forces which brought this rise into existence.

WE CAN find many parallels in history when similar sudden increases of "land values" occurred. In every country where that happened in large extent there was a class of large landowners whose united efforts on the base of their centralized land monopoly, as in Ireland from about 1940 to 1869, were necessary for creation of such rise.

BIG landholders were operating here, too. Once (in 1900) the United States census bureau made an investigation about ownership of all tenant farms. This investigation disclosed that "8.1 per cent of the owners of rented farms have holdings representing 43.8 per cent of the aggregate value of such land, thus showing a large relative concentration not only of values, but also of acreage in the hands of comparatively few individuals." ("Twelfth Census of U. S. 1900. Agriculture." Vol. V. Page XCIII.)

IT is very interesting to note from the complicated table on page XCII of this report with classification of owners according to the "value" of their holdings that the "value" of land per unit increased with the increase of the size of holdings. The group of smallest landowners had the "cheapest" lands but the biggest landowners had the "most expensive" lands; the first (owners of holdings worth $1,000 and less) had 13.5 per cent of acreage but only 4.4 per cent of total "value" of rented farms; the last group (owners of holdings worth $25,000 and over) had 13.1 per cent of acreage but 17.4 per cent of total "value" of rented farms.

IS this explainable by differences in soil, situation of farms or other "natural" causes? Here or there these causes may contribute something to the above differences, but the extent of centralization of holdings, the monopoly of land over whole districts is the main and may be the only cause in this increase of "value" of large holdings over that of small holdings. *

By the following census of 1910 and 1920 investigation of ownership of tenant farms was not continued or if it was continued the results were not published, as that is often done by every United States government bureau with information which can disclose too much "business secrets" of ruling exploiters. The enumerators of the census of 1910 and of 1920 were instructed to collect all material needed for investigation of ownership of rented farms in this same manner as that was done by the enumerators of the census of 1900. Therefore, withholding of this information for certain reasons is rather susceptable than entire neglect of this too interesting question.)

THIS proves that to the extent of their power the big landholders contributed to the increase of land "values." The creation and growth of land rent means here introduction of new divisions of produced surplus values.

HOW long existed here free access to land so long was there was possible such division of created values in agriculture, was described by K. Marx as follows:

"Under such circumstances (where ownership of land can not resist application of capital in agriculture) it is possible for a long time—except the lands in heavy populated districts, where the situation gives them a monopoly,—that surplus-value produced by farmers over acreage profits is not realized in the price of their products but that they (the farmers) must divide it with their brethren capitalists." ("Theorien liber den Mehrwert." II Vol. I part, Page 200.)

EXISTANCE of "surplus-value over average profits" was and still is in some semi-colonial countries the economic basis for large profitable operations of "parasitic speculative capital" and of "monopolies of the transportation system" which are marked by the instructions on the agrarian question of the Fourth Congress of C. I. as particular features in "the Anglo-Saxon countries." The limits in which this kind of exploitation does not disturb capitalistic development of agriculture and serves only for division of surplus-values among brethren capitalists, are given by the quantities of "surplus-value over average profits" produced in agriculture.

BUT these "surplus-values are available for such kind of exploitation only so long as they are not separated and exempted by land holders from the division among all the "brethren capitalists" in the form of landrent. Absolute land rent is nothing else but only this same "surplus-value over average profits." When and ownership is in fact established and can give sufficient resistance to the application of capital then landholders are able to take this surplus-value as land rent.

IN such case the "surplus-value over average profits" obligatory must be realized in the "farm prices" of agricultural products.

THE CARDINAL ARRIVES

With his red hat on his head
And his red cape outspread,
The Cardinal, the Cardinal comes home.
Stars and stripes mingle with the papal white and yellow;
The Cardinal rides before and the city fathers follow;
Hear the cannon and the bells; hear the bands blare and bellow:
"The Cardinal is back, back from Rome."

The banker-kings need, now the crowned kings are falling,
Some other hocus-pocus to hold the people awed;
For neither they themselves nor their puppet politicians
Have even fake credentials of authority from God.

They see the red flag standing firmer
And they hear the widening murmur
Against their rule over-seas and at home.
So a "prince of the church" is escorted by "old glory,"
And what the bells and the bands really tell is the story
Of a pact between the banker-kings and Rome.

"For a red hat and cape—they are very different things
From a red, red flag," say the crafty banker-kings.
"While the people bow and scrape, we will hide behind that cape,
And grind them here and crush them there and bring the bacon home.
Boost for the business-men's red international!
Come on now, you Americans,—Three cheers for Rome."

The Position of the Parties in England

munist Party. Right into the autumn of 1923 it was undergoing structural transformation, making a first attempt to apply the Third Congress decisions of the Comintern. During the whole of this period it hardly managed to hold its own members. New members joined the Party but old ones left as quickly. The whole of this activity has been in the midst of tremendous depression in the ranks of the working class. Still further changes were made as a result of the conference of the party executive with the Comintern E. C. in the middle of last year. It was not until the beginning of 1924 that it was possible for the developments then agreed upon to get moving. The main lines agreed upon were sound but it will take time for them to show the results we are after.

During the last eighteen months the party has concentrated so much on organization and the development of the circulation of the party paper, tried so hard to transform itself in terms of a paper scheme that the membership became tired. It needed new inspiration and enthusiasm. It was complained that the Executive was out of contact with the members and there was good grounds for the complaint. There had been no party conference for months, more than a year. It had been put off time and again. Finally we held a conference. Snags were removed. Preparations made for a Party Congress were afoot. The whole political situation changed and brought new vitality in the fight. And the Party has begun to grow.

But we have still to face the characteristic failing of the British movement as a whole. We have got to get past the stage of the purely propagandist party, conducting general propaganda, and become a political party of struggle. For this we need also a toning up of the quality of the party, the development of its theoretical equipment, in order to be able to diagnose correctly the significance of the political events that are unfolding and to deal with them concretely and with revolutionary purpose. All this will take time and require patience and persistence. But one thing is certain: That the party was never in a better condition than it is today, and it was never faced with greater opportunities for development.

The position of the parties is such that the two capitalist parties, the Liberals and the Tories, are still in turmoil and unable to take decisive action, and the Labor Party has begun to reveal to the masses of the workers concretely the meaning of "gradualism," while the Communist Party has become the one center to which the workers can turn as their eyes are opened to the great illusion.

The Position of the Parties in England

By J. T. MURPHY.

AFTER the defeat of the Baldwin government the stock of the Conservative party went very low. It did not improve matters for itself when it retained office and brought in a window dressing program consisting of items culled from the programs of the Liberals and the Labor party. All that it succeeded in doing was making clear to everybody that, apart from its protectionist policy, there was little to distinguish it from the National Liberals of the Lloyd George group. Especially was this emphasized when MacDonald proposed, on its one remaining plank of imperial preference, to leave all parties free to vote without the organized pressure of the party whips. There was nothing left for the Conservative party to do but to become the anti-Socialist propagandist body in the defense of property interests and to work for the discrediting of the Labor administration as a means of gathering the discontents of the Liberals who were class conscious and reorganize its forces pending an opportunity to take once again the lead on some patriotic issue.

During the first three months of Labor in the government it has failed to make much progress with its anti-Socialist propaganda, an it is a long way from having done much in the way of party reorganization. It has appointed a new organizer, who may have a good reputation for organising tramways and tube railways, but he has not yet made up for the want of a program sufficiently distinctive to make the party a real inspiring force even amongst the defenders of capitalism. Its anti-Socialist propaganda has done it more harm than good, because it is so perfectly obvious that the Labor government is indistinguishable from a Liberal government except for the fact that there are men in its ranks who have been drawn from the working class. That, as a matter of fact, adds to the popular favor. It is looked upon as more democratic, more broadly representative than if the Liberal party had formed the government. The attacks upon the Labor government are strengthening it. The class hatred of the ardent members of the Conservative party has made them indiscreet and caused them to forget the people with whom they are dealing. The masses of this country are far from being as politically alive as the masses on the continent. The effect of the attacks only rouses the cry, "Why, hang it all, they haven't had a chance"; "Give them fair play"; "You are jealous because you are not in office." But no discussion of politics would follow from such remarks. No attempt would be made to understand the whys and wherefores of attacks or defense. It would simply be a question of giving "fair play" to the new lot.

This attitude towards politics is difficult for Europeans to understand. I will illustrate it still further in order to show the tremendous psychological factors against which especially a revolutionary party has to work, and how cleverly the capitalist class for the best part of a century have supplemented their efforts to keep the workers out of politics by developing the sports.

I remember well the scene at a Labor party conference in London when Mr. Henderson introduced Kerensky and refused a hearing to Litvinoff. He received a tremendous ovation. Had the platform been given to Litvinoff instead of Kerensky, he would have received the same ovation and welcome. It would not matter about the contrast in the politics of the two individuals. They were visitors and should be treated accordingly, given fair play to express themselves, a good cheer as a sign of good sportsmanship and permitted to depart. If the leaders thought it advisable to move a resolution in favor of the speech delivered, it would be passed and probably forgotten by all except the very small minority interested for or against it. It is this sentiment which both the Tories and the Liberals have roused against themselves and which is helping the Labor party to increase its influence enormously.

The reactions from this development are growing steadily. The Tory party is driven to a policy of exaggerating the potentialities of the Labor party, and is busy raising the scare of Communism. And first one and then another of the Liberal party pass into its ranks, fearful of the drift of events. They see in the growing influence of the Labor party an awakening of the working class, which they dread. But nothing drastic may be expected from the Tory party as yet. The right wing is fostering its Fascisti movement, altho it has not discovered its Mussolini. The Morning Post has definitely become the organ of this section, but Baldwin has not discovered his successor, either, and so the moment is not ripe for a bold, aggressive lead from the Tories. It has to re-gather its forceful leaders.

It is for this reason that so much attention is being given to Winston Churchill. In spirit and purpose, in class consciousness and hatred of the working class movement, he is as intense as the Duke of Northumberland and his Fascisti battalions. But he is a more astute politician and more able in every way. He knows that the time is not yet for the scrapping of constitutionalism on behalf of the propertied interests. Constitutionalism is a big slogan for the rally of forces, and he has yet to get clear of the Liberal camp. He has accordingly taken up the same cries as the Tories, whilst playing with the language of the Liberals. The Tory party is playing up to him. In the recent election more than a hundred Here the leading party of the Labor Tory M. P.'s supported his campaign in Westminister, and now there is a proposal to find him a "safe" Tory seat in Liverpool. He can see quite clearly that the Labor party leaders have stolen all the thunder of the Liberal party and that he must find a new home.

The Liberal party is in a bad way, and Mr. Lloyd George sees this. So manifest is it that the Labor party has become the custodian of Liberalism that he is alternately pleading for an open Lib-Lab coalition and trouncing the Labor government for its departure from Socialist associations. He says that the Labor government has been rude to the Liberal party—in fact, insulting. It exists by virtue of the act of the Liberal party, and yet is attacking the Liberal party in the constituencies when the defeat of the Liberal candidate would mean only the substitution of another person and not another policy.

In his Llandudno speech this week he went frantic about the danger of losing the Liberal party. Time and again since the Labor government was established the Liberal party has been divided in its voting on the cruiser question, the Poplar question, on housing, and so on. It has really not functioned as a party. And frequently the smallest portion of the party has been with Lloyd George. He pleads then for the Liberal party to rally its forces as a party. Liberalism, he declares, as the representative of the middle classes, has saved Britain time and again from revolution. He says he cannot work with the Tories. The differences are so acute that it was made obvious to him in his experience with the coalition government that they were fundamental and prevented any rallying to the Tory party.

But he has forgotten, as the Liberal press seems also to forget, that it is the fact of the Labor government being a Liberal government, and its measures essentially the measures of the Liberal party, that, in order to disinguish itself and justify its existence, it has to vote and speak against Liberalism. The Liberal party is thus in process of dissolution, and every member of it is weighing his personal position. If he votes against Liberalism, how is he to justify his action to the electorate, especially when the opposition candidate comes forward with the same proposals which previously got him elected, with the additional advantage that he belongs to the party that is putting them into practice and has a wider popular appeal? Until the Labor party has gone thru a process of dividing its elements along class lines there is no rallying ground for the Liberal party. Its prospects become less and less, with the possibility of a slice of it going into the Labor party, as well as others moving over to Churchill and the Tory party.

At this time the Labor party is the one party among those defending the interests of capitalism that is growing in strength and influence. Of that there is not the slightest doubt. It is attracting the middle classes, who have had their minds set at rest so far as dangerous Socialist politics are concerned. MacDonald has given them every assurance that they have nothing to fear. Socialism is a growth, a spirit, an attitude of mind, any old damn thing that will give you comfort when you are tired, inspire you when you are sad and increase your capacity for saying sentimental, sloppy things that don't mean anything. You can take part in an armament race and talk of brotherly love. You can . . . . but there is no need to go on. The middle classes are feeling that the Labor Government is a jolly good thing.

The Labor Government is awakening a great interest in the working class. The abolition of the "gap" in unemployment pay and the other little items which I have mentioned previously have meant much to them. The handling of the industrial disputes and the settlements which have resulted in favor of the workers have given encouragement to the workers to forge ahead with their demands. The Labor Government has escaped from the bad situations it was developing, and any discontent which arose concerning its actions in the disputes has been laid to the account of the other parties, being in the majority in the Parliament. The blacklegging incidents have not been on sufficiently large a scale to create a general outcry. The traditional course of industrial disputes has accordingly been maintained without the masses seeing thru the policy that was being pursued by the Labor leaders. Prompt inquiries, spectacular debates, and then "practical compromse" and "fair play" have all done their share in giving a popular tone to the Labor Government in wide circles of the workers.

But there is a section which has had much cause for discontent and that is the section of the workers who have put all their hopes into the workers' movement. Those who have been active in the political party work are not so sure. They have grave misgivings that everything is not well. So many things have happened that they did not expect to happen. They feel discontented but are puzzled about this minority position and explain things away to themselves and others on the grounds of "giving the government a chance" and "not expecting them to do the same things as they would if they had a majority." But the discontent is there. Yet there is a strong loyalty. The trouble is that the whole movement is devoid of theoretical training and unable to explain its experiences even to itself.

The I. L. P. Conference at York this week shows the confusion in excelsis. Here the leading party of the Labor movement meets in conference. It isn't sure whether it is still a propaganda party or a party responsible for the political direction of the government. It has six cabinet ministers and 126 members of Parliament. The Premier is its leader. He feels no responsibility to the Party for the policy of the government. He gives a speech to the conference as if he were a fraternal guest and tells the conference that the government is doing its best, even goes to the extent of telling them to forget their socialist name, he prefers Labor in order to suppress all class distinctions. He gives them a lecture on moral uplift, on the spirit in which things have to be done, warns them against extremism, passes a joke or two, and is gone. There is great cheering, much patting on the back. There is no examination of policy, no question as to the significance of the actions of the Labor Government in relation to the fate of the working class, but a complete approval of the Labor Government and an adaptation of the Party to the demands of the government. Only once or twice was the questioning voice raised—on pacifism and on the experts' report. The propagandist section wanted to stand for pure pacifism and immediately a leader arose and said that they must remember that they are no longer simply a propaganda body but that what they said today they had tomorrow to stand for in the Parliament. That came as a shock. And immediately the I. L. P., built upon quaker money, adjusted its conscience to the political requirements of the government and surrendered its old position. On the question of the experts' report it was the same. The report was never analyzed. To significance of its terms in relation to the working class was never mentioned. The old resolutions of the I. L. P. against reparations and indemnities were swept on one side. The question was explained that if this report was accepted there was chance of "securing a settlment" in Europe. If it was not accepted then things continued as they are. The action of the government was approved. Altho prominent men like Maxton who had been taking a distinctly different attitude in the Parliament to that adopted by MacDonald, were present not one of them led any criticism of the policy pursued or challenged MacDonald to face the music on any issue. Whatever the feelings of the so-called left wing of the I. L. P., its capacity for courageously and critically subjecting the policy of their party to a theoretical examination and challenging MacDonald on the floor of their own conference was gravely lacking. Indeed, to see the general ineptitude of the discontented in the presence of MacDonald is to get a forceful reminder that we are a long way from the clear division of forces in the Labor Party in terms of those who are prepared to pursue a class war and those who have surrendered to Liberalism, MacDonald has nothing to fear within the ranks of the Parliamentary Labor Party so far as any class war elements are concerned. There is plenty of blether but little capacity for raising an alternative leadership. MacDonald knew what he was doing when he drew Wheatley into his camp. He took the sting out of his wasp.

The only challenging force within the ranks of the working class, in short the only representative body of working class interests, is the small Communist Party. Every other party is hopelessly compromised as the defender of capitalism. Since the advent of the Labor government it has gained considerably in influence and made some progress in numbers. It has gained thru its activities in the strikes more than from its criticism of the government. It wielded considerable influence in the railway strike, the dock strike, the tramway and bus strike and got a tremendous advertisement in the Southampton and Wembley strikes altho there were only two Communists in Wembley and not even a party group at Southampton. Its criticisms of the Labor Government have been growing stronger week by week. On special issues such as in the armament debates, the air estimates and Indian repressions, it has come out vigorously. But the effect of these must not be wrongly estimated. It must not be thought that as soon as the voice of criticism is raised there is an automatic leaning toward the Communist Party. The value of the criticism will come later when experience has played its part. At the moment only a few are receptive. The majority resent criticism and regard it as "unfair." Nevertheless, it is slowly making itself felt and the confidence that is being created by the loyalty to the men taking part in strikes is getting the party a bigger hearing than ever before.

The conditions for the development of the party are only now developing on a large scale, And the party itself has a considerable distance to go before it is capable of taking advantage of all the opportunities that surround it. At the Second Congress of the Comintern there was no Communist Party. At the Battersea Conference in 1922 began the first attempt to get away from old socialist party forms and transform the party into a Com-

White Terror In Saxony

By Ehrenfried Wagner

AFTER the overthrow of the Socialist government in Saxony owing to the treachery and cowardice of the left social-democrats, a reign of white terror set in, in the country. Saxony is flooded with Reichswehr troops who have introduced a regime of terror in the towns and villages. Socialist and Communist workers are maltreated in the most abominable fashion.

Sanguinary conflicts took place in some parts of the country already at the entry of the Reichswehr troops. In PIRNA and in MEISSEN, towns with a predominantly working class population, the first casualties took place. In FREIBEURG, a mining town in the Erzgebirge, 32 workers were shot by the whites, in GROSSENHAIN, an agrarian city, machine guns were used against the workers with the result that 15 persons were seriously wounded. In LIMBACH and in CHEMNITZ, the renowned machine manufacturing town, one worker was killed and five were wounded. Up-to-date 37 workers have been shot thruout Saxony by the Reichswehr and over 100 of more or less seriously wounded persons lie in hospitals.

At present we will only publish some extracts from the voluminous material received by the Central Committee of the INTERNATIONAL RED AID on the white terror in Saxony. Wherever the white soldateska had occupied a village or a town, all comrades, who had become prominent in some way or other as working class leaders, were immediately arrested. The greatest animosity was of course displayed towards the leaders and members of the proletarian hundreds—the nuclei of the German Red Army. In OEDERAN, which is also a manufacturing town, 30 workers were arrested in one night by the Reichswehr, 16 of whom were removed to an unknown destination. All arrests were carried out without a legal warrant. A domiciliary search took place in the house of a hundred's leader. During this search most of the furniture was smashed with the butt ends of the rifles. The wife and daughters of the missing man were insulted in a most revoting manner. The social-democratic deputy LUDWIG was assaulted by a soldier with the butt end of the rifle. When he protested against such treatment, he was struck in the face until he broke down covered with blood. A non-party worker was also arrested in the night, and for two hours he was by continual blows compelled to go around and around with a wheel-barrow and sing "Heil Dir im Siegerkranz" (the monarchist National Anthem). When he refused to do this he was beaten (being stripped to the waist) with sword blades and rubber sticks until he fainted.

SIMILAR terrorist acts have been reported from many other districts in Saxony. In GABLENZ the village schoolmaster was compelled to stand all night with his hands raised above his head because he had practised shooting with the children in school. The white beasts have done their worst among the miners of the Erzgebirge. In LENGEFELD a large number of non-party workers were struck on the back of their heads until blood flowed from nose and mouth. Trade Union officials who had advocated a protest strike were packed into carts by the soldiery and were taken to an unknown destination. When some workers attempted to rescue one of these prisoners, the soldiers shot indiscriminately into the crowd. Officers make use of footpaths for riding and whoever does not make room for them is trampled down by their horses. In MUELAU an armored car drew up before the building of the communal council. Machine guns were made ready to fire, and all the social-democratic and Communist communal representatives were arrested.

THE greatest horrors were perpetrated by the whites in the small working class town of LIMBACH. When the troops entered this town all the workers went on strike, and thousands of them were crowding the streets and town squares. The Reichswehr drove their armoured cars like mad thru the crowds of excited workers. Mass arrests were made as a matter of course. The arrested were brutally maltreated. Almost every other prisoner was stretched on a table, he was gagged with a handkerchief, a soldier held his head while another held his feet and he was belabored with riding whips on his naked bottom. After the flogging they were made to perform genuflexion until the wales burst. One trade union official was tied hand and foot, he was made to kneel down and was flogged every two hours. These punitive commandoes, as they called themselves, consisted of monarchist officers, students and manufacturers' sons. Here too the fury of the persecutors was left loose against Party and trade union officials, as well as against intellectuals who had sided with the workers. Members of the bourgeoisie acted as informers and encouraged by special gifts the soldiers of the Reichswehr to be as beastly and brutal as possible. Whenever the punitive commandoes failed to arrest the accused persons, they arrested their wives. They endeavored to extort confessions from the wives of our comrades using disgusting immoral means. But our women comrades proved to be true revolutionaries, and even one of the white officers was compelled to say: "I have already come across iron men, but today I have seen for the first time iron women." In CHEMNITZ, the red capital of the workers, the troops arrived in full force. The premises of the "Arbeiterzeitung" were immediately occupied. Editors and party officials were arrested and insulted in the most abominable fashion. Windows had to be closed when the troops paraded the streets. Shots were fired into open windows. Shots were also fired into any assemblies in the streets. Working-class quarters were surrounded by troops and domiciliary searches and mass arrests took place. If the person wanted was not in his dwelling, they arrested whoever was on the premises. On premises where the workers are in the habit of holding meetings all the visitors were also arrested. In effecting arrests the Reichswehr 'gnored, of course, deputies' immunity. A committee which had met to discuss the question of assistance to prisoners was also arrested.

IN Saxony the prisons are full to overflowing. The wives and children of the imprisoned comrades are in a terrible plight. The widows and orphans of those who fell in the street fights are absolutely destitute. The Saxon workers are mostly unable to give any assistance to the victims of the recent struggles, as they themselves are in dire straits because of the terror exercised by troops and factory owners. Therefore we must make an urgent appeal to the solidarity of all workers to come to the assistance of the numerous victims of the street fights.

Masters Are Stifling Their Slaves

By BENJAMIN P. CHASS

THE iron and steel magnates of Farrel, Pennsylvania, shall not stifle the militant workers! The capitalists shall not succeed in imprisoning the class-conscious workers who dare to fight for the better day!

Down thru the ages the powers that were tried to put down the revolt of the slaves. And today the same is true of the powerful group of capitalists who hold sway over the millions of down-trodden workers. But more and more the workers are becoming conscious of their class; more and more join the revolt for the better day that is beginning to dawn upon the horizon for the workers and farmers of America.

And because of this fact, the rulers adopt special laws in order to meet this conscious uprising of the workers. It was just for this reason that the infamous Pennsylvania Sedition Law was hurried thru the State Legislature and placed upon the statue books. So today if a militant worker dares to uphold his class, he is at once caught in this vicious trap, called the Sedition Law. This law was enacted but for one purpose—to stifle and imprison the leaders of the militant working class. At present in the State there are 21 under indictment charged with the violation of this law. A few are at present serving long prison sentences. All these victims are members of the Workers Party; no other persons have ever been convicted under this act, except militant workers, and this reactionary law was enacted for this very purpose. And it might be said right here and now that if the workers do not join together to have this infamous law repealed, America will become a Czarist Russia. Russia of tyrannical despotism, sent her revolters to Siberia; America, the land of sham and hypocrisy, will deport her militant leaders to the Philippines or Haiti, or some other American imperialistic colony.

LAST May Day wholesale raids were made upon the Workers Party members in Pittsburgh, the stronghold of the Despot, Gary, and the crooked politician, Mellon, Secretary of the Treasury. Up until the present day, there are nine men indicted under this same vicious law, but former District Attorney Myer dare not bring the cases up for the simple reason that the unions and the liverty loving citizens of Pittsburgh have organized a powerful Defense Council. It is power that the workers must have, for without power the workers are mere crawling slaves, but with power they are the revolting proletariat. So in Pittsburgh they dare not attempt to convict the indicted workers. Hence the start has been made in the small steel town of Farrell. If successful here, Pittsburgh will be the next Hell.

Attorney Myer who was in charge of the Pittsburgh cases, recently resigned his position as district attorney to take care of his private affairs, but, as we see, he is never too busy to help railroad a few class-conscious workers. Myer is one those unconscious tin-soldiered 100 per cent Americans, and a typical ignorant, bigoted, narrow-minded American at that! When told that America was founded by revolution, he exclaimed that the American Revolution was not a revolution, but a REVOLT! And he goes on to say that it is a crime to advocate revolution. Surely he is not ignorant of the fact that the sixteenth president of the United States, Abraham Lincoln, in his first inaugural address, March 4, 1861, said: "The country with its institutions belongs to the people who inhabit it. Whenever they shall grow weary of the existing government, they can exercise their constitutional right of amending it, or their revolutionary right to overthrow or dismember it." If the six men and six women who make up the jury would have read this declaration of Lincoln, the militant workers of Farrell, whom the steel magnates of Pennsylvania are bent upon railroading to jail, would go scot free to continue their work for the emancipation of the workers and farmers.

The workers have a constitutional right to praise and indorse the government of Soviet Russia, and it is their right, also, to express their hope for a workers' and farmers' government in America. The members of the Workers Party have the same right to urge the workers to revolt and set up a workers' and farmers' government as President Coolidge has the right to urge the people to vote for him. The workers have as much right to hand out propaganda advocating their cause, as the capitalists have of advertising their goods that the workers produce, but do not own.

But the workers are awakening to their position in society. Daily they are getting more class conscious of their place in present capitalist controlled society. Daily their organizations are growing stronger and more powerful. And in union there is strength! June 17 they shall meet to nominate their candidates who will represent the workers and farmers, not the master capitalists.

WORKERS of Farrel! Have courage! The workers and farmers of the mines, mills, factories, and farms are with you. The workers shall be behind you in this daring fight. The workers' moral and financial support are yours. Workers of Farrel! Do not go back one step in your fight for the entire working class. You are loyal to your class.

Workers of Farrel, you who are in the forefront, and who are therefore being grilled in court by your masters' tools, keep up your vim and courage! Others before you have faced the very same grim battle. This has always been the fate of the leaders of a just cause. And what cause is more just than the fight for the emancipation of he workers and farmers? What cause is more just than to work for a workers' and farmers' government? Workers of Farrel, have courage! Face the court bravely; speak out for your class. The court room is filled with workers and farmers who are anxious for your message. Here is your opportunity. Face the future with a determined class conscious attitude, whatever the consequences may be, for the future shall see America governed by the workers and farmers and for their interests.

The Meaning of Experts' Report

By E. VARGA

AFTER a work of more than three months the Commission of Experts handed over its report to the Reparations Commission on April 9. This report, along with its supplements, makes a rather large pamphlet and space does not permit of our fully setting forth its contents. We assume that the essential contents are known to the reader from the columns of the daily press and we shall only give prominence to the principal features of the report.

Payment of Reparations Only When The Exchange is Stable.

In the past years the Reparations Commission demanded payment, both in foreign currencies and in goods, without any regard to the question whether the German rate of exchange could endure such a burden. Contrary to this the Expert Commission takes the standpoint that Germany can only afford reparation payments when the German rate of exchange is stable, because when the rate of exchange falls the state income automatically shrinks to such an extent that payments are impossible. Therefore, the stability of the German currency is to be preserved in spite of reparation payments.

Reparation Payments in Germany Currency.

As a consequence of this, and with the exception of payments in goods, Germany shall only pay in German currency. The prescribed payments shall be made in German money to the account of the Reparations Commission at the Note Bank (Reparations Bank) which is to be founded. With the depositing of the prescribed sum Germany has carried out her share of the bargain. It is the business of the Allies as to how they shall get out of the country the amount of the reparation payments which have been made in Germany money. For this purpose the report provides for a commission of five and a special agent who shall see to it that the sums deposited by Germany are sent abroad in suitable form. It is the old question: In which form of goods can Germany pay the reparations, that is, in which form of goods can the reparations be accepted by the Entente without causing serious damage to the industry of France, England, and the remainder of the capitalist world? Naturally, the report does not solve this question because it is insoluble. It decides that the German payments may be accumulated up to a sum of two milliard gold marks in money. All amounts beyond this shall be invested in German securities up to a maximum amount of five milliard gold marks. Should it prove that no method can be found for the acceptance of the reparation payments, Germany's payments will be reduced until such time when it will be possible for the Entente to carry out the transmission to foreign countries.

The report destroys all those plans which sought to solve the reparations question with one sweep by the taking up of an international loan running into milliards. (Proposal of the Cuno Government for a twenty milliard gold mark loan.) All the fairy tales of American help, the whole conception that by transferring the wealth that has been piled up in America, and which is partly unused (the huge gold reserve of the Federal Reserve Banks), an important cause of the crisis could be settled at the same time as the reparations question, has faded away into nothing. The report provides for a single loan of eight hundred million gold marks which shall be employed for the payments in the first year.

From the point of view of World Politics this solution, if it is carried out in deed as well as in word by the Entente, signifies the defeat of the French Policy of force and the victory of England. The lines of French policy, the final separation of the Rhine and Ruhr districts from Germany, separatism in Bavaria and the separation of southern Germany from northern Germany, the breaking up of Germany in this way into three or four parts can be considered as shattered. The report is expressly based upon the standpoint that Germany must form a united economic whole if she is to be able to pay reparations. The solution at the same time prevents the uniting, in French hands, of the continental deposits of coal and iron, which is of great importance for the economic and political power of France in relation to England.

Germany Becomes an International Colony.

The shattering of the French plans of power do not signify that Germany will now become a free state. On the contrary, the report provides for a severe, systematic control of Germany by the Entente. As a matter of fact, with the carrying out of the measures which are provided for, German economic life would find itself under the control of the Entente. This control will extend to the railways, the federal finances, and to the whole financial policy by means of the Central Note Bank which is to be created (in which all existing note banks are to be taken up) and to the German taxes, the amount of which is to be laid down by the Entente.

The Payments and Germany's Ability to Pay.

As is known, the report provides for the following payments:

First year	1000	million	gold	marks
Second year	..1220	"	"	"
Third year	1200	"	"	"
Fourth year	1750	"	"	"
Fifth year	2500	"	"	"
First 5 years	7670	"	"	"

Of this sum 800 millions are to be obtained by a loan, so that for the first five years, payments of less than seven milliard gold marks are provided for. The payments from the fifth year onwards shall amount to 2500 million gold marks annually and perhaps more. A prosperity index has been provided for which shall be made up out of various, rather unrelated, elements (railway traffic, population, foreign trade, tobacco consumption, budget expenditure, and coal consumption). If these factors, reckoned according to a certain system, give an increase in the later years over the level of 1926—1929, Germany's obligations will be correspondingly increased.

The report lays down from what sources the reparations are to be drawn, that is it confiscates certain kinds of income for reparation payments. We do not wish to go into details here, as we may assume that they are known. The principles pronounced in the report by the specifying of these sources were as follows:

1. The railways have got rid of all their debts by the depreciation of the currency. They represent a capital of 26 milliard gold marks. Before the war they had a net income of over 600 million gold marks, or at the present value of money of about 1000 million gold marks, whereby it is to be emphasized, that in the pre-war days the German railways were not treated as an enterprise for profit-making but in the first place as an instrument for the economic development of Germany. Under these circumstances it is easily possible to draw from the railways 660 million gold marks in the form of interest bearing bonds and amortisation of the same and in addition a railway traffic tax of 290 million yearly.

2. German industry has got rid of its debts by the depreciation of the currency. Therefore it can shoulder a reparations debt of five milliard gold marks, which at 5 per cent interest and 1 per cent amortisation shall yield 300 million gold marks yearly.

3. In the treaty of Versailles it is laid down that the rate of taxation in Germany may not be less than that of the entente countries. On this basis it is reckoned that until the year 1928-1929 Germany can afford from its budget a sum extending up to 1250 millions gold marks for reparation payments. In order to secure these payments the income from the taxes on tobacco, beer, alcohol, and sugar, as well as the customs receipts, are to be paid into the reparations account at the new note bank (Reparations bank). If these taxes and customs yield a higher sum than is provided for, the surplus will be released for the needs of the German state. Two questions arise here:

1. Can the sums provided for be taken out of the yield of the economic life of Germany, that is, out of the value produced by Germany as reduced to her present size?

As far as the first five years are concerned one can answer this question in the affirmative. By the saving which has been effected by the disappearance of the state debt and the reduction of the military expenditures, this amount can, in our opinion, be covered, assuming that the political rule of the bourgeoisie is firm and that the process of production is not disturbed by severe social struggles —an assumption that will hardly be realized. As regards the full payments after five years, we are compelled to doubt if the German economic system can bear the withdrawal of such great sums. In the meantime the extremely unstable balance of capitalism does not permit one to say very much as to how things will be in five years.

2. Can one find a form of goods in kind which will enable the German payments which are provided for to be brought out of the country?

For the first five years one can give an affirmative answer to this question, for when we deduct the deliveries of coal and coke, which are not only gladly accepted by France, but which are absolutely indispensable for her industrial life, there remains an insufficient yearly amount which has to be exported in currency or in goods; an amount which can be absorbed in the form of German goods in the world market if no acute economic crisis occurs. The matter stands quite differently if the payments are to be made in full after five years. Annual payments of 2500 million gold marks can only be rendered if the exports of Germany exceed the pre-war figure by many milliards. We say many milliards, because Germany cannot export only those wares for which all the raw materials and auxiliary materials are to hand in Germany, but naturally must also import such materials from abroad. At present the whole of western Europe cannot find a market for its full productive capacity and this state of affairs is, in our opinion, not a passing one and such a great export of German goods would lead, with the present reduced ability of absorption in the world market, to a severe disadvantage for French and English industry. We are therefore of the opinion that the whole payments can neither be made by Germany nor be accepted by the entente.

The Meaning of the Report.

The report was accepted unanimously by the experts. As we can assume that the experts acted in agreement with their governments, this signifies that the entente governments, that is, the entente bourgeoisie, considers the proposed solutions as right.

Now what is the economic significance of this report? In our opinion it is essentially the following:

The entente bourgeoisie now sees that it is impossible to obtain reparations from Germany on such a large scale as was provided for in the various ultimata. The entente bourgeoisie are faced with the alternative: Either to obtain reparations but at the price of the keen competition of Germany on the world market, and as a consequence, depreciation of the mark, social disorders, and a dictatorship of the right or of the proletariat in Germany; or to renounce the reparations for the amount that was provided for, to gain a deciding influence in German economic life and to make such use of it that Germany can be kept down as an industrial rival. In other words: Less reparations but no re-establishment of Germany as a dangerous competitor in the world. The report signifies that the entente bourgeoisie has decided on the latter solution. If we assume this to be the case the conclusions of the report, which in part are somewhat strange, become fairly clear.

The mortgage upon the railways and the control of the German railways will be settled by the entente, and in such a manner that German industry will not be able to give an artificial stimulus to its exports by means of preferential freights on goods destined for export, as was the case before the war.

The five milliard mortgage upon German industry signifies that the cost of production of German industry will be correspondingly increased.

The control of the Note bank signifies that the discount policy of the central note institute will be fixed by the entente bourgeoisie and the amount of the credits to industry, as well as the rate of interest, will be set in accordance with the needs of the English and French bourgeoisie, while the development of German industry can be hindered by limitation of credit and high rate of interest.

The investment of five milliard gold marks in German shares (this amount may be increased), signifies that the entente bourgeoisie, which, as it already holds considerable amounts of the shares in German industries, gets possession of the most important branches of German industry.

Taken altogether this signifies that Germany comes under the economic control of the entente bourgeoisie and that this control will be exercised before all with the idea of suppressing the ability of Germany to compete in the world market and to restrict the development of German economic life.

In our former reports we have often pointed out that the spokesman of the English and French bourgeosie are always emphasizing the following: England has a debt of about 150 milliard gold marks upon which she must pay interest, whereas Germany, owing to the depreciation of the currency, is free of debts. This signifies that the English manufacturer has to pay much higher taxes than the German and that wages in England are higher than in Germany. Consequently a reparations policy must be adopted which ensures the ability of England and France to compete in the world market. As this does not harmonize with the payment of reparations on the old system of the payment of currency without regard to the further fate of the German rate of exchange, since this would compel Germany to force her export of goods, the economic meaning of the report is: Less reparations, but the domination of the German economic system in order to prevent the dangerous development of a new competitor of the entente bourgeoisie, in the world market.

From the tall mountains
Snow melts.
Laughingly, eager veins of a wet
clearness
Ripple over pebbles by the white
stone walk:
An avenue at the edge of wide fields
Undulating from the hills.
Immature fields
Await quickly
Contact with lips of the water.
An adolescent boy
Uncouthly faltering hungry expectancies
Lingers nearby.
A laughing moist-eyed girl
As wind chuckling nervously before the thunder
Or piano fingered delicately before the rush of tone
—A plant wafted by approaching
throb of storm. . . .
Eager veins of inspiration
Over yielding earth
Desire bursting forth of seed:
Snow melts.

Baptists To Fight For Whole God At Coming Convention

MILWAUKEE, Wis., May 29.—A fight on the issue of modernism and fundamentalism by the Northern Baptist Convention here next week was forecast by delegates to the convention of the Baptist Bible Union of America.

The union will seek for a confession of faith by the Baptist convention, committing the body to fundamentalism.

A fight to cut adrift from the Federated Churches of Christ also will be staged by the union, according to present plans.

Lenin On God and Religion

(NOTE OF EDITOR:—Below we reproduce a letter by Nicholas Lenin to Maxim Gorky (Alexey Peshkov) dated Nov. 14, 1913. It reveals to the American worker an entirely new angle of Lenin's soul and general attitude towards life. The question of God and religion is what Lenin concerns himself with in this letter, which is one of a collection of 33 letters to Gorky shortly to be published in Russia.)

To understand the spirit of this letter, one must be familiar with the state of mind of the Russian Intelligentzia about the time the letter was written. The social group had been for over 50 years the main source of inspiration and leadership in the revolutionary movement of Russia. Certain sections of the Intelligentzia have very early attached themselves to the labor movement, making the cause of the workers their own.

And then came the big crash, the unsuccessful revolution against Czarism in 1905. The defeat of the revolution had a shattering effect upon the morale and revolutionary integrity of the Intelligentzia. A wave of black despondensy and passivity overtook and conquered the minds of that social group. It developed later a concerted movement away from the "brutalities" of the class-struggle and onward to the serene spheres of God and religion. It was a period of "searching after God" its participants being known as "God Searchers."

At the time leading writers of the Russian Social-Democratic Party have very effectively analyzed the economic background of this religious "wave," which was shown to be a petty-bourgeois revolt against the working-class nature of the Russian revolution. Looking backward one can now see that the transformation of the Russian Intelligentzia from a revolutionary into a counter-revolutionary force had begun as early as 1906.

The immediate cause of Lenin's letter were two articles by Gorky published at that time in the "Russkoye Slovo" of Moscow and the "Retch" of Petrograd, as a protest against the production by the Moscow Art theatre of a dramatization of Dostoyevsky's novel, "The Possessed." The letter follows:

"Dear A. M. (Alexey Maximovitch): What are you doing? It is simply dreadful, indeed!

"Yesterday I read in the Retch your answer to the 'howl' in defense of Dostoyevsky, and today arrived the 'liquidating' newspaper in which appears the paragraph which was not given in the Retch.

"This paragraph reads as follows:

"'And it is necessary to put off the 'searching after God' for a time (why for a time?) It is a useless occupation; there is nothing to search where it cannot be found. Without sowing there is nothing to reap. You have no God, you have not yet (not yet!) created Him. Gods are not sought; they are created; life is not invented, it is created.'

"It appears, then, that you are against 'searching after God' only 'for a time!' Consequently you are against the search after God only for the sake of substituting it by creating God!

"Well, is it not terrible that you give utterance to such a thought?

"The search after God differs from creating God, from deification, no more than a yellow devil differs from a blue devil. To speak of the searching after God not for the purpose of speaking against all sorts of devils and gods, against all sorts of spiritual decay (every little god is decay, it does not matter whether it is a clean, ideal, unsought-for little god or whether it is a created little god), but for the purpose of preferring the blue devil to the yellow devil is a hundredfold worse than not to say anything at all.

"In the freest countries, in such countries where appeals 'to the democracy, to the people, to public opinion and to science' are out of place, in such countries (America, Switzerland and so forth) the people, the working people, are assiduously stupefied by just this idea of a clean, spiritual, created little god. Just because every religious idea, every idea about all kinds of little gods, every coquetry even with a little goddess is a most inexpressible abomination, which is particularly tolerated (and often even welcomed) by the democratic bourgeoisie—and just because of this it is the most dangerous abomination, the most hideous 'pest.' A million sins, abominations, violences and physical infections are far more easily disclosed by the crowd and therefore less dangerous than the refined, spiritual idea of a little god, attired in most festive 'idealistic' garb.

"The priest who corrupts morality (of which I have just read in a German newspaper) is far less dangerous to this 'democracy' than the priest, without a crude religion, the spiritual democratic priest who advocates the creation of the little god. For the first priest can be easily exposed, convicted and driven out, while it is a thousand times harder to expose the other priest and not a single 'frail and pitifully weak' inhabitant would consent to it.

"And you, knowing 'the frailty and pitiful weakness' of (Russian—why Russian? Is the Italian better?) bourgeois residue, confounds its soul with poison, with the sweetest poison, covered with a sugar coating and wrapped with all sorts of particolored papers!

"Enough of self-despising, which is substituted among us for self-criticism.

"Is not god-building the worst form of spitting at one's self? Every person who occupies himself with god-building or who even admits such building is spitting at himself in the worst way. Instead of occupying himself with deeds, he is devoting himself to self-contemplation and self-admiration, in which case he contemplates the basest, the dullest, the most servile traits of his ego, deified by god-building.

"From the general, and not from the personal viewpoint, every form of god-building is just this amorous self-contemplation of the dull bourgeoisie, of the frail public, of the dreamy self-contempt of the Philistines, of the 'despairing and exhausted (as you correctly wrote of the soul—not the Russian soul, but the bourgeois soul, for Jewish, Italian, English—it is all the same devil, the nasty bourgeoisie is equally contemptible, and the 'democratic bourgeoisie,' occupied with decay, is especially contemptible).

"Reading your article, endeavoring to discover whence such a slip came, am perplexed. What is it? The remnants of your 'Confession,' which you yourself did not approve of? Or its echoes?

"Or is it something else—is it, for instance, an unsuccessful attempt at bending-down to the viewpoint of the democratic elements instead of that of the proletariat? Perhaps, in talking to the 'democratic elements in general' you wanted to lisp as people lisp when they talk to children. Perhaps, for the sake of 'popularization,' you wanted to admit to the people their prejudices for a moment?

"But that is a wrong method in every sense and every respect!

"I said before that in democratic countries it would be out of place for a proletarian writer to appeal 'to the democracy, to the people, to public opinion and to science.' Well, and in Russia? Such an appeal is not entirely adequate, for it also flatters the prejudices of the people. . . . . Why throw a democratic gauze before the reader instead of making a clear distinction between the bourgeoisie (frail, pitifully weak, tired, despairing, self-contemplating, god-building, self-despised, senselessly anarchistic—a wonderful word) and the proletariat (who can be brave not in words only, who can distinguish between the bourgeois 'science and public opinion' and their own)?

"Why do you do it?

"It is devilishly painful.

"Your

In Defense of Our Government

By ROBIN ERNEST DUNBAR.

THERE are so many attacks on our government these days by irresponsible people, lunatics, cranks, harum-scarums, I. W. W.'s, socialists, bolsheviks, foreigners, communists, and anarchists and other ill-natured elements, including those opposed to the American Legion and Ku Klux Klan, American Fascisti, Black Shirts, etc., that I do as a 100 per cent American and husband of a D. A. R. and ex-Justice of the Peace and candidate to the Detective Service of Wm. H. Burns, that grand old man of Republicanism, Democracy and Junkerism, rise in my righteous indignation and come to the rescue of our sacred institutions, including the right to buy and sell oil on the market, to drink a medicinal quantity of liquor and to acquire wealth by supporting our hierups.

Let us take up some of the more offensive charges by these pro-Germans and pacifists, and sift them to the bottom:

1. That our president should not be quite so much in hoc or in particeps criminis as we say in the justice courts with those who do not wish our institutions well. I answer plainly and hotly to that charge that our president knows his own private business, and that we must distinguish, er . . . differentiate . . . er . . . draw a line between what he does as Chief Executive and what he does as a private citizen and operator on the stock market. There is no man from Grover Cleveland down so big but that he watches the ticker a part of his time, while fishing on Decoration Day, or yachting with his friend Benedict Arnold, or whatever his name was off the 4-mile limit. It now seems to be circulated by insidious poison propaganda that no president should enrich himself by standing in with the fight promoters, film distributors, rum-runners, oil operators, or others of our rich and highly respected citizenry. The question occurs, "What did we make the World Safe for Democracy for" if it wasn't that our president could choose his friends from Wall Street, where the money grows on derricks, or on fillums, or on cases of Scotch, or from whatever other place he sees fit, including Washington Court House, Ohio?

RIGHT here I want to say I defend that grand old man, Mr. Denby, as I do Albert Fall, Daugherty, Jess Smith, Col. House, Harry Sinclair, Henry Ford, Doheny, McAdoo, The Chicago Post and Albuquerque Press and Denver Rocky Mt. News and all them other members of the government. I say it is a shame to attack them, surreptiously and seditiously by all them charges before commissions illegally organized, and which have no power to force witnesses to answer questions. Roxie Stinson oughter to be in jail by rights, and I'd put her there, if I hadn't lost my constable badge to a poker sharp from Daugherty's shack last nite. I say Daugherty never shot Jess Smith; it was Silent Cal, who shot him on account of a woman, just as any Ku Kluxer has a right to do, to protect the honor of our wives, and darters, and school children, and old maid school teachers. With me it is liberty or dath; and I'll take mine straight, without any selzer, pleze.

The next charge is that Daugherty is a hi jacker, and beats his way on the freights between his shack 'in Washington Court House, and the House on K St., with the Green Shudders. Also that he and Burns carry theirs about in satchels, just like Albert Fall. I say it is all a democratic lie; if you don't believe me, ask Burns himself, or any other smart man in the employ of Wall St., Morgan, Rockfeller, Gaston Means, McLean, or The Nation Magazine. Ask the Smart Setters themselves; One Eyed Nathan, or Booze Nosed Mencken; they knows everything and then some. Or if you can't reach 'em, ask J. Bascom Slemp, that pure eyed son of a biscuit eater, who goes to Florida where the subpoenaes won't reach him, and takes his salt with his employers, Daugherty, Burns, and McLean, and then like a coward he is, runs back to his paw in Washington, D. C., and coughs it all up. Such fellers ought to be shot, and that's why we got the Koo Kluckers in this country, and their nite gowns at $4 each, half price to women and children. Morons? I'll say they are! All of 'em, who are agin wearing 'em, in bed or out! . . . It makes me tired. Sometimes I think I'll go out of politics entirely with all this complainin' going about our free institutions, and $4 nities. I'm agin unmasking too, you can put that down in your note book. How'd we hev hung Frank Little without masks? Or cut off the privates of Wesley Everest? Or broke up the strike at Herrin? Sum people is that unreasonable they would have this government run by infants and sissies.

BATTLESHIPS AT ANCHOR

By JAMES H. DOLSEN

The battleships rest quietly at anchor in the bay;
Their long guns gleaming in the sun,—
Sleek monsters of destruction,
Polished reminders of the butchery that is war.

The flaring-wide white-trousered sailor lads,
Scrubbing the decks and polishing the guns,
Laugh gaily at their tasks and sing
Ribald refrains from rag-time melodies.

No thought today of world-encircling wars
Thrusts its black shadow o'er their simple minds.

A seeming peace envelops land and sea.
Men go about their work with little heed
Or that thin cloud which gathers on the sky
And makes its way by imperceptible degrees
There to the waiting shops where it may tell
Portentious secrets to the guns, and rouse
The shells and powder from their restless sleep.

If those great guns should wake! If they should speak
In thunders crashing o'er the seas,
Would it be prelude to another war,—
White against Yellow for the mastery
Of wakening China's stores of hidden wealth?

* * * *

Above the battleships the seagulls fly
In restless, circling, hungry flocks;
Knowing no more than men and caring less
What hellish schemes the guns are brooding o'er.
